My first reaction to the events yesterday was this can not be happening. ~~and~~ Then I felt ~~it~~ very sorry for times that were lost, and for the families of the victims. It's a terrible thing, and I hope that the people responsible for this is found and severely punished.

In all my trips to Manhattan I can always remember going to the underground shops, and eating at the center by the twin towers, and now to know that I will never see these buildings again and more than likely never be able to do the same traditional things that went along with going to NY it won't be the same. ~~My~~ A member of our family is from Manhattan whose sister works in one of the underground shops made it out okay, but there were many who did not. It is a tragedy that won't be forgotten and I hope that they will find who did this, I know that they have a good idea of who it was & if so I hope he & his followers pay dearly.

It was also disgusting to see that Pakistan was cheering, but I hope they remember & think very hard about the fact that many innocent lives were taken, and how they feel if it were their wives, brothers, sisters, children, or parents that this happened to.

Sorry for the bad grammar. Just do not have my thoughts completely together. This I know has been a scary event for many, and it has left people with the feelings of this cannot be happening, sorrow for the families, & hate for the people who did this ~~horrible~~ act.
