

NORTH CAROLINA.
Auditor's Department.

Raleigh 1893
The necessity for immediate action was pointed out and urged upon me. Having been assured by you that you would not be in Raleigh again under two weeks (according to my recollection) I immediately thought of what you had told me about Major Wilson and knowing it would be a great point gained if I could act immediately through him, instead of having to wait to see you or communicate with you by mail each time I wanted to make a move, I wrote to you with the view of certifying myself about the whole matter for my future guidance in the premises. Since my previous letter to you I have learned that the election of Comptroller, above referred to, does not take place until June, 1893 and so there is no need of immediate action in that matter. Since commencing the writing of this letter I have seen Major Wilson and had a full talk with him and you may be assured there is nothing in the situation that you need to be concerned about. Certainly you will not receive harm from me ~~in this connection~~.
To Hon. Elias Carr,
Old Spartan, N.C. } Yours truly, P. W. Henderson
