The above Commission Men are no strangers to you. They have been thoroughly tried, not by jury, but by the majority of the Truckers—not only of Eastern Carolina, but of the United States, and have been found guilty of returning as much or more for your products than any men in the business. You can readily see from the date of establishing to the present time that they must have been guilty of square dealing, or they would not still be holding Truckers' products same as they did 10 to 50 years ago. Now, to verify this statement, we say we have been in the market with these concerns for three years or more, and refer you to a few of our shippers at each point. Had we the entire space of the REFLECTOR we could not name them all.

We sent each of the houses above several cars of potatoes from the following cities and you would oblige us by writing them: G. A. Phillips, D. T. Taylor, T. H. Blount, W. H. Stancill, E. S. Simmons, T. W. Latham, J. B. Grimes and J. J. Laughinghouse and ask them who paid the most for their truck last season, and let case rest with them.

Now we want to give our shippers some good advice, as follows: Now if you want to obtain top market prices for your truck, pack it in well filled and sound packages and see that it is closely celled, for you can't fool a Yankee. Well filled and closely celled stock always brings the top of the market. Be careful about specked stock.

Remember W. E. DURYEAS' SONS' shipping mark 35, established 1843, the oldest in America and the best

Stencils, Shippers' Postals, etc., furnished from any of the above houses on application to us. If you are a trucker and wish to be kept posted on the market daily from all the leading cities in America, drop us a postal to that effect, and we will see that you are kept well informed on the markets.

Write to us at once for stencils, etc.

USELESS KNOWLEDGE.

There Is a Marvelous Charm in the Pursuit of It.

And Some Day Every Fact Will Be Found to Have a Niche in the Great Cosmos—Work of Earnest Students.

In spite of the teaching of school boards and of the utterances of the practical man, says Engineering, there still remains a marvelous charm in the pursuit of that kind of knowledge often denominated useless. Possibly no knowledge is absolutely useless, but for the present many lines of research yield so small harvest of results to which a commercial value can be assigned that the gain they offer is infinitesimal compared with the labor they demand. As an example, we may cite astronomy. By the aid of its discoveries the mariner navigates the ocean and the explorer in foreign lands determines his position. These are matters of great importance, certainly, but they are concerned only with the fringe of the subject. Years ago these operations could be performed with almost the same facility as to-day, and yet during that period many wonderful secrets have been wrested from the heavens. Much of the work has been done by men who followed other objects for living, and who sought rest and recreation in intellectual problems of great complexity. Not only in astronomy, but also in other sciences and arts, are researches being continually carried on without thought or hope of reward. Men who spend laborious days in offices and work borrow hours from the night to engage in the pursuit of knowledge, finding it more absorbing than all the seductions of pleasure. In libraries, whose volumes have been collected by painstaking care and some self denial, and in laboratories innocent of the glittering toys of the instrument maker, but filled with admirable home-made appliances, work is done that would fill volumes if properly recorded.

What is the practical value of these brilliant phenomena? Frankly we know of none. The true lover of science does not ask such a question. He finds his reward in mastering such a wayward erratic force as electricity, and causing it to display its activity in many and varied forms. Every time he is able to evoke a new phenomenon his insight into the operation of nature is increased. His knowledge grows with each development, and the thirst for knowledge is an appetite that is increased by each attempt to appease it. Had it not been for this our race would still have been enveloped in the obscurity of the dark ages, and we should have been shut up to material pursuits. The possessions which the world holds dearest are due to those who, in all times have pursued useless knowledge. The monks who copied the manuscripts of early times and so preserved them to posterity, the astrologers who observed the stars and left some record of their motions, the historians who collected traditions and legends; the painters and sculptors from whose works we learn the beauty of earlier peoples; all these followed pursuits of little or no practical value. Yet every atom of their work which has survived the ravages of time is immensely precious, and not only do its lessons become clearer, but it sheds light in unexpected ways on kindred subjects. So it is in science. Some day every fact will be found to have a niche in the great cosmos, and many that are now merely sources of intellectual pleasure will become of great material importance. Faraday's discoveries in electro-magnetic induction were once regarded by the multitude as curious and strange, but of no practical value. Yet in comparatively few years there has been built upon them a new engineering industry, the result of which no one can venture to predict.

PATHOS OF SEA ISLAND STORM.

One Woman Happy Because God Left Two of Her Little Ones.

"Were many lives lost around here?" an old man was asked. He stood with his hands folded in front of him and his eyes seeking the ground, writes Joel Chandler Harris in Scribner's. If he had held his faded and flabby hat in his hands his attitude would have been that of the peasant in Millet's picture of "The Angelus." He stood stock still, his bare feet placed close together. "He gone deaf, suh," said a woman standing near.

She touched him gently on the arm and instantly he was alert. The question was repeated.

"Were many lives lost around here?"

"Oh, yes, suh; bunnuncel!" His voice came from far away.

"How many?"

"One, two, t'ree"—he held up the fingers of one thin hand. "Mebby se'm. Mebby l'em. Enty?" He turned to the woman to confirm his figures, but she merely smiled. "We no count dem," he went on, shaking his head and shutting his eyes. "Dee gone!"

Then the old man relapsed into his former attitude. His eyes sought the ground, his hands clasped in front of him, his bare feet close together.

The woman who had spoken for him formed part of a little group standing near. She was rubbing the head of a four-year-old pickaninny.

"How many children have you?" she was asked.

"T'ree, suh. Two boys, one l'il gal."

"Were any of them drowned?"

"How dee gwain drown, suh?" she answered, laughing. The intonation of her voice was indescribable. "I up'd de tree," she said, after a pause, with a gesture that explained how she saved them. "Dee choke—dee strankle—I up'd de tree!" The woman turned and pointed to another woman who was standing apart by the water's edge, looking out over the lonely marshes. "She los' dem chillun, suh. She have trouble." * * * But what this woman said did not run in the direction of grief. "I glad to God I got two l'il' one lef'."

SELF-POSSESSION.

How It Helped a Young Woman on a Delicate Occasion.

The most self-possessed woman I ever saw is just now one of the belles down at Old Point Comfort, says a correspondent of the Washington Post. She is a perfect Juno as to figure, and half the manly heads of the place have been turned by her, and the other half would give all their hopes of the hereafter to be called as she calls her spaniel—"Sweetheart." The young lady has played no favorites among her admirers, however, and an examination of her card at any of the dances would show a list of names as different as those on the register yonder.

The other day she went up for her usual promenade on the ramparts of the forts, and, as usual, was accompanied by her aunt, who is her chaperon, one of her rigid rules being to allow no man to escort her when she takes her morning constitutional. By some aggravating cause she lost an article which is an important part of the feminine apparel. It happened that a bright young devil of an army officer came along and picked it up. He caressed the narrow strip of blue silk, admired the artistic workmanship of the gold contraptions on either end of it, and, upon closer examination, deciphered those initials that agreed with those borne by the charming creature who was swaying along the path a hundred yards in front of him. With characteristic honesty he hurried after her, and, catching up, handed out the article, with a bow of consummate grace, saying: "Miss B—, pardon me, but I believe this property is yours."

She thanked him with a cordiality that made him almost stutter, and, turning to her aunt, remarked, with apparent unconscious naivete:

"Sweetheart is such a careless fellow. Come here, you rascal." Then, as the spaniel responded to her call, she fastened the dainty creation around his neck, and, bowing sweetly to the officer, passed on with the wondering animal scampering in front of her. If her pet had been a toy terrier she would have been lost. It is scarcely necessary to add that when Sweetheart returned to the hotel he was not sporting a blue silk collar with gold clasps on it.

TOO MUCH TEMPTATION.

A Suspicious Room-Mate and His Idea of Honesty.

I arrived in a small town in Kentucky late at night with three other men, and when we reached the hotel two of us were assigned to a room. The one I got had two beds in it, however, and I was not disposed to find fault. My room-mate seemed to be a suspicious kind of a chap and when I tumbled into bed with a good night to him he scarcely deigned to reply. I was asleep in ten minutes, but two hours later I awoke to find him still up and wide awake.

"Hello! What ails you?" I asked.

"Nothing."

"Drowned with insomnia?"

"No."

"Sleep all day?"

"No."

"Afraid of me?"

"To be honest with you, stranger, I am," he admitted.

"That seems egregiously funny. Do I look like a thief?"

"No, you don't; but I've done some figuring on this. You gave the landlord your wallet and watch, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, there's more value in them than he's ever seen before. He'll skip with your stuff before daylight."

"Well?"

"And then you'll have to rob me to get on. Stranger, I'm a man as don't take no chances. I have a revolver here, and the first move you make to get out of bed I'll plug you."

"Can't I turn over?"

"Yes, but be powerful careful about it, for I'm up to snuff."

I turned over and went to sleep again, and when morning came his moving around awoke me. I tried to joke him, but he was sour and morose and wouldn't take it. When we went downstairs it was to find the colored help sitting in the early sun with no move toward breakfast.

"What's the matter?" I asked.

"Marse has done gorn an' lef' de place in de night, an' dar's nobody to boss dis yare house," he replied.

My room-mate had figured right smart the night before.—Waverley.

A Willing Subject.

A recent issue of the Medical Bulletin printed the following remarkable offer: "Physicians desiring to obtain a subject on which to observe the process of digestion or other workings of the vital organs, or on whom to try the effects of poisons and their antidotes, may probably do so by communicating with the editor of the Bulletin. Subject is unmarried and not prevented by any ties or responsibilities from acting in this matter as he chooses, and does not object to a probable fatal termination of the affair."

AN AWFUL FIX.

It was Kitty who first suggested to me that our prescription was not working well. As soon as she spoke I was bound to admit it. I had imagined that Jack would easily get over his unfortunate attachment; I expected that, after a few quiet weeks with us, he would forget Clara Wilkinson and her disgraceful treatment of him.

"He is getting no good at all here," she said most positively. "In his own interest I must ask you to send him away."

"The girl has spoiled his whole life!" I cried, angrily.

Kitty looked at me for a moment, but said nothing.

"I suppose you are right. He would be better in a livelier place."

"Of course he would, you dear old stupid," said Kitty.

I did not see that I had been stupid.

"There is nothing to distract his thoughts here," I said.

"Will you speak to him, then?" asked Kitty, anxiously.

She was very much in earnest.

"A woman does these things so delicately and tactfully," I suggested.

"Oh, I couldn't think of it, Robert," said Kitty, blushing.

I admired her delicacy.

He was pacing up and down the gravel walk, hitting at my flowers with his stick, and smoking one of my cigars. When I joined him and linked my arm through his he started.

"Jack," said I, "wouldn't you be better away from here? Come, you know what I mean. You are no great hand at a secret."

"I—I—" he began, stammering, and in great confusion.

"I know all about it," said I, encouragingly. "I thought you'd get good out of the place, but it's clear you haven't—quite the contrary. You want to see new things and new people and forget this—" I paused for a word, and ended "this unhappy mistake of yours."

"Upon my honor, you are a good fellow," he exclaimed. "I don't know another man who would have treated me as you have," and he covered his eyes with his hand.

"Oh, nonsense; it's nothing. I hope I'm always willing to do my friends a turn. But it's no use, is it? It gets worse and worse."

"I'll go," he said with a sigh; "I won't stay a minute. After what you say I couldn't. And, old man, I don't know how to thank you. Many fellows would have taken the way I have been going on badly; most would—"

"Oh, we make allowance for you. Young men mustn't be judged too harshly."

"But you're a true friend. It makes me feel bad, I can tell you,

"Oh, you'll soon forget it when you're on the move."

"I'll try. By Jove, I will!" he exclaimed, earnestly.

"Do; it only needs a little resolution. Because, between ourselves, you know, you oughtn't to be inconsolable."

"Eh?"

"In my opinion, Jack, you've had an escape. And you can take my word for it. Remember, I know the lady pretty well."

"Oh, you mustn't say a word against her," he protested; "she's been all that's good, and kind, and—"

"Of course, you say that," I interrupted, impatiently. "I suppose you're bound to, but it won't go down with me. If ever there was a heartless, worthless jade—"

He started away from me.

"Bob!" he cried.

But I was determined he should hear the unvarnished truth.

"If ever a woman," I pursued, "led a young fellow on deliberately, wickedly, never meaning anything except to get him in her toils and then turn him adrift with a laugh—that's what she meant with you. Oh, I know her—no one better!"

The unhappy young man turned pale and his lips trembled.

"Now you know the truth about her—and I hope you'll proceed to put her image out of your heart," I said.

"I'd have staked my life on her!" he murmured. "She—she seemed so different, Bob, I could not help it. She never—"

"You were only the victim," I interrupted, patting his shoulder.

"I—I shall go at once. I can't stay here. This revelation—you are telling me the truth, aren't you, Bob?"

"Honestly, to the best of my knowledge," I answered, firmly.

"How awful!" said he.

"Surprised, are you? Why, any of the fellows at the club could have told you the same old story."

"Awful!" he murmured, gazing at me.

"Come, come," said I, "it's possible to make too much of such a trouble as this. When one's eyes are once opened—" and I ended with a shrug of the shoulders.

Suddenly he held out his hand.

"Shake hands, old man," he said.

I shook hands. He was much moved and I didn't wish to appear cold.

"I shall go straight," he repeated.

"To-morrow morning will do."

"No, to-night; the next train. And you—you must stay here?"

"Of course I must stay here," I said, staring in my turn.

"It's bad for me, old chap," he said, laying a hand on my shoulder.

"but, by Jove, what must it be for you?"

"For me!" I exclaimed. "What in thunder do you mean?"

"That woman!" he exclaimed;

"and now you keep it up! One would think to see you—well, it is brave. It would kill me in a month. It's brave, that's what it is!"

"What are you talking about, lad? I haven't spoken to her for three years."

"Except before strangers! Good heavens!"

"Not at all. I haven't—"

"Hush! here she comes! I—I can't meet her again!"

"She here? Bosh!"

I turned around and—beheld my wife. With a gasp I fell back a step. Jack tore past Kitty and vanished through the open window of the drawing-room.

"Well, was he reasonable?" asked Kitty.

I could say nothing.

"I hope you were gentle with him. He is a nice boy, though a particularly silly one. He meant no harm, Bob."

"Was—was he?" I stammered.

"What the dickens does it mean?"

"Only that he has quite forgotten Clara Wilkinson, and—"

"Well?"

"And that you have got rather a nice wife," she whispered. "Did you say anything about me?"

I looked at her for a moment.

"Say anything about you?" I repeated. "Why?"

"Oh, I didn't know whether he was very sorry at the thought of leaving us," she stammered, flushing.

"Of course he was."

"What a foolish boy he is to fall in love with a woman who cares nothing for him, and who, besides—"

"That woman should deem herself lucky to have won his esteem," I cried.

"But she doesn't," said Kitty, softly. "How can she?"

"Is there a better fellow alive?" I demanded.

"Yes."

"Who?"

"You."

"Pooh! What have I to do with it?"

"A great deal, surely."

"Why, I am not in the position to stand between Jack and his love."

"Oh, indeed!" pouting.

"Of course not. If I could lead him to the arms of the woman he loved I would do so with a glad heart. But you say he has forgotten Clara Wilkinson utterly?"

"I am sure that he has."

"I am glad of it. I would rather see him in love with any woman than her."

"Why, you foolish old fellow!" exclaimed my wife. "I really believe you don't know who the new love is."

"I don't."

"Listen," she said, laying one hand appealingly upon my arm.

"You dear old fellow, I thought you knew all about it. Now, don't interrupt me once until I have told you all about it. Jack came here with a sore, bleeding heart. Thinking constantly of the bliss he had lost, he began to watch our happiness. Suddenly he made a startling discovery. He found that he was in love with another woman. That woman was I. But he was a loyal friend, and I a true, loving wife, who thought her husband the best, truest and noblest of men. Of course, you understand that he didn't tell me that he had made such an awful discovery, but trust a woman to find out that a man is fond of her."

"Good heavens!" I cried, and rushed into the house.

That young man would go and tell all the club that my wife and I—

Lord.

"Jack, Jack, Jack; you you fool!" I yelled despairingly.

The butler appeared.

"Mr. Vincent, sir, has just jumped into the dog-cart, sir—it was at the door by your orders—and driven like mad. He said he was summoned to town, sir."

I sank down in a chair. Presently Kitty came in, laughing.

"Oh, dear," she said, "and thought you were so very nice to considerate in pretending not to see it!"

Then the silly little woman went off into a fit of giggling.

To sober her, I told her the opinion of her and our domestic relations which Jack Vincent had carried away with him. Then we began to send telegrams. But the young ruffian he may break his heart next time and welcome—had gone straight to the club.

When I go there now they ask me sympathetically if matters are any better. I know what they mean.—N. Y. Journal.

Wonderful Edison.

There is a theory that the man who thinks much over night digs heavy lines in his face, and becomes contracted about the brows and around the corners of his mouth. It is probable that Edison has done as much pondering over things that are not easily ascertainable as any man in America, yet he has a face that is as free from the lines of thought and care as the face of the average office boy. Edison's manner carries out the amiable expression of his face. He is a little deaf, but it never annoys him, and he has a little rheumatism which he occasionally derides. In manner he is simple and inquiring. Nearly all of his conversation is interjection points, and he has an astounding disinclination to talk about himself. He is not much of a New Yorker nowadays, though for a time he made it a point to visit the city at least two or three times a week, and was frequently seen about the hotels and cafes uptown. Nowadays he confines himself almost entirely to New Jersey and his work.—N. Y. Sun.

Personal.

Mr. Ed Greene is in Kinston. Mr. L. I. Moore returned Friday from a visit to Wilson. Mr. J. C. Lanier, of Wilson, spent part of last week here. Miss Beck Weathering, of Farmville, is visiting relatives here. Mr. J. D. Williamson has gone to Asheville to spend several weeks. Mr. E. A. Moye, clerk of Superior court, left yesterday for a trip north. Mrs. Susan Proctor, of Washington, is visiting her son, Mr. R. J. Proctor. Mr. Larry Heilbronner has been spending the past week with relatives in Tarboro. Rev. J. H. Lamberth left yesterday to attend the Wake Forest commencement. The editor left yesterday morning to attend the Press Convention at Morgantown. Misses Mary Murray and Leta McGowan left Friday to visit relatives at Trenton. Mrs. Charles Skinner and two children returned Friday from a visit to Bertie county. His many friends are glad to see Mr. L. H. Rountree out again after his recent illness. Misses Ada and Mattie Hearn arrived here Friday evening from Littleton Female College. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Crow, of Goldsboro, is visiting the family of W. H. Cox in Forbestown. Mrs. S. M. Schultz and children returned yesterday from visiting her parents in Rocky Mount. Mr. J. I. Fanst, wife and child, of Wilson, are visiting Capt. and Mrs. H. F. Price, at the King House. Mr. J. T. Erwin came home Monday from Elm City, where he has been conducting a large school. Mr. Richard Hosier returned last week from Suffolk, Va., where he has been for several months. Mrs. J. W. Gardner and Mrs. John Hutchins, of Wilson, came down last week to visit Mrs. S. T. Hooker. Miss Julia McGee, of Mt. Olive, and Miss Pearl Hornady, of Greene county, are visiting the family of Mr. B. F. Sagg. Miss Lula White reached home Friday evening from Hollins Institute, Virginia, which she has been attending the past season. Misses Addie Johnson and Bertha Dawson, of Grifton, and Miss Viola Davis, of Warren, are visiting Miss Rosalind Rountree. Prof. Silas E. Warren, principal of Wilson Collegiate Institute, died in that town on last Friday night. He had relatives in Greenville. Mrs. L. C. King, of Norfolk, has been spending some days with relatives in this section. Her daughters, Misses Alice and Helen, who have been at school near Clinton, met her here Friday. Mr. F. C. Harding, librarian of the University came home Friday to spend a few days with his parents. His brother, Mr. W. F. Harding, who graduated last week, will remain at the University until he returns here. Mr. Isadore Lichtenstein, a former citizen and merchant of Greenville, was married in New York last Wednesday, to Miss Goodman. They are now on a bridal tour through Canada. Mr. Lichtenstein has the best wishes of his many friends here. Another sudden change in the weather last Wednesday. The temperature was in the eighties during the morning and फिर was comfortable before night. Weather prophet Hicks says June is to be such a stormy month that it will bear watching all through. The first half of the month has been somewhat that way. We were glad to see Mr. Harry Boyd in town Sunday evening. He recently returned to his home in this county, after spending three years in the western part of the State. Seeing a gathering of them around the depot, Monday afternoon, a gentleman remarked "There are more pretty girls in Greenville than any town the same size in the world." Mr. C. D. Rountree received a letter last week stating that his father, Mr. Charles Rountree, of Charlotte, is in very feeble health. He has not been well enough to leave his house in several months. His many friends here will regret to learn of his poor health. Many people are always ready to bite at every swindle that comes along and are easy prey for the sharpers. An evidence of this is the way a large number were taken in here, Saturday afternoon, by a quack medicine vender. Rev. W. D. Morton, D. D. arrived yesterday evening to conduct the series of meetings in the Presbyterian church. Rev. Mr. Hines preached Sunday morning and evening and Rev. Mr. Sumner preached Monday night. Dr. Morton will hold services twice each day in the afternoon and at night. All Christians in the community should work and pray earnestly for the success of the meeting. There are many unconverted here, and they can be reached through earnest prayer.

OTHER LOCALS.

Fenders are being built above each side of the draw arch at the bridge to protect it against the numerous rafts of logs coming down the river. A raft passed through the other day that contained over seven hundred logs. Col. W. E. Williamson, of Asheville, the champion big fish catcher at Orocoke last season, was on the Washington train Friday enroute to that popular resort. He sent word over to us that he was on the way, and to come down and join him. We will try to get with you, Colonel, in a few weeks, and then look out for big fish. It gives us pleasure to note the high standing and prominent mention of two Pitt county boys who were members of the graduating class at the State University last week. They are Mr. W. F. Harding, of Greenville, and Mr. G. B. Little, of Bethel. Old Pitt held her own wherever she represented this year. The Teachers Assembly meets at Mockwood City next Wednesday. The Coast Line is selling tickets from Greenville via Kinston at $5.35, from House $5.55, from Pactolus $6.55, from Whichards $6.35, Ayden $4.85, Grifton $4.60, Parmele $5.95. The rate from Greenville via Goldsboro is $7.85, from Bethel $7.30. We understand that the rumor has been circulated throughout the country that diphtheria was epidemic in Greenville. The rumor is untrue and does injustice to the business of the town. There were two cases here, but those were promptly and properly quarantined and kept so until entirely removed. There is not a trace of it here now, and Greenville keeps up her record of being among the healthiest towns in North Carolina. The Christian Teachers Assembly and Summer School will begin its first session at Littleton Female College July 2nd, and continue four weeks. There will be four Departments of Instruction, and a variety of subjects will be taught. Board may be secured at the College, or at any one of the hotels or private boarding houses at reasonable rates. For further information address Rev. J. M. Rhodes, Littleton, N. C. Married. MOORE-MOORE.—In the home of Mrs. Quinn, on Wednesday evening, at 9 o'clock, June 6, 1894, Mr. Thomas R. Moore, and Miss Ida I. Moore, were united in marriage. A crowd of relatives, friends, and boarders, assembled in the parlor, to witness the ceremony performed by the bride's pastor, J. H. Lamberth. May they be as happy as it is their privilege to be. Died. At the family residence, about ten miles from Greenville, on last Saturday night, at 8:30 o'clock, Mrs. Nancy L. Little, consort of Mr. W. G. Little, aged 55 years, she was a consistent member of the Great Swamp Primitive Baptist church. She leaves a husband and four children, Mess. James L. and W. O. Little, Mrs. Cornelious Barnhill and Mrs. Frank Thiipen, to mourn her loss. She had been a great sufferer for about 10 years but bore it with christian fortitude. A good woman has gone to reap her reward and the REFLECTOR extends deepest sympathies to the bereaved family. She was buried on Monday evening at 5 o'clock at the family burying grounds. They Aggregate 1886 Pounds. The item the REFLECTOR published last week in reference to the weight of Capt. W. H. Parvin and two of his boys has made some of our readers anxious to know what the whole family weigh, and the Captain, always being accommodating, has given the weight of his entire outfit. Capt. Bill himself holds the beam at 167 pounds; Mrs. Parvin is exactly 167 pounds and weighs exactly 220; two daughters weigh respectively 160, 120, 134, 121, 125 and 170; four sons respectively 234, 179, 140 and 116, making an aggregate of 1886 pounds for the family of twelve people or an average of a fraction over 157 pounds each. If there is another large family that can beat this the REFLECTOR would be glad to hear from them. Good Reading at Small Cost. Public Opinion, published at Washington, D. C., is a weekly journal devoted to the reproduction, in condensed form, of carefully selected magazine articles and of editorial comment from the representative daily and weekly press of all political parties and from all parts of the country. The readers of Public Opinion get both sides of every question. It is just the paper that the farmer and villager need for general reading. It keeps its readers fully abreast of the times and supplies them with the best thought of the day in the fields of Politics, Foreign Affairs, Sociology, Commerce, Finance, Religion, Science, Education, Art, and New Books. Public Opinion and the rural weekly supplement each other admirably. Together they give the farmer or villager and his family more of current news, editorial comment, and magazine literature than can be had in any other way for five times the cost. The price of Public Opinion has been reduced from $3.00 to $2.50 per year. We have just completed arrangements by which we can offer Public Opinion and the REFLECTOR for $3.00 cash per year.

June 11th, 1894. Miss Lemie James spent Saturday in the city. No applicants for lodging at the station house last week. We are glad to see W. C. Buhman out again, after an illness of two weeks with chronic malaria. Misses Dora James, of Grindwood, and Bettie Craft, of Roper, are the guests of Mrs. D. S. Powell. Mrs. D. S. Harper has returned from Bethel and her health is said to have improved much by her trip. Misses Claude Hyman and Vesta Whichard of Palmyra, were visiting Miss Isabella Whichard last week. Miss Verna Little returned from LaGrange last week, bringing with her the charming Miss Sutton, of Kinston. Messrs. H. G. Burton, Hughes Mayo and F. G. Buhman spent Sunday in Grifton. They spent a charming pleasant trip. Mr. Wm. Bland died on the night of the 5th inst, after a continued illness. We extend the deepest sympathy to his bereaved husband and children our warmest sympathy. The conversation party given complimentary to Misses Johnson and Bowen, at Mr. Wm. Powell's last Friday night, was with of the colored serenade, quite an enjoyable affair. Mr. G. R. Little, who graduated with distinction at the University of North Carolina, came home last Friday. We extend our best wishes for a successful life to Mr. Little. We have received through Congressman W. A. B. Branch a large volume entitled "Growth of Industrial Art." It is a very interesting document, showing by illustrations the progress that has been made in almost every imaginable industry. Cotton and Peanuts. June 11th, 1894. Rev. Alban Greaves filled his appointment at St. Johns last Sunday. The farmers are very busy just now shipping potatoes. A good crop is reported. Mr. Frank Hill, of Lenoir county, spent last Saturday and Sunday at Mr. L. B. Cox's. Messrs. B. F. and J. L. Sugg, of Greenville, were down here last Wednesday on business. Miss Myrtle Taylor returned home to-day after spending a short time visiting relatives here. Miss Nettie Kilpatrick left yesterday morning to spend some time in Pollocksville visiting relatives. A hail storm passed through this section last Wednesday doing considerable damage to the crops. Bethel Items. June 11th, 1894. Crops are suffering for want of rain in this section. Mr. Graham Guilford, of Robertsonville, is in town to-day. Mr. F. S. Gardner and wife, of Parmele, were in town to-day. Miss Emilly Cobb, of Great Swamp, is visiting her sister, Mrs. F. B. Knight. Mr. W. W. Thomas made a flying business trip to Tillery's one day last week. Mr. Charlie Peal, of Berkley, Va., was here last week visiting his mother, Mr. J. H. Johnson. There were two cases up before Mayor Moore last week and three cases were disposed of in Justice court. Messrs Wm. Haslip, of Hamilton, and R. L. Roberson, of Robertsonville, two of the commissioners of Martin county, were here last Tuesday on business. Mrs. Bettie Manning, wife of Herbert Manning, died last Friday night. Funeral services at the residence, after which she was buried at family burying ground. The grief stricken husband has our heartfelt sympathy. The ordinance requiring gates to be hung so as to swing inside on the premises when open will require lots of changes to be made during the next few days. None of our citizens should object to making the change, for gates should not stand out and obstruct the sidewalk. Respectfully, WILEY BROWN, New Home Sewing Machines and Depositor for American Bible So.

TOBACCO DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by O. L. JOYNER, Proprietor Eastern Tobacco Warehouse.

LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOTTINGS.

Now is the time to plow tobacco deep and often. Intensive cultivation of tobacco at this season of the year will pay a 100 per cent. dividend in October.

Work is rapidly progressing on the new tobacco houses. Quite a number of hands are employed and they make things lively around the tobacco quarters.

Greenview N. C., is working hard to build a tobacco market. It takes time and energy to build up a good market.—Durham Tobacco Grocer.

We have plenty of energy down here and father times seems to be dealing with us very well. Sixteen handsome buildings now occupy the land which five years ago, when we were a school boy, was a blooming corn field closed in by a jagged fence row. The town is rapidly building out this way and in ten years from now no doubt but that South Greenville will be the center of business.

The Tobacco Review which for some time was published in Durham has been succeeded by The National Tobacco & Grocer a sixteen page semi-monthly journal. It is neat in appearance, bright and newsy and very readable in deed. Durham ought to have a good trade paper and Tobacco and Grocer fills the bill.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Morgan left last week for Asheville N. C., where they will spend some time with his relations and friends, thence they will go to Greenville, Tenn., the home of Mrs. Morgan. They will leave here in time to reach Greenville N. C. for the opening of the tobacco market. No tobacco buyer has ever located in Greenville that has shown a more intense interest in the market than has Mr. Morgan and it can be truthfully said that the American Tobacco Company never had a gentleman in their employ who takes a greater interest in the protection of their every interest than J. W. Morgan.

We see that Col. B. J. Redding, director of the Georgia state experiment station, has given his testimonial to the N. S. I. Co. of Richmond, N. S. I. as it is called in North State Insecticide and is put up in pound packages. It is a powder said to kill the horn worm which is so destructive to tobacco. If this powder is really what it is claimed to be every tobacco farmer ought to provide himself with a full supply of it. Some time ago we procured a package of it and sent it to Dr. H. B. Battle, director of the N. C. experiment station and asked him to analyze it and write us if there was any poisonous ingredient to tobacco in it. He wrote immediately that he had received the package and as soon as the busy guano season was over he would report on it, but as yet we have heard nothing from him.

D. L. Taylor, of Wadesboro, formerly of Lancaster county Penn., in the May number of the Southern States Magazine, gives quite a detailed treatise of the cultivation and management of bright tobacco in North Carolina. Among other things he says "The Golden leaf is a distinct species as much so as the Havana seed leaf. It is a small variety seldom yielding more than a thousand pounds to the acre. The soil best adapted to bright tobacco growing is comparatively poor land. The finest soil so far discovered is on the Raleigh & Gaston railroad in the counties of Vance and Warren." If this correspondent of one of the most influential journals that circulates in the South could see some of the Eastern North Carolina product placed down by the side of Vance and Warren counties tobacco and could also see the growth on which our tobacco is grown we are of the opinion that he would grow enthusiastic and write again from his adopted Southern home that in the counties of Pitt, Green and Lenoir can be found the finest soil in the United States for the production of the golden weed. It is true in Granville, Vance and Warren very fine tobacco with plenty of body and oil can be grown but as to color everyone that knows any thing about our Eastern N. C. weed says it is the whitest they have ever seen grown anywhere, and white tobacco is the kind wanted.

Mr. Irving Allen, in the February number of the New England Magazine, has happily recalled the incidents of General Washington's visit to the New England States in October, 1789, while he was first President of the United States. Possibly an episode which occurred in the course of his continued tour through the South Atlantic seaboard fifteen months later, will be graciously received through an antipodal medium.

It was in the city of New Bern, N. C., where a reception was given him April 24, 1791, with which his diary declares he was well pleased. This was just 103 years ago. As in the Eastern States he travelled in his private carriage with four horses attended by his official and private secretaries and six servants. At the Neuse river crossing he was met by a small party of horse, the District Judge, and the principal residents, who took him to the Stany Mansion, "an exceedingly good lodging," by his own account, where he was feasted in good style, but noted the absence of corn griddle-cakes. This building is now owned and occupied by James A. Bryan, Esq., the president of the First National Bank, and is in excellent repair with broad concrete walls and ornamental grounds stocked with exotics and semi-tropical plants and fruit trees, the blooms of honeysuckles, cape jessamine and roses mingling with figs, pomegranates and magnolias. The mansion is of wood, but, although much over a century old, remains one of the chief architectural ornaments of the town, with its imposing square front and its interior decorations, rich with moldings and wainscoting. It is invariably pointed out to visiting strangers.

During the Revolution several wealthy citizens fitted out privateers and brought in much prize money; and at one time, during the flush period of her West India trade, no less than forty square-rigged vessels and seventy coasters were owned and employed there. Even to this day many of the ship-owners' private dwellings remain, crowned with the railed platforms, built between the chimneys, which served as look-outs for impending argosies. Indeed New Bern's lines have always fallen in enviable places. The tenor of her life has been as smooth as the flow of the broadening Neuse on her eastern front. Even the civil war did not mar her actual beauty. Scarcely a wisp of her charming frontage was disarranged. Only a few suburban residences on the Trent, which chanced to be within the lines of investment, were destroyed, while the old earthworks, gracefully rounded, which still environ the city, constitute no eyesore, but brush-grown and tapestried with jessamine and sweet brier, serve to vary the whitened monotony of a dead level traced with rows of garden peas and cabbage.—Charles Hallock in Southern States Magazine.

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla is absolutely unequalled as a blood purifier and strengthening medicine. It is the best spring medicine. Try it.

WASHINGTON IN 1791.

New Bern always was a country place. It was settled by Baron de Graeffenreid and retainers of the Earl of Craven, from whom the county was named, and these were followed by thirty Huguenots and Scotch Presbyterians in after years. Her population had always been well to do. From 1788 until 1747 it was the seat of the provincial government and subsequently, in 1777, of the State Legislature, and from 1754, when Sir Arthur Dobbs, the first colonial Governor, took up his residence there until the abdication of the pompous Lord Tryon in 1771 it was the centre of refinement, beauty, and great distinction. In 1791, not only General Washington, but his com-patriot, General Greene, honored it with a visit, holding republican levees at the house of the patriot, John Stany, as above stated, to whom the country was but recently debtor for £40,000 in good money loaned in its hour of need. And subsequently President Monroe broke bread at the pretentious residence of Judge Manly, on the east front, which still stands.

IN ENVIALE PLACES. During the Revolution several wealthy citizens fitted out privateers and brought in much prize money; and at one time, during the flush period of her West India trade, no less than forty square-rigged vessels and seventy coasters were owned and employed there. Even to this day many of the ship-owners' private dwellings remain, crowned with the railed platforms, built between the chimneys, which served as look-outs for impending argosies. Indeed New Bern's lines have always fallen in enviable places. The tenor of her life has been as smooth as the flow of the broadening Neuse on her eastern front. Even the civil war did not mar her actual beauty. Scarcely a wisp of her charming frontage was disarranged. Only a few suburban residences on the Trent, which chanced to be within the lines of investment, were destroyed, while the old earthworks, gracefully rounded, which still environ the city, constitute no eyesore, but brush-grown and tapestried with jessamine and sweet brier, serve to vary the whitened monotony of a dead level traced with rows of garden peas and cabbage.—Charles Hallock in Southern States Magazine.

Supper and Dance. In the evening of the eventful day there was a supper and a dance at the Tryon Palace, at the foot of George street, which was still the social rendezvous of the quality people of the period, and it may be remarked right here that the whole memorable affair was faithfully reproduced three years ago on the 24th of April 1891, on the occasion of its centennial anniversary, the invitation cards and orders of dancing being in fac simile, and even some of the identical dresses being worn which appeared in the previous century. General Washington and Lady Washington were personated by Mr. W. P. M. Bryan and Miss Mary T. Oliver, and sixteen leading citizens represented the republican court. The ceremonies took place in the spacious hall of the new court house, which was tastefully decorated with flowers, flags, and evergreens. After a few appropriate introductory remarks by Mayor (General) Battle, the ladies and gentlemen of the court, in costumes of "ye olden time," were ushered into the room and took positions on either side of a dais, and General and Lady Washington followed and took places on the platform, the latter in magnificent attire.

OLD VIRGINIA REEL. Under strains of sweet music from the Italian band, the courtiers formally presented themselves and were received in the most dignified and courtly manner, after the approved regime. Then the court minuet was danced by ten couples of the city's elite. The "Star Spangled Banner" and "The Old North State" were sung by thirty trained voices, a solo followed, and then a flower dance by young ladies in fancy costumes, each bearing a colored lantern and a basket of flowers. Supper ensued, and the novel affair concluded with the "Old Virginia Reel," in which nearly every one present participated. The occasion was most enjoyable and the renaissance instructive and impressive. Next morning, after the night of visitation, a select party of horse ascended the distinguished guest out of town, and the President continued his starring tour. His diary mentions that in Granville seventy ladies met him on horseback and the popular ovations went on.

Now a SCHOOLHOUSE. New Bern at this time was a Two Lives Saved. Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had Consumption and that there was no hope for her. But two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. suffers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching Consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in Coughs and Colds. Free trial bottles at John L. Wooten's Drug Store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

Manifold Disorders. The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dread disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh, Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any cure that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
