The Y. W. C. A., of Winterville High School, met last Friday night, and elected the following officers for the spring term: President, Miss Lillian Baker; vice president, Miss Maggie Lee; secretary and treasurer, Miss Lillie Brewer. This association, so we are informed, has been doing a grand work. With these excellent officers we predict for it even greater achievements this term than ever before.

If your subscription to The Reflector has expired let me renew it, and give you a receipt.

W. G. Morris, agent.

There was a large congregation present at the baptismal service, in the Baptist church, Wednesday night, and as he usually does, Rev. T. H. King made a very able talk. At the conclusion of the sermon an invitation was given, and four converts and one who had been a member of the church before came forward. Three of these and the three that made confessions last Sunday, making six in all, were baptized.

The spring rush is coming in. Better send your orders in at once for Cox Cotton Planters, simplex guano sowers, economic back bands, etc. Orders will have our careful attention.

A. G. Cox Mfg. Co., Winterville, N. C.

If you want a useful planter, see our combination planter. It plants cotton, corn, peas, etc. Harrington, Barber & Co.

The music class of Winterville High School, under the wise guidance of Misses Vivian Robertson and Nettie Liles, is one of the largest in the history of the school.

Rev. T. H. King filled his appointment in the Baptist church Sunday morning and night. The house was filled at each service. There were three confessions at the morning service. He preached his farewell sermon Sunday night. His subject was "Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you."—Second Corinthians 13:11. The sermon was very good, and was highly enjoyed by those present.

One of the best temperance lectures, if not the best, that we have ever heard was made in the auditorium of W. H. S., Tuesday night, by Rev. R. L. Davis, superintendent of the Anti Saloon League in North Carolina. He has a good voice, an excellent delivery, and an honest subject; therefore his address was grand. He says that people should be total abstainers because: First, whiskey is injurious to the mind; second, it will hinder a person from getting a good position; third, it will impede one's usefulness; and fourth, it will cause others to lose confidence in him. We were glad to have Mr. Davis with us, and we hope it will give our privilege to hear him again.

Miss Clara Smith Saturday and Sunday.

N. T. Cox and son spent Sunday at Josephus Cox's.

Leona, David and J. R. Cox and Miss Clara Smith attended the baptism service at Winterville Wednesday.

On Friday evening, Jan. 14 Miss Clara Smith gave a tacky party. The crowd assembled about 7:30 and were received in the hall by Miss Lottie Ellis and ushered to the parlor by Miss Mae Stox. Music was rendered by Miss Clara and Miss Stox. Many interesting games were played. At 9:30 the judges were asked to retire and render their decision. They soon came back with the problem solved in favor of Miss Clara Smith being the tacky girl and J. R. Cox the tacky boy. At 10:30 the crowd dispersed to their respective homes. The evening was one of much pleasure and will long be remembered by Miss Smith's host of friends.

Do You Own a Piano?

If not, and you expect to own one soon, you owe it to yourself to examine the magnificent display shown at the Fineman & White Warerooms. A display really creditable to a large city.

In a glance you will inspect a line of pianos that not alone stand in character of tone, durability and general worth in a district class to itself, but you will meet with prices incomparable anywhere. Eight different makes to select from, none of those cheap western department store stencils, but each one a standard, of acknowledged fame and reputation in the trade. Four different player-pianos of best known makes.

We will take your old piano in exchange for one of these self-playing organs, and carry the E. T. Y. ORGAN, the standard of the world. Old organs and pianos taken in exchange, terms to suit your convenience. When in Greenville visit our warehouse.

VOL. No. XXIX GREENVILLE, PITT COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA, FEBRUARY 4, 1910.

GREENVILLE STRUCK BY CYCLONE TOOK ZIG-ZAG COURSE THROUGH WEST GREENVILLE

Some Buildings Completely Demolished and Others Seriously Damaged—No Lives Were Lost

In the midst of the rain, about 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, there was a sudden darkening of the elements by clouds of almost inky blackness, and out of this Greenville got its first experience with anything bordering on a cyclone. People out in the vicinity of the A. C. L. depot saw something coming from the old race track that seemed to be picking up everything movable in its track. They did not know whether it was a small cyclone or a big whirl wind? but what it may, it was enough to make them hurry for shelter until the thing got by which it was not long in doing.

Fortunately the whirl wind did not cover a wide space but it certainly left its mark along the path traveled. The first sign of destruction was at Tar River. In that place, the colored theological school on the outskirts of the town. This building was badly wrecked and practically ruined. Not far distant is the colored graded school building, one wing of which was torn off, lifted from its foundations and set flat down on the ground, though the right side up. School had been dismissed a short while before. Principal C. M. Epps was still there and got an air-ship ride in the wing of the building. He came out with nothing worse than a scare. One room of the house of a colored woman in the same neighborhood was taken off and planted in her neighbor's garden.

From there on towards Murrell's park the thing lifted a little higher from the ground, but it took a conglomeration of hanging-out clothes, chicken coops, boxes, barrels, fence palings, and so on along through the air with it. When about the A. C. L. track it got down to business on the ground again and seemed to concentrate its fury in the space between the Centre Brick warehouse and the rear of the new Higgs block of brick buildings. A small frame building in that space in which Allen Fleming run a restaurant was literally torn into kindling wood and several cart loads of it piled on the roof of the tobacco warehouse. Seventeen of the warehouse skylights were blown or knocked out, and rear wall of the corner store in the Higgs block, in which Mr. J. W. Bryan had just moved his drug store, was torn about four inches out of place.

Getting hemmed in between these brick buildings seemed to get the best of the wind, yet there was enough of it left to swing around into Dickenson avenue down to Pitt street where it turned again, taking down a few fences in its course. At the residence of Mr. J. L. Hassell the top of a chimney was blown down and a screen door torn off, but the wind could not be traced in town beyond this point.

We have not heard if the cyclone struck anywhere in the country. During the night there was another hard wind that blew "Hiram" the big horse at the Horse Show, clear across the street to the Reflector corner.

Our Greenville, yours if you can.

MORE ABOUT THE JUG.

Interesting History of an Old Family of Early Settlers.

Ayden, N. C., Jan. 28. Editor Reflector: About 1719, there came from England three brothers named Hancock, and settled in Pennsylvania, Maryland and North Carolina. William Hancock settled in North Carolina, on Durham's Creek, in Beaufort county, and married soon thereafter Miss Bettie Durham, and to their union was born a son whom they christened Durham Hancock. When this son attained his majority he moved to the little village of New Bern, and was one of the first trustees of that town. He was soon married and raised a family near the placid waters of the Neuse. Durham Hancock's oldest son was named George Hancock, and when he had developed into manhood he moved on Stonetown creek in Lenoir county near where the late Fred Jones and John Nelson once lived, and where the town of Granger is now situated. He raised a large family of boys and girls. One of his boys was killed by Tories and his sister took his remains behind an old blind horse in a rickety cart with white oak tires, to the old burying ground on Durham's creek, and during her lonely trip she encountered the savage Indians, who detained her. Upon finding only a fearless woman with a corpse they fled in dismay, and while crossing the Dismal or Savannah she was accosted by some wild hyenas, but she still continued her lonely journey.

George had a son named James, who was fond of agriculture, and when he grew into manhood moved into Pitt county and settled on Swift creek. In the vicinity known as Foss swamp. He soon married and raised a family. His oldest son was named Herman Hancock, who wooed the heart of Miss Rhoda Worthington and lived near Hancock's, a Primitive Baptist church. To them was born several children, among them one girl named Mary, better known as "Polie," who after her father's death lived with her widowed mother, and was quite prominent in that day as an herb and root doctor, and also told fortunes, etc. After the death of her mother she still lived alone, with only a few pet cats and a dog, until quite old. At her death of course all her belongings were converted into money. The famous jug that had been handed down through many generations was sold. Mr. R. L. Cox tells us he was the highest bidder, for 35 cents, and it was then full of honey. Since then he had dedicated its use to vinegar.

Gideon Pellet, who married one of James Hancock's daughters, was the first man who ever owned a set of steel cart tires in Pitt county.

Dr. Hasket, the famous root and herb doctor, married one of Harman Hancock's daughters, and lived near New Bern, and some of their direct descendants live in both New Bern and Kinston and still practice the same profession.

These facts are correct as near as I can get them.
