

Dear Red,

Many, Many thanks for your delightful letter. I still can't handle a pen decently, but when the/^{day}comes that I can I'm going to write you a whopper of a letter. I had a setback this winter but came home, went into the hospital, and got everything straightened out. I'm doing so well now, in fact, that I count on going to the Academy meeting and hope to hang around New York for several weeks. Love to you and Eleanor and those grownup gifted children.

Peter
