

next women to be selected by him and many others. The next sixteen months directly commissioned. He also stated that in G-1 Division, before the end of the war, WAC leaders had too much control of and Director Hobby's resignation, were to be WAC affairs, and that Colonel Hobby's see workable solutions devised for all but current powers should be reduced by five of the problems now on the Director's eliminating those of direct dealing with calendar in which to place them. The major commands of handling staff of The Corps was by its second anniversary co-ordination on WAC matters of taking place in May 1944, already world-wide any action, and of maintaining separate in distribution and approaching peak records of these recommendations was June was almost 7,000, with the peak of adopted. The Army's new policy toward 100,000 not too far distant in the United States, WACs were present at 193 Air Forces General Marshall, was keynoted by the installation, and 196 Ground Forces and introduction of specialist groups or special Service Forces stations. Almost 10,000 in officers in almost every major office that women were already overseas in every handled WAC matters. The new location major theater of operations—North Africa also ensured that Army-wide recommendations, Italy, England, Australia, New Guinea, India—as well as in Hawaii, would not be rejected without consideration Alaska, and other smaller bases. In May of 1944, the authorized strength throughout General Marshall's return of was allotted among the major commands office, specialist attention to women's well-being. It was to be the rule rather than the exception—with, however, the specialist Army Air Forces, Army Ground Forces, and respective Army sections. With the completion of the move to G-1 Division, and the accomplishment of the changes as approved by General Marshall, shall the Women's Army Corps complete in stage of organization and development. In these widely scattered Army commands, with their varying needs and problems, lay the further history of WAC specialist groups, the small Office of the Director was to devote most of its time toward planning for the solution of the more intangible social and welfare problems which, although pushed into the background until now, had from the beginning attended the integration of women into military service. The two years just ended had seen the discovery of the Corps' problems in public relations, clothing supply, administration, Army jobs, and success or failure on employment, and success or failure on fixed of the burden now assumed by the Director was to devote most of its time toward planning for the solution of the more intangible social and welfare problems which, although pushed into the background until now, had from the beginning attended the integration of women into military service. The two years just ended had seen the discovery of the Corps' problems in public relations, clothing supply, administration, Army jobs, and success or failure on employment, and success or failure on fixed of the burden now assumed by the Director was to devote most of its time toward planning for the solution of the more intangible social and welfare problems which, although pushed into the background until now, had from the beginning attended the integration of women into military service.