CUSHION TIRE LIFT TRUCKS

Allis-Chalmers computer-rated cushion tire lift truck line is designed to put emphasis on productivity in your applications. These trucks provide the capability needed to handle today's heavier loads, stack them higher, and take greater advantage of a variety of efficient Allis-Chalmers attachments. Safety is maintained through a tubular steel overhead guard, an automatic return to neutral, and a Protecto-Seal gasoline cap to name a few. Maintenance accessibility is achieved with swing-out side panels, swing-up seat deck, quick removable counterweights and a double U-joint in the drive train.

With Allis-Chalmers "job-matched" lift trucks, you can select the engine and transmission best suited to your needs: gasoline, LP Gas, or Diesel and powershift or manual.

FEATURES:

- Low emission engines offer the best environmental package at no extra cost.
- Trunnion-mounted, articulated steer axle for a smoother ride.

CARTER STADIUM:
A LEGEND IN ITS OWN TIME

Some would say it was a phenomenal accomplishment; others still shake their heads in disbelief.

Originally scheduled to be retired in the year 2004, the bond indebtedness of Carter Stadium, N. C. State University's football arena, has been cleared with the final payment being made this recent summer, some 26 years ahead of target date.

Opened in the fall of 1966, the stadium was financed through private donations and the issuance of bonds, which were paid with gate receipts from Wolfpack home games for 12 years — beginning with the 1966 season through the 1977 season. The bond issuance payment had been set up on a 40-year schedule.

In the truest sense, it is a remarkable feat — a phenomenal accomplishment.

"It definitely was a red-letter day for N. C. State athletics when we paid for Carter Stadium," said N. C. State Director of Athletics Willis R. Casey, one of the key figures in the planning, building and financing of Carter Stadium, a massive steel and concrete structure costing more than $3.7 million.

"It's a tribute to our fine football program, our University administration and the thousands of loyal fans and followers of the Wolfpack that such a tremendous project can be completed in such a short time," said Casey.

The fan support was most important in the paying of the bonds in such a short span. When Carter Stadium was dedicated October 8, 1966, 35,200 fans were in attendance, but that year the average attendance was just 28,440, only a few thousand more than capacity in Riddick Stadium, the Wolfpack's former home ground.

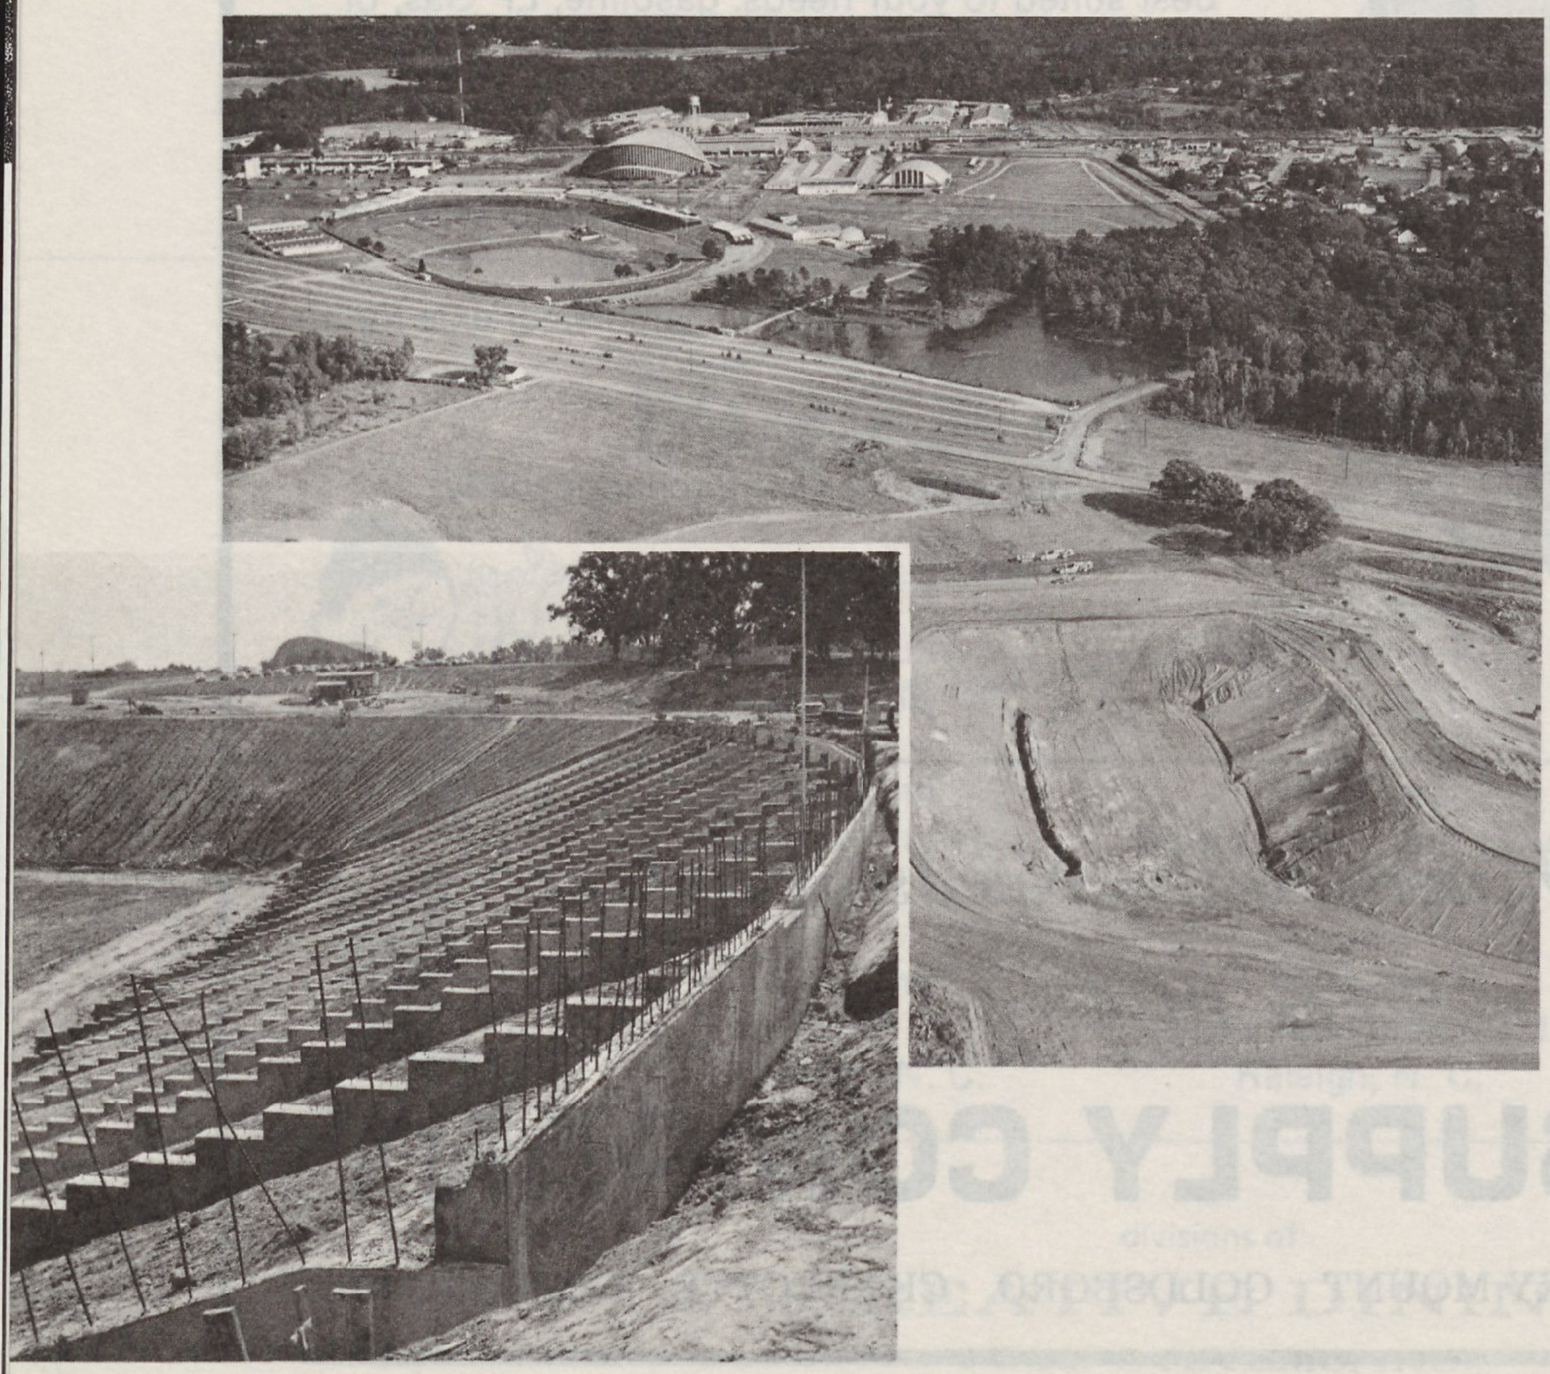
Since that first season, attendance has risen tremendously with the 1977 season having the greatest average crowds — 44,671 — just short of the sellout figure of 45,600. And during those 12 seasons, there has been plenty of excitement in one of the loveliest settings for college football.

If the dedication game was any indication, State fans knew that one day old timers would be reliving action-packed moments of Carter. The Wolfpack wasn't fortunate enough to win the first game in its new home, as South Carolina prevailed, 31-21, but with one of State's scores coming on a 32-yard pass interception by Bill Morrow and two of the Gamecock's touchdowns coming on a 98-yard punt return and on a dazzling 43-yard run from scrimmage, the home folks knew what the future would be like in Carter Stadium.

Aside from State's first victory in Carter Stadium, a 49-21 thumping of Virginia, probably the most exciting game in Carter for the Wolfpack came at the end of the 1974 season. With a 7-2 record, State hosted Penn State, which later accepted a bid to play in the Cotton Bowl.

It was one of the great hours for defense as the Wolfpack came just 43 seconds from shutting out the Nittany Lions. State won the game, 12-7, as some 47,700 screaming boosters looked on. Fullback Stan Fritts helped with both Wolfpack scores, running for one TD from four yards out and passing 22 yards to tight end Pat Hovance for the other. Penn State's only points came with just 43 seconds left on the clock. Early in the third quarter, the Nittany Lions had driven to the Wolfpack's four-yard line only to find a stout N. C. State defense preventing the score.

The Wolfpack has played 62 varsity games over the 12-year period and a total 2,242,455 fans have attended for a 36,169 average.



Carter Stadium has also been the site of junior varsity football, professional football exhibition games and the Billy Graham Crusade. Everything taken into consideration, it is estimated that more than three million people have walked through the gates at Carter since its birth in 1966.

The largest crowd to see a football game in Carter was just last season when 51,300 filled the stands, bleachers and grassy bank at the south end to see the Wolfpack battle the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Two other times the crowds have exceeded the 50,000 mark, and all of the top 20 attendance figures are more than 40,000.

No exact figure has been placed on it, but estimates are that Carter Stadium has meant many millions of dollars to the city of Raleigh through expenditures by the fans attending games there.

The idea of a stadium to replace the much outdated Riddick Stadium began in 1962 when Wolfpack Club and University officers authorized a feasibility study. In September of 1964, then Chancellor John T. Caldwell announced the appointment of R. Walker Martin, E. N. Richards, Cliff Benson, James Poyner and Micou Brown, all of Raleigh, C. M. Vanstory of Greensboro, and T. W. Church, Jr., of Charlotte to the N. C. State Stadium Development Committee. Martin was named chairman.

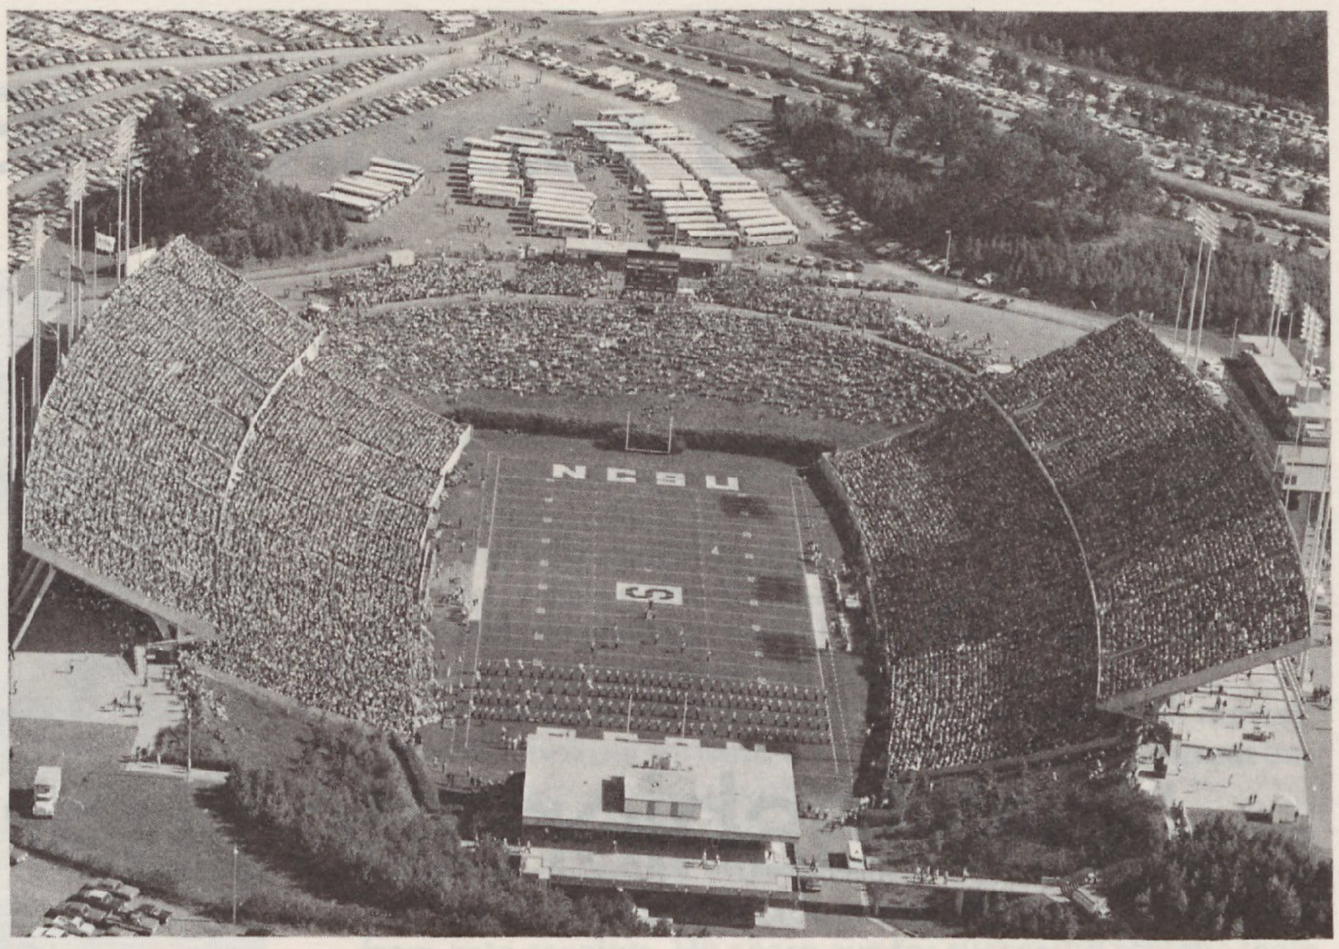
"The work of these men was invaluable," said Casey, "especially the spearhead work done by Walker Martin. It was wonderful to have such a fine group working so hard for such a big project."

In November of 1964, the University Board of Trustees approved a financing plan based on a 40-year bond issue and private contributions. The payoff date was set for the year 2004.

The Stadium Development Committee under Martin moved rapidly.

Ground was broken in a west Raleigh hay field in December 1964. Various University officials and supporters of N. C. State took turns with a silver shovel ceremonially breaking ground. Giant earth moving equipment had already begun the task which would take almost right to game time in 1966.

By March 1965 the financial plans were sufficiently in order to complete architectural plans and award contracts. On March 3, the final plans were authorized. In June, the plans were complete and the bids were opened.



Early in 1966, a new development occurred which gave the stadium project a crowning touch. A. E. Finley and Associates contributed about $290,000 to finance the fieldhouse plans. And by June that year, every detail was under contract — the stadium, fieldhouse, scoreboard, paving and parking.

The entire project, with the exception of the lighting, was completed for the October 8, 1966 dedication against South Carolina.

The stadium was named in honor of the late W. J. (Nick) Carter and his brother, Harry Carter, for their financial contributions to the stadium and their long support of University programs. The Carters both graduated from State.

The stadium area includes four main features — Carter Stadium, A. A. E. Finley Fieldhouse, the extensive parking area and a three-tiered press box.

More than 300,000 cubic yards of dirt were removed during the grading; 70,000 bags of cement were churned with sand and stone to make 25,000 tons of concrete; and 1,350 tons of steels (enough for 1,000 automobiles) were used in the stadium structure. The site includes 75 acres, 10 acres in the stadium and facilities and 65 for parking and roads. The parking areas will accommodate 12,000 cars.

On May 30, 1966, Dick Herbert, then sports editor of the Raleigh News and Observer wrote in his column, "If anyone in the area has any doubts about what Carter Stadium can mean to the city, he should drive out and take a look at the nearly completed structure. With the new stadium, (Reynolds) Coliseum, Dorton Arena, and Memorial Auditorium, plus Carmichael Gym and its swimming facilities at State, Raleigh is hard to match for sports facilities for a city its size."

Carter Stadium was a giant undertaking, one that cost a lot and has yielded a lot of benefits.

Now, the project is complete, the bond indebtedness gone — truly a remarkable accomplishment in such a short period of time.

We fashion the fiber of American life.

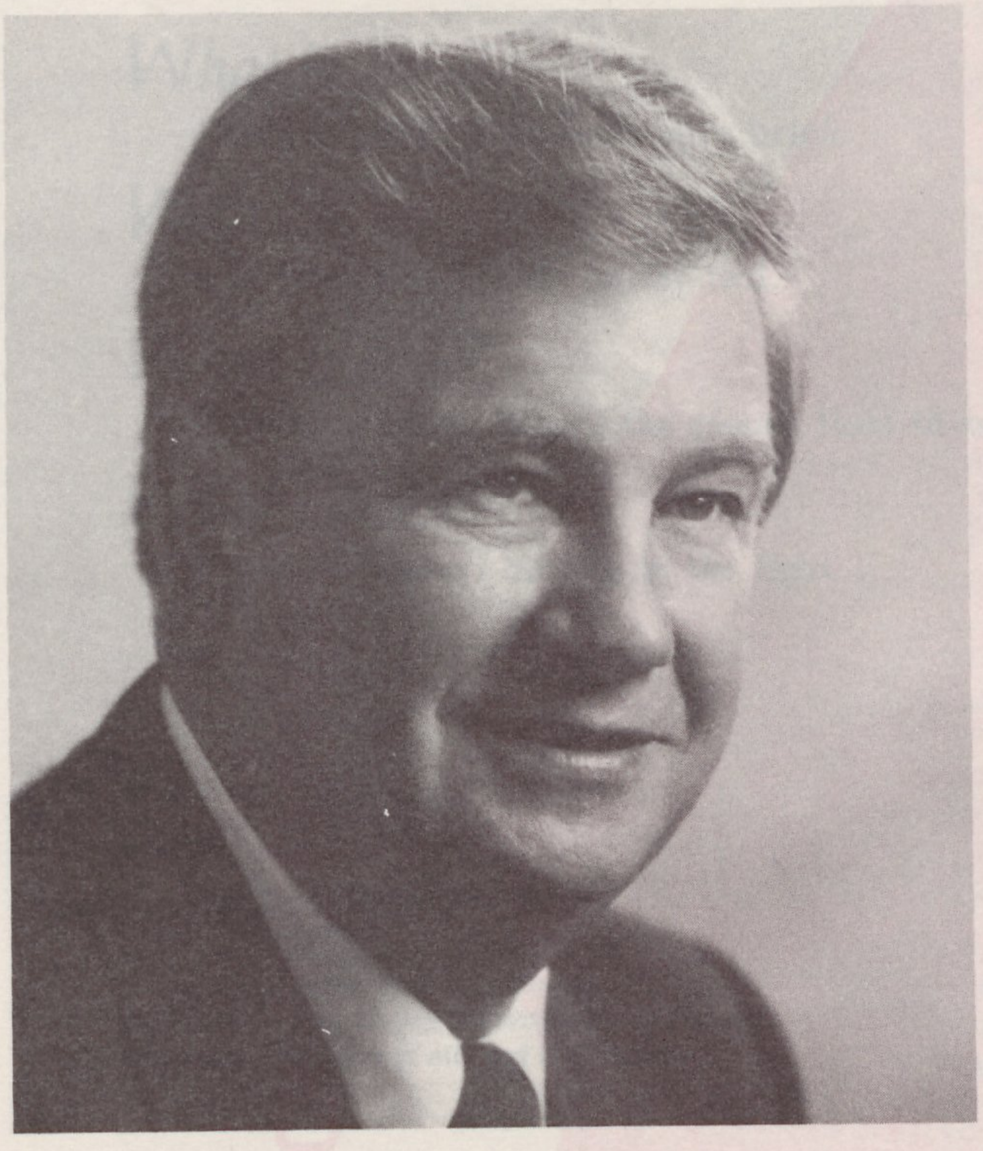
WILLIS CASEY / Director of Athletics



At this point it's usually written that Willis Casey is in his 10th year as North Carolina State University's Director of Athletics.

But since he was assistant athletic director to John Von Glahn and Roy Clogston for 22 years, to say he has been State's AD for nine years is more or less deceiving. More than less.

Officially, Willis Casey has been Athletic Director since July 1, 1969 and in the span of nine years, because of his familiarity with collegiate athletics, he has produced one of the most successful programs in the country.

In his years at State, since coming to coach the swimming team in 1946, Casey has seen quite a bit of change in collegiate athletics — the biggest of which is the availability of scholarship money, he says.

"In 1969, there were very few schools in the country giving scholarships in all sports," Casey says, "and now it seems 90 per cent of the schools are doing this."

At N. C. State that includes the women's program. "Women's athletics to me is a pleasure and not a problem. I was brought up in women's athletics — in swimming, coaching girls," Casey says.

"I've always thought young ladies to be very competitive, as competitive as men, and to me it's a delight to see women's athletics moving as rapidly as it is now, after all these years, reaching protrusion, and everybody trying to have good teams."

Casey, a noted pioneer in collegiate athletics pushed the N. C. State women's athletics program into the national spotlight in its first two years of competition. The women's program, now in its fourth year, has won championships in basketball and softball.

A key to the Wolfpack's success under Casey has been Carter Stadium, even though State has not realized money from gate receipts in Carter since 1965. Not until this year, that is.

After just 12 seasons in Carter Stadium, the bonds scheduled on a 40 year retirement, were paid off this year, putting a giant feather in Casey's cap.

"All home game revenue, other than actual operating costs, went into the stadium debt retirement fund those 12 years. I'd say that some $5 million was paid into the debt fund which means that is $5 million we could have had in operating money during that time.

"But without the stadium, we couldn't have operated, we couldn't have been a viable member of the Atlantic Coast Conference. Remember old Riddick Stadium?

"It's been a great thing for us. We've missed the money, but we're looking forward now. We have reached a great day in N. C. State athletics with the paying of the debt."

It's a tribute to Casey and his excellent management skills that State has enjoyed such outstanding success in athletics over the past decade, especially without those funds from gate receipts. His sharp eye for successful athletic team goes back to his early days with the Wolfpack.

When Casey, recognized as one of the nation's top administrators in the field of collegiate sports, began his Wolfpack association in 1946 and he quickly turned a virtually non-existent swimming program into one of national prominence and maintained that level throughout his 22-year stint.

While churning out a successful swimming program, Casey served as Assistant Athletics Director and filled many other roles. And when he was appointed Director of Athletics in 1969, Casey electrified the department and made it one of the tops in the country.

Under his strong direction, Wolfpack football and basketball teams have shown strong national ranking. In 1974-75, the two sports finished in the Top Ten in final polls and the golf, swimming and baseball teams finished in the Top 15. The excellence that year earned Casey's overall program a rating of No. 10 at the national level.

Other achievements as a result of Casey's expert leadership include State being the first and only Atlantic Coast Conference member to win the league's football, basketball and baseball titles in the same year (1973-74) and the Wolfpack capturing its first national championship — the basketball crown in 1974.

Casey is currently a member of the NCAA Basketball Committee and the NCAA Long-Range Planning Committees. In the past he has been honored by selection to many other national committees including the NCAA Rules Committee, the NCAA All-America Selection Board and the AAU Board of Governors.

Casey's success can be traced back to his high school days at Goldsboro where he astonishingly lettered in six different sports before an illness ended his athletic career.

After graduation from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Casey began his coaching career at N. C. State. His Wolfpack swimming teams won 11 conference championships, compiling a phenomenal 188-29 dual meet record during the span.

Thirty-three Wolfpack swimmers attained All-America honors under his tutelage, including Steve Rerych who won two Gold Medals for the United States in the 1968 Olympics.

Casey, during his years at State, has served as supervisor of the school's various athletic facilities and was manager of 36 major basketball tournaments.

During his faithful service to the University over the past three decades, Casey has been both a coach and an administrator, and has brought recognition and esteem to the institution during each of his many assignments.

There really is a difference... in the Wolfpack and in brick

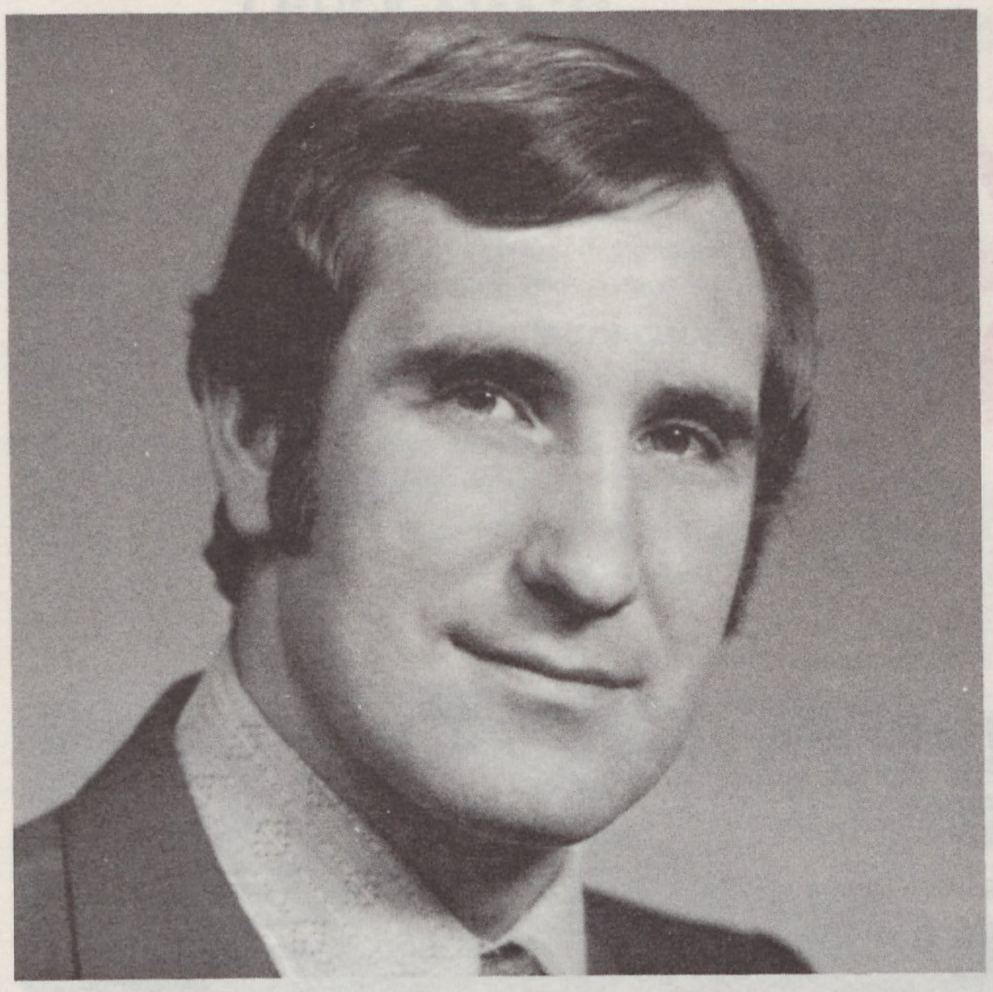
BO REIN: Experiencing Success



Bo Rein, N. C. State's head football coach, is a much learned man, having played and coached under some of the greatest names in football.

But, playing or coaching for men such as Woody Hayes, Frank Broyles, Lou Holtz, Bob DeMoss and Tony Mason probably did no more to educate the 33-year-old mentor than his first two seasons at the Wolfpack helm.

Rein has had the fortune, whether good or bad, to know the thrill of victory and agony of defeat. In 1976, his first season as State's coach, the Wolfpack was 3-7-1. In 1977, State came up 8-4 which included a Peach Bowl win.

So, after two years, Rein headed into 1978 with an 11-11-1 and a much more relaxed position.

"I feel much more comfortable," said Rein. "Having two years experience, I have that much more confidence and know what more of the pitfalls are. You can tell from our staff meetings now, also, how much more smoothly they run. And, it's a lot easier to anticipate problems."

Rein's future as a head coach appears bright. When he started in 1976, he was the youngest head coach at a major university in the United States. He is still a youngster in the coaching ranks, but his ideas on how to deal with strategy and building football teams to greatness usually only comes out of sound thinking — a result of experience.

"Every year you try to analyze what you can do better to help the team win," Rein said. "Each time, it dawns on me that it's not so much the X's and O's, but how well you deal with people. I want to be attentive to our third and fourth stringers as well as our all-Americas. I want the third team to feel they are making a contribution, too."

Of course, Rein knows that each year he and the other coaches must take the time to teach fundamentals: Show new blocking routines, teach pass patterns, reveal innovative tackling styles.

But for a head coach, there's more than those day to day necessities. Unlike an assistant's role, the head job is multi-faceted. He must coordinate an entire staff, fill speaking engagements, appear on television shows, talk on radio programs, conduct press conferences, mingle with the alumni and, at the same time, never lose the will to win.

"There are so many things you are forced to do (as a head coach) that you've never done before," said Rein who through his personable mannerisms off the field, gets along amiably with the press, administration and alumni.

"The TV part is easy for me to do. The thing I probably feel least comfortable about is the organizational part of the press conferences. To stand up and list the players who played well, etc., is so repetitious and so boring to me I can't stand it. I'd rather the media members just ask questions and let me answer them."

Rein is "right at home" when he's found in his red slacks and white shirt and a whistle hanging freely from his neck. He's comfortable when he's the field general, looking over his football troups, calling the plays, moving into battle. He gets excited over the least bit of success, like a small child who has just found a new toy. Whether it's when he's pacing the sidelines of a game, sitting atop his tower at practice, or sitting around a conference table with his assistants, when he discovers the smallest thing that will help the team win he literally jumps for joy.

But, through it all, he remains a calm man in his private life, losing very little sleep over a football game, and finding the right times to relax.

"I've lost sleep maybe three times," he said. "One was when I was so ecstatic about a victory. The other two were defeats — the 1976 Furman game and the '77 Clemson game. Other than those, I haven't had trouble sleeping."

Married and the father of two children, Rein has no special way of relaxing — no special releases from his day-to-day pace. He says, though that his Wednesday night radio show gives him a few moments away from the hectic activities and that each Friday morning during the season he finds time to spend with himself.

"I have thought about doing other things," he said. "Every April, I think about how many more years I want to coach. I've never settled on a figure, though, and I've never said I wanted to this or that. This is a good life right here — though there's pressure out there."

Not enough pressure though to keep Rein from moving down the road to success. And it's success which comes with the experience.

The person who expects to rise to the top is who we're looking for...you may know someone who fits that description.

We're American Defender Life. We're a growing company for people who want their careers to grow. And we can prove it.

In just over 20 years we've grown to $1.7 billion insurance in force with assets of over $65 million. Our field representatives got us there.

When someone teams up with us, he learns how to become one of the best from the best. Our officers and multi-million dollar producers lead a curriculum of studies designed for success.

When it's time to go into the field, our associates carry specially-tailored products and services for the markets served. Plus the full support and cooperation of our home office.

But reaching income or management potential is up to the individual. And, if he doesn't become president of our corporation, he can still be president of his own.

If you know the man or woman we're looking for, let us send more information. Just write American Defender Life Insurance Company, Post Office Box 27882, Raleigh, North Carolina 27611. Or call (919) 821-1100.

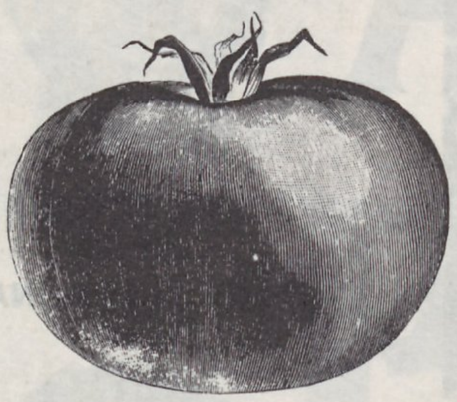
HOW TO TELL HOW FRESH THINGS ARE.

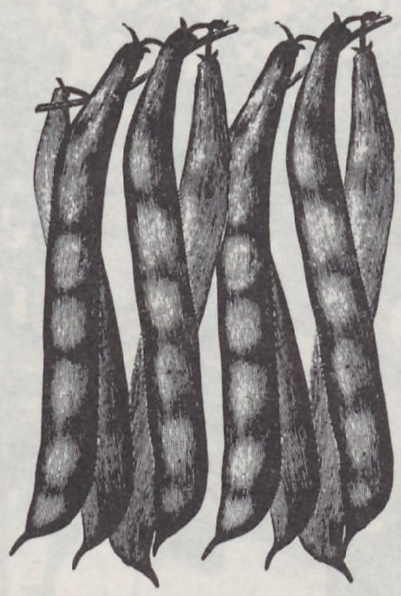
When it comes to judging freshness, some folks are truly expert sniffers, squeezers and thumpers.

But for most folks, judging freshness isn't quite so easy. To them we dedicate this ad.



Tomatoes

Look for a deep rich red color with a slight overall softness. Avoid very soft and watery tomatoes with green or yellow areas and deep growth cracks near the stem scar.

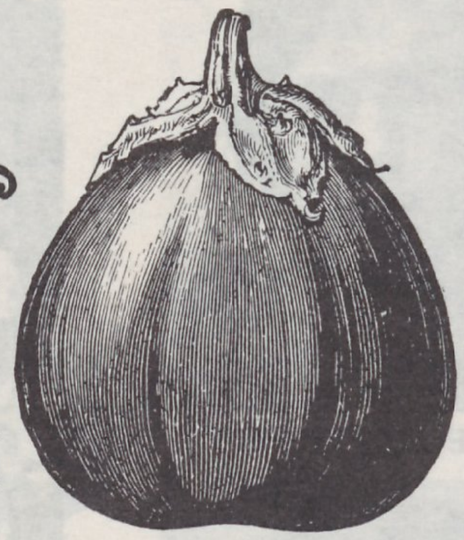


Snap Beans

Look for a fresh, bright appearance with pods in a firm, crisp condition. Thick, tough, fibrous pods are usually overmature.

Watermelons

In already cut melons, look for firm red flesh, free of white streaks, and dark brown or black seeds. (White seeds indicate immaturity.) In whole melons, look for a smooth surface, fully rounded sides and a creamy-colored underside.

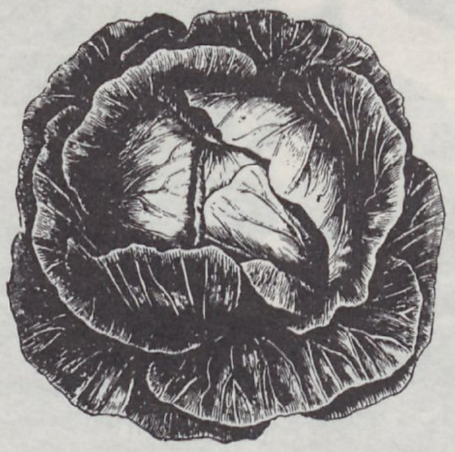


Egg Plant

Should be heavy, smooth and uniformly purple.

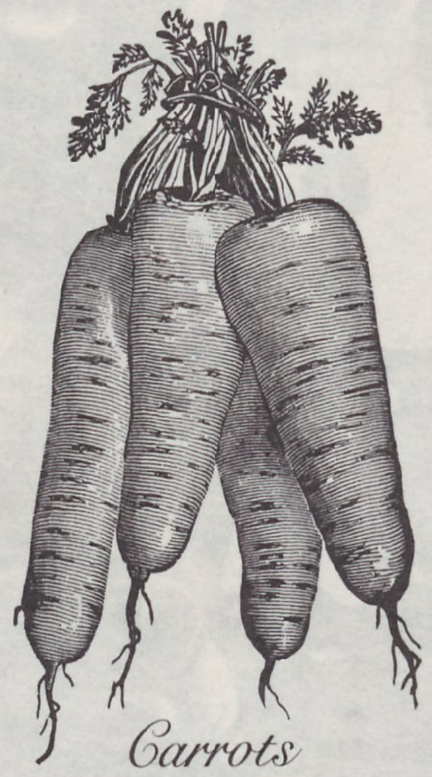
Corn

Husks should be light green with the silk ends free of decay. Kernels should be plump and milky. Avoid ears with dented or shrunken kernels.



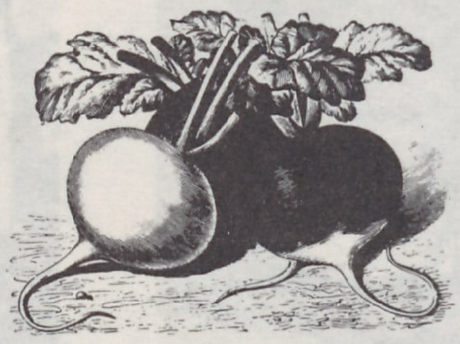
Green Cabbage

The heavier the better, for its size. Look for firmness and good green outer leaves free from serious blemishes.



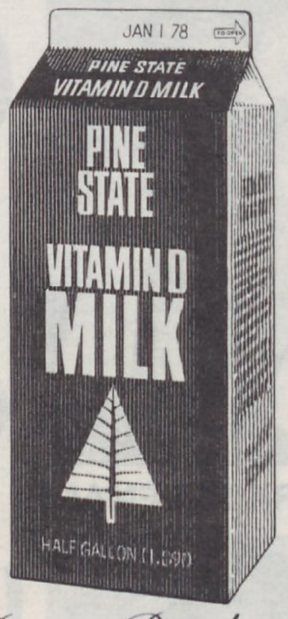
Carrots

Should be smooth, well-formed, brightly-colored and firm. Avoid carrots with large, green "sunburned" areas at the top.



Turnips

Big is usually bad. Look for small or medium-sized turnips, with green, fresh-looking tops.



Dairy Products

You can't tell much about freshness by squeezing or sniffing a milk carton. But fortunately, you can tell a lot just by looking at two things.

The date on the carton.

And the words "Pine State."

The date on the carton tells you the last day the product should be sold.

The words "Pine State" tell you it's guaranteed to stay fresh 7 full days after that.

And that 7-Day Guarantee applies to everything Pine State sells: milk, yogurt, cottage cheese, ice cream, half-and-half, everything.

If anything ever goes wrong with a Pine State product before those 7 days, just call our president, Ben Kilgore, collect at (919) 828-7401 and he'll see you get back every penny you paid.

Meanwhile, we hope this ad will be helpful.

Because the more you know about buying freshness, the more apt you'll be to buy from us.

Strawberries

Look for berries with a full red color and the cap stem still attached. They should also be dry and firm. Medium to small berries usually taste better than larger ones.

Cantaloupes

Juicy ripe melons should be heavy for their size, with a pleasant cantaloupe smell, a thick coarse netting with a yellowish buff on the skin, and a smooth, depressed scar where the vine was attached.

For a free poster reprint of this ad, write: Freshness Poster, Pine State Creamery, P.O. Box 6508, Raleigh, N.C. 27628. "Freshness" sources: United States Department of Agriculture, North Carolina State University, American Home Economics Association.

ARE YOU COMING UP SHORT AT THE END OF THE MONTH?

There's one thing that's probably common to all college students. They have to watch their finances. Here's news about some help you may be able to get.

Air Force ROTC has four, three and two-year scholarships that provide you $100 a month and cover all tuition, books and lab fees. As an AFROTC cadet, you'll enter an exciting program of Air Force instruction that prepares you for one of the most gratifying management jobs available today.

Then, as a commissioned officer in the Air Force, you'll find responsibility and challenge from your very first assignment . . . you'll find that people respect you for what you do best.

Consider the Air Force as one of your goals, and consider the AFROTC program as a road to that goal. If you need financial help to free your mind for your studies, find out about AFROTC scholarships today.

A MEMBER OF THE CLUB SINCE 1936

Wolfpack Club is the popular name for the N. C. State Student Aid Association, Inc., which was started in October of 1936.

At that time a young insurance salesman named Hugh Murray, filled with a strong love for his alma mater ('32), joined the Student Aid Association. Over the years he and his company have been staunch supporters of the Wolfpack Club and its programs.

All of us at Associated Insurers did not attend N. C. State, but we "Back the Pack" with gratitude and appreciation.

"Schlitz Light"

Schlitz Light Beer is not only a less filling beer, it's also the only light beer with gusto.

And it has one-third fewer calories than our other fine beer.*

So when you're thirsty for a great-tasting beer, there's only one you should ask for by name:

"Schlitz Light."

*(Approximately 96 calories to every 12 oz. serving).

It took Schlitz to bring the taste to light.

WELCOME TO
N. C. STATE—EAST CAROLINA

by Jim Pomeranz
Editor

TONIGHT'S GAME marks the beginning of N. C. State's 87th year of football, and without a doubt, it offers to be a most exciting year. Throughout the season, you'll want to especially follow the progress of Wolfpack running back Ted Brown, who with 3,252 career yards, is rapidly narrowing in on the all-time Atlantic Coast Conference rushing mark. That's presently held by Mike Voight of UNC-Chapel Hill. Voight has 3,971 yards.

Brown will be the first to tell you though that such records are secondary to the meaning of his career at State. Ted, as much as any Wolfpack football player, wants to have a winning season. He's as much a team player as anyone and with the goal of a winning year in mind, the records should come naturally.

* * * * * * * * *

TONIGHT'S GAME MARKS another milestone in Wolfpack athletics.

It's the first time State has played a football game in a completely paid-for stadium.

Carter Stadium opened in the fall of 1966 and for the past 12 years, every penny after expenses realized from gate receipts has gone right back into the stadium.

There's an article in the front of Wolfpack News that outlines the building of the stadium.

* * * * * * * * *

IF YOU'RE THE AVID Wolfpack follower who always comes by a seat in the stadium or the coliseum and you are able to travel to the distant reaches of N. C. State sports participation, you may be missing out on a good thing.

Sounds a little absurd! How could you be so lucky as to be able to see all that great Wolfpack action yet still be missing out on a good thing?

Well, unless you've got your radio with you, you happen to be missing out on one of the best sports radio announcers of our time—Wally Ausley.

As the play-by-play man of the Wolfpack Sports Network, Ausley is given the tough assignment of bringing to thousands of listeners an accurate and descriptive account of N. C. State football and basketball. His hard work over the past few years has paid off.

Recently, the Greensboro Daily News interviewed N. C. State and non-N. C. State fans about Wally's on-air abilities. Interestingly enough, the non-State fans gave Ausley very high ratings, which is a compliment to his abilities.

"He's like an old friend sitting beside you and telling you what's happening," said one non-State fan.

"A non-State fan can count on a reasonably informed account of the game from him," said another. "He particularly good at reviewing the game and setting the stage for the listener who tunes in late."

"He's been at it a long time at State," said another non-State fan. "His background and experience enable him to place events in proper perspective of Wolfpack athletics. He's not exceptional, but neither is he the type of announcer who irritates the listener.

"I like him because he's less-biased and more of a reporter than others."

Ausley has been with the Wolfpack Sports Network since it was formed 18 years ago. The formation of the network goes back to 1961 when Frank Weedon, now State's Associate Director of Athletics, persuaded a group of State students to telephone and write Raleigh radio stations, asking why Wolfpack games weren't on a local station.

WPTF responded and ever since then N. C. State and WPTF have worked happily together. Weedon manages the network—contacting prospective outlets.

TONIGHT'S CAPTAINS

TIM GILLESPIE, OFFENSE

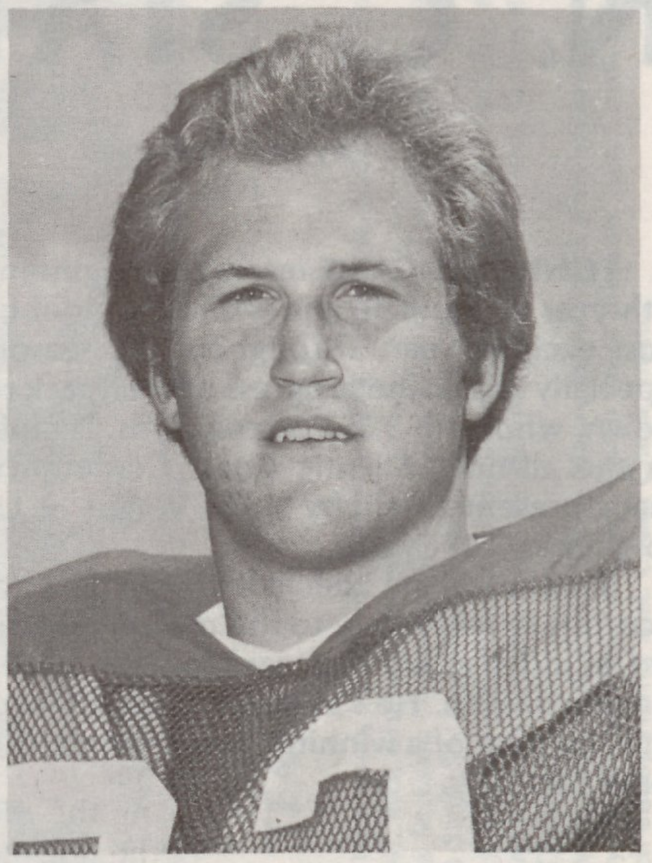
Tim Gillespie came to the Wolfpack from Smith High School in Greensboro as a defensive lineman. After two seasons as a reserve, and upon the recommendation of the coaching staff, he was switched to the offensive line and has performed admirably the past two seasons at guard.

"I really loved defense," said Tim, a senior majoring in Speech-Communications. "But I saw myself falling into mediocrity. As a senior in high school, I thought I had a future in football as a defensive lineman. Not just a future in college but in professional football. After two years, I was far from that goal. Then the entire offensive line graduated, coach (Jon) Mirilovich came in to coach the offensive line, and I was told I'd be given a chance to start on that side of the ball. That was the chance I needed. Good things have happened since then. If I have a good season this fall, I may still have a future in football."

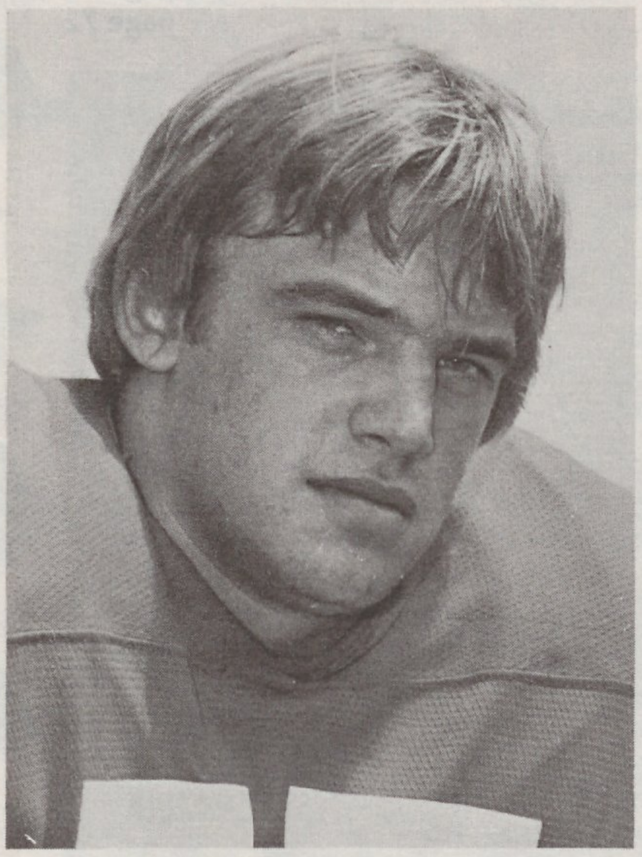
Tim stands 6-foot-3, 248 pounds and can still run the 40-yard dash in 5.0 seconds, not bad for an offensive lineman. He has been credited with the block that sprung Ted Brown loose on his 95-yard touchdown jaunt against Syracuse last year. He was a three-sport letter winner at Smith High, competing in football, wrestling and tennis. He was Student Body President his senior year at Smith.

Headed into tonight's game with East Carolina, Tim is extremely anxious about his final Wolfpack campaign.

"I guess being a senior is part of it," he said. "But, the potential is so great this year. I'm excited about this team more than any other I've been on. No matter what happens, though, I'll always give it my best shot. I've really enjoyed this whole experience."



TIM GILLESPIE



KYLE WESCOE

KYLE WESCOE, DEFENSE

Kyle Wescoe has been a part of a two man team ever since his arrival at State four years ago. As freshmen, he and Bill Cowher were a pair, playing linebackers as a team. Last season, the twosome combined as the team's top two tacklers with a total 339. Kyle had 163 stops himself.

At 5-foot-11, 217 pounds, Wescoe fits the linebacker image . . . "agile, hostile and mobile." Hostile doesn't carry off the field though as friends know him as easy going.

At Liberty High in Bethlehem, Pa., Kyle played fullback and linebacker, but his first love is linebacker.

"You can have more fun on defense," said Kyle. "You're around the ball more, especially at linebacker. You're still in a controlled situation, but not as much as you are on offense. You can be very aggressive all the time on defense . . . at linebacker . . . and that's what I really like about football."

He also lettered in baseball and wrestling in high school and was voted the Top Defensive Player in Pennsylvania by the National Football Foundation.

The Parks and Recreation Administration major says his years at State has been a great part of his life.

"It's been really nice here," said Kyle. "It's been a good experience. I've met a lot of friends that I'm sure I'll keep in life. I've enjoyed the coaches and the overall experience of major college football."

MIKE OWENS, SPECIALTY TEAMS

Mike Owens is the example everyone likes to refer to.

He came to state in 1974 without a scholarship and very little money. About midway through the season, Mike found himself on the Rat Pack (the Wolfpack's specialty unit) and a few days later, head coach Lou Holtz was telling him of a scholarship he would receive beginning the next semester. Hard work had paid off.

"I was elated with that," said Mike. "I probably wouldn't have been in school if not for it. Finances would have kept me out. One of my goals when I came was to earn a scholarship."

At Thomasville Senior High, Mike earned letters in three different sports. He attended Naval Prep Academy one year before coming to State. After earning his scholarship, he was sent to the jayvee squad for two seasons then found himself red-shirted before moving on to the varsity last fall.

At 5-foot-11, 206 pounds, Mike plays defensive end when he's not on a specialty squad. He's listed on the alternate unit for tonight's game at DE. His playing time in his career at State has been limited, but it's something the Political Science major feels is just a part of the game.

"You always want to play more, but it's something that hasn't happened," Mike said. "There's a place for everyone on the team and I know what I have to do and I try to do it to my best.

"I've just been happy for the fellowship I've had with the other players and the contributions I have made to the team. I'd probably have been lost here at State without some group to associate with. I'm glad I've been able to meet the people I have and to give what I can."

TONIGHT'S GAME

Ausley was the network's color man until the 1974 death of Bill Jackson who had handled the play-by-play from the inception of the network. Then Ausley went to play-by-play. WPTF Sports Director and disc jockey Garry Dornburg adds color commentary.

Writes Larry Keech, author of the Greensboro Daily News article: "Ausley brings a voice of experience and continuity to Wolfpack sports. But while State's vested interest in the network is responsible for an overabundance of promotional spots, Ausley and Dornburg maintain a relatively light, low-keyed, approach which is only mildly partisan in its execution."

AS FOR TONIGHT'S GAME ...

This is the ninth time State and East Carolina have played each other in football with the Wolfpack leading the series 5-3. The Pirates have won the last two times while State's most recent win over East Carolina came in 1975.

PLAYERS TO WATCH:

For East Carolina keep your eye on quarterback Leander Green (#10). Last week against Western Carolina, Green passed for 96 yards and rushed for nine in his 105 yards of total offense. He's a key to the Pirate wishbone attack. He'll be handling the ball off to various backs but the one who seems ready to get the yardage when the Pirates need it is fullback Anthony Collins (#33), who rushed 17 times for 84 yards last Saturday. Receivers Terry Gallaher (#81) and Billy Ray Washington (#85) figured in prominently last week.

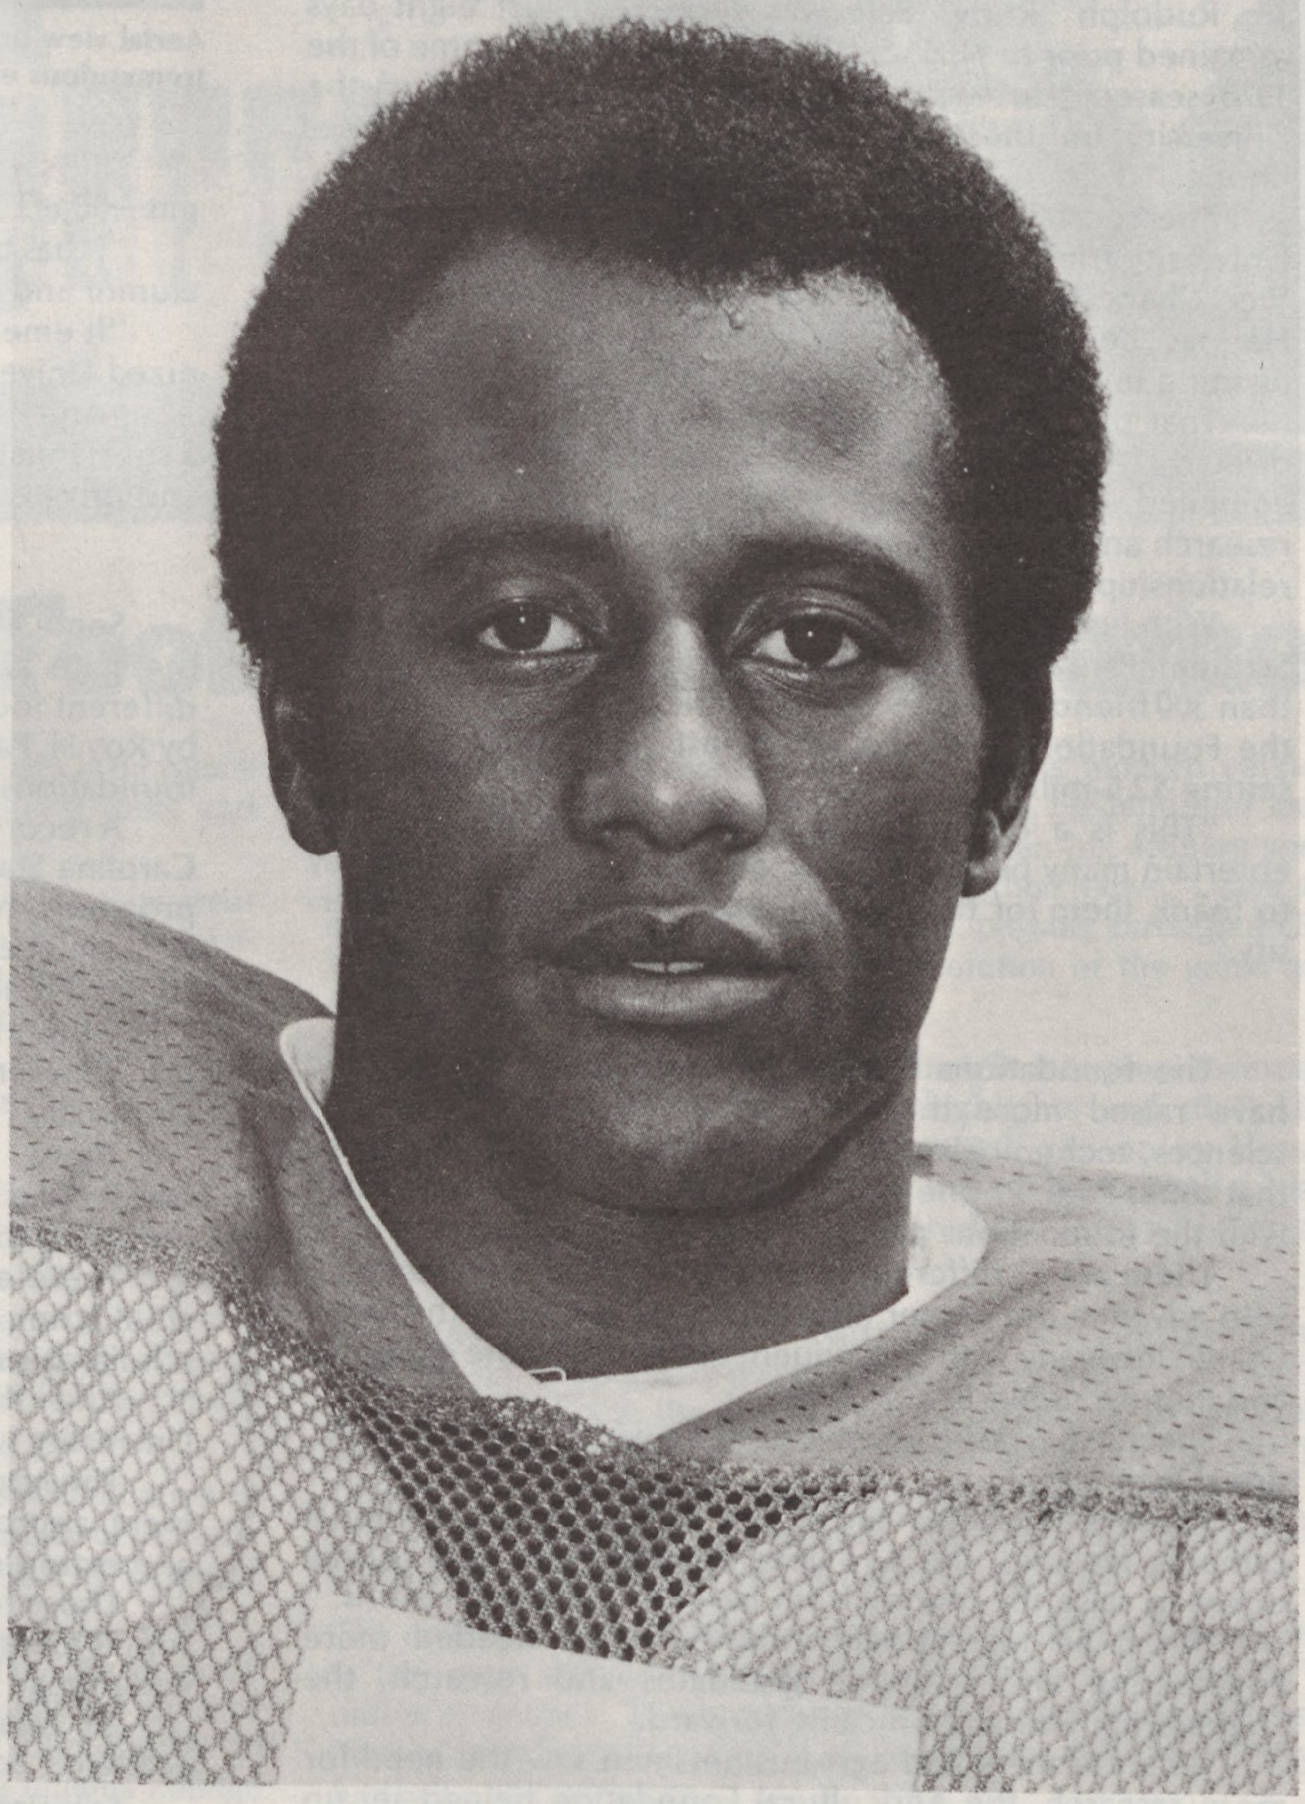
For the Wolfpack ... well, Ted Brown (#23) leads everyone. He's quick, smart and never seems to tire. But, the young man to focus on in his debut is quarterback Scott Smith (#11) who is well versed in veer techniques. Smith will also look to fullback Billy Ray Vickers (#33) and reserve fullback Rickey Adams (#44) to hand off the ball. Receivers to watch are Randy Hall (#3), Buster Ray (#24) and tight end Lin Dawson (#88).

On defense, tackle Simon Gupton (#90), linebackers Kyle Wescoe (#57) and Bill Cowher (#54) and free safety Woodrow Wilson (#2) are team leaders for the Wolfpack. Against Western Carolina, noseguard Oliver Felton (#79) was East Carolina's defensive standout with 10 tackles.

* * * * * * * * *

NEXT WEEK, the Wolfpack returns to Carter Stadium for a regionally televised game with Syracuse. Airtime is 1:30 p.m. while kickoff is slated for 1:50. Verne Lundquist will handle the play-by-play for ABC-TV while former Air Force coach Ben Martin will work the color.

LARRY EBERHEART ...IN MEMORY



On Saturday, July 8, 1978, N. C. State athletics was thrown for a loss with the tragic drowning of football defensive back Larry Eberheart. Larry had been swimming near Carolina Beach, N. C., when the strong rip tide pulled him under. Larry would have been a senior this year and was listed on the alternate unit at cornerback, a spot at which he would have dealt a great deal of experience since the other three possibilities there are sophomores. His football career at N. C. State wasn't as glorious as others, but he was well liked by his teammates, and he was a hard worker. Coach Bo Rein says Larry was first team material and with a little more work and playing time he could have been a starter. He injured a hand last year in the second game of the season and that prohibited him from developing his talent in normal time. Most of the coaching staff attended his funeral in his hometown of Shelby, N. C., as did many of his teammates. Our sympathy goes out to his family and friends.

FOUNDATIONS

Margin of Excellence

by Graham E. Jones

Rudolph "Rudy" Pate was very busy. Just eight days remained prior to N. C. State's opening football game of the 1978 season. He was in a meeting with a friend of the University, but there was constant interruption by the telephone.

The constant ringing of telephones and meetings with University friends are nothing unfamiliar for the N. C. State Vice Chancellor for Foundations and University Relations. He has been in that extremely hustling situation since heading up the Foundations program at State in 1969.

That particular Friday, though, the phone calls weren't directly related towards the many thousands of dollars compiled by Pate's department for various aspects of research and development at State, but, indeed, there was a relationship.

With just a week to go before the home opener in Carter Stadium, Pate was busy organizing ticket distribution to more than 300 friends of State—the many friends who contribute to the Foundations program which last year gained a record setting $2.5-million.

"This is a big part of our work," Pate smiled. "We entertain many people at football games. It's just a small way to thank them for the many things they do for the University."

* * * * * * * * *

The foundations were organized starting in 1942 and have raised more than $30 million for the University's sciences, technologies, humanities and arts programs since that time. Pate, in one way or another, has been associated with the foundations program ever since its inception.

There are 13 different foundations, all with similar goals —to advance the higher educational programs at the Land-Grant University with subsequent dividends to the economy and culture of North Carolina.

Specific purposes revolve about a wide range of educational activities.

When 4-H youths across the state needed additional camping facilities, the 4-H Development Fund held special drives to raise the money from parents and corporations.

When an increasingly industrial state needed more engineering and scientific graduates and research, the Engineering Foundation came forward.

When farmers and agri-businessmen saw the need for more research, the Agricultural Foundation helped set up the famed "Nickels for Know-How" program.

As pulp and paper industries and forestry-related companies expanded, they contributed some of their profits to the Pulp and Paper Foundation as an investment in recruiting and educating the young men and women to help manage those industries.

The same was true in textiles, architecture, dairying and other fields.

Leaders in the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges frequently have pointed out that no state university ever became great on governmental appropriations alone.

The greatness that North Carolina State University has achieved has resulted, in measurable part, from private support through the foundations.

Governor James B. Hunt Jr. summarized the importance of the foundations to his alma mater during an address to the NCSU Development Council last December:

Aerial view of N. C. State campus, built in part through the tremendous efforts of the various Foundations.

"This is a public University. But it was started on a private gift—60 acres of land from Stanhope Pullen.

"It has been sustained through the years by support from alumni and other friends.

"It emerged into a nationally and internationally recognized University with strong help from voluntary gifts ...

"And the growth of this University will be determined in a substantial way by the gifts and grants from private citizens and private industries and private organizations."

* * * * * * * * * *

Some 600 business and professional people from across the state and in other states serve as directors of the 13 different foundations. The NCSU Development Council, led by Roy H. Park of Ithaca, N. Y., serves as an umbrella to all the foundations.

A record-setting $2.5 million is being pumped into North Carolina State University's teaching, research and extension programs this year.

Chancellor Joab L. Thomas calls the foundations' support "the margin for excellence."

Others have pointed out that the private support "means the difference between a good University and a great University."

There are distinguished professors teaching and conducting research at the campus today who would not be there but for foundation salary supplements.

There are Dean's List students studying at NCSU who would not have been able to enroll without foundation scholarships.

And there are programs being conducted at the University which have been enhanced by foundation funds.

The non-tax funds supplement state and federal government appropriations in supporting the teaching, research and extension missions of the Land-Grant University.

Those foundation funds go for student aid, faculty salary supplements, "seed money" to start new programs and a wide range of other educational needs.

At least one foundation supports each of the eight academic schools.

Following are the foundations, their presidents and the amounts they have allocated for 1978-79:

Agricultural Foundation: Carl E. Patterson, China Grove, $630,500.
Dairy Foundation: E. Merle Edwards, Kinston, $180,658.
Design Foundation: S. Scott Ferebee Jr., Charlotte, $79,676.
Education Foundation: M. Edmund Aycock, Raleigh, $500.
Engineering Foundation: Henry Foscue, High Point, $513,000.
Forestry Foundation: Donald Brock, Trenton, $89,820.
4-H Development Fund: Garth H. Quinn, Raleigh, $111,557.
Humanities Foundation: John M. Council, Lake Waccamaw, $1,316.
NCSU Foundation: G. Brantley Deloatche, Durham, $105,000.
Pulp and Paper Foundation: H. Minge Reed Jr., Mobile, Ala., $157,806.
Textiles Foundation: Hampton Shuping, Greensboro, $189,100.
Tobacco Foundatioin: George B. Watson, Rocky Mount, $244,861.

Veterinary Science Foundation, headed by Grover Gore of Southport, was organized this year with initial gifts of a large tract of land in Moore County and with checks from Winston-Salem and Raleigh Kennel Clubs.

In addition to the foundations, the Board of Trustees of the NCSU Endowment Funds headed by Walter L. Smith of Charlotte, will allocate an estimated $204,900 during the year.

The foundation funds total does not include the long-standing support of the University by the Alumni Association or the support by the NCSU Student Aid Association (Wolfpack Club).

NOW OPEN...

The College Football Hall of Fame.

Imagine, if you will a Hall of Fame devoid of musty little rooms where memories hang heavily along drably painted walls and trophies lose their glitter in dim-lit shadow boxes.

Visualize, instead, a football Hall of Fame which honors its great players, coaches and personalities in bright attitudes of achievement. Picture telescreens bringing men and matter to life, where the late Knute Rockne "talks" of legends and "Red" Grange gallops again. See yourself matching wits with history's most successful coaches or testing your knowledge of the game in a computer quiz.

These experiences are reality at the National Football Foundation's new College Football Hall of Fame at Kings Island, the 1600-acre family entertainment center, situated along Interstate-71 north of Cincinnati. The new facility promises more than a past-tense presentation of gridiron glory. To the contrary, you will discover football excitement in a modern mood, blending multi-media concepts into a unique, fun-filled learning process.

Aligned with the National Football Foundations's dedication to educate and inspire Americans through the principles of football, the new building has been hailed as the Hall of Fame of the future.

Jaques Cattell Press, in its recently-released The Big Book Of Halls Of Fame, foresees the visitor getting "to know the game of college football intimately within 2-3 hours" or attaining "in 10 minutes, a first-name kind of friendship with a famous college football star of the past."

Indeed, this personalized approach is an integral part of the Hall. Exhibits will bring the total college football experience to life via action-oriented attractions which invite your participation. Within a campus-like framework of Georgian-Colonial architecture, the building will house a wonderland of fact and fun certain to appeal to each member of the family—male and female, young and old.

For example, a touch of the telescreen keyboard will conjure up the legends of Jim Thorpe, Tom Harmon, Bronko Nagurski, "Whizzer" White, Pop Warner or any of the 453 players and coaches enshrined in the Hall. The computer will give you ready access to information on the Hall of Famers, according to name, school, state or season.

You may want to meander through the "Time Tunnel," tracing the history of football from its earliest beginning as a Greek game called Harpaston, played in 478 B.C., to its modern version. Walk along the cobblestones of Merry Old England and learn how King Henry II outlawed the sport when his archers spent more time kicking a ball than drawing their bows. Leave the ancient days of football's development, passing through a Civil War tent and into the blossoming evolution of the game as a uniquely American sport.

Four theatres will provide cinematic insight into great teams and individuals, classic contests, bowl highlights and rib-tickling football follies. Wide-eyed youngsters can enjoy Hanna-Barbera's Fred Flintstone in an "explanation" of football rules. A 250-seat Grandstand Theatre will record the game's Golden and Modern eras in film and slides.

And, yes, you will witness Notre Dame's legendary Knute Rockne—in a specially-produced animated form—deliver his famous pep talks in the "Locker Room," sponsored by Chevrolet. The reincarnate Rockne will urge you to "Win One For The Gipper" or "Fight, Fight, Fight," recalling some of the most inspirational moments in football. That's not all! Many other coaches are featured in Locker Room screenings.

The computerized "Strategy Room" is set to offer exciting games to test your skill and judgment in situations so familiar to the nation's coaches. Tackle a computer quiz and "make the team," moving from Recruit to Coach, all based upon your knowledge of football and its history.

Or, for some real fun, step up to the tee and kick a "game-winning" field goal. Be careful, though! There are cheers if you make it, boos if you miss.

Undoubtedly, the new Hall of Fame will offer college football's color, excitement and pageantry as an extension of the already popular family entertainment theme of Kings Island. Taft Broadcasting Company, owner of Kings Island, is managing the Hall of Fame under the direction of the National Football Foundation.

The traveling gourmet can enjoy the Island's International Restaurant; the golfer, a tour of the Jack Nicklaus Golf Center, site of the 1978 Ladies Professional Golf Association Championship.

Overnight guests will relax amid the Swiss-chalet charm of the 300-room Kings Island Inn or take advantage of the Kings Island Campground which accommodates 300 recreational vehicles.

THE WIZ, MELBA MOORE, MARCEL MARCEAU HEAD STEWART THEATRE'S 1978-79 SEASON

Raleigh's biggest menu of entertainment for all palates and persuasions is that offered by the Stewart Theatre on the campus at N. C. State. Thirty-eight live performances and 13 films are packaged into six series for the 1978-79 season, each with its special appeal. Broadway spectaculars The Wiz, Neil Simon's California Suite and Side by Side by Sondheim alternate with big stars and perennial favorites, Marcel Marceau the French master of pantomime, dancer Paul Taylor and Company and jazz singer Melba Moore.

THE SIGNATURE SERIES, the highlighted series on campus, is a collection of seven New York hits and classics from Western literature, to which a bonus performance by the Durham Savoyards has been added. Your Arms too Short to Box with God, The Comedy of Errors, Side by Side by Sondheim, California Suite and a spring residency by the Acting Company comprise this year's core theatre series.

Side by Side by Sondheim, the dazzling kaleidoscope of Stephen Sondheim's greatest hits, will open its cross-country tour in the Stewart Theatre on October 7.

The Oxford-Cambridge Shakespeare Company, an elite ensemble of selected graduates from England's two finest institutions, gives Comedy of Errors a hilarious rendition on October 12.

In writing California Suite, "Neil Simon is at his best. He tops his own jokes like a pole-vaulter setting records!" (Clive Barnes). This uproarious comedy set in the salons of Los Angeles will be performed on October 18.

The (ir) reverent story of Jesus, Your Arms Too Short to Box with God is staged as a hand-clapping revival by Vinnette Carroll. This "celebration of the human voice, the heart and the spirit" (NBC) will charm Raleigh audiences on February 24.

Serious lovers of great literature eagerly look forward to the annual spring residency by the Acting Company, an enthusiastic and talented ensemble. This year will prove no exception. Grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the North Carolina Theatre Arts Section enable us to present a week, March 26 through April 1, of sterling performances beginning with Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet. Broadway, a robust and brassy farce, took theatre goers by storm in 1926 with its hilarious portrayal of the false glamour of a New York speakeasy, complete with music. Antigone is Anouilh's updated tragedy of filial loyalty and truth opposing the forces of power and greed.

These seven performances will be joined by the bonus show, Gilbert and Sullivan's Ruddigore. Back by popular demand, North Carolina's own Durham Savoyards will provide a rousing good time for all with their April 28 performances of this lively operetta of a sweet village maiden named Rose Maybud.

EVERYBODY WILL BE TALKING about it for years to come—Raleigh's Capital City Series. Broadway's biggest hits and the world's best performers line up for a season well worth turning out for. The Wiz, Marcel Marceau, the Sound of Music and Fred Waring and the Young Pennsylvanians make up the 1978-79 series in the new Memorial Auditorium.

Raleigh's Memorial Auditorium has just undergone extensive renovation designed to produce the finest theatrical experience available with its new sound system, new lighting system and new permanent sloped seating.

In a brilliant example of showmanship, Fred Waring opens the Capital City Series on October 30, leading thirty singers, dancers and musicians, the talented Young Pennsylvanians, for the musical event of the year. This attraction has been delighting audiences for 60 years, while maintaining a fresh approach and a good balance between nostalgic numbers and the latest hits.

The Wiz, scheduled for January 12, is the winner of Seven Tony Awards, including Best Musical of 1975, and has been an international smash hit ever since. The Wiz is the delightfully lavish musical version of The Wizard of Oz. ABC-TV called it "a virtual musical circus of a show. Let yourself be swept up in its driving rhythms, its soaring songs and its dazzling sets. There's been nothing as spectacular as this on Broadway in a long time."

America's most popular musical, The Sound of Music, comes to Raleigh on January 25. This moving story of the Von Trapp family has thrilled theatregoers of all ages all over the world with one of the finest sources ever written by Rodgers and Hammerstein.

Called the Wordless Wonder, The World's Greatest Pantomimist and the Genius of Gesture, Marcel Marceau comes to Raleigh for the first time on March 11. He refashions with a few gestures the joys of our childhood, hilarious human situations and the problems of adolescence and maturity, all without benefit of props or scenery.

CONTINUING THE DANCE EXCITEMENT sparked by the American Dance Festival's first summer in North Carolina, the Triangle Dance Guild is sponsoring a four concert series all on Saturday nights of inspiring ballet and modern dance companies in Stewart Theatre.

In October, Raleigh plays host to the North Carolina Dance Theatre, the state's most established touring company. Five days of thrilling interaction with the schools and studios of Raleigh will culminate in two performances on Friday and Saturday, October 27 and 28 highlighting the most recent additions to their repertoire. This project is jointly supported by a grant from the North Carolina Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts in Washington, D. C., a federal agency.

A dominant creative force for the past two decades, Paul Taylor brings his "kinetic sense of the zany and the zestfully breathtaking" (Newsweek) to his choreography on the frontiers of modern dance. "Rarely does an audience enjoy the opportunity to view a program with such a high level of ingenious choreography and professional performance" (Pittsburgh Post-Gazette).

Season membership holders will be admitted to the lecture-demonstration by the Paul Taylor Dance Company on December 1 at reduced rates. The public performance follows on Saturday, December 2.

Dance Magazine, praising Dan Wagoner and Dancers, said "it's hard to imagine a company that more vividly embodies the old American ideals of optimism and vitality." Dan Wagoner, a West Virginian from a family of 10, specializes in a fascinating, original style of choreography of vibrant energy and enormous momentum. The lecture-demonstration, showing the why and wherefore of Wagoner's style, will take place on February 9, and the public performance on Saturday, February 10.

Named one of five major regional ballet companies, the Minnesota Dance Theatre draws its inspiration from artistic director Loyce Houlton, who believes in "keeping dancers always on the keen edge of their talent" (Dance Magazine). This fine company, performing classical and contemporary works with verve and dynamism, closes the season on Saturday, April 7.

THE COMEDY FILM STAR SERIES in Stewart Theatre features famous film stars from 1925-1972, from Harold Lloyd and Buster Keaton up through to Jack Lemmon and Woody Allen. The 13-film series will be sold to the public as a package, so one must buy during the season campaign to cash in on a year's worth of the best and most hilarious the film world has to offer.

Harold Lloyd stars in The Freshman, a terrific silent comedy about a student who strives to be the most popular man on campus. John Mirsalis, the NCSU impresario, will provide live piano accompaniment. Jack Lemmon and Shirley MacLaine liven up The Apartment and Cary Grant stars in Arsenic and Old Lace, the zany comedy about two little old ladies who poison lonely old men.

Busby Berekely directed Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler and Ginger Rogers in The Gold Diggers of 1933. What more could anyone want in a musical comedy!

In Adam's Rib, Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn are husband and wife lawyers in a marvelous battle of the sexes. She defends a girl who tried to shoot a two-timing husband and Tracy's the prosecuting attorney.

The Marx Brothers, with their typical lunacy, succeed in disrupting an entire opera company in A Night At the Opra.

Peter Sellers stars as the bumbling Inspector Clouseau in the hilarious murder mystery A Shot in the Dark.

In Go West, Easterner Buster Keaton goes west to find success. Along the way he battles rustlers and finds his true love, a cow named "Brown Eyes".

The Tall Blond Man With One Black Shoe is an incredibly funny satire about an eccentric violinist set up as a decoy for an espionage ring. You'll wish you could see this one twice!

*M*A*S*H, Robert Redford and Jane Fonda in Barefoot in the Park, Charles Chaplin in City Lights and Woody Allen and Diane Keaton in PLay It Again, Sam, complete the series.

All events in the 13 show Comedy Film Star Series are on Thursday nights at 8 p.m. Each film will be preceded by a specially selected short.

Fred Waring and a bevy of his beautiful Young Pennsylvanians.

RALEIGH AUDIENCES WILL BE treated to four great jazz concerts in Stewart Theatre.

Melba Moore, the dazzling and effervescent singer, comes to Raleigh fresh from her Broadway triumph in Timbuktu! Be among the first to hear her singing the hits from her recently released album on Epic Records.

Musicians of every style and instrument, the Paul Winter Consort, here on October 4, achieve an eclecticism of innate excitement "filled with fascinating colors . . . and bristling with exciting rhythms" (N. Y. Times). Performance Magazine says that "for pure musical skill, I don't think Winter's group can be matched by any other band on the road today."

The Gary Burton Quartet was formed in 1967 on the heels of Burton's rise to national prominence as a featured soloist with George Shearing and Stan Getz. His Quartet's popularity to jazz clubs and concert halls, and its success on the charts in Billboard and in the Downbeat polls testify to its remarkable appeal. Their October 31 - November 1 residency at the Stewart Theatre is made possible in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts through the Southern Arts Federation, of which the North Carolina Arts Council is a member.

Woody Herman, once the boy wonder of the saxophone and clarinet, is still going strong after more than 40 years as a major bandleader. The Herman sound remains vital and contemporary - embracing Stevie Wonder and rock, blending it with Woody's particular style. He'll perform at Stewart Theatre on November 10 with the 14 musicians of the Young Thundering Herd.

Marcel Marceau

FOUR SUPERLATIVE CHAMBER MUSIC concerts in the intimate surroundings of the Stewart Theatre, plus a bonus concert, may be had for less than the individual ticket price for 3 concerts.

Flautist Michel Debost appears in Raleigh for the first time with his fine partner, the prize-winning pianist Christian Ivaldi on November 19. "Whether there is a better flute player than Debost... is extremely doubtful. His is living, breathing music, thrilling and intense" (San Francisco Chronicle.)

The Tel Aviv Quartet is made up of international soloists who currently hold the leading chairs in the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra. For the January 21 concert in Raleigh, they will be joined by clarinetist par excellence, Yona Ettlinger. "Superbly matched artists ... surely one of the finest examples of ensemble performance to be heard anywhere these days."

Although all under thirty, the three artists Jackson, Johnson and Felicity Lott, have brilliant careers ahead of them; they already bring to their performances a maturity and depth that few artists ever attain. "A beautiful performance, integrating singer and player, poet and composer" (San Francisco Chronicle). They will perform at the Stewart Theatre on February 4.

For those of you who missed the Borodin Quartet's last Raleigh appearance, the April 8, 1979 concert will be a prime opportunity to hear Moscow's finest string quartet, considered to be among the world's foremost chamber music ensembles over the past 20 years.

A Bonus Concert, supported by a North Carolina Arts Council Grassroots Arts Grant, will be included in the season membership price.

SEASON MEMBERSHIPS to all series can be ordered by mail or telephone. Call 737-3105 for 24-hour information or to have a complete brochure with an order blank mailed to your home. Sales begin August 27 and run through the beginning of October. Subscribe now for a year's worth of the best in touring theatre at hometown prices.

The Stewart Theatre Box Office, located in the NCSU Student Center next door to Reynolds Coliseum is open 7 days a week and until 8:30 p.m. weekdays during the entire season membership drive. Memberships are also on sale at the Civic Center Box Office and at both the Fayetteville Mall and the Crabtree Valley Hudson-Belk stores in the credit office.

EAST CAROLINA PIRATES

East Carolina University has shown rapid, but orderly growth from a normal school to a multipurpose institution during its 71 years of service to the region and the state.

Chartered by the General Assembly in 1907 as East Carolina Teachers Training School, the University has grown from an enrollment of 123 in 1907 to approximately 12,500 for the current school year, making East Carolina the third largest institution of higher learning in North Carolina. Students from 95 of the state's 100 counties, 42 states and 20 foreign countries attend East Carolina.

The campus encompasses 411 acres. Most of the 56 classroom buildings and research facilities and 16 residence dormitories are less than 14 years old. The total physical plant is valued at more than $80,000,000.

The athletic complex alone totals 79 acres. It consists of Minges Coliseum and Natatorium, Ficklen Stadium, Scales Fieldhouse, the Pirate Club Building, Harrington Field, the Sports Medicine Complex, the Mike Bunting Track and Field facility and the tennis courts.

East Carolina currently fields an 18-sport athletic program including 10 teams for men (football, soccer, basketball, swimming, wrestling, indoor track, baseball, outdoor track, golf and tennis) and eight for women (volleyball, field hockey, basketball, swimming, gymnastics, softball, track and field and tennis).

East Carolina was classified as a Division I NCAA representative in 1964. The Pirates also entered the Southern Conference in 1964 and were members until leaving in June 1977.

In 1920, East Carolina was authorized to offer four-year teacher education degrees and to grant a bachelor of arts degree. A year later, the school name was changed to East Carolina Teachers College.

During the period from 1934 to 1960, the school continued to grow though not as spectacularly in terms of enrollment. A curriculum leading to a bachelor of arts degree was authorized in 1941 as the college expanded to meet more occupational needs. By 1951, undergraduate majors were offered in 17 areas and graduate programs in 10 areas. In that year, the General Assembly changed the school name to East Carolina College.

A major turning point for East Carolina, both academically and athletically, came in 1960 when Dr. Leo W. Jenkins was inaugurated as the school's sixth chancellor. Under his leadership, East Carolina College became East Carolina University on July 1, 1967 and enrollment more than doubled in a 10-year period. Jenkins retired in June 30, 1978 and was succeeded by Dr. Thomas B. Brewer, former Vice Chancellor and Dean of the University of Texas Christian University.

With an operating budget in excess of $36 million annually, East Carolina, always a national leader in teacher preparation, has expanded its academic programs to offer 105 undergraduate degrees and 69 graduate degrees.

ACC Viewpoints: The Best ACC Player I Have Faced

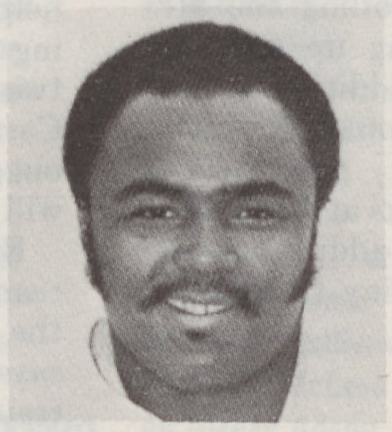
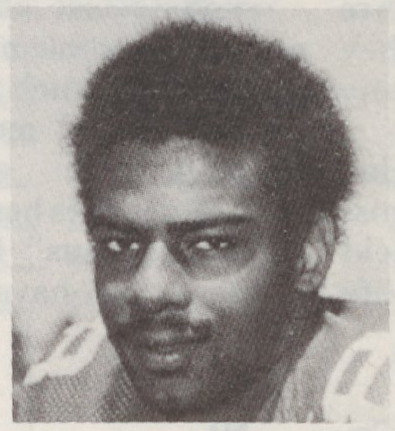
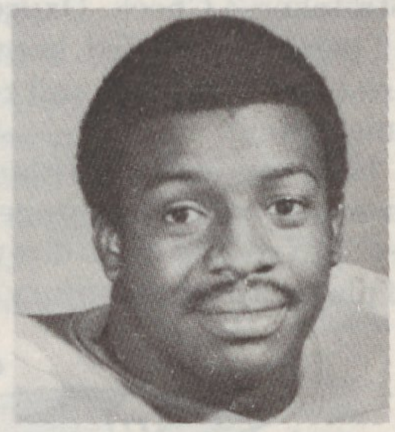
BOBBY CALE



CHARLES JOHNSON



MIKE DUNN



RANDY SCOTT

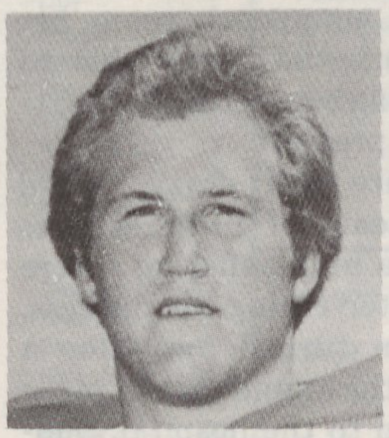
TONY BLOUNT

BOBBY CALE, North Carolina Defensive Back: The best returning players I've faced in the ACC are James McDougald of Wake Forest and Ted Brown of N.C. State. I really can't pick one over the other because both are excellent players. McDougald may be the hardest runner I've faced. He's consistent and also blocks well. You really know it when you hit him. I've played against Ted for three years and we've met head-on a few times on the football field. He's got great quickness which makes it difficult to stop him outside. He catches the ball well and also can throw it. He's certainly one of the great backs in the nation.

TONY BLOUNT, Virginia Defensive Back: Picking the best player I have faced in the ACC isn't something that just comes off the top of one's head. The reason is that the conference has so many top players. In my past two years playing in the ACC, I would have to say that quarterback Mike Dunn of Duke is one of the best athletes returning this season. I pick him because he is the type player that every coach looks for in football. By this I mean he is a leader. As he stands behind the center waiting for the snap, it looks as though he is thinking "Onward soldiers to victory." By far, Dunn is one of the best I've faced in the ACC.

JAMES ROYSTER

JAMES ROYSTER, Wake Forest Defensive Back: On November 4 when Wake Forest plays host to Clemson, I'll be looking for a very interesting matchup. That will be the day when I'll be up against one of the country's top pass-catchers, Jerry Butler. I consider Jerry to be the premier receiver in the ACC this year. He is real fast and it's easy for him to get behind you. Then it becomes just a footrace and no cornerback wants that. Jerry has good hands and that enables him to make a lot of exciting catches. He is a big ballplayer who is capable of getting the quick six.



TIM GILLESPIE

CHARLES JOHNSON, Maryland Defensive Tackle: Trying to pick the best player in the ACC that I have faced is almost an impossible task. There are so many truly outstanding players. Going into a game I am very concerned about the quarterback, especially those who are fleet of foot and have good moves. With this in mind, Steve Fuller, the Clemson quarterback, is probably the toughest player that I have faced in my three years at Maryland. He moves well behind the line of scrimmage and if you drop your guard he will be long gone. He has deceptive speed which causes many missed tackles. He will keep you honest whenever you're defending against his sprintouts because of the deep threat he has in Jerry Butler. He runs the Clemson offense in flawless fashion.

MIKE DUNN, Duke Quarterback: There are many great players throughout the ACC, but if I had to pick one individual, it would be Randy Scott of Clemson. Randy is one of the great linebackers that I have played against during my three-year career. He has great mobility which makes him tough against the run and the pass. He is an aggressive player and hits hard during the game, but once the game is over he is a good sportsman. I admire him as much for his sportsmanship as for his playing ability. With his size and speed, I wouldn't be surprised to see him make a go of it in pro football.

RANDY SCOTT, Clemson Linebacker: Before coming to Clemson and playing in the ACC, I thought the country's top players were in other conferences. But I was quick to run into players like Mike Dunn, Ted Brown, Amos Lawrence, Warren Ratchford, Jerry Butler, and the toughest and quickest lineman we played against in Jim Ritcher of N.C. State. There are so many other outstanding players. Dunn has been most effective against us. His height gives him deceptive speed and the range to drop into the pocket and complete passes. Brown is very effective with his ability to change direction even after he has committed himself to a hole. Although Ritcher is usually covered by a noseguard his speed and strength enables him to screen the noseguard and slip around on the pursuing linebacker. I personally feel the ACC has some of the top players in the country and the 1978 season should be a great year.

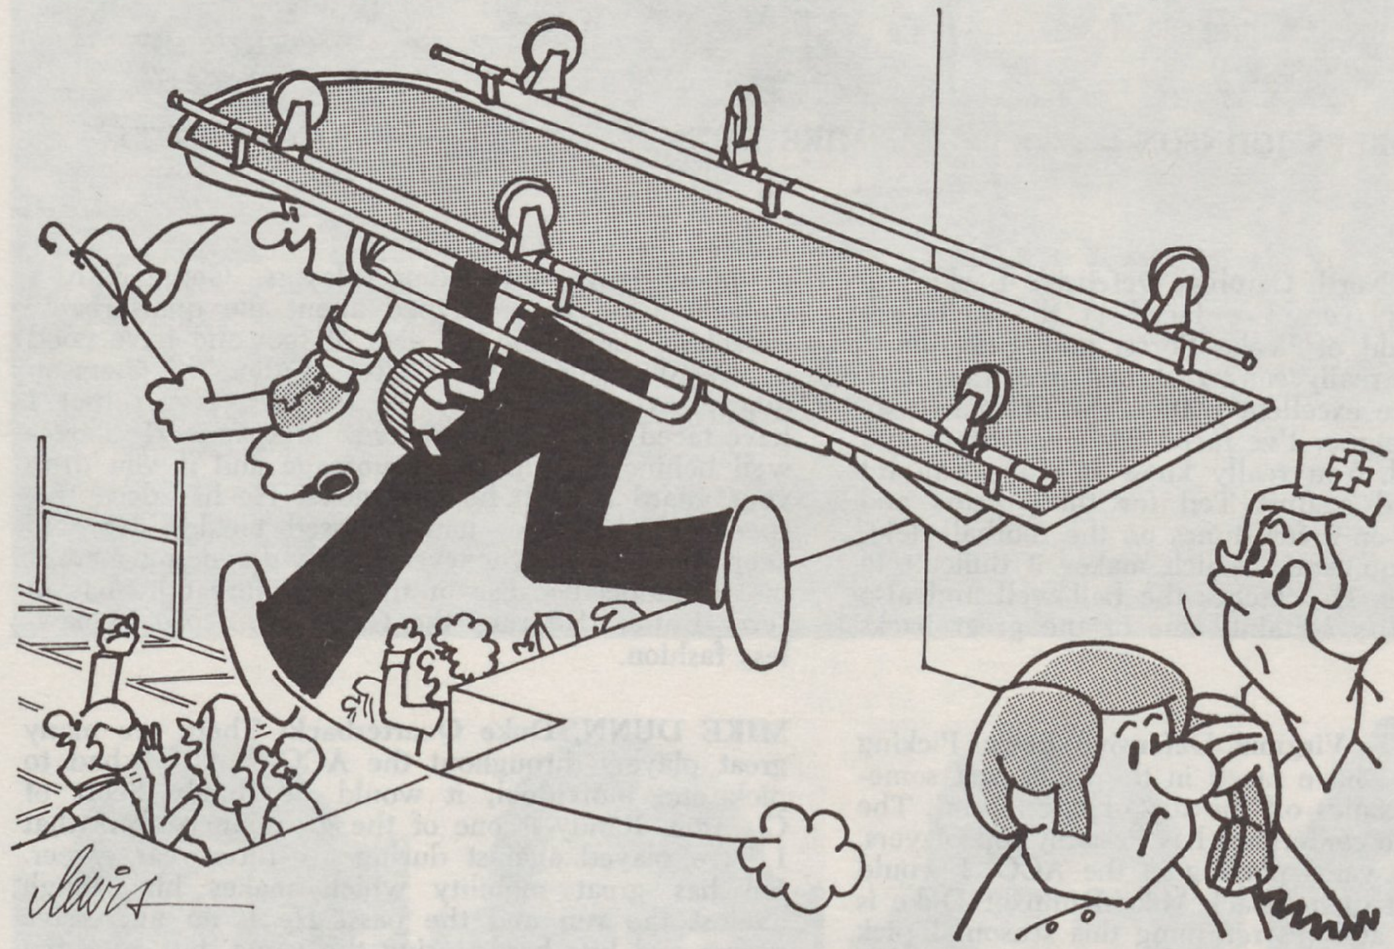
TIM GILLESPIE, N.C. State Offensive Guard: Just about everybody you face is an outstanding player these days. But if I have to pick one out, it'd be the defensive guard at Maryland, Ted Klaube. He's quick, strong and very tough to block, particularly in short-yardage situations. Even on our sweeps, he'd somehow manage to get to the play. The thing that impressed me the most about him was his sound effort and hustle. He's a very spirited player and, even when he'd get beat, he'd be real eager for the next play to get started. He never seems to get down, and I'm sure that's an inspiration to his teammates. He's just a heckuva college football player.

Stadium supervision not easy

by VIRGIL PARKER, Lincoln (Neb.) Journal and Star

It's Saturday morning. Kickoff time for the big college football game is just hours away. A medical team has gathered to make sure everything is ready. Stretchers? Check. Oxygen? Yes. Are all personnel briefed, know where they are to be stationed and ready for any emergency?

Is all this elaborate planning needed so a player will be properly administered to should he go down on the field of play with a knee injury? No, this life support group was organized to look after the fan—whether it's a scraped knee from a fall while rushing up the stadium steps or the life-and-death matter of cardiac arrest.



While such emergency medical rescue units are becoming common in stadiums across the country, many are patterned after the pioneer in the field—the University of Nebraska in Lincoln.

"It was a truly innovative idea when we started to provide advanced life support for the fan in the mid-1960s," recalls cardiovascular surgeon Dr. Steve Carveth. "We didn't have any guidelines to follow."

This is not the only point on which the Nebraska situation is unique. Every Cornhusker football game since 1962 has been a sellout. More unusual is the fact that Memorial Stadium in Lincoln, on the Saturday of any home football game, becomes the third-largest "city" in the state of Nebraska.

"First there is Omaha, then Lincoln and then the 76,000 who cram into the stadium for every game," reminds campus police chief Gale Gade. "The logistics of looking after a 'city' of people are tremendous. Traffic control, parking, guarding against theft, finding lost kids, controlling the alcohol problem, breaking up fights—this and much more in addition to the health and medical problems which arise."

Gade lists heart attacks at the top of his "serious" list. "In addition," he says, "we have everything from kids who get cut on the barbed wire while climbing the fence to sneak in to those who can be seriously hurt in a fall. And, there are those who need a couple of aspirin for a tension headache—especially if the game is close or the Huskers are losing."

More than 300 people are directly involved in watching over the welfare of the fans.

"Four law enforcement agencies—the campus and city police, the sheriff's department and the state patrol—plus the Red Cross, the heart team and the adult-supervised Boy Scout ushers are coordinated together," Gade says.

Speed in responding to a heart attack is the key to success, Dr. Carveth says.

"Across the nation, the 'save' rate for a person who suffers cardiac arrest—a person who is not breathing and has no pulse—is only about four to five per cent," Dr. Carveth notes. "That's because trained help can't arrive quickly enough. In our stadium, the success rate is 87 per cent. We've had 16 cases of complete cardiac arrest and saved 14 of them."

Emergency CPR (cardiac-pulmonary resuscitation) instruction has helped. "Many businesses are requiring their employees to complete the two-session classes of instruction," Dr. Carveth says. "It's our goal that one out of every four people in the state will have learned the technique."

Even though a litter-bearing rescue team is within a minute of any seat in the Nebraska stadium, Dr. Carveth says a doctor, nurse or other CPR-trained person in that part of the stands likely will have already started emergency treatment.

CPR (chest massage), oxygen and IV (intravenous) treatment is started as the patient is strapped into the litter. Then comes the quick run down the steps to the room under the stands where the heart team waits with a defibrillation machine.

"We often have that secondary treatment started, the patient in the ambulance and on the way to the hospital under the care of the heart team members within five minutes," Dr. Carveth says proudly.

"Most of the calls for assistance are far less dramatic than the heart cases," university health engineer Del Weed, who coordinates the overall effort, admits. "Sometimes a bandaid is all that's needed."

The most unusual case? That came when a recently recovered heart attack patient insisted on seeing the next game. His doctor wouldn't let him attend without some precautionary measures being taken.

So, the heart team wired the fanatic fan. From the emergency room beneath the stands they were able to monitor the man's breathing, heartbeat and blood pressure.

"Some fans are really crazy," Weed insists. "One team of litter carriers brought down a man suffering severe chest pains. After easing his distress, the heart team turned away for a moment to get the ambulance in place to take the man to the hospital. Suddenly the patient jumped up, ran out and disappeared in the crowd. He didn't want to miss the rest of the game."

Hopefully, such medical assistance won't be needed here today. But it's comforting to know that the colleges of the country are as concerned over the welfare of the fan in the stands as for the player on the field.

Pride is when you've worked so hard that your best is the very best there is.

That's as true in business as it is on the playing field. And as your Caterpillar dealership we've worked hard to build a winning team for you — made up of those rare individuals who take pride in workmanship and just naturally go all out to give you their best.

We're proud of our team at Gregory Poole, and also proud of all the fine customers who have teamed up with us.

In agriculture, construction, transportation, forestry, mining, industrial power and materials handling you are using our equipment and service to do important things in Eastern North Carolina. And we are always proud to work with you. Proud to be chosen for your team.

North Carolina State University

North Carolina State University is one of the major Land-Grant State Universities of the nation.

The University recognizes responsibility to help each student attain the highest possible personal development along with the perspective that comes with understanding social, scientific and philosophical traditions.

Opportunities are provided for training in scholarly, scientific and technical fields with a variety of curricula for professional development to equip students for productive careers.

A comprehensive academic program includes some 2,300 courses in 80 bachelor of arts and sciences programs, 67 masters degree and 45 doctoral degree fields.

A primary responsibility of the University is its contribution to the body of knowledge through original investigation, with a special emphasis on the problems of the State. The University encourages students and faculty to engage in research, scholarship and creative activity by providing facilities in an atmosphere conducive to achievement.

Research activities span a broad array of some 700 scientific, technical and scholarly fields with a budget of about $20 million annually. The findings of research are made available to the public through various extension services.

Diverse extension programs are carried on in urban affairs, marine sciences, engineering, forestry, agriculture and textiles.

The University also extends its services to those not regularly enrolled through extension courses, evening courses and summer sessions. By sponsoring exhibits, lectures, concerts and drama, the University seeks to contribute to the cultural life of the State.

North Carolina State University is a member of a statewide 16-member University of North Carolina System, and is one of three Research Triangle Universities along with Duke University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

In the 30-mile triangle formed by the three universities is the 5,000-acre Research Triangle Park, the Research Triangle Institute (a Universities' subsidiary) and the Triangle Universities Computation Center, a central facility for the computing centers of the three major educational institutions.

North Carolina State University's enrollment is about 17,800 with 15,000 undergraduates and 2,800 graduate students. Working adults who attend classes on a part-time basis comprise about one-fifth of the student body. Students from all 50 states and 600 international students from 60 other nations lend a cosmopolitan aura to the institution.

More than 4,600 people work at North Carolina State University. The 1,621 faculty and professional staff include a graduate faculty of 974.

The annual University budget is more than $100 million, with an estimated value of $200 million in physical facilities which include 120 campus buildings. The central campus covers 596 acres with about 2,500 acres near the main campus in research farms, biological and ecological sites, and genetics, horticulture and floriculture nurseries and Carter Stadium. One research and endowment forest covers 78,000 acres.

North Carolina State University is organized in eight schools and the Graduate School. The eight schools are Agriculture and Life Sciences, Design, Education, Engineering, Forest Resources, Liberal Arts, Physical and Mathematical Sciences and Textiles. Additional divisions and programs provide a wide range of diversity in academic affairs, research and extension.

One of 118 recognized members of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, North Carolina State University is accredited by national and regional accrediting agencies applicable to the institution and its numerous professional fields.

The University is also a member of the American Council on Education, the College Entrance Examination Board, the Council of Graduate Schools in the United States, the National Commission on Accrediting, the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies and the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

JAMES HUNT, JR.
Governor of North Carolina

Jim Hunt never achieved one of his highest ambitions. As a seventh grader, Hunt won a national essay contest on "My Future Ambitions." In the essay, Hunt, then living in Rock Ridge in Wilson County, wrote that he wanted to raise cattle and play basketball for N. C. State.

While raising cattle came easy enough for his family, the height of the young Hunt's basketball career was being team captain and most valuable player at Rock Ridge High School his senior year. Now, his playing is restricted to an occasional game behind the Governor's Mansion — where he now lives.

Hunt's future ambitions, at least as written in the seventh grade, didn't include election to North Carolina's highest office, but he was elected anyway in 1976 as the 96th citizen to be Chief Executive of the state, and the 64th to be elected Governor since Independence.

Other ambitions didn't include being president of the Student Government at N. C. State, but he achieved that also — twice. He unfortunately backed into his first term when the president-elect flunked out of school. Hunt was elected Vice President of the Student Government in the spring of 1957 and would have served in that capacity the 1957-58 school year, but he moved up when the President didn't return. His VP election was by a 1,000 vote margin.

Hunt was elected President the next spring by almost a 1,200 vote margin.

He attended State from 1955 through 1960 earning a bachelor's and master's degree from State in agricultural economics, writing a nationally recognized thesis on tobacco acreage-poundage controls. Later, Hunt earned a law degree from UNC-Chapel Hill.

Hunt is a very active Governor and was just as active in college. He worked in the College Union, was editor of the Agriculturist (the publication of the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences) and was active in Thirty & Three, Golden Chain, Blue Key, Alpha Zeta, Kappa Phi Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi.

Between his junior and senior years, he married Carolyn Leonard of Mingo, Iowa. They lived in a trailer home in College Park, near what later became McKimmon Village and is today known as King Village. Carolyn worked in the School of Textiles Lab and attended night school.

As Student Body President, there weren't too many pressing matters, except for the time when the entire cheerleading squad quit. "That was one of the biggest crises I faced," he said.

"I talked my roommate into being head cheerleader, and he got a bunch of his friends to work as cheerleaders. It was a motley crew."

The moment he remembers best was when, as Student Body President, he got to officially open the Dixie Classic before a packed Coliseum and with a radio audience along the East Coast.

"I was going strong, pleased as punch with myself, and I ended by saying, 'Welcome to all those listening by radio, all the way from Baltimore to Maryland.'

"Of course, I meant to say Baltimore to Miami," he grinned.

That slip of the tongue is no matter. It did nothing to stop a brilliant political career, one that started in his high school and college days, saw a period of non-elective work for the federal government and elective Democratic Party work, and then his election as Lieutenant Governor of North Carolina in 1972 and as Governor in 1976.

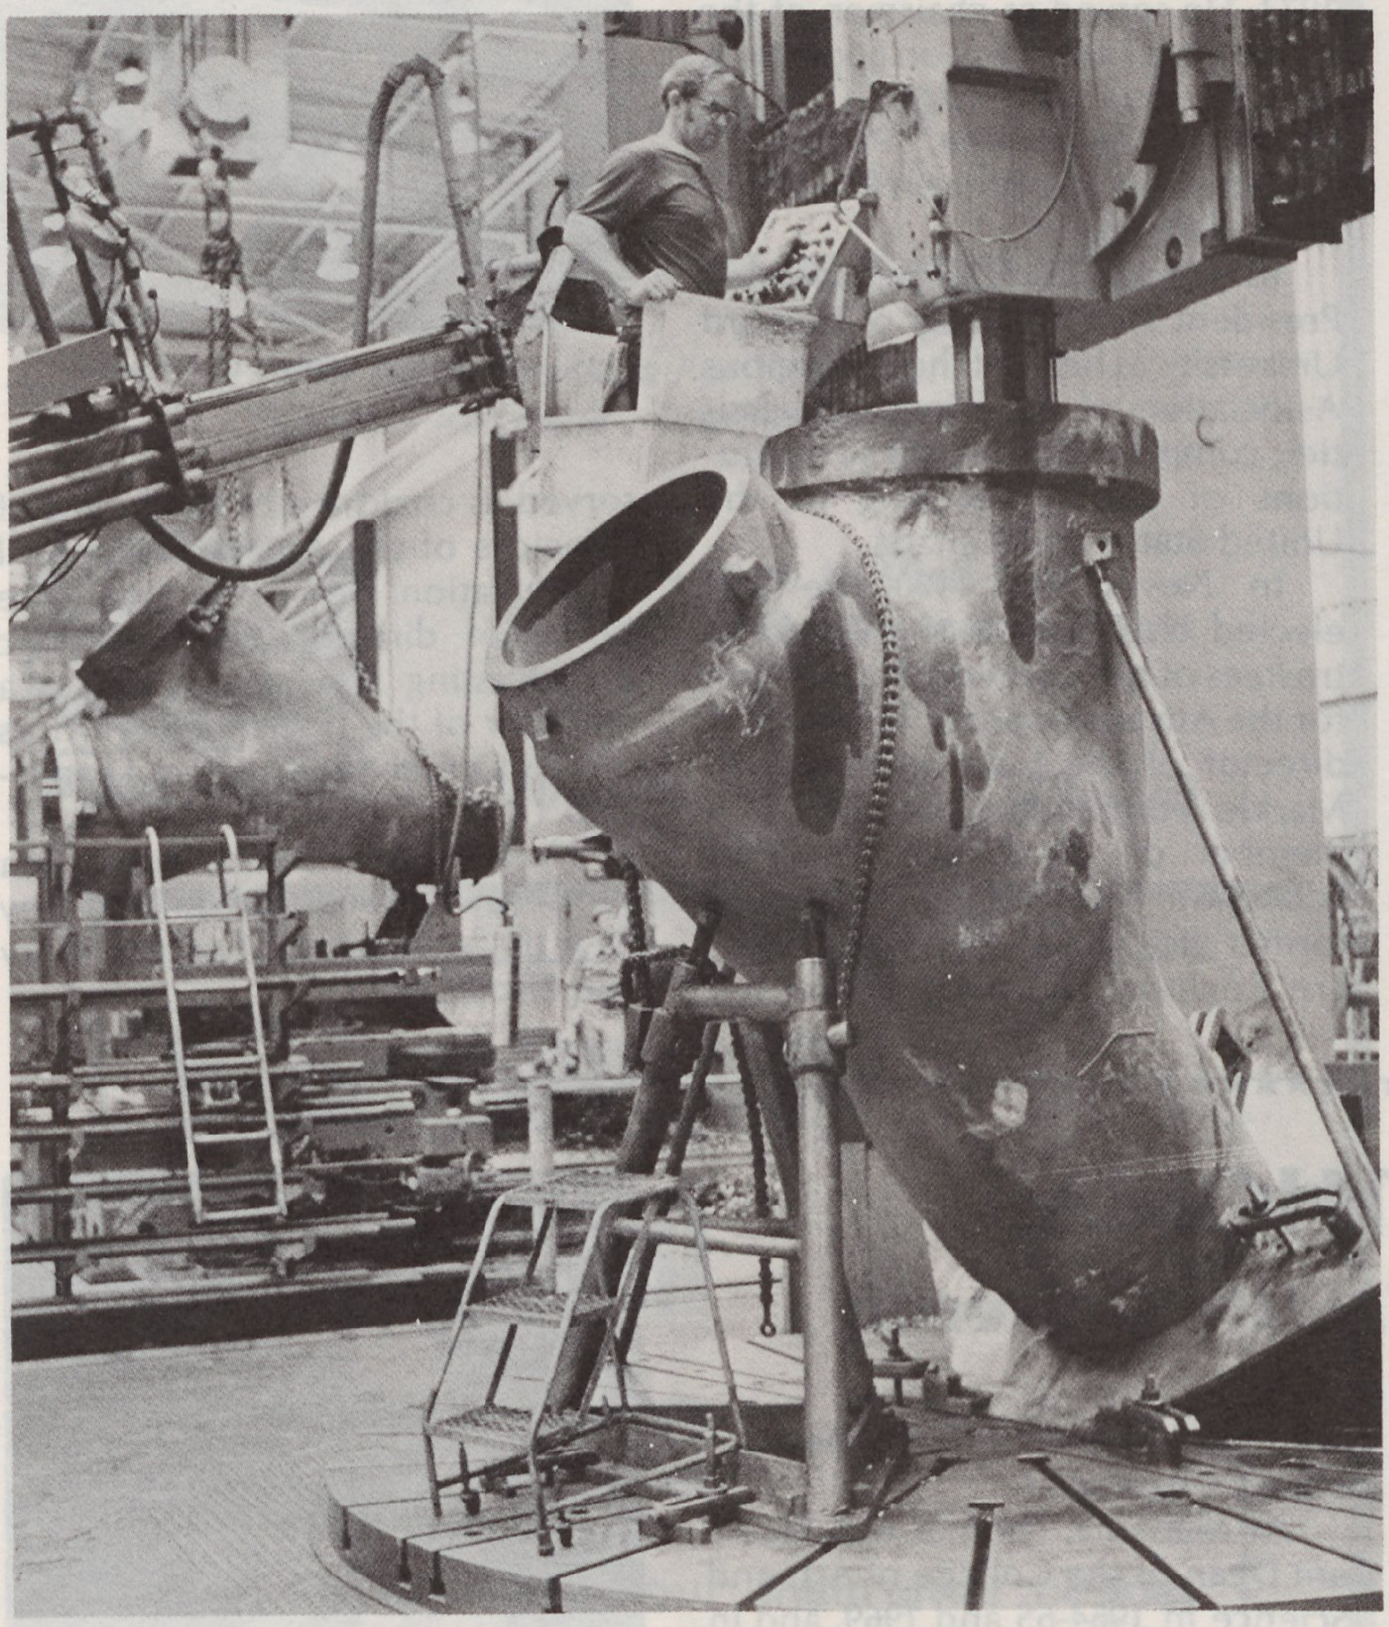
"The spacemen" combat the energy crunch from Raleigh.



To most business people, even those right here in Raleigh, Rockwell International is the company that "put man on the moon."

But Rockwell is into a lot more than space.

Here in Raleigh, for example, the Rockwell International Flow Control Division manufactures valves that are essential to the operation of power plants. The huge cast steel globe valve shown here being shaped on a 144-inch boring mill is one type. There are many other valves being built here for both nuclear and fossil fuel power stations.

Seventy-five percent of the Rockwell International Flow Control Division's products serve worldwide energy markets.

To learn more about the things 400 of your neighbors are doing to help us all through the energy crunch, to learn more about the scope of Rockwell International, write for our annual report.

WILLIAM C. FRIDAY
President UNC System

President William C. Friday

William C. Friday, President of the 16-member University of North Carolina System, was born in Virginia on July 13, 1920, but spent his boyhood in Dallas, North Carolina, where he was a debater, played baseball and wrote sports for the Gastonia Gazette.

After one year at Wake Forest College, he transferred to North Carolina State University and was graduated in textile engineering in 1941. He was an outstanding student and served afterwards as Assistant to the Dean of Students at N. C. State.

He was a Naval officer in World War II. After the war he entered the Law School at the University of Chapel Hill, and was graduated in 1948. He accepted a position as Assistant Dean of Students at UNC at Chapel Hill and in 1951 was appointed administrative assistant to Gordon Gray, president of the University.

Later, he was given the title, Secretary of the University. When Gray resigned the presidency in 1955 and when his temporary successor, J. Harris Purks, also resigned, Friday was named Acting President.

Friday was named President of the University in 1956. He has served on numerous national educational boards and commissions. He was a member of the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education, 1967-1973. He served as chairman of the President's Task Force on Education, 1966-67, and as chairman of the executive committee, President's Commission on White House Fellows, 1965-68.

In May, 1971, Friday succeeded President Nathan Pusey of Harvard University as head of the prestigious Association of American Universities, comprised of the top 48 institutions of higher learning in the United States and Canada.

In November, 1970, he was elected chairman of the board of trustees of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. A director of the John and Mary R. Markle Foundation, he also is a member of the Urban Coalition Education Task Force. Friday is a former vice chairman of the Southern Regional Education Board and served as chairman of the board of directors of the American Council on Education. He is a member of the board of directors of the Public Broadcasting Service. He also is a member of the board of governors of the Center for Creative Leadership.

He is married to the former Ida Willa Howell of Lumberton and they have three daughters, Frances, Mary and Elizabeth.

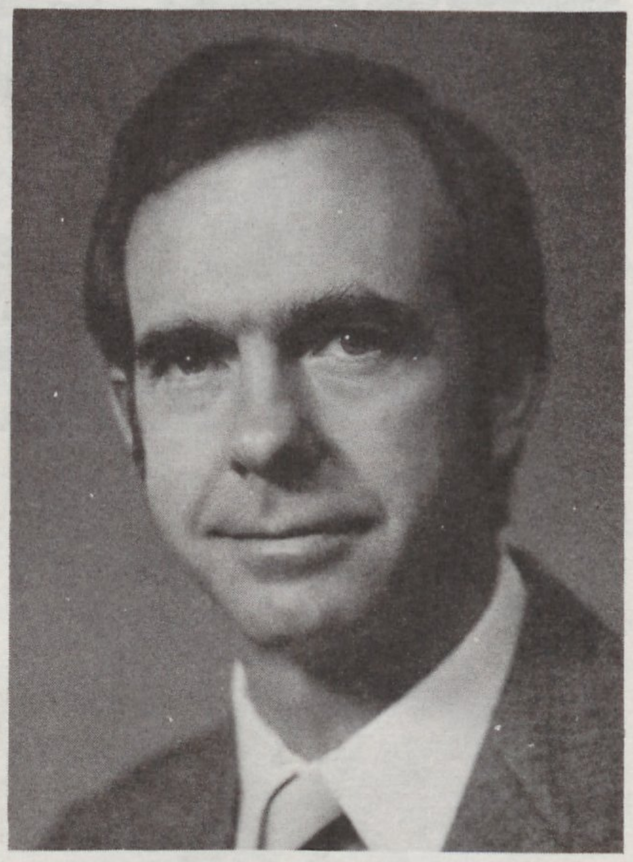
JOAB L. THOMAS
Chancellor N. C. State University



Chancellor Joab L. Thomas

Dr. Joab L. Thomas became the ninth chief executive of North Carolina State University, the youngest in its 89-year history, on January 1, 1976.

Born February 14, 1933, Thomas was reared in Russellville, Ala., a small town in northwest Alabama. He was educated in the Russellville public elementary and high schools and furthered his education at Harvard University.

From Harvard, Thomas earned his AB in 1955, his MA in 1957 and Ph.D. in 1959, all in biology.

Dr. Thomas was on the staff of the Harvard University's Arnold Arboretum from 1959-1961 when he returned to his native Alabama as a professor of biology in 1961 in the University of Alabama. He taught in the department until he became State's Chancellor.

At Alabama, Thomas was Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Science in 1964-65 and 1969, and in 1969 he was named Dean of Students and Vice President of Student Affairs which he remained until 1975.

Chancellor Thomas has membership in 10 professional organizations in Biological Sciences and in Higher Education. His honor societies include Omicron Delta Kappa, Beta Beta Beta, Phi Beta Kappa and Jasons.

He is the editor of two books, one monograph and about 25 scientific or professional papers in fields of both botany and higher education.

Chancellor Thomas is married to the former Marly Dukes. They have four children: Catherine, David, Jennifer and Frances.

The Wolfpack Marching Band

The 185-member Wolfpack Marching Band, while one of the nation's largest, thrives on quality and not quantity, filling football stadiums with music and not flag wavers.

North Carolina State's Marching Band is definitely the pride of the Atlantic Coast Conference, but its recognition goes far beyond league boundaries.

The band gave such an impressive performance at halftime of the 1974 Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl, it received a louder and more prolonged ovation from the crowd than did the highly-touted halftime show put on by the Astrodome.

The applause is nice, but the performing itself is what makes the members proud to say they are part of the fine tradition of N. C. State University Marching Bands.

"This is an all volunteer band," says director Don Adcock. "I love the idea of working with these students because they are in it for the right reasons: to enjoy themselves and the music.

"Some schools which offer a degree in music (State does not) require their music majors to play in the band whether they like it or not. I like it our way better," says Adcock.

The Wolfpack Marching Band is a pageantry band, making imaginative designs and simultaneously producing music. For variety to the seven-minute show, some precision drills are added.

Occasionally, the band assembles in concert formation to entertain the crowd, and there are numerous songs played while in the stands before, during and after the football game.

And because "the students like contemporary music" Adcock selects music that keeps the beat up-to-date. "I think a lot of it is just as good or better than stuff from 20 years ago," he says.

Playing in the Marching Band is not as easy as learning a piece of music. Each member also must be able to march and play at the same time. It takes a bit of coordination.

Usually work for a show begins about two weeks in advance with Adcock choosing the theme, the appropriate music and drawing the designs. The first two steps are easy for someone in music as talented as Adcock. It's the last of the three tasks that careful planning is needed on Adcock's part and that of all the band members.

Adcock figures out the formations by drawing dots on graph paper to represent every band member. Eight days prior to the show, he gives these formation sheets to individual members known as Right Guides, who are responsible for groups of 10 members.

Right Guides are located to the right of the block in the parade marching formation. There are no left guides.

(Remember now, the band is still practicing the show for the next day.)

The next week, the band meets three days at 12:15 p.m. on the Varsity Practice Field for a 75-minute drill and practice session. Monday finds the band working on the music before placement and formation practice begins.

Monday is also when the Right Guides must work out manuevers for getting their rank to the next formation. Adcock has a few rules to follow, but he insists "make it look complicated."

The music and the formations are combined on Wednesday as the practicing continues, and there's more polishing on Friday after which hopefully all is ready for Saturday.

And during the week, joining the main part of the marching band are the baton twirlers, the five herald trumpets and the seven-foot high brass drum pulled on a cart by four band members in Wolves' clothing. These groups have designed their own marching routines to fit in with the music and the patterns designed by Adcock.

Then it's game time. Just three hours and 45 minutes of actual on the field practicing (pray there's no rain during the week) and the band is ready to take to the field.

When it's all over, there's no other band which can be or is as proud as the Wolfpack Marching Band.

NCSU FIGHT SONG

Should aloud to the men who will play the game to win
We're behind you, keep fighting for State ––
Hold that line, hold 'em fast, we'll reach victory at last
We're behind you, keep fighting for State––
Rise up to the fray
and let your colors wave,
Shout out for dear old N. C. State;––
And where-e'er we go,
we'll let the whole world know,
We're behind you, keep fighting for State.––

Words by: Hardy M. Ray '26
Music by: Edward L. Gruber

THE RED AND WHITE FROM STATE

We're the Red and White from State
And we know we are the best.
A hand behind our back, we can take on all the rest.
Come over the Hill, Caroline.
Devils and Deacs stand in line.
The Red and the White from N. C. State
(Yell) Go State!!

Words and music by
J. Perry Watson, Director of Music

THE ALMA MATER

Where the winds of Dixie softly blow o'er the fields of Caroline,
There stands ever cherished, N. C. State, as thy honored shrine.
So lift your voices! Loudly sing from hill to oceanside!
Our hearts ever hold you, N. C. State in the folds of our love and pride.

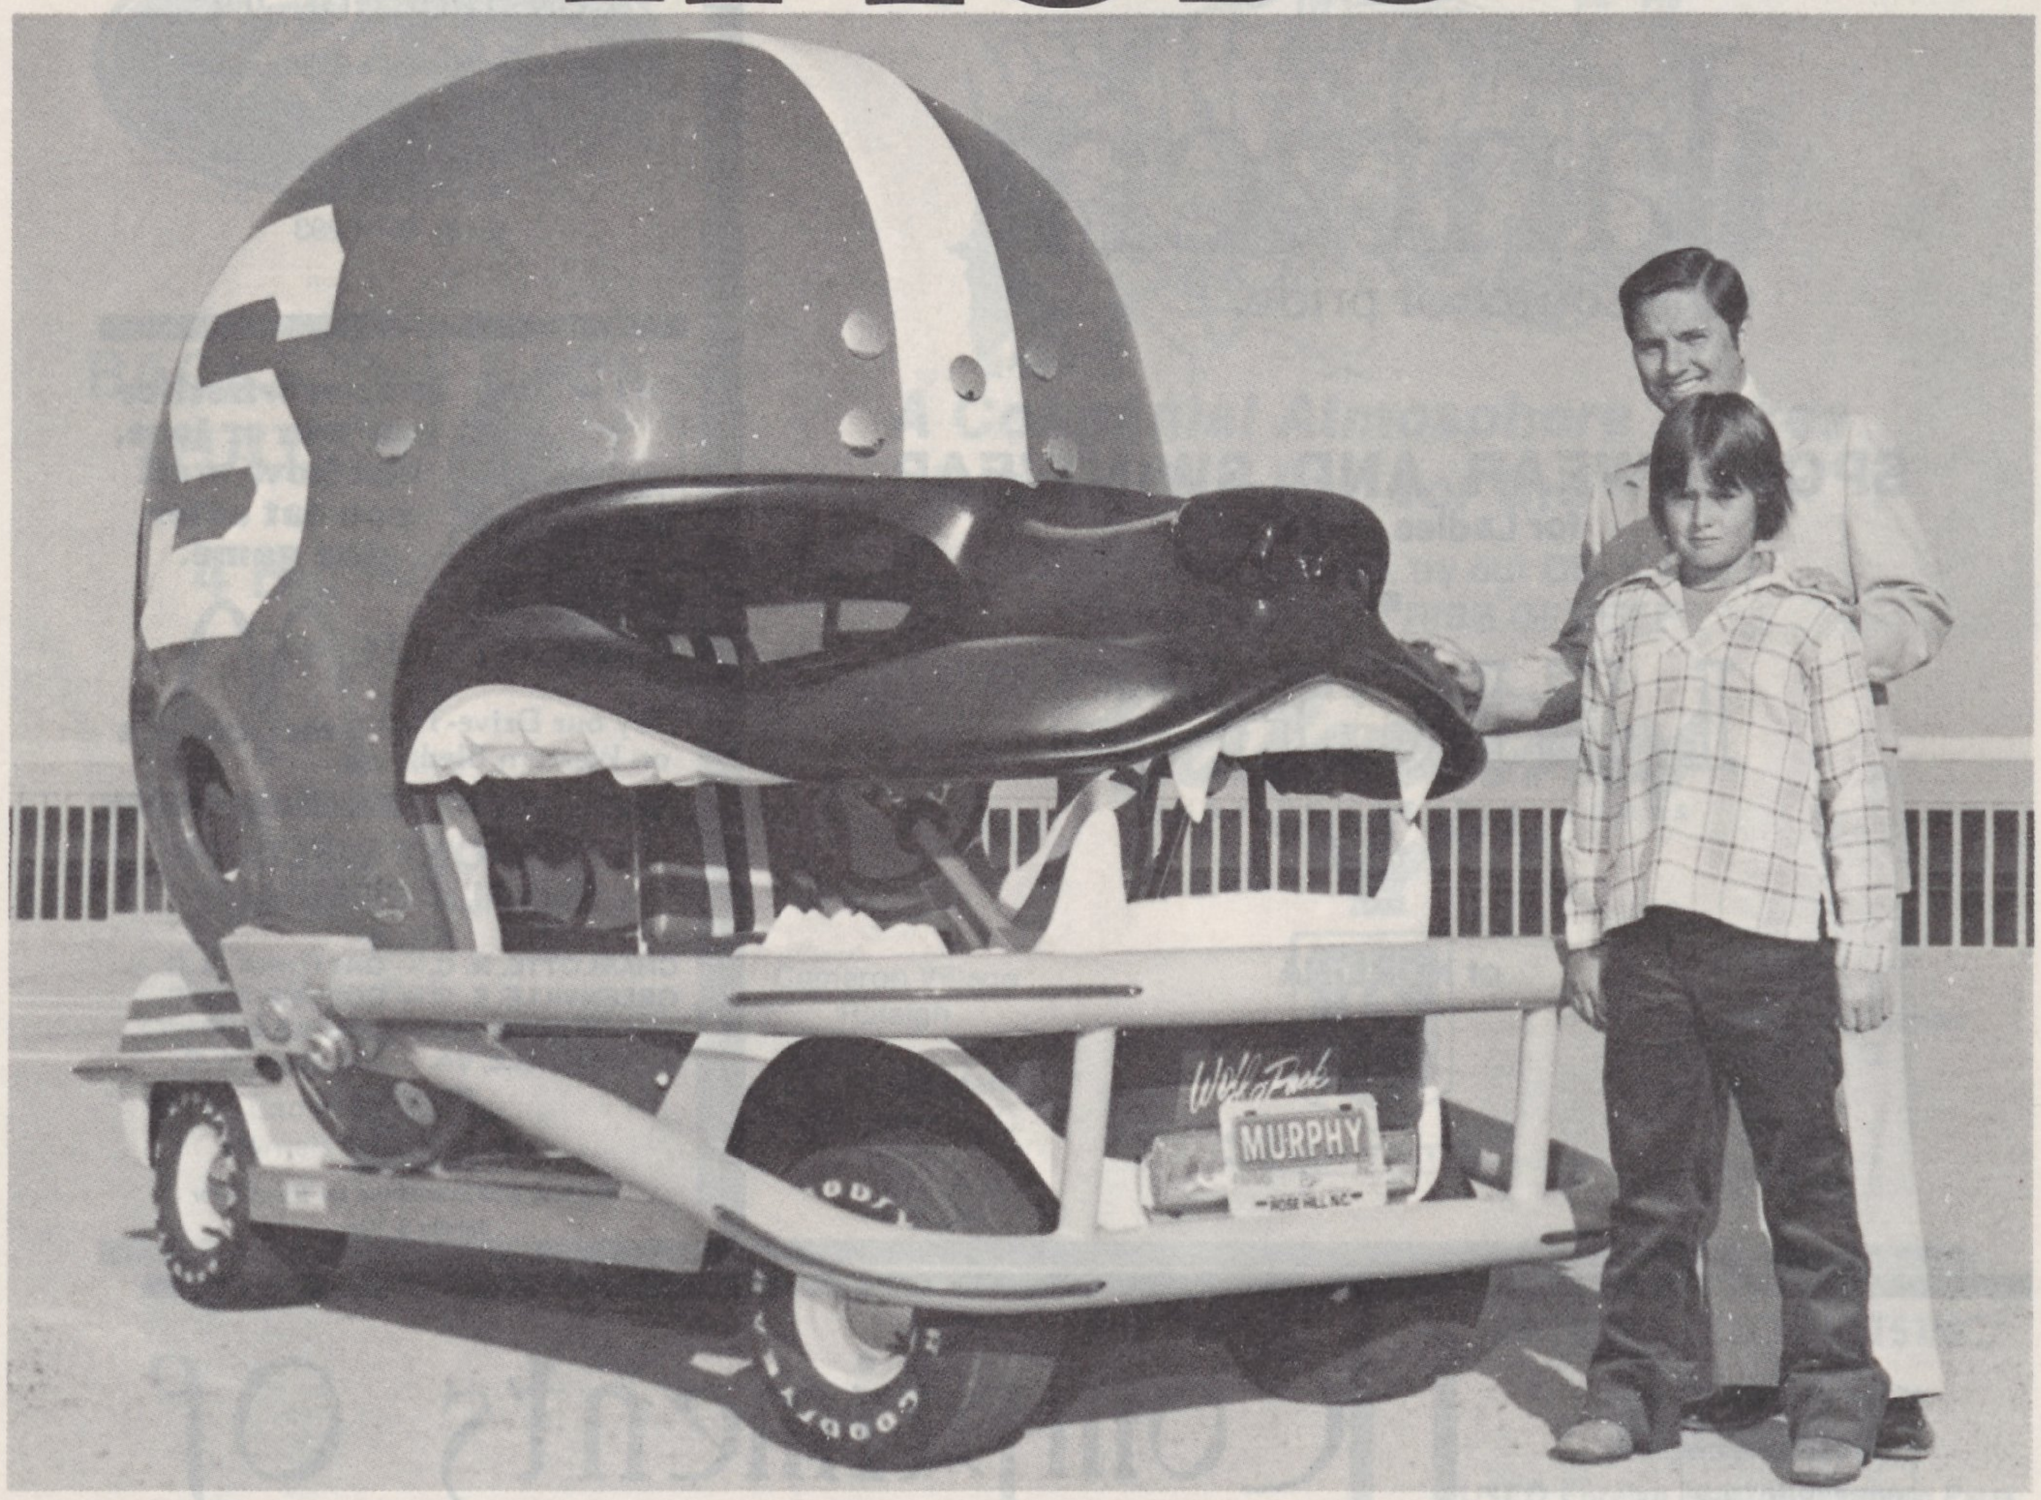
EL LOBO



Wendell Murphy, Executive Vice President of Murphy Farms in Rose Hill, N. C. and his son, Dale Murphy, pose with El Lobo which was sponsored by his company.

Take an electric golf cart, put on an oversized N. C. State helmet and wolf head and what you've got is EL LOBO!

El Lobo, a gift of Murphy Farms, Inc. of Rose Hill, N. C., can be seen regularly at Wolfpack football games cavorting around Carter Stadium. It serves as an identifying symbol for the Wolfpack, an escort for celebrities and a cheerleading squad vehicle.

Off the field and during off-season, the mobility and Disney-like quality of the buggy make it a natural for parades, fairs, special promotions and other athletic events.

El Lobo is 7′ high, 6′ wide and 9′ long and is easily maneuverable by one driver.

Mr. Wendell Murphy, executive vice-president of Murphy Farms and an N. C. State alumnus, is one of the nation's largest pork producers.

THE WOLFPACK CLUB

Today's game is brought to you in part by the Wolfpack Club, the booster club organization officially known as the North Carolina State University Student Aid Association.

For those unknowing, the Wolfpack Club is a year-round operation backed by a volunteer effort that is probably unparalled in the United States.

Its purpose is to raise funds for athletic scholarships. It provides services to members in the form of communications pertaining to State athletics and by means of personal contact when possible.

The Wolfpack Club is the envy of hard-pressed colleges in other areas, so much so, that it is bombarded with inquiries about its mode of operation.

To attain such high success in fund-raising, dedicated people using their time and energy are needed. In the past 20 years, the Wolfpack Club has seen a tremendous growth, increasing membership from less than 1,000 to almost 10,000.

The attitude of the people in the Wolfpack Club is "What can I do to help?" And they continue to help, even when quota changes are needed to meet additional needs.

There are more than 200 people who work year-round on a voluntary basis supplementing the full-time staff.

It takes enthusiasm to build such an organization. And it takes hard work to keep it successful. Planning is done almost a year in advance.

Wolfpack Club members know they are part of something great. They know the thrill of victory.

Many of State's avid fans are non-alumni. It is estimated that 50 percent of the money raised comes from people who never attended N. C. State University.

Wolfpack Club members are at work in every one of North Carolina's 100 counties and in 23 out-of-state areas. The Wolfpack Club fund-raising efforts include New York, South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia, Tennessee and Washington, D. C.

The work of this volunteer network provides yearly scholarships for State athletes. In addition, special drives have succeeded in raising $2 million towards Carter Stadium and $1 million for the Everett Case Athletic Center. And some $600,000 has been placed in an endowment fund.

The story of the Wolfpack Club is one of continued success. The results have been far-reaching.

If you want to be part of something great, now is the time to join the Wolfpack Club. The basic membership is $25, and there's no limit in the support you can give — in time or money. Your return is limitless. Take pride in N. C. State University athletics. Join the Wolfpack Club. Be a part of something great.

The production of all textiles involves many processes. Some of the most important steps are based on the use of textile chemicals made by Apollo Chemical Corporation. Being prime manufacturers of softeners, fixing agents, detergents, dispersing agents, wetting agents, and carriers — Apollo is an important supplier of chemicals and dyestuffs to various textile industries.

The modern firm continues to research and test their products and equipment for the best methods, new applications, and strict quality control.

One of these brick is more popular than all the others.

For reasons you can't see.

Today, more people demand Boren Brick than any other brick around.

But it isn't just because Boren is more beautiful.

It's a matter of simple arithmetic.

A home built with brick can cost up to 30% less to cool and heat every year than a home built with wood (when both are identically insulated).

And why do so many people demand brick with our name on them?

Because their homes have their name on them.

It isn't just brick, it's Boren.
