

Eighty-Five Ready For May Graduation After Completion Of Fall Term Work

Receive Their Degrees With Classmates Says Registrar Orval Phillips

Eighty-five students completed their work at East Carolina college at the end of the fall quarter and will receive their degrees with their classmates at commencement exercises held in May, 1953, according to an announcement by Registrar Orval L. Phillips.

The list of fall-quarter graduates includes 67 men and women who will receive the B.S. degree, which at East Carolina is conferred upon those taking courses preparing them as teachers; seven who will receive the A.B. or liberal arts degree; and 11 who will receive the master's degree, which at the college here is a degree for teachers and school administrators.

North Carolinians among the graduates number 79 men and women. Six out-of-state students come from Virginia, Kentucky, Arkansas and California.

Those completing work for the B.S. degree include 23 students who have done their work at the college in the fields of primary and grammar-grade education. Others have received training as teachers in the secondary schools and have specialized in such subjects as industrial arts, art, social studies, English, science, mathematics, music, physical education, home economics and foreign languages.

The 11 candidates for the master's degree did their work in the fields of school administration, elementary education or secondary education.

Williamson Talks On Good Schools At District Meet

"Good schools don't just happen"; they are the result of the school and the community working and planning together in closest cooperation," Dr. Eva D. Williamson told members of the Association for Childhood Education at a district meeting held at Fort Bragg last Thursday. Dr. Williamson, professor of education at East Carolina college, spoke on "Hallmarks of a Good School."

Seven characteristics of a good school were discussed by Dr. Williamson. An adequate plant and competent personnel, she said, are marks of worth and are needed if the school program is to grow as it should.

Christmas Assembly

East Carolina President J. D. Messick wished students and faculty a merry Christmas this morning at an all-college assembly in Wright auditorium at 10 o'clock.

Dr. Robert Holt gave the invocation for the program which featured musical selections by the Women's chorus, Varsity Glee club, Brass ensemble and soprano, Mrs. Gladys White.

Boys, Girls At Training School Lend Holiday Spirit To Dinner

A brightly lit Christmas tree, gray table ornaments and carols by a chorus of boys and girls from the East Carolina college Training school lent a holiday spirit Tuesday evening to the annual Christmas dinner attended by the college faculty and administrative staff and their guests.

The event took place in the North Dining room on the campus and was arranged by the Faculty Social committee, of which Mabel Daugherty of the home economics department is chairman. Dr. Karl V. Gilbert of the music department announced the program for the evening.

The tree, a gift made each year to the college by Dr. Paul Jones of Farmville, was a center of attention in the dining hall. Small trees made of metallic paper, hung with bright ornaments and based with sprays of holly were used as centerpieces on the tables where guests were seated.

Faculty Lecture Club Hears Pingel's View On Modern Man

Analyzing views of modern man advanced in fiction and poetry of the present time, Dr. Martha Pingel told members of the East Carolina college Faculty Lecture club last Thursday evening, December 11, that "Authors in general seem to take the view that we are living in the age of the four-F's: Fear, Friction, Folly and Frustration."

The lecture on "Modern Man—Fact or Fantasy?" was followed by a spirited discussion of the ideas advanced by Dr. Pingel. A number of students at the college were guests at the meeting.

Dr. Pingel pointed out that "modern man" defies definition and that views differ even among those who claim to belong to the same school of thought. In general, she stated, psychologists, sociologists, anthropologists, biologists and others have built their concept of modern man on the statistical average. Authors, on the other hand, she said, have built their concept on the departure from the average, or the abnormal. Through referring to the points of modern writers and citing examples from their works, Dr. Pingel gave her audience ideas characteristic of the existentialist, the realist, the naturalist, the idealist and the mystic. She included in what she described as "a rambling sampling" of modern literature such writers as Huxley, Sartre, Orwell, Proust, T. S. Eliot, Rilke and others.

Local Students Represent School At Coming Meet

East Carolina college will be represented by five student members of the Beta Kappa chapter of Pi Omega Pi, national honorary business education fraternity, at the national delegate convention of the organization in Chicago December 26-29. Sessions will be held at the Congress hotel and will be attended by students from chapters throughout the country.

As part of the business of the convention, choice of a student representative on the national council of Pi Omega Pi will be made this year for the first time. Five students selected from chapters in colleges and universities of the nation will be nominated for the position by the nominating committee of Pi Omega Pi. G. Carolyn Burnette of Hopeville, Va., member of the East Carolina Beta Kappa chapter, is included among the five students to be nominated.

East Carolina delegates to the Chicago convention will be Ann Baysden, Ernul; Maggie A. Gatlin, Ernul; Betty Sue Branch, Greenville; Paul Weeks, Whitakers; and Kenneth Kennedy, Greenville.

Choir Gives 'Messiah' For Colored Students At Eppes High School

In a special performance for Negro school children of Greenville, the College choir of East Carolina college presented Handel's "The Messiah" Thursday evening, December 11, in the Eppes school of the city. A large audience was present to hear the famous oratorio sung by the group of 80 men and women students at the college. Dr. Karl V. Gilbert of the faculty directed the choir. The program repeated a performance on the campus Tuesday, December 9.

UNC Professor Talks With Local Students On Social Work Topic

Dr. Arthur Finck, dean of the School of Social Work at the University of North Carolina, visited the East Carolina college campus Thursday, December 11, and consulted with a number of students interested in social work.

The purposes of his stay at East Carolina were to provide information as to the many opportunities in this field, to give advice about preparation for service, and to make suggestions as to coordination of the college and the state programs in social work.

Industrial Arts Group Initiates Members At Meet

Five students of industrial arts at East Carolina college have been accepted as members of the campus Industrial Arts club and have been initiated into the departmental organization, according to an announcement by Robert Pennington of Rocky Mount, president.

New members are Donald M. Atkinson, Elizabethtown; Thomas B. Blizard, Deep Run; Roland Pridden, Wilson; James F. Shine, Rocky Mount; and Gene W. Taylor, Edenton.

The club is carrying on during the present school year a program designed to foster interest in industrial arts and to encourage better work among members. Contests are held at meetings, and winners are awarded useful tools as prizes. Recent winners include Eliard Croom of Rocky Mount and Shelton Weaver of Mt. Olive.

Club members are now working on a project to build bulletin boards which will be placed in the lobby leading to the college cafeteria. The Student Government association of the college is sponsoring this activity and has provided funds for materials.

New Record Again

Figures for Winter term enrollment at East Carolina reveal that a new record has once again been established here, as 1,944 students are now taking work on campus this quarter. According to Registrar Orval L. Phillips, this number exceeds last year's enrollment for the same period by 151 persons.

Last year there were 1,793 students pursuing studies here during the Winter term. In the issue after Christmas, the "East Carolinian" will run a breakdown of the figures.

Christmas Spirit Appears In Books For Youngsters

Getting Christmas spirit through reading good books marks the pre-holiday season among boys and girls at the Training school on the East Carolina college campus. The library for children there is having a book in circulation, and a decorated Christmas tree is being used to give incentive to reading and to keep a tally of who's reading what.

Mrs. Lily Rouse Carr, Training school librarian, with the help of Vernie B. Wilder of Nashville, N.C., college junior and practice librarian, initiated and is carrying on the project of encouraging good reading.

More than 600 books were read by children at the school during the first week in December, and enthusiastic youngsters keep calling for more. The leader thus far is Burton Jenkins, with 23 books to his credit.

A gaily decorated Christmas tree in the library gives encouragement and reward to readers. Beside it stands a life-size replica of Santa Claus suggesting books as gifts. Each child who reads a book is entitled to hang on the tree a small colored booklet, to which he may add for each additional book read a metallic-paper star. Approximately 300 folders, many having a dozen or more stars, are now brightening the tree and showing the excellent record made by the boys and girls at the Training school.

Three Staff Members Participate In Events Of Health Conference

Three members of the East Carolina college department of health and physical education participated in events of the College Conference on Health and Physical Education and the fifth annual conference of the North Carolina association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation at the Woman's college in Greensboro, December 4-6.

Dr. N. M. Jorgensen, director of the department of health and physical education at East Carolina, led a discussion Thursday at the College Conference, at which first aid, safety, athletic injuries and other topics were considered. Saturday morning he acted as chairman of a panel on "The New High School Athletic Code."

Other faculty members from the college who attended are Nell Stallings and Dr. Charles G. DeShaw.

Educational Director Speaks To Beaufort County Teachers

Answering the question "How can high schools better prepare students for college?" Dr. J. K. Long of East Carolina college told Hertford county teachers last week that the real answer lies in the student himself but that "guidance from an understanding teacher is essential."

Dr. Long, director of the East Carolina department of education, spoke at a meeting held Tuesday in Winton. His topic, of educational interest to both public school and college teachers, was suggested by Superintendent R. P. Martin of the Hertford county schools.

The question of better preparation for college was approached by Dr. Long "as a problem which has been intensified in recent years as a result of many factors," he explained. Among these factors he cited increased number of youth enrolled and new demands on the schools for curriculum improvement.

Success in college, he advised, is related to subject matter taught, effectiveness of teaching and students themselves. Generally, he said, the student who does well in college is a well-rounded individual.

Guidance, he continued by way of definition, includes a willingness on the part of the teacher to evaluate the effectiveness of his own teaching, and also the ability to guide and evaluate individual growth of pupils in terms of their own goals. Evaluation of pupil progress should mean much more than giving grades, Dr. Long said, for it is based upon pupil-teacher relationships that make life more meaningful for the student and the learning process more interesting.

Radio Broadcasts Of 'The Messiah' Now Being Heard

"The Messiah," Handel's famous oratorio, as sung by the College choir of East Carolina, is now being broadcast over several radio stations of eastern North Carolina, according to an announcement by Mrs. Marguerite A. Perry, director of the college radio program.

Transcriptions of the December 9 performance of the oratorio are being used, and portions of the Handel work have been selected to make up a series of three broadcasts. On the second of the series, President John D. Messick of the college gives a Christmas message to the radio audience and on the third, James W. Butler, Alumni Secretary extends greetings.

Mrs. Perry was assisted in editing the tape recordings of "The Messiah" by Joseph Johnston of Wilmington, student assistant in radio. Arrangements with radio stations were made by Mr. Butler.

The College choir gave the Handel oratorio last week before an audience of approximately 1500 people in the Wright building. Dr. Karl V. Gilbert of the faculty directed the group of 80 student singers, and George E. Perry of the faculty was organist.

German Student Plans East Carolina Entry During Spring Quarter

Jurgen Beital, 22-year-old German student, has come to this country to make his home with relatives in Greenville, and, according to present plans, to enter East Carolina college in the spring.

Mr. Beital comes from Lubeck-Travemunde, Germany. In Greenville he is living with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. R. Pingel, and his cousin, Dr. Martha Pingel of the East Carolina faculty. At present the young man is improving his knowledge of English so that he will be prepared to enter school in the near future.

Eighteen Scholars Make Straight Ones On Work; Ninety-One Dean's List

There were 410 honor students for the Fall quarter, according to the figures released by Registrar Orval L. Phillips. As compared to the 1951 Fall term, the figures show an increase, with the comparisons being this year's 410 to last year's 311.

A breakdown on this year's honor list show that there are 18 students who made all 1's, 91 students who made dean's list and 301 who made honor roll.

The recommendations for the dean's list and the honor roll are made up at the close of each quarter of the regular college year. No student will be placed on either list unless he carries a load of at least 12 credit hours on which grades are given, practice teachers excepted; has no incomplete course with a grade of C and has a clear student government record.

The honor roll is composed of those undergraduates who make at least two quality points per credit hour on all work taken with no grade below a three. Practice teachers who are graded "excellent" by both critic teacher and the departmental supervisor and who makes at least two quality points per credit hour will be placed on the honor roll.

The dean's list is composed of those undergraduates who make at least two and a half quality points per credit hour on all work taken with no grade below a three.

Christmas Music Highlights Day Of Organ Program

Organ selections reflecting the reverence and the joy of the Christmas season made up a program given Sunday afternoon, December 14, by students of music at East Carolina college. The pipe organ in the Austin auditorium was used for the event.

The recital, first program to be presented by a group of students of the organ at the college, was sponsored by the department of music as one of a series of music events preceding the Christmas holidays. An audience of approximately 300 people from the campus, Greenville and elsewhere in eastern North Carolina correct present.

Selections chosen for the afternoon included numbers from Bach's Christmas Oratorio, and works by Daquin, Pietro Yon, Guilman, and other composers.

Those who appeared as organists on the program, all students of George E. Perry of the college faculty, were Ellen Sprinkle, Asheville; Janet Watson, Greenville; Carolyn Brothers, South Mills; Myrtle Manning, Robersonville; David Victor Van Hook, Nashville; Carolyn Clapp, Greenville; and Cecilia Willoughby, Creswell. Percy Wilkins of Benson read the Christmas story as told in passages from St. Matthew and St. Luke.

Make It A Resolution

When school spirit is at a low ebb, schools are slow in progress. There have been times this year when the school spirit at East Carolina has not been up to par; but we place the blame on no individual group. However, we would like to remind all the students here that school spirit can not possibly be any higher than the 1,944 students who are here make it.

East Carolina had a great football team this year, but we feel that there were only a small minority who really supported the team through thick and thin. We played in our first bowl game just last Saturday, and we would venture to say that there were not over 50 students at the game.

Why was the turnout so small for such a big occasion in the school's athletic history? Students who did go to the game, and the cheerleaders, did a good job of supporting the team; but the number present was indeed a poor representation of this college of nearly two thousand students.

There was one occasion this year when our team was two touchdowns behind; but there was a group of nearly 75 students who had journeyed 650 miles to see the Pirates play, and the small group of staunch supporters did not give up. The ball team did not give up, but they fought hard and came through with two touchdowns in closing minutes of the game.

After the game we heard several members of the team say that when they heard the loud cheering of such a small group who had come to see the game they decided that they could not let them down. Such attitude on this particular occasion even made townspeople of the area cheer for us.

This season is now upon us, and our spirit is well. We hope that we can build on this spirit on campus to give our team the extra push in the clutch which will make the difference. There will be bad nights when you feel that you are going down, but if our spirit lags, we can lag also.

Let our cheerleaders be a good example to all of us. Let's make a New Year's resolution that we will build on the spirit to the highest peak.

What is the spirit of the season? It is the spirit of the season. Let's make a New Year's resolution that we will build on the spirit to the highest peak.

Ye Editor's Say

by Tommie Lupton

We had a delightful staff party last night in our little old office. Christmas spirits were high as the "East Carolinian" staff got together for a social hour before the printing of this issue.

Our staff this year is the most industrious one in the past three years, we are sure. Plans are underway to brighten up the "hole in Austin," which we call our office. There are those who seem to think it impossible to make "the place" look better, but we have some energetic and bright persons on this staff (believe it or not).

If anyone happens to have any extra desks, tables, book cases, clothes racks or colorful pictures (we might add anything to brighten up a dull spot), please let us know; and we will be glad to take them off your hands, if there are no charges. We do not have any money to spare for such items.

Men day students on campus have again been granted the privilege of using the day room in the basement of the Austin building, but only on the condition that the students who occupy the room conduct themselves properly.

Students in college are grown adults and should act that way, and in turn they will be treated as such and not as small children.

Nearly all of the pictures have been taken for annual, for the deadline is January 1. The biggest part of the work for the yearbook is now complete, and everyone will anxiously await the first of May, at which time the books should be ready for distribution.

From The Tech's movie column, MIT: Tom Ewell and Vanessa Brown in "The Seven Year Itch," a romantic comedy.

Cambridge university is considering a report from the Senate council which recommends admitting more women students. Last year 609 women attended the university, which gave the men a 10 to one ratio over the women.

At Oxford the proportion is six to one. Both schools are hampered by lack of accommodations for the girls. We wonder how the boys feel about the situation.

As this issue of the paper is being distributed, we imagine most everyone is preparing to leave school for the Christmas holidays. We hope that Santa Claus will be extra good to everyone, and we have a few desired items which we would like to bring to Santa's mind.

Santa, we could really use a telephone in our office, as could many other persons at East Carolina. Please bring the Budget committee some more money so that they can please everyone and give all organizations all that they want (us included).

Maybe, Santa, you could bring us some new ideas to make this a better paper. We would really like to do anything to improve the "East Carolinian." Guess this is all, Santa, for we do not want to ask for too much.

From Ye Editor and his staff, we send out our heartiest greetings before the season in wishing everyone A VERY MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

To The Students

May I wish every one of you students the happiest Christmas season you have ever spent.

While enjoying the pleasures of the season, lend your support to cause it to be the happiest that other members of your family and neighbors have ever spent, likewise. The greatest possible pleasure that can come to an individual is from being instrumental in causing others to enjoy life in the fullest.

There's another thing I want to suggest upon you. Remember that you are students of East Carolina College as well as the name of the college. Hold it up in honor. It is possible carry forth the name, the benefits, and interest in the campus so that you may be interested in the college. You can be a good student, over and over again, by being a good student of the East Carolinian.

It's true that we can't exchange our gifts with the same love and joy as that December night in. And when someone asks you of Christmas is, think before you answer.

Who's Who At East Carolina

by Phyllis Carpenter

Sometimes interviews turn out to be quite interesting, but the interview for this week of Mr. and Mrs. C. Dwight Shoe proved to be interesting, unusual and amusing. To begin with it was almost entirely impossible to get either to tell about himself.

To hear Dwight talk, you would think that he had done absolutely nothing in his school career, but soon Ann would say, "Now, Dwight, how about your making honorable mention Little All-American?" to which he replied, "Aw, Ann, that isn't important and after all I didn't actually make the team." Soon, however, it was discovered that Ann was equally as modest as Dwight. With the information that was received about each from the other, we shall continue with this article.

Ann and Dwight have always lived in Salisbury except for the time that Ann and her family moved to New Orleans for several months during her senior year in high school. This was their first separation during their eight years of going steady.

When Dwight decided to attend East Carolina on a football scholarship, it was not surprising that Ann chose to attend also.

First Anniversary
This coming February 22, Ann and Dwight will celebrate something more than George Washington's birthday, for it will be their first wedding anniversary. They were married between Winter and Spring quarters of 1951-1952.

Now that we have a brief picture of their lives together, let us take each separately to discuss their many curricular and extra-curricular activities at East Carolina.

Ann's primary interest is the church and its many activities. Not only is she active in her home church in Salisbury, but also the Methodist church here in Greenville. She was sent to Lake Junaluska, a regional student conference, by the First Methodist church in Salisbury. Ann particularly enjoyed this for it was international and persons of every race, creed and color were gathered together for spiritual guidance.

As one of her many activities Ann has served as president and vice-president of the YWCA and is also very active in the Wesley foundation. She was treasurer of the Woman's judiciary her junior year, a member of the ACE her senior year and "Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges" her senior year. Unsurprisingly she is an honor roll and dean's list student.

Primary Ed Major
Ann, who is a primary education major, expressed her desire to attend Seairr, a Methodist school for Christian education, in Nashville, Tenn. Hoping to use this training, she plans to work with the church in education in the rural sections of North Carolina.

When asked when she planned to do her practice teaching she replied, "Oh, I'm doing it now, but you shouldn't have asked me about it today, for I haven't done a thing right, although today we did have an amusing incident to occur in the class. As Miss Redwine asked for suggestions for gifts that the children could make for Christmas, one little boy raised his hand and suggested something that would be impossible for a small child to make. The teacher said that would be very nice, but that it was a little difficult. With this, another little boy raised his hand and said, 'Yes, and it's hard too!'"

Receives Grid Honors
Dwight has had football honors of all kinds, even in high school. Two of the most outstanding were his being invited to play in the Shrine bowl and East-West games. He has made quite a name for himself in football here at ECC. Fresh out of high school, Dwight came to school, worked hard practicing and made the first squad offensive his first season here.

He was chosen All-Conference his junior and senior years and received the best blocking back trophy his junior year), Varsity club four years, and "Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges" both his junior year. His last year at East Carolina has given him the honors of being co-captain of the Pirates, of being a member of the State team and having honorable mention Little All-American.

Football is not the only extra-curricular activity that fills Dwight's busy schedule, for he has been a member of the Wesley foundation and ROTC. He has also been active in the Circle K for two years, YMCA four years (president his junior year), Phi Sigma Pi (treasurer his senior year).

PE Main Subject
Dwight, a Physical Education major and social studies minor, is doing his practice teaching in Greenville high school this quarter. He is teaching PE and health. As did Ann, he had an amusing experience while teaching, but this was stated to him directly. He said, "I had just finished observing in a biology class and had started out for lunch, when a ninth grader came up to me and said, 'I don't care if you are a practice teacher, you still ain't belonged to chew chewing gum.'"

Ann said that she certainly had enjoyed attending school at East Carolina and hated to leave, but is anxious to "get started" in the field that she has prepared for here at ECC. Dwight said that he would hate to leave when time came for him to graduate, but he said, "Guess I'll have to stick around another quarter or two."

Santa, Please Be Good To All

by T. Parker Maddrey

(Editor's note: T. Parker "Survey" Maddrey does it again!)

At this time of the year comes the spirit of giving and receiving. Most of us like to be on the receiving line, especially from the noted philanthropist Saint Nicholas from Santaville, North Pole. The question put before students and faculty this week was: "What would you like Santa Claus bring you for Christmas?"

The answers:
Betty Jean Scott, Siler City: . . . A baby doll that laughs, cries, sleeps, talks, etc., 'n' 18 cashmere sweaters (size 36) 'n' nuts 'n' fruit 'n' candy.

Joan Tucker, Elizabeth City: I want a Panda bear.

Carolyn Finck, Elizabeth City: All I want is a baby blue convertible and a six month vacation and a new horse.

Gregg Rife, Washington, D. C.: . . . 5 gallons of "Thunderbolt" perfume to slay all the girls.

Dr. Cl ton Prewett, dean of men: I'm just like every other young boy, I want a gun for Christmas.

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, dean of the college: I would like an announcement from Eisenhower that there has been an honorable peace made in Korea.

Echoing Chatter To You

by Don Muse

Every year the Christmas season becomes more commercialized. The Christmas season became advertising print before Thanksgiving this year in some instances and in almost every instance as soon as the Thanksgiving turkey disappeared from American tables a mercenary Santa Claus appeared on the scene.

Though it may seem far-fetched, we think a comparison between the Temple money-changers in the Biblical writings and modern mercenary man can easily be drawn. Should not the Christmas season be the symbolic bulwark of Christianity?

The college post office has posted an announcement concerning student mail sent to the campus during the holidays. The announcement states that campus post office officials cannot hold such mail for a period to exceed ten days. To insure getting your mail they suggest that you have someone to get it for you who is going to remain on campus throughout the holidays. Scrawled on the margin of the announcement some bitter person has written, "Who do you suggest, Santa Claus?" This regulation concerning mail does have a purpose, however, and is not the whim of any local official.

Congratulations to our administration, one which is in sympathy with the needs of the student. A liberal provision regarding class cuts for this week has been put into effect for the benefit of those students who plan to work during the holidays.

This year's 32 winners of the Rhode's scholarship have been announced. There was one winner in a North Carolina college, Hubert N. Cannon Jr., of Lancaster, S. C., who attends Davidson. We're sure several members of our debating team remember Mr. Cannon, having debated against him last year at Davidson.

'Twas The Night Before Vacation

by Kay Johnston

'Twas the night before vacation, when all through the halls

Was heard laughing and shouting and various saws.

With me in my hairnet, and trying to count sheep

I had just given up on going to sleep.

When all of a sudden there arose such a noise

I was afraid the dorm had been raided by boys!

But what did I see when I jumped out of bed

Was ten strapping boys, that looked all

Like the boys I had seen in my dream!

hear them by throngs.

"Silent Night," "Jingle Bells" and "It's in the Book!"

And I looked and I listened and laughed 'til I shook.

There was one carty boy who stole the show

I guess you aren't surprised that his name was "Joe!"

I guess they could have kept singing all night

But Chief came by and gave them a fright—

But I heard them yell out as they ran out of sight

Merry Christmas to all and to all a goodnight!

During the last several weeks newspapers, not only in the state of North Carolina but throughout the nation, have carried various stories on the Reverend Hux of Rocky Mount, who has publicly burned pages of the new edition of the Holy Bible.

The burning of the first page was originally scheduled for Mr. Hux's Baptist church but upon advice from the Rocky Mount fire department, the service was held in front of the church instead.

The protest against the new issue of the Bible, which was issued in September to replace the St. James version, takes the form of particular disagreement against wording of the scripture. In this new addition the revisers have changed the wording somewhat in order to clarify certain passages. Mr. Hux thinks that in so doing the translators have distorted the meaning of the scripture and have lessened its value.

From our view we cannot see how the burning of the word of God, re-interpreted or not, can be sustained. Whereas our personal preference remains for the St. James version, we cannot see where the men who revised the Bible committed any blasphemous act.

Even from a very liberal standpoint we cannot agree with Mr. Hux. Burning any book, religious or not, is an act that should never be committed.

While speaking of fire and smoke we might as well carry our comments a little closer home, namely the balcony of Austin auditorium.

During recent movies that have been shown on Saturday nights in the auditorium, we have noticed that an increasing number of students have taken to smoking in the balcony. This is a dangerous practice that should be eliminated. We don't think it's fair, however, to criticize those members of the student body that have been guilty without admitting that we, too, have been known to possess the same habit. Therefore, we feel qualified to judge both sides of the situation.

It's quite enjoyable to relax, watch a movie and smoke a cigarette, but the balcony of the auditorium is not equipped as a smoking lounge. In the dark it would be all too easy for an errant butt to roll into an unseen crack in the floor, there to smoulder until we students had departed.

Having given the matter a little serious thought, we have decided that it would probably be in the best interests if this practice were to cease. If a student sitting in the balcony feels that he must smoke, then how about just stepping to the door. You can enjoy your cigarette from there and still see the picture.

We'll do it if you will.

While the argument goes on about whether or not it is appropriate to play Christmas carols for the downtown shoppers, a new song is born. This Christmas it is a song called I Saw Mommy Kissing Santa Claus. It has echoed across the U.S. during the past two weeks—air waves, offices and our ECC campus rings with the simple song which will probably prove to be a greater success than the 1948 hit, All I Want For Christmas Is My Two Front Teeth.

To a tune that is basically old country corn pone, it tells the story of a child who does some Christmas Eve snooping and sees a kiss under the mistletoe. But record buyers find it irresistible and Columbia has already sold more than 1,000,000 copies to U. S. dealers. All we can say is "more power to it!"

Many of us have enjoyed the library's new book of Ogden Nash's refreshing poetry. The following article appeared in Holiday magazine.

In his regular "Party of One," Clifton Faidman nominates Ogden Nash for a Pulitzer prize. The basic theme of Nash's light but very durable verse is simply the difficulty of being a human in an era he has called "opened by mistake." Without anger or bile, his verse is tonic, whether he is assuring young mothers "a little talcum is always walcum," or reminding humanity to, "Consider the auk;

"Becoming extinct because he forgot how to fly and could only walk.
"Consider man who may well become extinct
"Because he forgot how to walk and learned how to fly before he thought."

"Potpourri" wishes you all a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year—see you January 5, 1953.

Broke, Broke, Broke

All the money's been drained from the Daily Northwestern treasury, and the paper has arranged things so that everyone knows about it.

A front-page headline proclaimed last month in 120 point type, "The Daily is Going Broke." The entire front page and editorial page that day were devoted to pleas for funds and to explanations of the financial crisis.

The paper sent letters to fraternity and sorority houses asking for money, called a mass meeting and attempted to get help from other Big Ten papers. Talk of an impending collapse was heard in many places, but mostly in the Daily Northwestern.

In answer, 18 Greek organizations contributed a total of more than $1,000 to the cause and the Alumni association promised to hand over one-fifth of its general emergency fund.

The paper is financed by a student fee and by advertising, but the rising cost of printing has made the going tough.

The upshot: The Daily Northwestern is now publishing just two times a week.

SPORTS ECHO

Well, the big talk this week has centered around East Carolina's defeat at the hands of Clarion State's Golden Eagles. From where we sat it did not appear that Clarion had a ball club vastly superior to the Pirates. They did have two players, however, who would be standouts in any league. Dave Bevevino, quarterback, and George Czup, halfback, were the sparkplugs of the Eagles' attack.

Bevevino was a cool quarterback who really had the necessary poise when it came to passing. His deadly accuracy was probably the most important factor in the Pirates' downfall. Czup was a standout broken field runner who had the speed to get off important yardage when the chips were down.

The Eagles also had an excellent offensive line. Time and again Bevevino would stand nonchalantly in the backfield until a pass receiver broke into the clear.

The Pirates were hurt considerably when Claude King was forced to leave the game due to an injured hip. Had King been able to remain in the game then the story might well have been different. It is not intended, however, to cast any reflector on Tedy Barnes, King's substitute at the fullback slot. Barnes did an excellent job of ball carrying all afternoon and showed great potential.

It was definitely obvious why Willie Holland was named to an All-Conference position. At least twice we saw Holland lower the boom on Clarion men with terrific downfield blocks. Those blocks were as terrific in impact and well executed as any we've ever seen. Laurels also ought to go to "Tippy" Hayes and Emo Bouda for their excellent play; in fact the whole Pirate team deserves commendation. It just seemed that, although they played a whale of a game, they couldn't get going.

If it's anything we don't like it's to hear someone gripe about officiating being the cause for a lost ball game. The officials at Saturday's Lions bowl game were undoubtedly doing their best, but it did seem that East Carolina might have gotten the breaks once or twice on some of their decisions. Especially argumentative was a pass interference decision called against Frank Madigan at a crucial moment in the game.

At a meeting held several days ago members of the North State conference voted in a new ruling to prevent high school stars from "shopping" for the best school to attend. The ruling, passed by a 5-4 vote, states that no athlete may enroll in summer school at one institution, transfer to another in the fall and still be eligible for competition the same season.

New officers of the conference were also elected at the meeting. Prof. A. L. Hook of Elon was named president of the group and East Carolina's Dr. N. M. Jorgensen was named vice-president.

The ruling that was passed seems, to our point of view, to be an advantageous one. College football is commercialized enough as it is without new players continually switching their allegiance to the highest bidder.

Athlete Of The Week

Webster didn't produce enough adjectives to adequately describe the basketball capacities of the sublime Sonny Russell. In the opinion of the majority, Russell is the finest all-round cager ever to perform here at East Carolina! Sonny is a sports writer's dream that he can make come true at the typewriter.

Possessor of sensational balance and scoring finesse, he resides in a class all by himself at coming through in the "clutch." Russell is the backbone of the Pirates' attack and is a constant defensive machine.

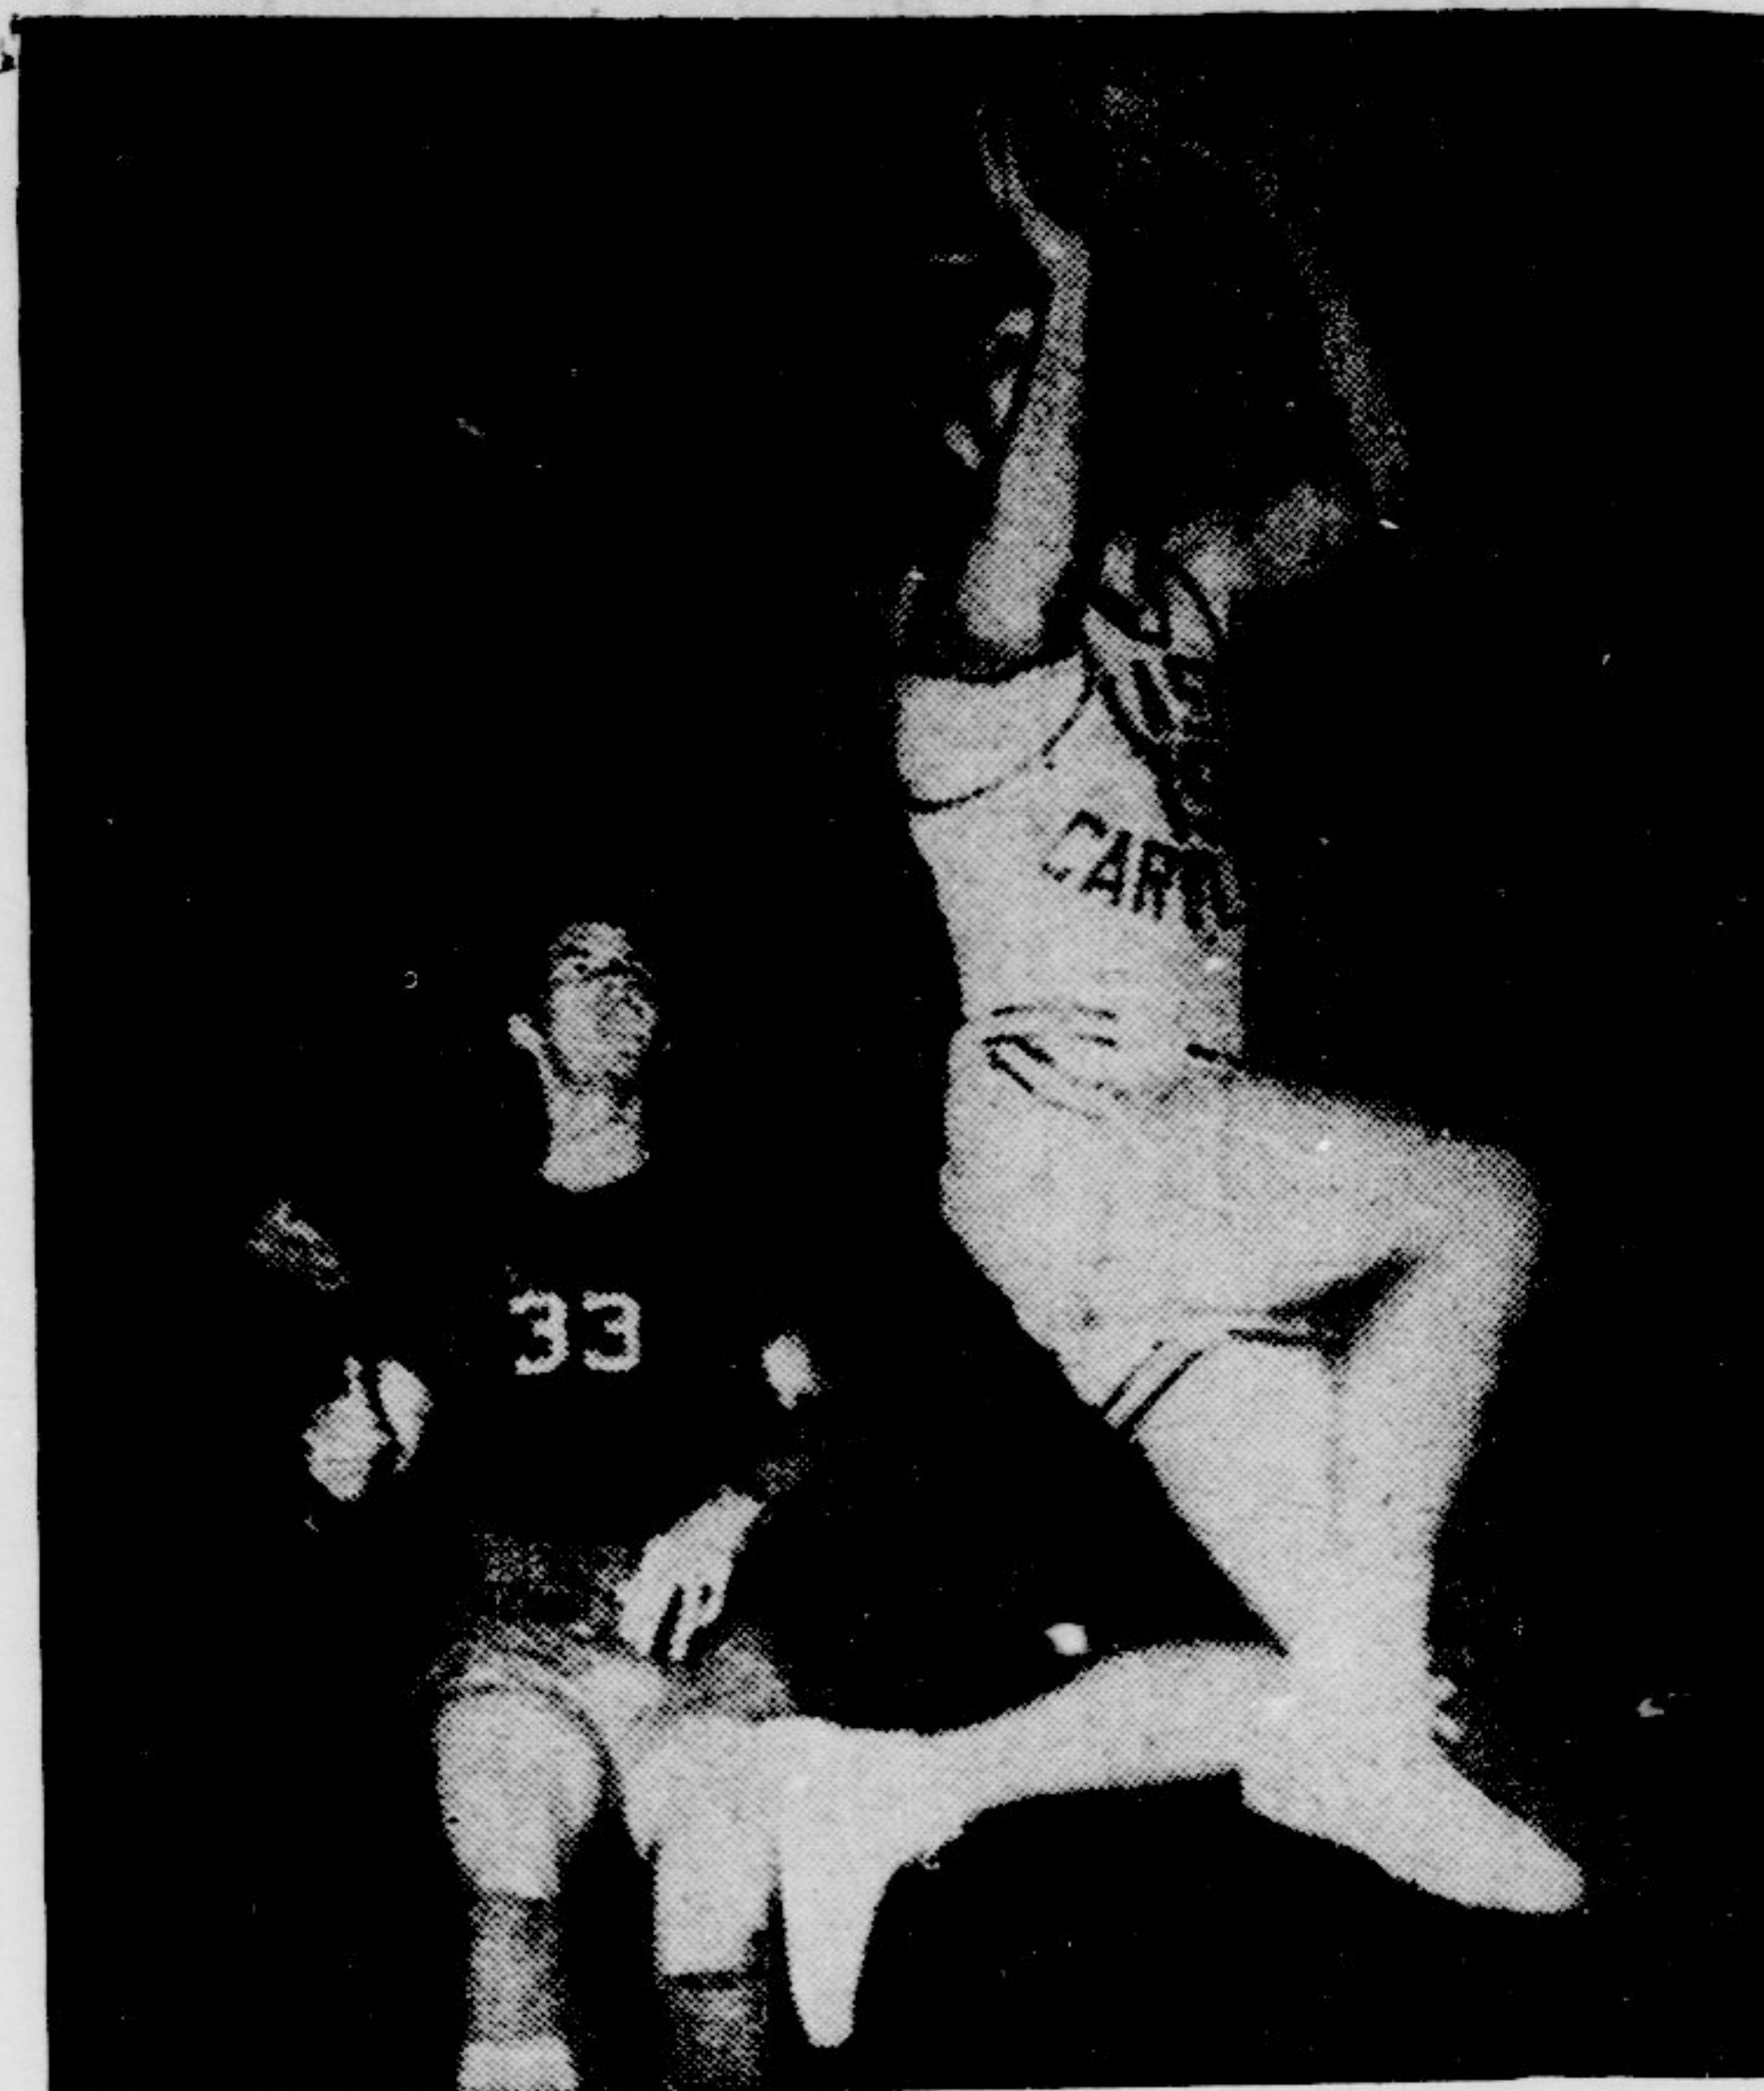

The All-Conference forward moves with mercury heels and is endowed with terrific dexterity. He excels in the body and hand feint that leaves many a guard with a sour taste in his mouth. Cutting across the key to hook in two points, Sonny leaves nothing to be desired in beautiful coordination and agility.

Russell is practically an automatic point-maker. Last year in regular season play he averaged 17 points per contest, and dropped in 27 against a bewildered Citadel team. Lauded by many as the outstanding basketball player in the state, Sonny is constantly putting the crowds into a state of hysteria with his fakery and sleight of hand.

A shoo-in for All-conference honors again this year, he should make the All-state squad. Russell is one player you just can't overrate. This entire sports page could be devoted to him, and there wouldn't be any exaggeration. Thus far this season Russell is boasting a 24 point average and has been the height of speculation for the spectators.

His quiet nature combined with friendliness wins Sonny a prominent place on our campus. Rounding out his remarkable four years here, Sonny receives compliments from this paper and the student body for his great contribution to East Carolina.

Hodges Drives For Bears' Basket

Bobby Hodges, giant 6' 5" stalwart of the East Carolina Pirates, is shown as he drives in for a shot in the recent game with conference champs Lenoir Rhyne.

Loop Champs Beaten As Bucs Down Lenoir Rhyne By 74-65

by Jack Scott

Sonny Russell and Bobby Hodges sparked the East Carolina Pirates to a 74-65 North State conference victory over defending champion Lenoir Rhyne Saturday night in the first game to be played in East Carolina's new gymnasium. It was the second victory for the Bucs without a loss.

All-Conference forward Sonny Russell was the game's high scorer with nine field goals and eight free throws for a total of 26 points. Russell also played his usual fine floor game and was at his best on defense as time after time he broke up passes and shots.

One-Two Punch

Following Russell in the ECC scoring column was center Bobby Hodges who racked up 24 points. Hodges also played a fine defensive game as he controlled the backboards consistently. Guards Cecil Heath and J. C. Thomas accounted for eight points apiece while Charlie Huffman hit for seven markers.

Roland Barker paced the Lenoir Rhyne attack with 25 points before fouling out. Hudson and Ortmeyer were runners-up with 13 and 11 markers respectively.

During the first quarter, Lenoir Rhyne led most of the way, but the Pirates finally got rolling and held a slim 16-15 advantage as the period ended. The second quarter saw both teams scoring frequently as the Bucs tallied 21 times and the Bears 19 to East Carolina's 37-34 halftime lead. Russell and Hodges accounted for 17 of the Bucs' 21 second quarter points.

Lead Never Large

The Pirates were in command during the second half but could never build up more than a nine point lead. They led 54-47 after three quarters of play and then out-scored the Bears 20 to 18 in the final stanza to give them their 74-65 victory.

Statistics of the game show that East Carolina hit on 26 of 75 shots from the floor for a 34.7 percentage while Lenoir Rhyne made good on 24 of their 89 attempts for a 27 per cent accuracy. In the free throw department, the Bears made 17 of 24 attempts as compared to ECC's 22

Individual figures reveal that Russell attempted 18 shots from the floor and hit on nine for 50 per cent. Bobby Hodges made seven of 18 attempts for 39 per cent while Thomas and Heath connected on 31 and 30 per cent respectively.

Clarion Wins Over Pirates 13-6 In Salisbury Lions Bowl Battle

Hodges Gets 23 As Pirates Take Third Conference Win

Unleashing a blistering offensive pace in the second half, East Carolina's Pirate cagers won their North State encounter with Catawba, 80-67, here Tuesday night, as their "big three" marksmen led the point parade.

Bobby Hodges, 6' 5" center, was high man as he dumped in 23 markers. Two 6' 3" forwards followed closely as Sonny Russell and Charlie Huffman racked up 21 and 18 points, respectively. Cecil Heath, Pirate playmaker, thrilled the fans with his array of ball stealing tricks.

What had all the earmarks of a dull, low scoring affair turned into a thriller after intermission. The Bucs took an early 6-0 lead as Huffman got four and Hodges tipped in a rebound. The action stymied at that point and the Porter-men held a 12-4 first quarter margin.

The Indians chugged back in the second period with a completely new line-up and whittled the score down to a 27-25 Pirate lead at half.

An inspired East Carolina quint took to the court in the second stanza and began to turn the formerly slow game into a high scoring affair.

Carolina Here For Dedication

A strong Southern conference ball club will be the first court opponent for East Carolina's Pirates when they return from the Christmas holidays at the Coliseum in Raleigh.

The Pirates will be decided underdogs in the contest but will bring an undefeated record into play, providing Atlantic Christian loses tonight. They opened the season with a win over the Guilford Quakers on the losers' court, returned home to defeat conference champions Lenoir-Rhyne and Tuesday night upended Catawba's Indians.

A capacity crowd is expected to be on hand to watch the charges of Coach Howard Porter attempt to stop the high scoring Phantom quint.

Bevevino Leads Eagles As Yarborough, Barnes Pace Buccaneer's Play

A fiery-haired quarterback from the coal mining sector of Pennsylvania by the name of Dave Bevevino led his Clarion State Golden Eagles to a 13-6 triumph over East Carolina in the Lions bowl game at Salisbury last Saturday.

Bevevino's passes to Hal Sandusky were the sparkplugs that scored the first Eagle touchdown in the opening period.

Eagles Score

East Carolina received the opening kickoff but was forced to punt. The Eagles lost the ball, regained it and began their first scoring march which ended when Bevevino passed to Sandusky for the touchdown. The try for extra point was blocked by linebacker Frank Madigan and the Pirates trailed 6-0.

East Carolina received the kickoff and began their only scoring drive of the day. With Ilard Yarborough and Paul Gay doing most of the ball carrying the Pirates moved within the Pennsylvania's 30. Sandy Siler then tossed a completed pass to Yarborough who moved to the seven. Gay took a pitchout and was brought down on the one. Siler sneaked across on the next play. Lynn Grissom's attempted placement was wide.

For the remainder of the opening period and the entire second quarter the two teams exchanged punts with neither being able to manufacture a serious threat.

Winning Touchdown

Clarion received the kickoff to open the second half and promptly marched to their second score. Bevevino's passes accounted for most of the yardage but it was a fleet halfback by the name of George Czup who circled left end for the final distance. Wisniewski's kick was good to give the Eagles a 13-6 lead.

The Pirates battled grimly back throughout the third period but were stopped short on each occasion. A 15-yard field goal attempt by Grissom was wide and the quarter ended with the Pirates still six points behind.

Several threats were made by both clubs during the final period. Bevevino-engineered drive reached the Pirate seven but the East Carolinians held and the ball went on downs. Two desperate East Carolina attempts in the final quarter were halted as a result of pass interceptions.

East Carolina was hurt severely by two injuries. Fullback Claude King left the game early in the first quarter and halfback Yarborough, a consistent gainer, was carried from the field with a broken ankle.

Santa warn his would-be stand clear if they want to celebrate your coming... for Coaches... and Porter, champions '53... and for ideas to make this more interesting... NUTS AND FEELINGS

Dear Santa, I am aware of the fact that you're pretty occupied with the many wants of the younger generation, but this letter is written with the hope that you find time to fulfill a few of the requests!

Please bring Tubby Thomas a set of bathroom scales, so he can keep his "model" figure trim for the gridiron; also a good, sound leg, so he can go at top speed next season and blossom into a terrific lineman... for Bobby Hodges, a pair of elevated shoes, so he won't feel inferior on the basketball court; also sneak Bobby in another 20-point-plus game average... for Jimmy Byrd, a rubber ball to bounce against the wall until the baseball season opens; also a very successful season for Jimmy; he surely deserves credit for his diamond ability... for Algie Faircloth, a set of horseshoes to toss, so his muscles won't stiffen (just leave the horse on 'em); also an All-conference slot at defensive center.

Santa, leave Cecil Heath three inches of height, so he'll be a sky-scraping 6-footer; also the mythical title as best floorman in the North State... for Dwight Shoe, a coliseum to keep his trophies and honors in; also gift him with his All-American traits throughout life... for Sonny Russell, a case of hair restorer that he can give to the opposing coaches who tear their hair out because of him; also another All-conference position.

Leave Dick Cherry an electric football set, so he can keep in practice as a field-general; also the North State Athlete of the Year award that should have been his this year... for David Lee, a set of toy barbells to get him out of that "before" class; also more deserving recognition for his gridiron actions... for Richie Blake, a toy soldier (AROTC) that will demonstrate to him the simplicity of marching drills; also a little more playing time to show his ability on the hardwood.

Nick, drop Paul Gay many more 88-yard excursions... choose Willie Holland for little All-American honors... for Bobby Strickland, a cot in Cotten Hall; also praise for a swashbuckling Pirate... for Charlie Huffman, a barrel of hookshots and acres of prestige around the loop... for J. D. Bradford, a great football campaign, without getting hurt... for Luke Taylor, an magic cuedstick for success in the (if you'll pardon the expression) poolroom; also the acclaim he deserves in the pigskin parade.

Give "Tippy" Hayes the "tops" in football laudation... for Harold O'Kelley, a repeat of his '62 grid performances and glory next year as a "flanker"... for "Emo" Bouda, a basket full of TD's... for Jim Stanley, clear sailing over the chalk lines and a five yard average per carry in '52... for Claude King, another sensational season, and

Bucs Meet Christians

East Carolina college's Pirates, unbeaten in three conference starts this season, will journey to Washington Saturday night to take on a conference foe, Atlantic Christian, in a non-conference game.

The contest will be played as a dedication game for Washington's new gymnasium and will have no bearing on the standings of either team in the North State conference title race.

Atlantic Christian and the Pirates have played two mutual opponents. Lenoir Rhyne defeated the Christians but was downed by the Pirates. AC downed Catawba 71-56 and the Pirates beat the Indians by 80-67 count.

Vets With Insurance Receive Waivers After Return To Duty

More than 2,000,000 veterans of World War II holding GI insurance have applied for and been granted a waiver of premium after returning to duty with the armed forces, Veterans administration said on the basis of a recent insurance survey.

Persons in active service for 31 days or more after April 25, 1951 who are insured under NSLI or USGLI term contracts may apply while in active service for waiver of all premiums and thus keep the insurance in force, VA said.

Under this waiver, all premiums falling due will be waived for the duration of the person's active service, plus 120 days after separation or release from active service. To keep such policies in force thereafter, veterans must resume full premium payments when due.

Any such term policy that expires while it is under waiver and while the insured is in active service will be renewed automatically for another

5-year period. Veterans with this type of policy must begin payment of the higher premium for their automatically-renewed policies within 120 days after their separation or release from active service.

Persons in active service 31 days or more after April 25, 1951, who are insured under NSLI or USGLI permanent plan policies may apply for a waiver of that portion of their premiums which represents the pure insurance cost, and pay the remaining portion which represents the reserve requirements of the policy.

In administering this phase of the waiver program, it was found necessary for practical purposes that servicemen should continue to pay their full premiums and VA will refund the waived portion periodically with interest.

This waiver continues for the duration of the person's active service, plus 120 days after separation or release from active service. Since the waiver will terminate automatically at the end of the 20-day post-service period, the insured must continue to pay the full premium due following the period of waiver, in order to keep the policy in force.
