Little Files Charges Against Sherrod

Charlie Sherrod

By PAUL COLLINS
News Editor

SGA President Charlie Sherrod has been charged with four violations of the East Carolina Code of Conduct, The East Carolinian has learned.

The charges were filed Wednesday by SGA Treasurer Kirk Little.

He has alleged that Sherrod had a part in switching a picture in Little's campaign advertisement that appeared in the March 3 edition of The East Carolinian.

The advertisement was supposed to contain a picture of Little in a coat and tie. It was altered to contain a picture of Little in an Air Force ROTC uniform.

A source close to Little said, "Sherrod approached one, if not two, staff members and asked that they change the picture."

Thus, the source said, Little decided to file the charges against Sherrod rather than the paper.

"The newspaper did everything within its power to rectify the situation," Little said. "I have no complaint with them."

Though Sherrod has denied having any part in the matter, he has admitted to being at the newspaper's office the night the issue was being prepared.

"Lynn Calder and I were at the office, we had letters to the editor to turn in. I was also complaining that all the candidates' pictures and platforms were not in the paper."

According to Paul Lincke, The East Carolinian's director of advertising, the advertisement was correct when the last member of his staff left the office between 10 and 11 p.m. that night.

"Chuck Foster was responsible for making sure that the ads were correct, and they were when he left," Lincke said.

Little felt that the advertisement, as it appeared, may have hurt his campaign.

"It was a definite detriment to my campaign by picturing me in a military uniform," he said. "I feel like it was done with the intention of hurting my re-election campaign."

He added that the use of the picture created a problem for him with his commanding officers. "It implied that the AFROTC was supporting me, and that's illegal."

Sherrod has been officially charged with violating sections F, G, Q and U of the Code of Conduct.

The first charge deals with vandalizing, maliciously destroying, damaging or misusing property.

The next charge concerns stealing or receiving stolen property.

The third charge is forging, altering or misusing as documents or other such materials.

The final charge deals with the violation of city ordinances, state law or federal law by students.

"My ad was vandalized," Little said. "This is my legal recourse."

Sherrod has indicated that he will file counter charges against Little.

He said he will charge Little with section A of the Code of Conduct, which deals with slander, lying and libel.

"Kirk Little, the politician, is up to his old tricks again," Sherrod said.

"Most people, when they look at the charges against me will consider the source. He tried the same thing last year," Sherrod concluded.

In last year's campaign Little accused his opponent, Danny O'Connor, of tearing down his campaign posters.

Little has asked for a preliminary hearing Thursday, at which time the charges will be formally presented

ECU To Sponsor Activities

By DIANE ANDERSON
Staff Writer

The Handicap Awareness Committee and the Student Union Minority Arts Committee are sponsoring Handicap Awareness Week at East Carolina University March 29 through April 2, 1981.

The purpose of the program is to provide activities that will raise the consciousness of faculty, students, employers, and the general public in relating to and dealing with handicapped persons according to C.C. Rowe, assistant dean of Student Affairs and Coordinator of Handicapped Student Services.

Rowe said that there has never been a campus awareness program that encompassed the scope of the activities scheduled for next week in any other University in North Carolina. Most of the schools that have programs of this kind hold activities that last for two or three days. For only a several hours a day, he added. The program here at ECU is scheduled to last four full days and includes a wide variety of activities.

ECU, over the past few years, has spent approximately $3 million removing barriers that cause difficulties for the handicapped. William Haney and Cindy Mylinsky, graduate students in Rehabilitation Counseling and chairpersons for the Minority Arts Committee, explained that the Handicap Awareness Week activities will display everything that ECU has done to accommodate its disabled students.

Throughout the week, simulation workshops will be held to provide able-bodied people with a first hand look at what it is like to be disabled. Wheelchairs will be provided for participants to experiment with.

There will also be simulations to experience blindness and other handicaps.

Rowe also indicated that 60 to 70 percent of the individuals involved in the organization and supervision of the week's activities are handicapped. The program is being supported by the Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority and the Circle K organization, a national division of the Kiwanis. Also, organizations in the area such as the Employment Security Commission Handicapped Services and Pitt County Services for the Blind are also supporting this program.

The activities for the week will begin on Sunday at 7:00 p.m. with a jazz concert by Ray Codrington, a well-known recording performer. Many of the speakers at the various workshops held throughout the week are nationally known experts in the field of handicap services and rehabilitation.

ECU is one of three schools in the state with programs for the deaf, and is recognized throughout the nation as having an excellent overall awareness for the needs of the physically disabled.

Gay Students Win Case Against Georgetown

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)—Two gay student groups at Georgetown University won a partial victory over the Jesuit university's administration, which had denied them funds and campus space because the Catholic Church frowns on homosexuality.

Last week the Washington, D.C. Superior Court ruled that GU's banishment of the Gay People of Georgetown and the Gay Rights Coalition of Georgetown Law Center violated the city's Human Rights Law.

The case will now go to a higher court, and probably be heard in September. That decision will help set a national precedent that could influence gay groups at other church-related schools.

The ruling will come too late to help the National Women's Studies Association, which was prevented from holding a conference at the University of San Francisco, a Catholic school, for similar reasons. USF administrators, who earlier refused to recognize two gay student groups, announced the women's studies group includes people who admit to being lesbians. In a letter refusing the use of USF facilities, Vice President for Student Development Ann Dolan wrote that the presence of lesbians contradicts the Catholic doctrine that homosexuality is sinful.

Similarly, Georgetown Dean William Schuerman argued in court that "official subsidy and support of a gay student organization would be interpreted by many as endorsement of the position taken by the gay movement on a full range of issues."

Georgetown, he added, would not fund any student group whose "philosophies collide with the church's teachings."

The university claimed it had a right to reject the gay students because it is a private, religious school.

In response, Ronald Bogard, the student groups' lawyer, asked, "How can they be religious for purposes of defending a civil rights suit but secular for receiving federal money?"

Superior Court Judge Bleonard Braman agreed, calling Georgetown's rejection an unmistakable violation of city law. In September, a higher court will treat the issue of Georgetown's denial of space to groups with non-doctrinal philosophies.

Last week's case, says Clint Hockenberry, president of the gay law students' group, was "the cleanest confrontation yet between religious schools and gay groups."

Hockenberry also asserts the administration is inconsistent in apportioning some $200,000 to about 90 different student groups.

"The Womens Rights Collective disseminates information about abortion and contraceptives and puts ads about it in the paper," he notes. "The Jewish group here obviously doesn't recognize Jesus as Christ. If you accept Georgetown's logic, that would be inconsistent with Catholic teachings."

Students Face Cuts; Awards To Be Late

By PAUL WHITE
Staff Writer

According to Director of Financial Aid Robert Boudreaux, the East Carolina's financial aid administration faces three inevitable problems in awarding financial aid for the 1981-1982 school year:

1) Due to budget cuts by the Reagan administration, federally funded appropriations for financial aid have been reduced by $660 million, affecting the BEOG, NDSL, SEOG, and Work Study programs.

2) Due to the Basic Grant Foundation's decision to stop the printing of student eligibility reports until June, qualified students will receive financial aid no earlier than the first of August.

3) The total number of E.C.U. students qualifying for financial aid will be considerably higher than last year's number.

In the upcoming school year federal funds for the E.C.U. financial aid program will be cut significantly. Funding for BEOG will be sliced from $2.7 million to $2 million, a reduction of approximately $700,000, according to Boudreaux.

To compensate for the lack of funds, the Financial Aid administration proposes to reduce individual basic grants by sums ranging from $200 to $500 for the following school year. With an average reduction of about $200 for each student, Boudreaux figures to compensate for the deficiency in funds without turning away eligible applicants empty-handed.

Boudreaux says the allotment for the NDSL has been chopped from $725,000 to $663,000, a reduction of approximately $60,000, with interest rates remaining at four per cent.

Appropriations for the SEOG (Student Equal Opportunity Grant) have been slashed from $269,000 to $164,000, a reduction of approximately $105,000, according to Boudreaux.

Funding for the Work Study program received the smallest cut with a decrease of about $34,000. The program will operate on a $592,000 budget for the forthcoming school year. About 619 students were employed this semester, before a lack of funds caused the program to be terminated.

"Next year 600 jobs will be available," Boudreaux said, "but students will be allowed to earn no more than $500 a semester, and some students will be provided jobs for only one semester."

The Self Help and emergency loan programs will not be affected

Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity, in conjunction with the American Lung Association, sponsored a rock-a-thon Wednesday on the roof of the Students Supply Store. More than $200 was raised, and proceeds will go to the lung association. Sets of six "rockers" took turns rocking during the 12-hour event.

Liquor 'Flim-Flam' Plagues Greenville

By JIMMY DuPRE
Managing Editor

Caveat emptor! This old adage has been passed from generation to generation, but it seems a few students at East Carolina University have recently been exposed to a new understanding of the term.

With current liquor prices ranging from $75 to $95 per case, it is not surprising that enterprising students would jump at the chance to obtain a case of their favorite elixer at $50. Unfortunately, the person selling liquor at this price is somewhat more enterprising than his ECU customers.

According to one student's account, a black male around 20 years old offered to sell his roommates liquor at $50 a case, with the promise that if they purchased three cases they would receive half a case free.

From there this story of fortune turns sour. "Two of my roommates drove the guy to a house on Drum Street across the river," the student reports. "You have to give him the money before he can get the liquor from inside the house. He said, 'I have to go around back to pick it up and I'll be right back.' They said he walked around to the back of the house but never returned.

"The whole deal is illegal from the start, so he knows no one will go to the police," the student continued. "I just want to let other students know about him so they don't fall into the same trap we did."

According to the source, several other ECU students have already fallen victim to the flim-flam artist.

"I understand some guys at a couple of the fraternity houses have gone through the same thing," he said. "There's nothing that can be done to this guy by the police, but I'd like to see him again sometime. I think I could even the score."

by federal budget cuts, as they are programs sponsored solely by the university.

Students used to receive their financial aid award letters in May, but a three month delay by the Basic Grant Foundation will cause this year's funds to be awarded after registration. This means that students eligible for basic grants will have to pay tuition and dorm fees out of their pockets.

Along with the reduction in funds, there is a greater need among students for financial aid in the approaching school year.

"This leaves ECU short on meeting the needs of the students," Boudreaux admits, but adds that "ECU is faring better than most of the other schools in the UNC network."

Boudreaux says that he has met with other members of the Financial Aid office, as well as with members from the Admissions office and the Computing Center, "to lay the groundwork as to what can be done to make it easier on needy students."

Conference To Be Held

The Twenty-first Annual Family Life Conference will be held at East Carolina University on April 1 and 2. The theme of this year's conference is Intimacy: Developing and Maintaining Close Personal Relationships.

Three psychologists will be speakers at the conference. They are Francis X. Walton, member of the faculty of the Alfred Adler Institute of Chicago, Kathleen A. Walton, a consultant in early childhood education and director of the Adlerian Child Care Centers in Columbia and Harbison, South Carolina; Wayne M. Sotile, a psychologist specializing in psychotherapy for adults and adolescents.

All daytime meetings will be held in room 129 Speight Building. The Thursday night meeting will be in the School of Art Auditorium.

The schedule for the two days is as follows: Wednesday, April 1: 10:00 a.m., Dr. Francis X. Walton and Ms. Kathleen A. Walton—provide for student financial aid needs where other programs do not. Presently, any student can apply for a GSI without assessing his or her needs in a Confidential Statement, but Boudreaux feels the funds would be more fairly distributed on a need basis. The federal government is paying the nine percent interest rate on formerly obtained GSIs, but it will not pay interest on future loans.

Crawford Service Held

Funeral services were held Sunday for Lt. Fenton F. Crawford of the East Carolina University police department, who died Friday following a short illness.

Mr. Crawford, 62, was buried at Pinewood Memorial Park.

He was a native of Greenville and served 20 years in the U.S. Navy, including a stint in World War II.

Mr. Crawford joined the ECU police in October of 1963.

"He was a very friendly individual," said Joe Calder, director of security. "As the students know, he always had time to stop and talk. His death was a great shock to us."

Calder added that Mr. Crawford had planned to retire earlier this year but had been unable to because of a mix-up in record keeping by the state.

Surviving are his wife, Louellen Galloway Crawford; two daughters, Mrs. Graham Tucker and Loria Ellen Crawford; his mother, Laura Crawford Jones; and his brother, Gordon Crawford.

The Handicapped

ECU Sets Week Of Observance

The United Nations has declared 1981 to be the International Year of Disabled Persons. In conjunction with this East Carolina University had declared March 29 through April 2, 1981 Handicap Awareness Week.

The program is designed to include activities that will help everyone participating to gain insight into the world of the physically impaired. Workshops will be set-up in various locations around the campus with special emphasis on students, professors and employers and their specific needs in dealing with the handicapped. All of the events are open to the public, and are free of charge, with only one exception.

At 7:30 p.m., on Tuesday, March, our own ECU sign language musical interpretation group, "Fantasy", will put on a performance in Hendrix Theatre. Admission is $1.50 for students and $2.00 for the general public. Tickets are available at the campus central Ticket Office.

There will also be simulation workshops that will allow participants to experience a world of blindness, for example, or find out what it is like to get around in a wheelchair. This is an excellent opportunity to broaden the understanding of people to the problems of the disabled.

For example, how would you function if you had no use of your arms or legs? How would you perform such normal tasks as dressing yourself, brushing your teeth, tying your shoes, eating, etc.? On the CBS news magazine, "60 Minutes", Sunday, March 22, one man dealt with these problems through the use of a specially trained monkey who could even properly brush the man's hair for him. Admittedly, this is not the answer to all quadriplegic's problems, but it shows that there are alternatives to institutionalizing severely handicapped persons.

Did you know that you should not pet a seeing-eye dog, even if it is sitting beside its owner, looking up at you and wagging its tail? How would you handle a class in which the professor drew many graphs and illustrations on the blackboard if you were blind? The workshops during the coming week are designed to enlighten participants on the many alternatives that are provided by the university to handle such frustrating situations.

Handicapped men and women are not different from able-bodied people except that by some consequence they have a physical impairment. Sometimes, this disability can cause unimpaired individuals to be uncomfortable in dealing with the handicapped. Handicap Awareness Week is designed to alleviate some of this unsureness, and help students, faculty, and employers to relate in a positive and relaxed manner with disabled persons. Let's support Handicap Awareness Week by getting involved in some of the workshops and gain some insight into the world of the handicapped.

Campaign Posters Clutter Hallways

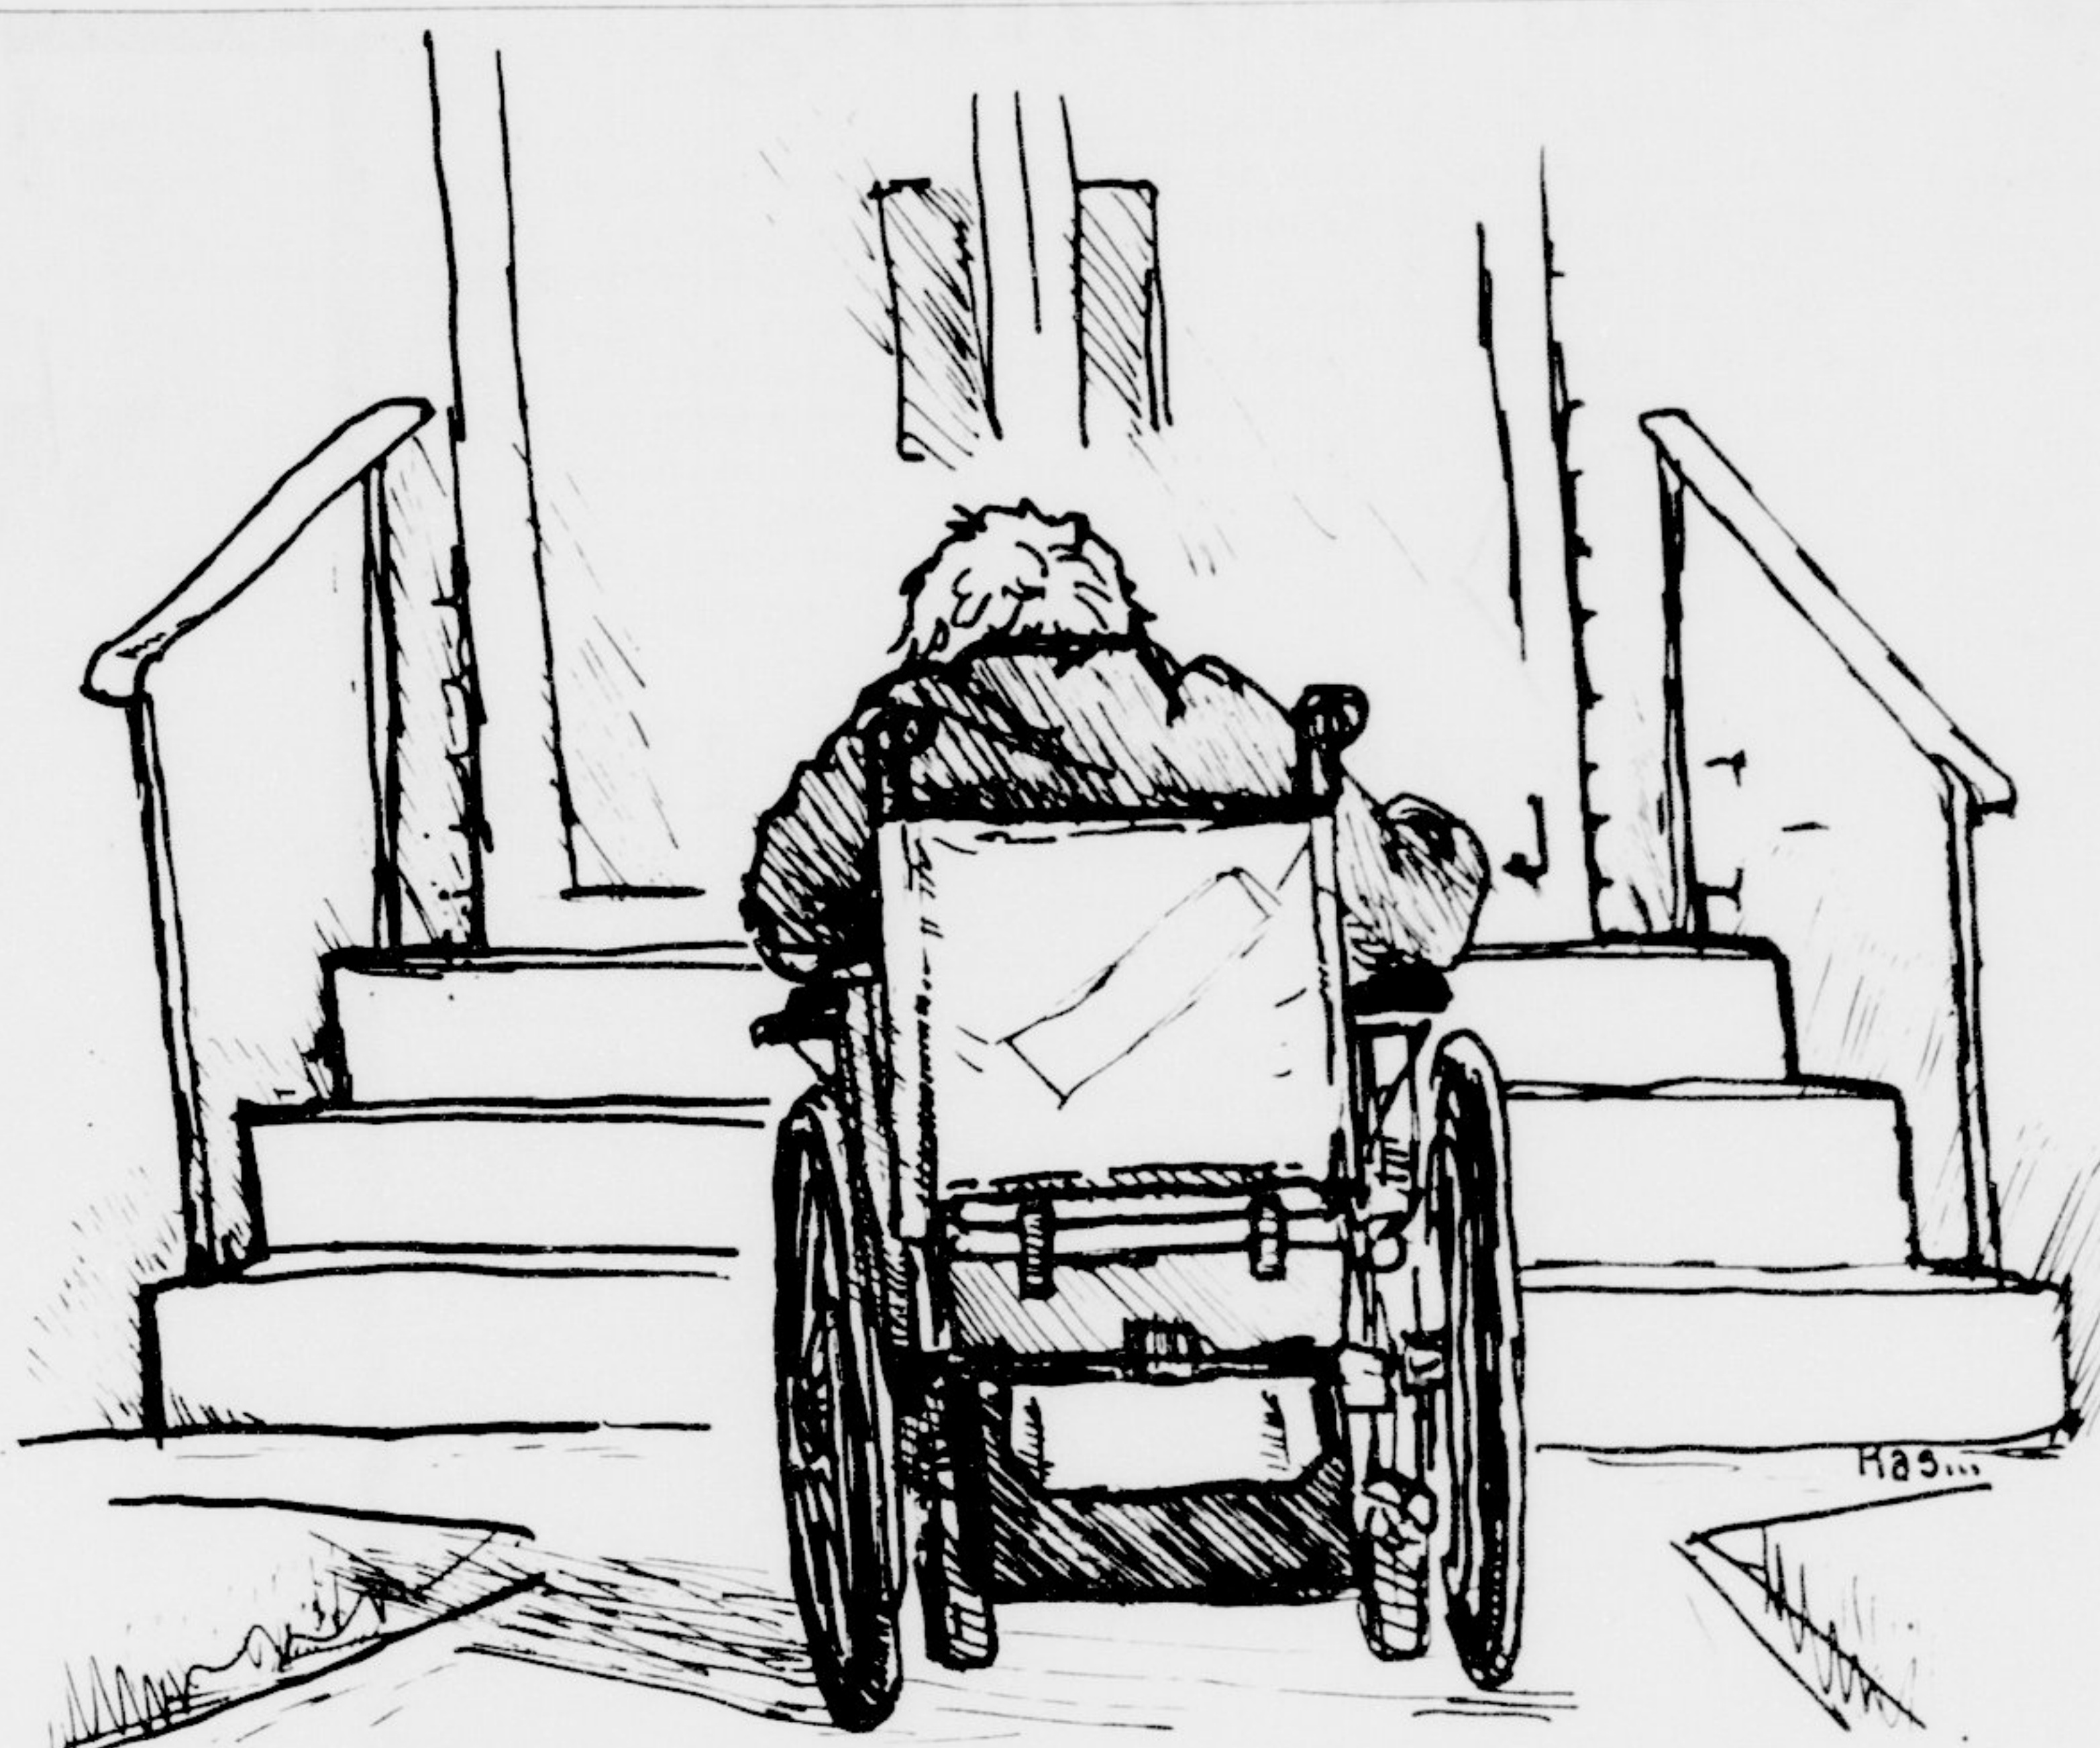

Okay guys, enough is enough. The results are final now in two of the Student Government Association elections, with Lester Nail soon to be inaugurated as president and Denise Phthisic as secretary.

The only offices still undecided are vice-president where Marvin Braxton and Peggy Davison enter a runoff April 1 and treasurer with Angela Pepe and incumbent Kirk Little running neck-in-neck. This editorial does not apply to these candidates still running for office, only those who participated in other races.

With this in mind, the question remains: why are campaign posters still displayed throughout many campus buildings? It can't be that students enjoy reading them so much, so what is the explanation?

While the situation may seem ridiculous at this juncture, we would not want every poster to endure the fate of a particular "Charles Sune For Sophomore Class President" poster (vintage 1977) which still exists in the foyer of the Publications Building.

We are not implying that these candidates should sprint through buildings grabbing their posters and rush to have them cremated, just that two weeks is plenty of time to rid our halls of this literature.

ECU Hunger Walk Supported

I desire to know the rhetoric that will persuade the most to participate in the "Walk for Humanity," yet there is an absurdity to rhetoric in speaking of starvation; I know only to beg and plead for participation in the walk.

The starving do not care to work for equal rights for minorities, or discuss ethics or logic with the philosopher, or demand theory with the business analyst, or laws of thermodynamics with the physical scientist. What is so grievously true is that they cannot care about these things; a person can have no freedoms, liberties or privileges when they know not whether they shall die for want of food. Seneca is correct: "A hungry person listens not to reason, nor cares for justice, nor is bent by any prayers."

Yet so serious we seem, and so actually absurd we are, in complaining about S.G.A. elections, or lack of a fall break, or allocations to the E.C.G.C.; so serious we are in fighting over a loss of work-study funds and in complaining about foreign language requirements. Actually we are paltry, trite, crass people if we are capable of assigning any importance to our actions and at the same time perhaps denying a few moments freedom or life to another by not giving even so little of our time to help. Think of how much time we've spent on our social institutions, and how little time we've spent to help a starving person. Surely anyone with conscience will desire to help on April 11th. If you cannot help by actually walking, at least sponsor someone else and participate through your giving.

If you do not wish to help at all, then one can only wonder if you really care, and I find such egoism revolting.

Break Recommended

Statements made in the "Fall Break" editorial in the March 19, 1981 issue of The East Carolinian were incorrect. The Calendar Committee recommended a 1983-84 calendar starting the last week of August and incorporating a "Fall Break." The Committee also recommended that a "Fall Break" be placed in the 1981-82 calendar. These recommendations were rejected. The possibility of classes starting later or classes lasting a longer period of time as reported in the editorial were not proposals of the Calendar Committee.

Abortion Stand Challenged

I am writing in response to Jesse Helms' column of March 24, 1981 on abortion. Helms makes several remarks which I strongly oppose. Helms indicates that he does not believe that the taxpayers should be forced to finance the killing of an "unwanted baby". Isn't that what the baby would be: "unwanted"?

Isn't it better that the child never be born rather than being born and going through life knowing that he or she wasn't wanted? Helms advocates that women or rape victims have no other choice but to have the child. In fact Helms is implying that no one has the right to do with their body as they please.

I feel that a person's body is his and his alone, and that government should not regulate a person's sex life. In my opinion government regulates our lives enough. These women who seek abortion did not plan to get pregnant. There is no one-hundred per cent reliable means of birth control; except to abstain from sex. And who should say that one must abstain from sex; the government?

Helms is biased because he only presents one side of the story. To be realistic one should look at both sides of the issue. In our society it is said that we are free. However, if one does not have the means to carry out that freedom what good is freedom.

Economic Message Haunts US

By DAVID ARMSTRONG

Ronald Reagan's economic message — delivered on the night of a full moon between two Friday the 13ths — was the most ominous omen the powerless in our society have seen in many years. When Reagan formally submitted his budget to Congress, the bad news was confirmed: military spending will soar, while the "safety net" of social services for the disadvantaged will be shredded.

At first glance, the president's proposed budget cuts seem consistent with the laissez-faire philosophy Reagan has articulated for years. By slashing government spending and federal regulations governing commerce, his argument goes, Reagan will be getting "Big Government off the backs of the people," restoring our liberties and entrusting the helm of the ship of state to the most productive members of society.

A closer inspection of Reagan's policies reveals a less comforting vision. The Ronald Reagan who is, in theory, a champion of free enterprise is, in practice, a guardian of frozen privilege. Like the liberals whom they have swept from the temple, Reagan and his apostles are perfectly willing to use the power of centralized government to implement their political agenda.

Thus, the administration can entertain a proposal made last November by its transition team to shut off federal funding to municipalities with rent control laws. Such a proposal, if it is adopted, would invoke the power of Washington to crush the local and state autonomy Reagan claims to cherish. That would be inconsistent with

American Journal

Reagan's rhetoric, but perfectly intune with the reality of his presidency. Reagan doesn't care about cutting back government, per se; he cares about protecting the sanctity of private capital, especially for those who already have a lot of it. If dropping government regulations can best promote capital, fine. If extending government powers does it best, Reagan will extend them.

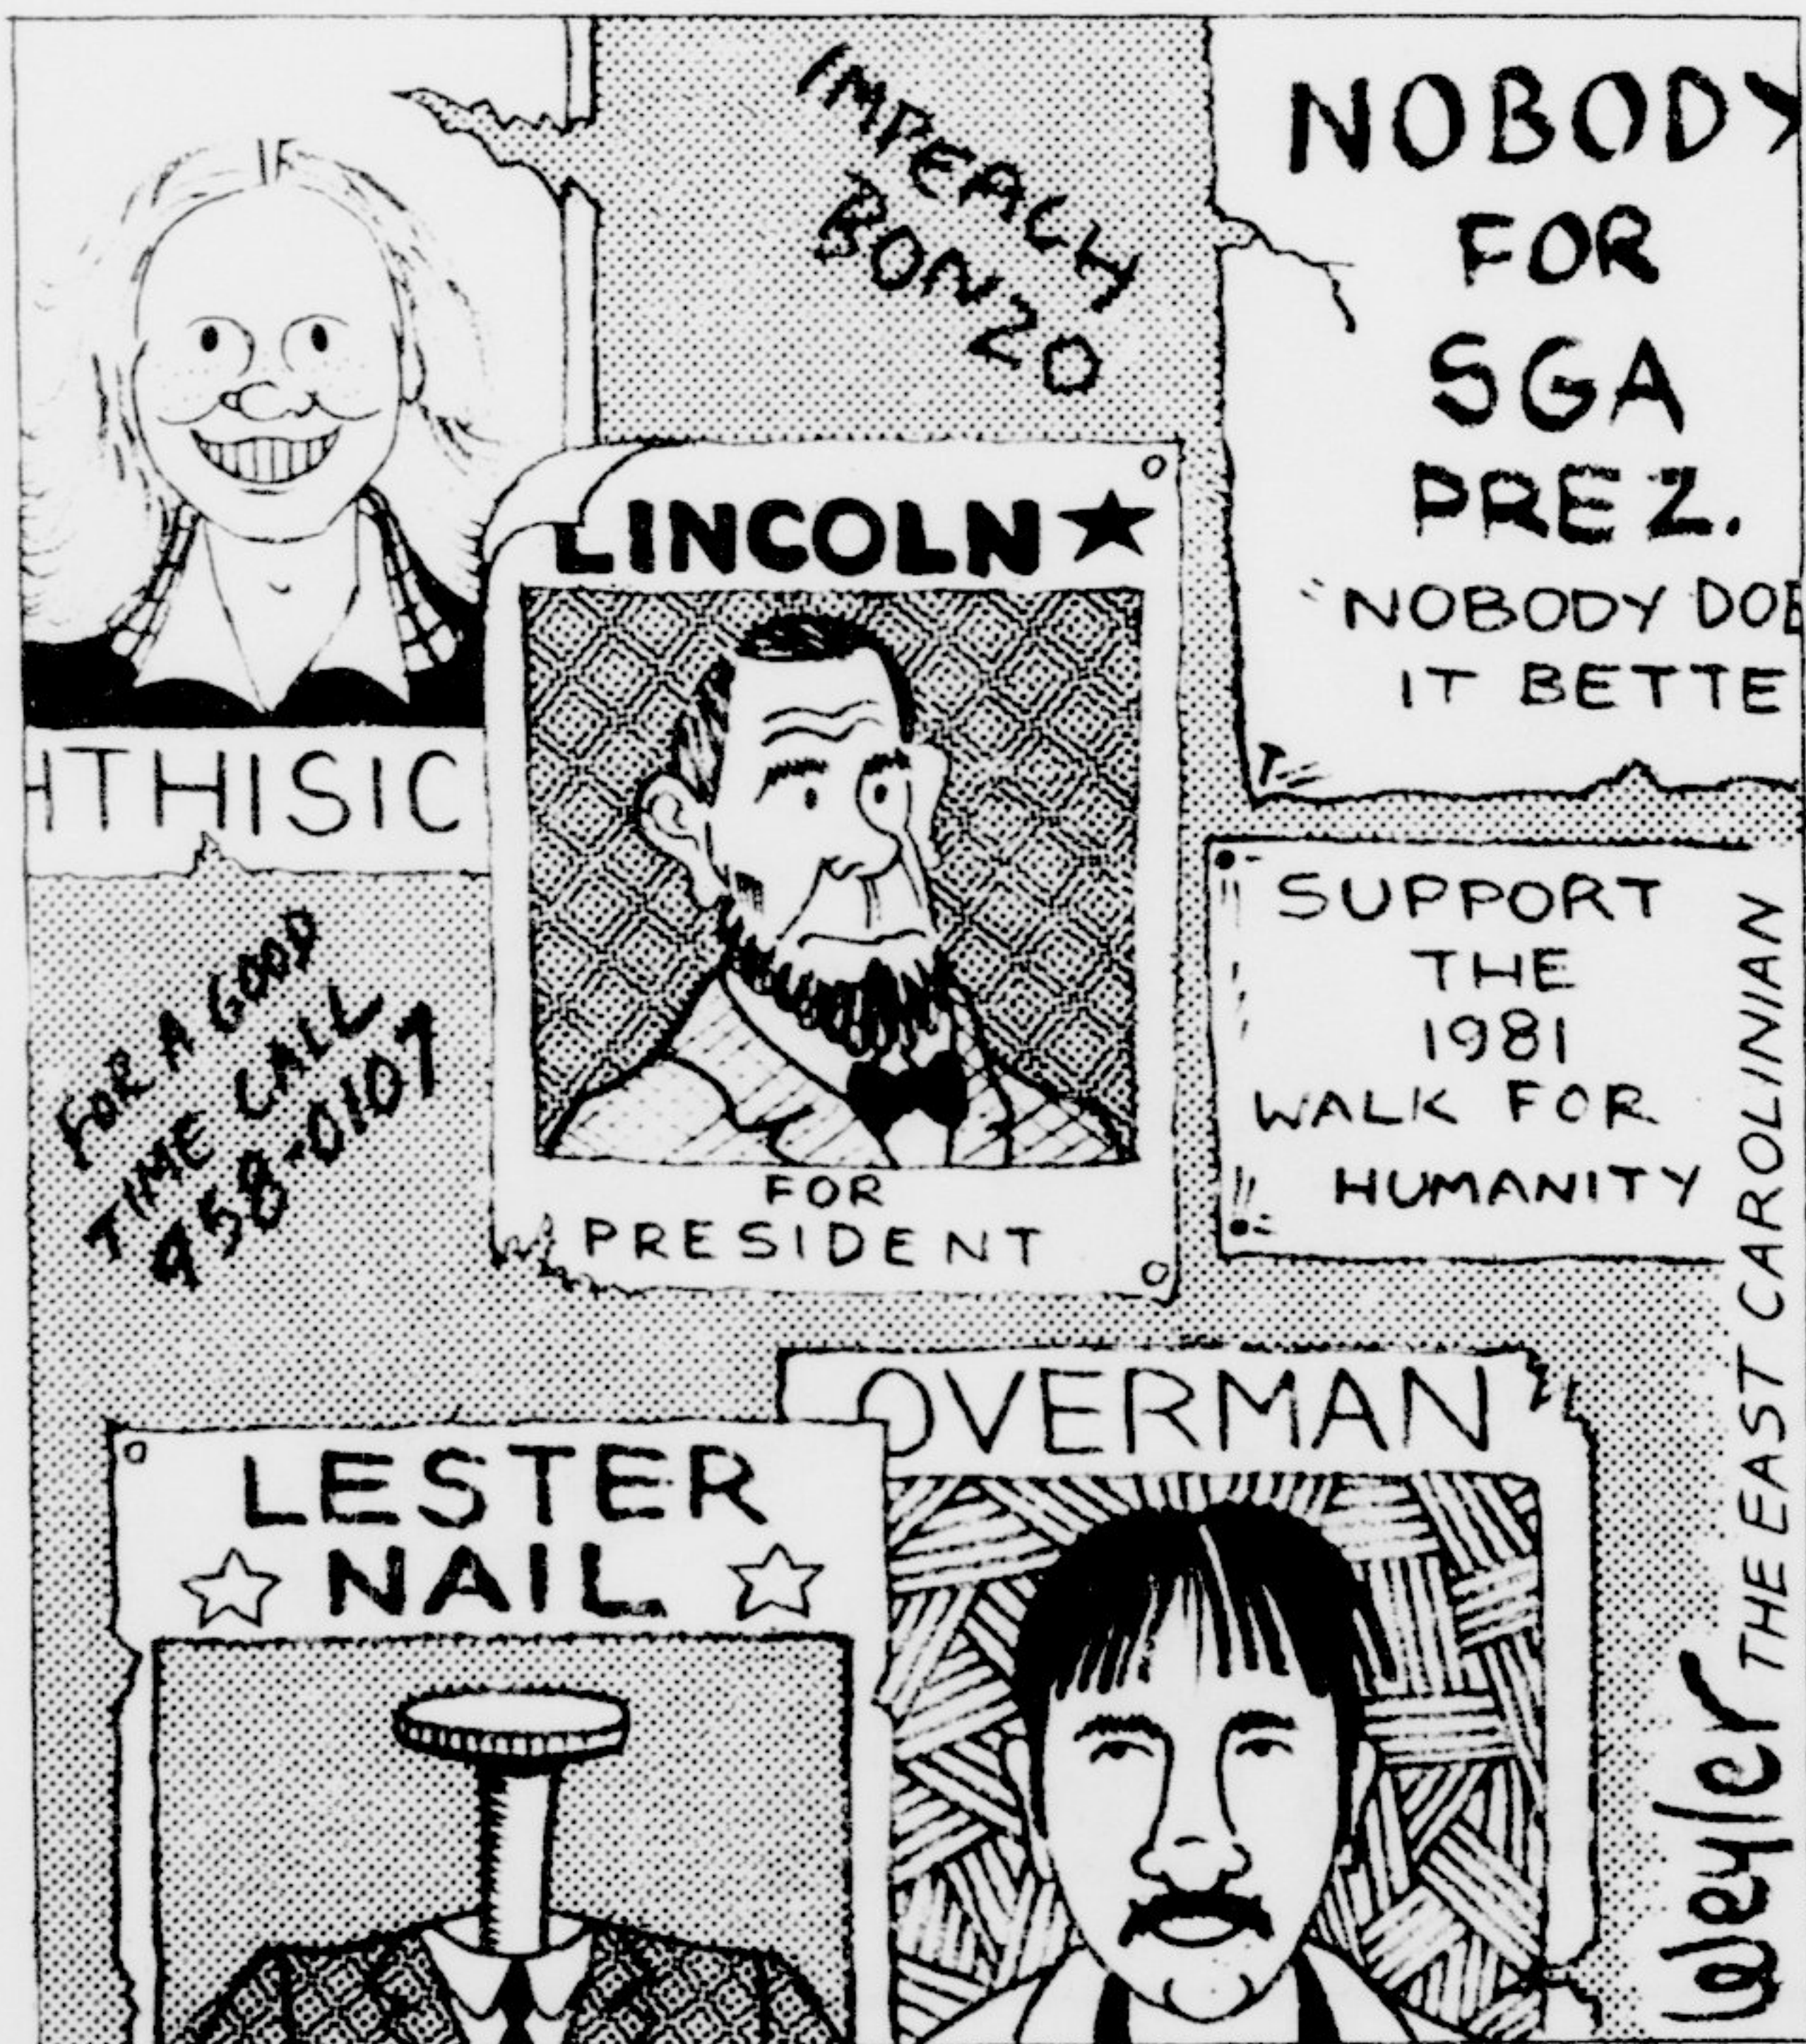

Ralph Nader, in an interview with Baltimore's City Paper, described the president and his aides this way: "The Reaganites are not really conservatives. They can be classified more as corporatists. They are not going to reduce the tax expenditures which involve tens of billions of dollars of indirect subsidies to business." Moreover, Nader continued, "Reagan...does not believe in anti-trust laws, which are designed to preserve a competitive economy and, therefore, a free enterprise system."

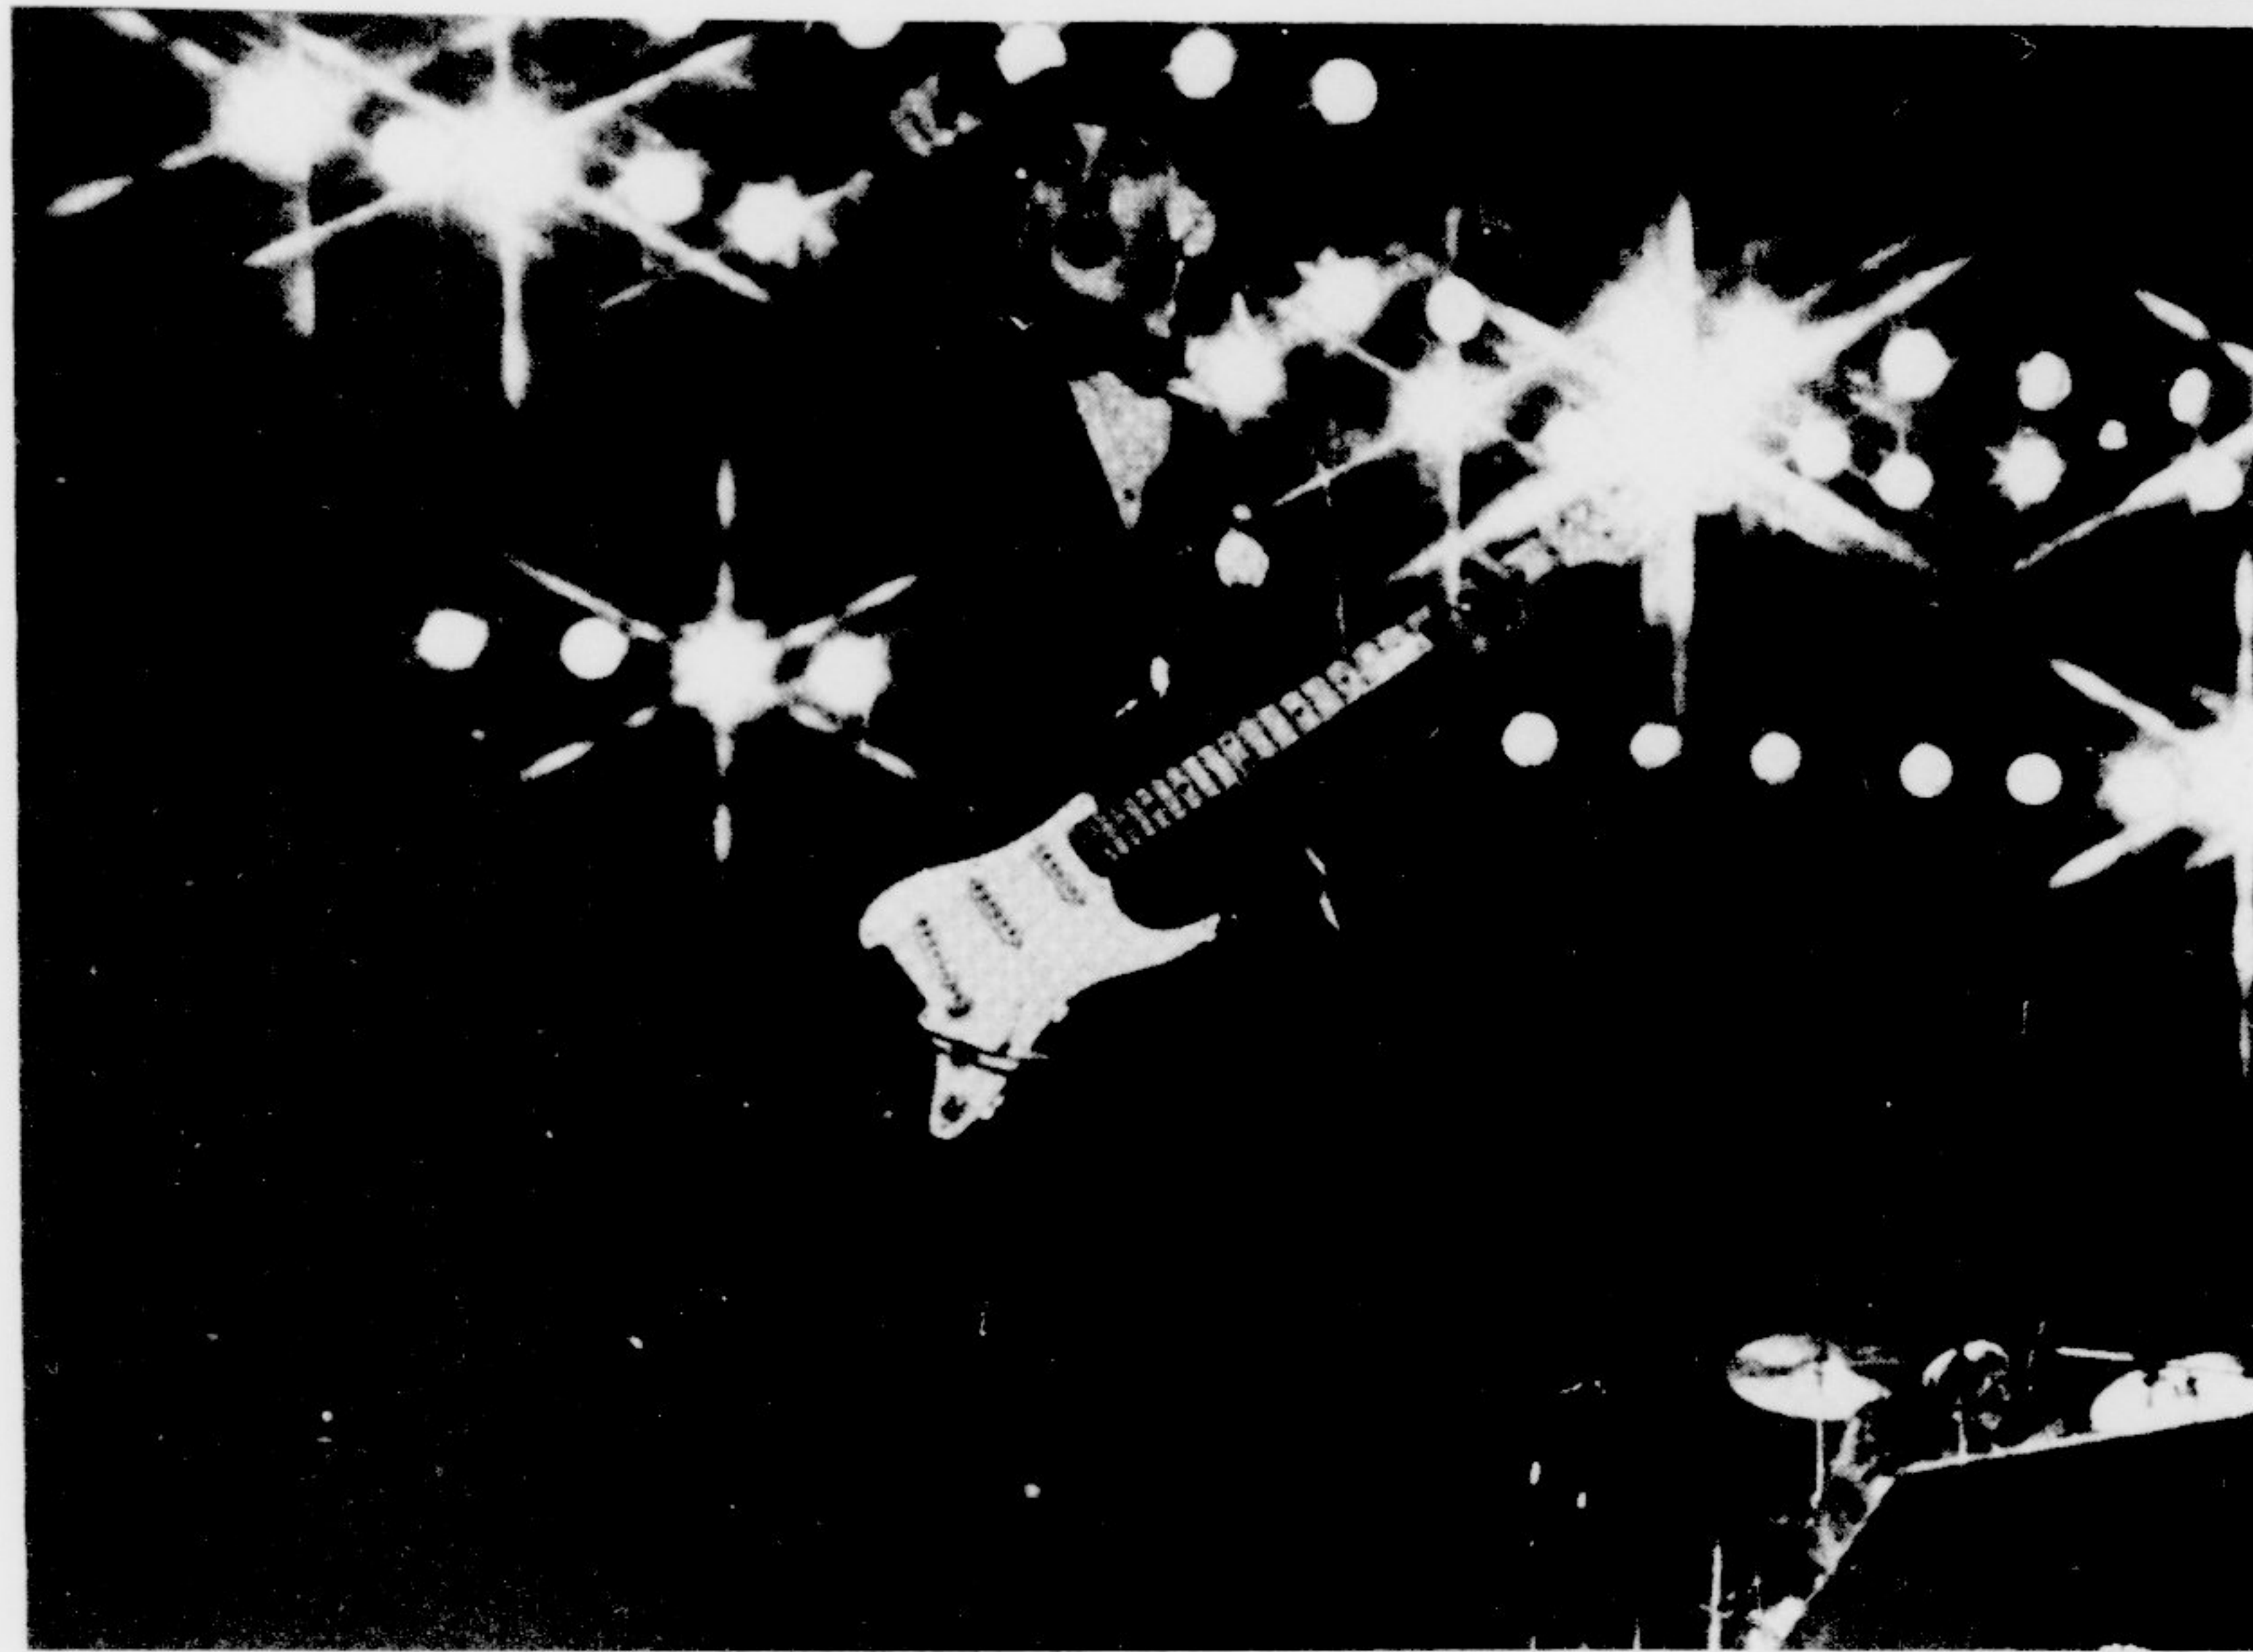

Reagan's fiscal policies, if fully implemented, are as likely to be enmeshed in failure as his philosophy is in contradictions. Indeed, Reagan's economic package is almost guaranteed to accelerate the inflationary spiral we've been whirling in for more than a decade. The reason? Chiefly, his proposed massive increase in the military budget — a form of spending fraught with cost overruns and delays, one which, moreover, produces relatively few civilian jobs and virtually no consumer goods. Runaway inflation — well over 10 percent a year now, compared to 1.2 percent in 1962 — began with the huge military expenditures of the Vietnam war; Reagan's policies will strengthen inflation, not combat it.

The Reagan rhetoric does not draw attention to the fact that military spending is government spending. The president prefers to pin that label on "frills" such as food stamps, social security and unemployment compensation. In fact, the billions for boondoggles such as the neutron bomb, the Cruise missile and the MX missile — a project that would rip up several Western states to put constantly circulating missiles on railway tracks — comprise the most common kind of government spending. For Reagan, who has also proposed fatal cuts for Amtrak, it's only "government spending" if human beings, rather than weapons, ride the rails at Uncle Sam's expense.

Seen in the light of day, Reagan's "new beginning" for America is a transparent fraud. Promising to curtail government powers, Reagan has merely rearranged them. Pledging to cut government spending, he has taken funds from the needy and given them to an already overstuffed Pentagon — thus increasing the chance that the brass hats will sally forth on another ill-fated foreign adventure. That's the bottom line in Reagan's bad news budget.

Cheap Trick lead guitarist Rick Nielsen will be wielding his axe at ECU on April 4.

Cheap Trick

They 'Want You To Want' Them

With just ten days remaining before the devastation of Minges Coliseum by superstar-status rockers Cheap Trick and special guest UFO, less than 2000 student tickets are still available. Central Ticket Office (MSC) operating hours will be extended until 6 p.m. beginning Monday in order to accommodate the usual last minute rush.

"The Major Attractions Committee is very excited about this concert and has been having as much fun promoting it as I can ever recall," said Charles Sune, Chairperson of the Committee. "We're very pleased with the support that we have been receiving thus far."

The April 4 appearance of the two groups has the distinction of being the only North Carolina date scheduled during the current tour.

Since exploding onto the modern music scene in 1977,

Cheap Trick gained mass appeal with their live album "At Budokan" which featured the hit singles "I Want You To Want Me," "Surrender," and "Ain't That A Shame." Other hit singles by the group include the number one songs "Dream Police," "Voices," "Everything Works If You Let It" (from the soundtrack of the motion picture "Roadie"), "Stop This Game," and their most recent hit "Baby Loves To Rock."

Shaking up America with their latest LP "All Shook Up," the group has been performing to capacity crowds (Radio City Music Hall in New York, and the Boston Garden) and rave reviews throughout the tour.

Tickets for the concert are only $6.50 (in advance) for ECU students and $8.50 for the public. Any remaining tickets will be $8.50 at the door.

Smokey Returns To ECU

Burt Reynolds, Sally Field, Jerry Reed and Jackie Gleason return to the screen in "Smokey and the Bandit II" the Student Union Free Flick for this weekend. Showtimes are 7 and 9 p.m. on Friday and 5, 7 and 9 p.m. on Saturday. Admission is free with student ID and activity cards.

Handicap Awareness Week Begins Sunday

A number of public activities are planned for the observance of East Carolina University's annual Handicap Awareness Week, March 29-April 2.

The events will begin with a 7 p.m., Sunday, March 29, concert on the ECU mall featuring Ray Codrington and Group Sax. Rain site is Hendrix Theatre.

Monday's program includes the opening of awareness booths and simulation activities on campus and a 7 p.m. film festival in the Leo Jenkins Fine Arts Center Auditorium.

At 1 p.m. Tuesday, Pat Parker of Community Services for the Blind and Sonar Glasses representative Bob Hunt will speak in the Student Union. At 7:30 p.m., "Fantasy," ECU's sign language musical interpretation group, will perform in Hendrix Theatre.

Members of "Fantasy" are Michael Ernest and Kathleen Beetham Westbrook of the ECU Program for Hearing-Impaired Students, Greenville interpreters Teresa Dixon and Donna Rehm, and several student sign language interpreters: Keith Stephens, an Annapolis, Md. senior; Rachel Ramsey, a New York City senior; Michael Cotter and J.C. Wattford, seniors from Greenville; Ron Gill, a junior from Zebulon; Donna Brown, a Cary junior; Laura Styers, a Winston-Salem junior; Sharon Faulkner of Knightdale, a sophomore; and recent ECU graduate Terry Brown of Ahsokie.

Tickets, available at the campus Central Ticket Office, are $1.50 for students and $2 for the general public.

At 8 p.m. a wheelchair basketball game, Capital City Hustlers vs. the Greenville Steelwheels, will be played in Minges Coliseum.

On Wednesday, at 7 p.m. in the Leo Jenkins Fine Arts Center Auditorium, several expert speakers will discuss rehabilitation and public awareness. They include Chet Mottershead, state liaison for the International Year of Disabled Persons; and George McCoy of the N.C. Division of Vocational Rehabilitation and the N.C. Hemophilic Association.

Thursday's events include a 2 p.m. demonstration of the Kurzweil Reading Machine for the blind in ECU's Joyner Library and a 3:30 p.m. concluding conference in room 221 in Mendenhall Student Center.

All events are open to the public free of charge, except for the "Fantasy" sign language musical performance.

Handicap Awareness Week is sponsored by the ECU Student Union and arranged by a campus committee chaired by two graduate students in rehabilitation counseling, William Haney of Fayetteville and Cindy Myslinsky of New Martinsville, West Va.

Dinner Theatre Tickets Still Available

Paul Zindel's brilliant Broadway hit "And Miss Reardon Drinks A Little" is being brought to Mendenhall Student Center as a Dinner Theatre production under the direction of versatile Stephen B. Finin (pictured above). The play will open this Monday, March 30, and run through April 4. Students can still purchase tickets for three dessert performances at only $3.00 ($4.50 for faculty and staff). Tickets for dinner performances are $7.00 for students; $9.00 for faculty, staff and the general public. Tickets are on sale at the Central Ticket Office, MSC.

Academy Awards

Our Critic Makes Predictions

By JOHN WEYLER
Staff Writer

Coming up on March 30 those on the motion picture merry-go-round will have a chance to grab the brass ring — at the 53rd annual Academy Awards. Once again, Oscar (so called either because he resembled Academy secretary Margaret Herrick's uncle) will go to honor the best of last year in film. Below are the nominees for the major awards, with this filmmaker and film reviewer's predictions as to whom will win.

The biggest excitement this year should be over the Best Actress award. This is indicative of a new and much-welcomed trend in film: the resurgence of strong roles for women. Ellen Burstyn is reputed to have given a dynamic performance in "Resurrection" but the film was little-seen. Besides, she's won before, for "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore" in 1974, so against such stiff competition she won't be awarded again. Goldie Hawn is popular with both the critics and the public. She's so cute and engagingly daffy she makes you want to like her. The Academy would probably like to give her the grand prize but her time has not yet come. It probably will someday soon, though. Mary Tyler Moore is another actress who's a hit with both critics and public alike. She of course has been honored and successful for years, but the Oscar is one honor that will be denied her this time, I believe. Gena Rowlands gives a strong, gutsy performance as "Gloria", the ex-moll who engages in a one-woman war with the Mafia. But the Academy will contend that the film is basically just another violent shoot-em-up, and besides, her husband, John Cassavetes, directed it just to give her something to do.

My money is on Sissy Spacek for Best Actress. In "Coal Miner's Daughter" she impersonates a well-known celebrity from teenage to middle-age, and is perfectly believable the entire time. She also sings her own songs in the film, which is quite rare. This actress has given striking, intriguing performances in a host of fine films. She always manages to appear in excellent if "unusual movies: "Badlands", "Carrie", "Welcome to L.A.", "Three Women",

Miss ECU Pageant Held Tuesday Night

The Second Annual Miss ECU pageant was held Tuesday night in Wright Auditorium.

Thirty-six contestants competed in the pageant, which was sponsored by Joe Hallow of Stroth's and the Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

The winner of the contest was Lisa Ward, who was sponsored by the Chi Omega Sorority. She received a $300 scholarship, plus a trophy and some roses.

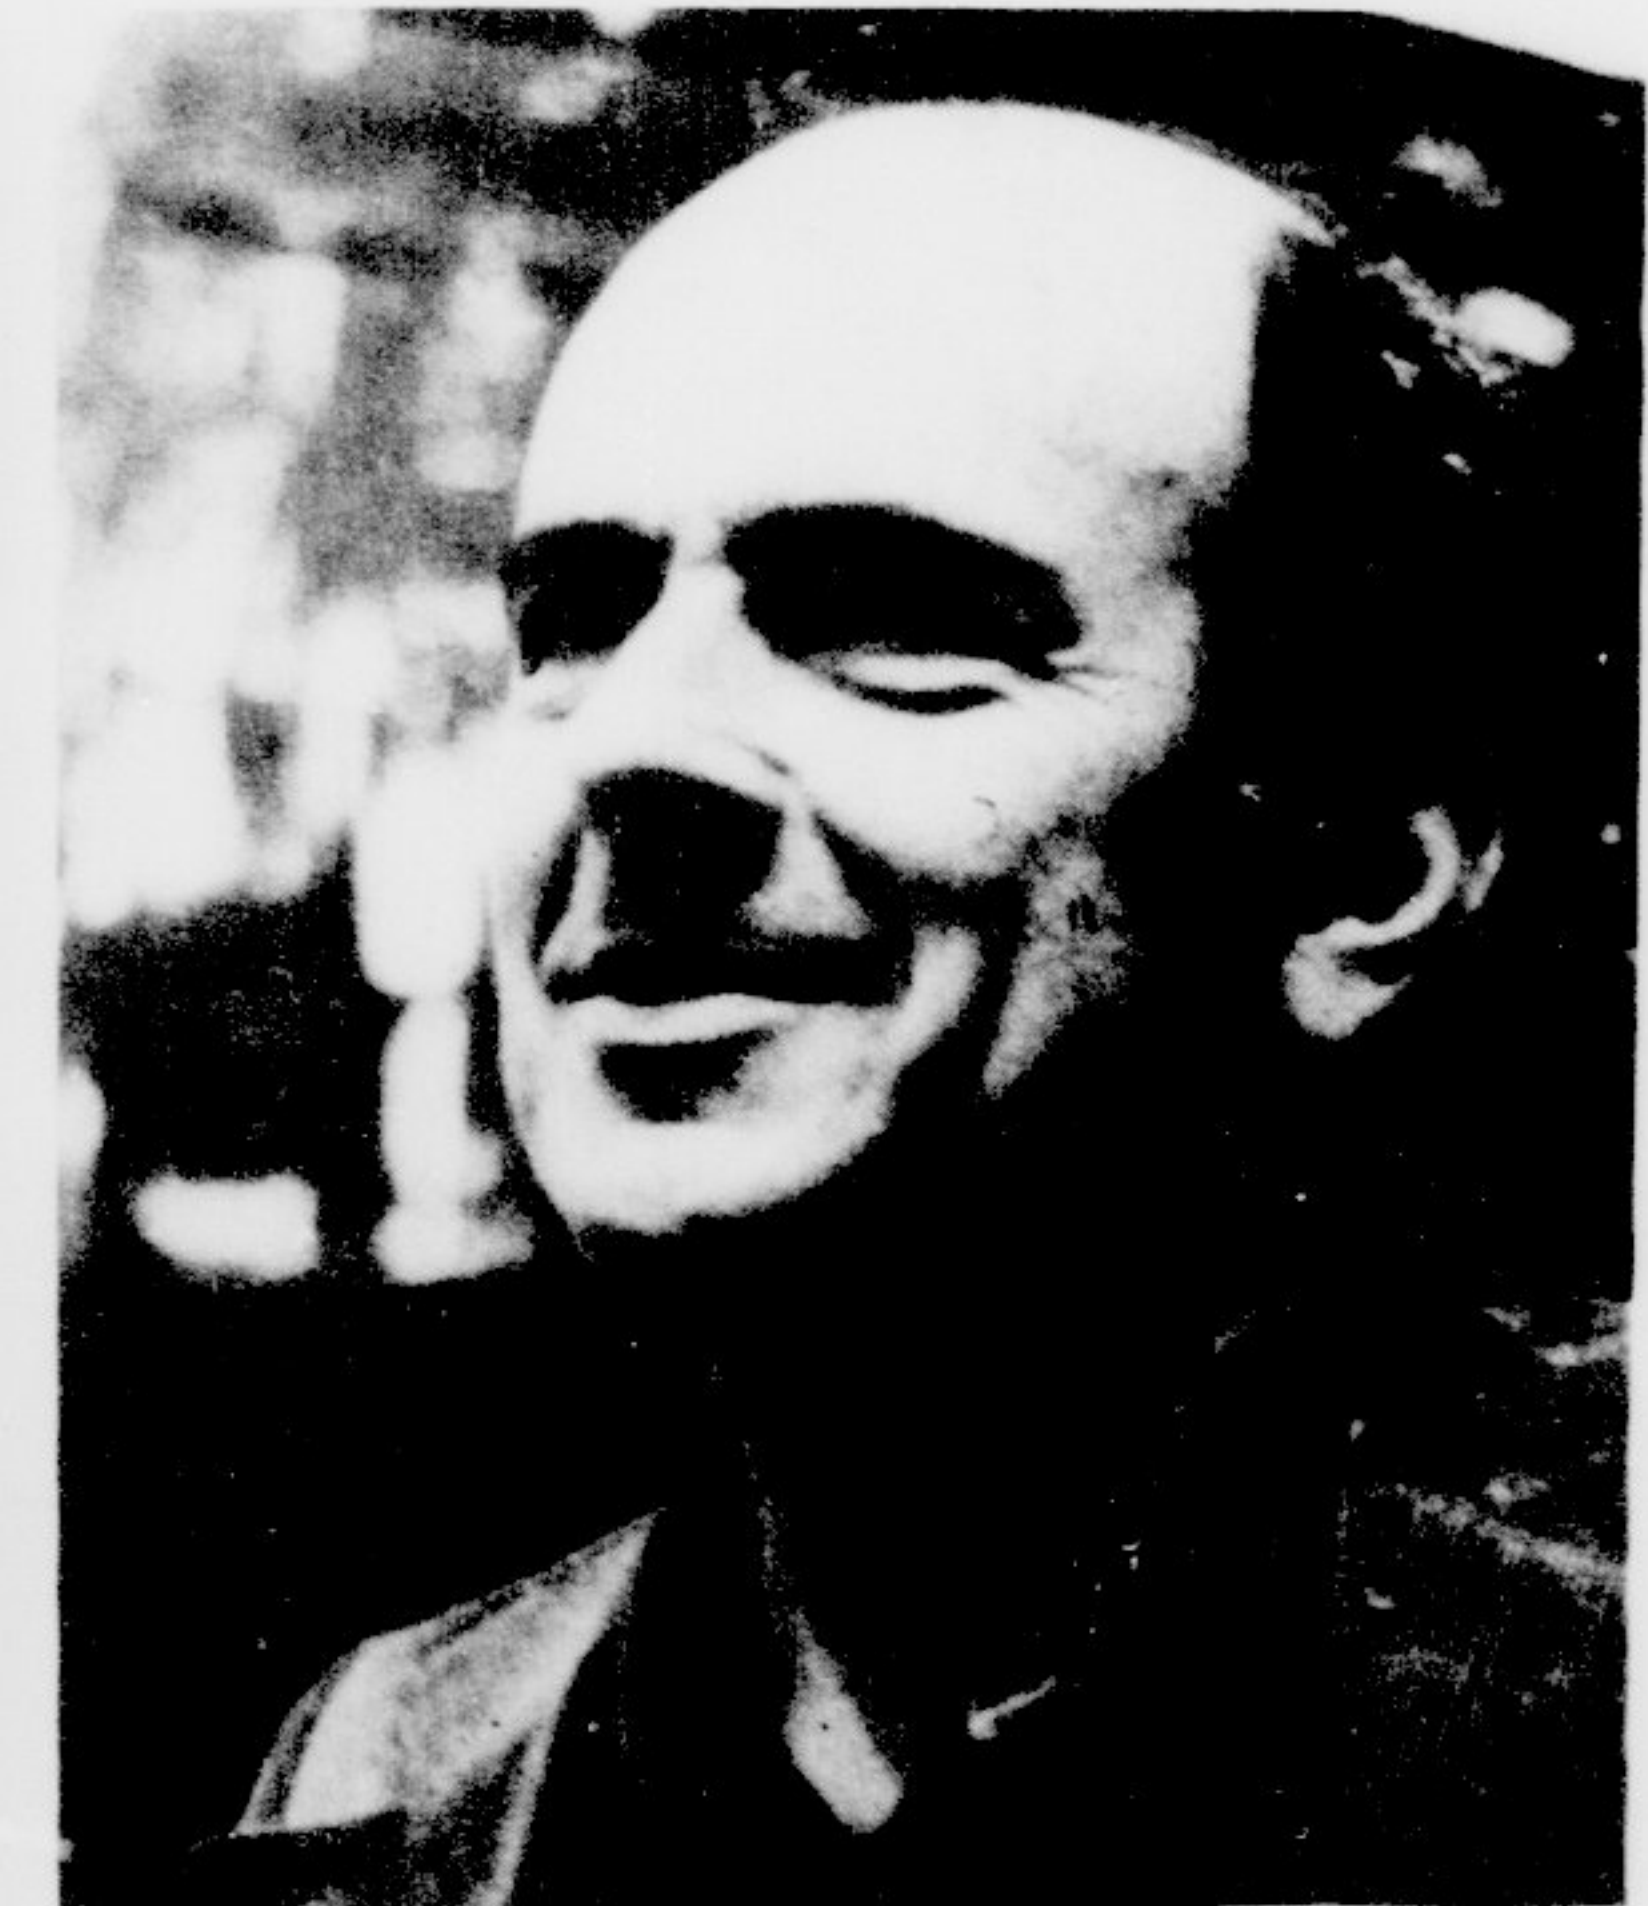

The first runner-up was Courtney Cox; second runner-up was Jennifer Coates; third runner-up was Kim Blevins and fourth runner-up was Kim Flora. Runners-up also received scholarships, trophies and roses.

The Mistress of Ceremonies was Diane Bowen, who was Miss North Carolina of 1976. Judges for the event included Joe Hallow, Jack Minges, Mrs. Ed Emory, Brent Heisner, Pat Bernette and Lena Brown.

The production was coordinated by Mark Mueller.

The brothers of Kappa Sigma would also like to extend their thanks to Scott Hoover and Greg Needham for their help in conducting the pageant.

Authors Louis Simpson and Louis Lieberman (pictured above) will appear together for a dramatic reading tonight at 8:00 p.m. in the Jenkins auditorium. On the following day, March 27, at 10:30 a.m., they will conduct a workshop in room 221 Mendenhall. Simpson is the author of eight volumes of poetry, an autobiography, critical studies and a novel. He has won many awards, including a Pulitzer Prize for poetry. Lieberman has written two books of poetry and a collection of essays on contemporary poets, and has had poems and essays published in many of the nation's leading magazines.

Illumina Accepting Entries

The Student Union Art Exhibition Committee is sponsoring the Illumina Competition, an art show open to all current ECU students.

This competition is one of the easiest ways for students interested in a career in the arts to acustom themselves to entering juried shows.

A two dollar entry fee allows the student to enter up to two works for judging. Works or slides may be submitted between noon and 6 p.m. on March 27 in Room 212 Mendenhall. Works must be ready for exhibition.

Rejected works may be picked up on March 29 from 3-7 p.m. in Room 212 Mendenhall and accepted works may be picked up on April 11 from noon until 4:00 p.m., also in Room 212 Mendenhall.

First and second prizes will be awarded, at the judge's discretion, in the following categories: ceramics, communication arts, drawing, painting, metal design photography, printmaking, sculpture, textile design, weaving and wood design. In addition, the committee will award $400 in purchase prizes.

The juror for this year's competition, Ms. Cynthia Ference, is the director of the Greenhill Gallery in Greensboro.

In addition to jurying the show, Ms. Ference will be speaking in the Jenkins Fine Arts Center Auditorium on Friday, March 27 at 7:30 p.m. Her lecture is titled "Out of the Ordinary: Art in North Carolina."

Music Recitals Announced

Five advanced students in the East Carolina University School of Music will perform in campus recitals next weekend.

All recitals are free and open to the public.

Performers are seniors Tanya Lynne Moore of Cary, a flutist, and Martha Bryan Almon of Wilmington, a pianist; two graduate students, flutist Ellen Kaner of Greenville and percussionist Mark Shelton of Bethel Springs, Tenn.;

and a junior, organist Diane Lynn Bridger of Suffolk, Va.

Miss Moore and Miss Almon will perform a joint recital Friday, March 27, at 7:30 p.m. in the A.J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall. Both are candidates for Bachelor of Music degrees in music therapy.

Miss Moore's portion of the program will include the J.S. Bach Sonata in G Minor, three Robert Schumann Romances for Flute and Piano and a Lennox Berkeley sonatina.

Miss Almon, a student of Dr. Paul Tardif of the ECU keyboard faculty, will perform two Antonio Soler sonatas, the Chopin Polonaise in C Minor, Opus 40, No. 2 and two selections from Debussy's "Estampes": "La Soiree dans Grenade" and "Jardins sous la Pluie."

Ellen Kaner and Mark Shelton, both graduate teaching assistants in the ECU School of Music, will perform a joint program Sunday, March 29, at 8:15 p.m. in the Music Center Recital Hall.

Miss Kaner will be featured in the Franz Schubert "Arpeggione" sonata, transcribed for flute and piano, and the Marcello Sonata in F.

Shelton will perform "Variations on a Gaillard" by Ervin and "Four Verses for Timpani" by Houliff. Both students will perform Ingolf Dahl's "Duetino Concertante" for flute and multi-percussion.

Diane Bridger's organ recital is scheduled for Sunday, March 29, at 3:15 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church here.

Her program includes Pinkham's Concertante, the Bach Sonata VI in G, Persichetti's Sonata for Organ and several selections from DuMège's "Premiere Livre d'Orgue."

She is a candidate for Bachelor of Music degrees in church music and organ performance and is a student of Dr. Robert Irwin of the ECU organ faculty.

Lecture Planned

The Area Studies Program in Medieval and Renaissance Studies is presenting a lecture by Dr. Liam B. de Paor, professor of history at the University College Dublin, Ireland. Dr. de Paor is currently a visiting Fulbright Scholar at the University of Pittsburgh.

The lecture, which includes slides, is on Irish chalices and liturgy in the Middle Ages, will be held today at 4 p.m. in Room C-103 in the Brewster Building.

Interested members of the public are invited to meet Dr. de Paor at an informal coffee hour on Friday, March 27 from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. in the W.B. Gray Gallery in the Jenkins Fine Arts Center.

Dr. de Paor's visit is sponsored by the College of Arts and Sciences, the Department of History and the School of Art.

Maya Angelou Performing Monday

Performer-author Maya Angelou will appear on the stage of East Carolina University's A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on March 30 at 8 p.m. The event, "An Evening with Maya Angelou," is being sponsored by the ECU Honors Committee and is open to the public. Ms. Angelou will be available to the audience for a question-and-answer session after the performance. She is the author of five bestsellers including "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings."

 "Heartbeat". If anyone is deserving of an Oscar, Sissy Spacek is. All the Best Actor nominees are excellent actors. Peter O'Toole won't win because too few people saw his film, "The Stunt Man". Besides, audiences are mad at him for daring to appear in Penthouse magazine's multi-million dollar porno flick, "Caligula". Jack Lemmon repeats his much-lauded stage performance as a dying publicist in the film version of "Tribute". He's good, the film's bad. He's grabbed the gold twice before, anyway, Best Actor for "Save the Tiger" (1973) and Best Supporting for "Mister Roberts" (1955). John Hurt as "The Elephant Man" is definitely a long shot. No actor has won for such a bizarre role since Frederic March for "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" in 1931. He could, however, be given a humanitarian award for playing such a difficult role with heavy make-up for long hours under hot studio lights. Such a performance must have certainly made John Hurt. Robert Duvall is effective as a tough Marine who treats his family like a platoon in "The Great Santini." He's given a long series of varied and impressive performances in many good pictures.

Robert De Niro is one of the most amazing actors around today. He goes to extremes, almost to masochistic length, to portray his roles. For his nominated performance as the vile and violent boxer Jake La Motta in "Raging Bull," he learned to box and he gained seventy pounds to play the pugilist in his declining years. De Niro often plays potentially explosive people locked behind a facade of solid steel, as best shown by his "Taxi Driver."

Martin Scorsese should win Best Director. His unique view of modern despair, urban anxiety, and big city blight, expressed in such films as "Mean Streets," "Taxi Driver," and "Raging Bull" can certainly relate to today's audiences. Coincidentally, all three films mentioned above starred Robert De Niro. Their long experience of working together has produced a memorable motion picture in "Raging Bull." It is amazing Scorsese has never even been nominated before.

1980's possibilities for Best Picture are indeed an unusual lot. They range from three biographies: — a neurotic boxer, "Raging Bull," a country-western superstar, "Coalminer's Daughter," and a bizarrely deformed man, "The Elephant Man" — to a lavish but realistic period picture based on a classic of English literature, "Tess," to only one film about that which its name states, "Ordinary People." The Oscar voters love all-American family dramas. Last year's big winner "Kramer vs. Kramer." For this reason, I believe they'll bypass "Raging Bull" for "Ordinary People."

The Academy Awards are ridiculous, there's no doubt about it. How can one say, for instance, that John Hurt plays a freak better than Robert Duvall plays a Marine? And the Academy obviously plays favorites and loves sentimentality. Yet still the Oscars fascinate us — most likely because they are the last vestige of the glamor and glory that was old-time Hollywood.

Spring Has Sprung

Bucs Take Two; Patterson Superb

Lefthander Bob Patterson pitched a one-hit shutout Tuesday as East Carolina swept a doubleheader from Princeton, 10-4 and 1-0.

The Pirates got complete games out of both Patterson (1-0) and Rick Ramey (4-0) in improving their record to 10-4.

A sixth-inning rally broke up a pitcher's duel between ECU's Patterson and Princeton's Steve Kordish in the second game.

Buc second baseman Mike Sorrell was first to reach base in the sixth, via a single. A Todd Evans single moved Sorrell to second. Mike Sage's single, which struck the second base bag, scored Sorrell on what was to turn out to be the key hit of the contest.

Patterson, a junior, struck out ten and walked none, giving up only a single to Paul Hauser in the first. Hauser was the second batter Patterson faced in the game.

The Pirates did not commit an error for the entire contest. Patterson was one hit — Hauser's — away from a perfect game.

"Overall, we probably played our best game in the second contest," said ECU coach Hal Baird following the sweep. "They threw a fine pitcher against us. Of course, Bobby had probably his best game ever."

In the opener the Bucs found an unexpected power supply in shortstop Kelly Robinette, centerfielder

A Sage sacrifice to center, a John Hallow single and a Todd Hendley double sent runs across the plate in the first to stake ECU to an early 3-0 lead.

In the fourth, Wells and Evans stroked a pair of three-run homers. Robinette closed out the Pirate scoring with a solo homer to left in the sixth.

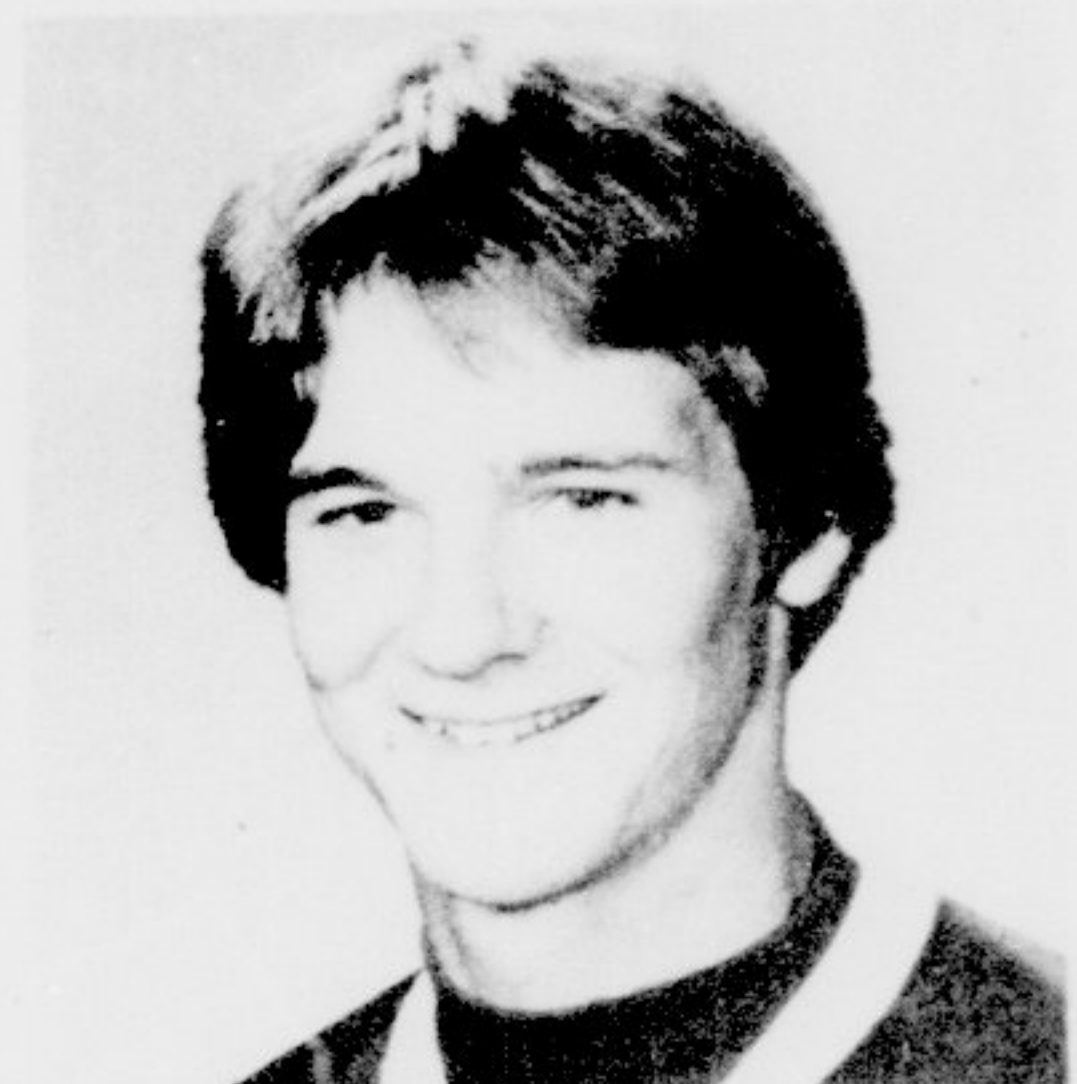

The Tigers, 1-2, scored all four of their runs in the fifth. Paul Steinhouse and Scott Minnich sandwiched RBI singles around Mark Lockemeyer's two-run single.

Ramey, a senior righthander, gave up four of his seven singles allowed in the fifth en route to completing his second game of the season.

Second-year Buc coach Baird was most pleased following what might have been his team's most impressive day of the season.

"We were real fortunate to get both of them," he said. "They're a real quality team. Their pitching staff led the nation in earned run average last year."

Baird was also happy with the power display in the opener. "We were really thrilled that we were able to get the ball out of the park a few times."

Patterson

Though the weather was ideal — there was no wind to speak of — Baird said the trio of homers might be attributed to a ball change. "We're wondering if it's not the new balls," he noted. "We brought out a couple of new balls today, which are a little smaller, to try out."

The Bucs are back in action today against Fairfield, a team that downed them less than a week ago by a single run. Gametime at Harrington Field is 3 p.m.

The team takes to the road for the first time this season Friday, traveling north to take on William and Mary. The club is back home Saturday for another encounter with Fairfield. Gametime for that matchup is 1 p.m.

Tournament Winding Down To Finals

NCAA Fever

The current NCAA basketball tournament has caused quite a stir around the nation. The 1981 version of the event certainly has turned the country on more than any in recent years.

Upsets of the nation's top three ranked teams in their first outings of the tourney began the craze.

This area of the country is especially intrigued by the event, what with Atlantic Coast Conference members North Carolina and Virginia now in the elite Final Four.

Adding to the local approval of the tourney is the fact that many of the big-name schools involved — i.e. Oregon State, UCLA, DePaul and Kentucky — took early losses. There is no love lost between the ACC and outside teams. The ACC's success and the others' lack of it has locals raving.

Picking a favorite from among the Final Four of UNC, Virginia, LSU and Indiana is very difficult. This Final Four may be the most balanced and best in many a year.

Usually there is a cinderella squad

Charles Chandler

that is a part of the elite group each year. Not this time; each team is a recognized "power" and each has a legitimate shot at wearing the crown following the March 30th title game.

Team Analysis

INDIANA — The Hoosiers won their last five Big Ten games to claim the championship of that conference, edging out Iowa in the final days of the regular season.

All-America point guard Isaiah Thomas ranks as the premier point guard in the nation. Only a sophomore, Thomas is touted by pro scouts as being ready for the NBA right now. He makes the Hoosiers go.

The big tandem inside of Landon Turner and Rav Tolbert has been awesome for Bobby Knight's club over the last month. Thomas' uncanny ability to get them the ball in all sorts of situations makes Indiana seem even more powerful.

In order to get by LSU in the first semi-final game Saturday, Indiana must control the tempo. Though they are a good transition team, the Hoosiers don't want to go all out with the Tigers. Turner and Tolbert must be effective inside, also, against LSU's awesome front.

LSU — The Tigers are something special. A senior-oriented team, LSU is both fast and strong. They have cruised through NCAA play thus far. A real test lies ahead in Indiana, though.

Keys for the Tigers? There are many. Things begin with the inside play of all-star Rudy Macklin & Co. The LSU front ranks with the best.

Point guard Ethan Martin is the perfect guy to get the big fellows the ball. He does an excellent job of leading the Tiger fast break as well.

Reserve Willie Sims is probably the best sixth man in the country. He is most likely the third most valuable Tiger behind Martin and Macklin.

In order to get by Indiana the Tigers need to get their transition game clicking. Hoosier coach Bobby Knight will probably pull some stunts to prevent this from happening. He knows only too well how awesome LSU can be when the game becomes a run-and-gun affair.

VIRGINIA — The Cavaliers have bounced back well from their drubbing in the ACC tournament at the hands of Maryland. In their last outing against Brigham Young, Ralph Sampson was only awesome.

The Cavs are pitted against bitter rival UNC in the semi-finals and face the unenviable task of trying to down the Heels for a third time this season. Both earlier wins have been comebacks after the Tar Heels lost big leads.

There are doubts that the Cavaliers can make such a comeback again. Therefore, they need to get a quicker start this time.

For Virginia to do so the team must take what is given them. Most likely, guards Othel Wilson and Jeff Jones will have outside shots available. They will need to take them when they become available.

Jeff Lamp can be counted upon to play his usual great game. Virginia can be sure of this and Carolina may as well accept it.

Trying to force the ball to Sampson would probably be a big mistake. The big guy will have some openings. But trying to get the ball to him too often would only be playing into the hands of the Carolina defense.

Defensively, Sampson must be ready. He can not allow UNC's front line to clear him out of rebounding situations. Sampson is the key, more on the rebounding and defensive areas than on the offensive, though. If he is ready from the opening tip Carolina could be in for a long day.

NORTH CAROLINA — Ah, revenge. This has to be on the Heels' minds after dropping two heartbreakers to Virginia this year.

To avoid a 3-0 Virginia sweep of the years' games the Heels need to be ready for a fired-up Virginia team. It is not likely that Carolina will get the sort of early leads that they managed in the two regular season contests.

What the Heels must do is avoid turnovers that allowed the Cavaliers to fight back in the last contest. Cav guards Othel Wilson and Bobby Stokes literally "stole" that game from Carolina's grasp.

The Heels showed during the regular season games that they can keep Sampson as much under control as is possible. What they must do is maintain possession of the ball in crucial situations.

The game will be close and doing the above in crucial situations is most important for the Tar Heels. If Stokes and Wilson are allowed to have their way again late in this game, Virginia is the winner.

An advantage for the Heels is their great inside play of late. In nearly every game in this tournament opposing frontliners got in foul trouble. If this happens to Sampson, the Cavs are in trouble.

Count on a great one. Both teams are ready. This one should go down to the wire.

Expect Anything

It is nearly impossible to pick winners in the two semi-final contests. Picking names out of a hat is just as safe as going with oddsmakers' favorites. Both games are just that even.

Anything can happen in either contest. So expect the most bizarre. With the four great teams that remain anything can happen.

Lady Pirates Sweep By Heels

By WILLIAM YELVERTON
Assistant Sports Editor

Second game home runs by Kathy Riley and Cynthia Shepard powered East Carolina's Lady Pirates past UNC-CH 6-1, thus giving the Bucs a sweep in the afternoon doubleheader at the ECU softball field.

The Lady Bucs shut out the Tar Heels 3-0 in the first game as they pushed over two runs in the fourth and added one more in the sixth.

"I was glad to see us play well against a team of that caliber," said head Coach Alita Dillon. "The state champion will be chosen on the basis of league play, so these games were very important."

In the first game, Shepard, Riley and freshman Jo Landa Clayton each had two hits in the win, as the Pirates out hit UNC eight to four.

Freshman ace Jeanette Roth hurled the Pirate win and upped her record to 8-1. UNC's Susan Spears took the loss and saw her record drop to 6-2.

In the nightcap, East Carolina pushed over a run in the second and added two more in the fourth before Carolina got its only run of the day in the fifth.

Shepard slammed her fifth homer of the year to lead the Lady Buc's attack. Shepard's shot tied the school record that Riley set last season. Riley also homered in the game, her second of the year.

Clayton and UNC's Spears ripped triples, and Pirate second baseman Ginger Rothermel slammed a double.

Sophomore Angie Humphrey picked up her fifth win of the season while Spears was handed her second straight defeat.

The sweep gave the Lady Bucs their 13th victory this season against two defeats. UNC's record fell to 11-5 with the losses.

"Our defense was really good," Dillon noted. "The errors we made (three on the afternoon) came at a time when they really didn't hurt us."

The Pirate coach was pleased with the performance of Clayton, whom she said is "looking very good" and Riley, who is "hitting the ball real well."

She is also impressed with the pitching of Roth and Humphrey. "We're real pleased with that aspect. That is one of the key points on our team. If our young people can do the job, then we shouldn't lose to anybody in North Carolina."

"We're just getting better and better, and our depth is also improving."

This weekend the Pirates travel to

ECU Catcher Fran Hooks Smacks One

Cullowee for the Western Carolina Invitational that includes Catawba, Mars Hill, UNC-Wilmington, UNC-Charlotte.

"There are some top state Division II teams that are going to be there," Dillon remarked.

Dillon said that teams will be divided into two groups, and the top two teams will play each other in a double-elimination tournament Sunday.

Publication Names Both Riley, Wright Honorable Mention

Two East Carolina basketball players have been awarded honors by Basketball Weekly, one of the leading cage publications in the nation.

Kathy Riley, a senior member of the sensational Lady Pirate basketball squad, received honorable mention on the publication's women's All-America team.

Riley led the Lady Bucs in scoring this past season, averaging over 19 points per contest, and was a unanimous all-state selection. She finished second in state player-of-the-year voting behind N.C. State's Trudi Lacey.

Receiving honorable mention for Basketball Weekly's freshman All-America team was ECU's Barry Wright.

The Portsmouth, Va. native was the team's second leading scorer as a frosh, averaging 10.3 points per game.

Perhaps the highlight of Wright's season was his fallaway jumper at the buzzer that beat UNC-Charlotte. His biggest point output came in the team's next-to-last game against Richmond when he tallied 25 in a 67-65 Pirate win.

Nieman Battles Out Of Brother's Long Shadow

By BOB BENSON
Special To The East Carolinian

Ever wonder if Billy Carter, before all the political controversy arose, was always introduced as Jimmy Carter's brother, or if professional pitcher Jim Perry was always introduced as the great Gaylord Perry's brother? The same situation once plagued one of East Carolina University's top swimmers, Doug Nieman.

In 1978 Doug Nieman enrolled at East Carolina University to pursue a degree in business education and to compete among some top Division I swimmers.

Two years before Doug came to ECU, Doug's older brother, Ted Nieman, was setting varsity swimming records at ECU. By the end of Ted Nieman's freshman year he had set three varsity records (200, 500, 1650 yard freestyle) and qualified for the National Collegiate Athletic Association's national championships in the 200-yard freestyle.

How does someone, especially a brother, follow an act like that? One would figure Doug Nieman to be cast away in the wake of his brother.

"At first it was always 'Hey everybody this is Ted's brother', but it really didn't bother me that much because of all the people I met through Ted," said Nieman.

Outside of the pool Ted might not have bothered Doug's performance, but in the pool Ted did create problems for younger brother Doug.

"Up until this year my times were not that great," admitted Nieman. "But now that Ted is gone, my times seem to be dropping."

Doug now feels he can settle down and work for some good times. "There is always that competition between brothers," admitted Nieman. "But Ted has always been a more 'go out and get em' type guy."

According to East Carolina head swim coach Ray Scharf, "Doug is really bearing down and setting some goals for himself."

"Doug has made vast improvements over the years which proved his goal settings."

Doug's biggest goal this year is to make the NCAA national cutoff times. In order to make these times, Doug must shave a full nine seconds off his 400-yard individual medley time.

"I have confidence in myself and I think since the team has been resting for a week I'll have a good chance to make the NCAA cutoff times."

Nine seconds is not a lot of time to drop, according to Nieman, especially in the longer swimming events.

"A lot of people don't understand about swimming times," he explained. "For a guy to drop a second of even a tenth of a second in a sprinting event is nearly impossible, but to drop a second or even a tenth of a second in a sprinting event is nearly impossible, but to drop nine seconds in the 400-yard individual medley is not that difficult."

Now that Doug Nieman is starting to shine as a collegiate swimmer, he looks back at the hard work he has put into swimming. "I have to give a lot of the credit to both my high school coach and my parents. They are the ones that really pushed me when I needed it."

According to Nieman, his times were not that fast when he was coming up the ranks. "I can remember when my brother and some of the ECU swim team members came to Clearwater, Florida (Nieman's hometown) to workout one summer," he said. "I didn't do too badly, but those guys were really fast."

While Doug was still in the high school ranks, he swam for the Amature Athletic Union-affiliated Blue Dolphins out of Clearwater.

"My times were not that great when I swam with the Dolphins," he claimed. "My times stayed the same for about four years."

Nieman did, in fact, capture a few titles while with the Dolphins, but nothing too spectacular.

According to Scharf, Doug is East Carolina's best all-around swimmer.

"I wish all the kids were like him," explained Scharf. "He makes coaching enjoyable. I know Doug will get even better next year. It's just in his blood to be a great swimmer."

PRE-MED?

Current undergraduate pre-medical students may now compete for several hundred Air Force scholarships. These scholarships are to be awarded to students accepted into medical schools as freshmen or at the beginning of their sophomore year. The scholarship provides for tuition, books, lab fees and equipment, plus a $400 monthly allowance. Investigate this financial alternative to the high cost of medical education.

Track Team On Road To Success

PERFORMANCE
Assistant Sports Editor

If last weekend's performance in the Domino's Pizza Sunshine Relays is an indication of the type of outdoor track season the Pirates will have, then it should be a great one.

That is, says Coach Bill Carson, if the team stays healthy.

The Bucs' 4 X 200 meter relay team of Tim Cephus, Carlton

Frazier, Keith Clarke and Clint Harris captured first place with a time of 1:25.53 to edge out Indiana.

The Pirates also came away with a third place finish in the 4 X 100 and captured fourth in the mile relay.

The competition opened the outdoor track season for the Pirates.

"Our freshman performed well at the meet," Carson said. "As for the mile relay,

I think we can run a 3:06." The Bucs ran 3:11.53 in Florida.

This season the Bucs will run only in the sprints and relays. The key for success, says Carson is whether the team can stay healthy.

"After that first meet, we're not very healthy," Carson said.

Tim Cephus came away from Florida bothered by a trick knee, and teammate Charlie Watkins pulled a hamstring.

"We will get better," Carson continued. "We could break all four school relay records."

In the 100, the Pirates will be depending on freshman speedster Clint Harris, whom Carson said has outstanding talent and was very consistent.

Harris, Carson said, will also run the 200 along with teammate Tim Cephus.

All-American Carlton Bell will head the 400 that includes Carlton Frazier, Clarke and Craig Rainey.

Carson hopes Miller can turn in at least a 1:48.

The Pirates head south again this weekend to compete in the Florida Relays where Carson said the competition should be "outstanding."

"Hopefully," Carson said, "as the weather gets warmer, our injuries will get better."

Aliens Fall To Loop Leaders

Club Sport Review

BY TIM WILLIAMS

North Carolina Soccer League

The American Defender Soccer Club ran its Division-leading record to 5-0 Sunday with a 3-0 victory over the Stroh's Aliens.

The Defender's tallied once in the first half on a goal by Chip Baker off a corner kick by Mike Lawrence. In the second half, Brian Winchell booted in a goal from a pass by Shawn Berry.

Berry scored the last goal on a well-hit shot from 30 yards out. The Defenders played N.C. Wesleyan in Rocky Mount today and will play the Kick Soccer Club in Wilson on Sunday.

The Stroh's Aliens are having a very important team meeting Thursday at the FCU soccer field at 5:00 p.m.

second-place finish Sunday against Atlantic Christian College, University of South Carolina, Coastal Carolina and UNC-Wilmington, who won the event.

In the National Scholastic Surfing Association sponsored event, Wes Tilghman and Chuck Uzzell advanced to the semifinals for FCU. The waves for the meet were termed very poor and hard to catch.

Women's Soccer

The Women's Soccer Club had their first match Sunday against the Camp Lejeune Soccer Club and lost by a 3-1 score. Dale West tallied the only goal. The girls play UNC-Wilmington this Saturday in Wilmington.

margin. The B team came away with a 7-0 victory to even out the won-loss record for the day. This Saturday there is a home match against the Ft. Bragg Rugby Club at 2 p.m. on the Allied Health Fields.

Tennis Team Whips Campbell, Then Falls

BY TIM WILLIAMS

The ECU Men's Tennis team beat Campbell Tuesday by a 6-3 margin, but lost Wednesday to a tough Guilford team, 9-0.

Against the Camels, the Pirates took five of six singles matches to lock up the contest early. The team of Norman Bryant and Ted Lepper also won their doubles match.

Singles winners were Keith Zengel, Barry Parker, Mark Byrd, Steve Petterson and Lepper.

The netters record presently stands at 6-2. There is a home match Friday at 2 p.m. against Amherst at the courts behind Minges.
