TKE fraternity house was condemned after it was damaged by an early morning fire last month. Advisor to the fraternity Charles Blake said that repairs may get under way soon. The fraternity did not have fire insurance.

TKE House To Begin Repairs

By PATRICK O'NEILL
Staff Writer

Assistant to the Chancellor Charles R. Blake said he expects renovation to begin soon on the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity house that was seriously damaged in an early morning fire Jan. 8.

Blake, who is faculty advisor to the ECU TKE organization, told The East Carolinian that several estimates on the cost of repairing the damage have been received and an effort is underway to secure a construction loan to pay for the repairs.

However, Blake said he feels certain that the house will be available for occupation sometime in mid-

March. Currently the TKE building has been condemned by Greenville City Building officials.

Because of a series of errors that Blake said were not the fault of any one individual, the fire insurance on the TKE house was allowed to lapse, resulting in no coverage for the recent damages. Blake said sufficient collateral would be needed to secure a renovation loan.

According to Blake, much of the help the TKE's are receiving is coming from TKE alumni members. "They're (alumni members) very helpful with their moral support, time and energy and financial support," Blake said.

Blake indicated the TKE's would probably be seeking financial assistance from the family of Paul Rose Harwin. Harwin, one of the founding members of the ECU-TKE chapter, died shortly after the chapter was formed in 1968.

At present, Blake said there are between 10 and 12 TKE alumni members who are involved in the efforts to aid the ECU chapter. He said that 180 TKE alumni nationwide were offering their assistance in the effort. "We get calls offering support every day," Blake said.

Originally it had been reported that a representative from the TKE national headquarters in Indiana would be visiting Greenville to consult with the local chapter on several matters. However, according to TKE national spokesman Gary Eperson, the trip would not be necessary because the situation was being handled well by Blake and other local officials.

"We're extremely pleased with the attitude of the chapter and the alumni," Eperson said. "We are looking forward to getting the house fixed up and just resuming normal operations again."

Both Blake and Eperson have been in regular contact with each other on the situation. Eperson said the national fraternity is willing to provide whatever type of assistance it can, such as advice and counseling relative to the renovation.

Alcohol Use Levels Off Across Country

By GREG RIDEOUT
News Editor

The number of students who drink alcohol — estimated at 82 percent of the approximately 12 million college students nationwide — may have leveled off for the first time since the 1950s.

The study, coauthored by State University of New York sociology professor David Hanson and Indiana University health and safety professor Ruth Eng, found that side effects due to heavy drinking has also leveled off.

ECU's drinking population, 87 percent of students faculty and staff, is following the same trend, according to the director of the campus alcohol training program Jerry Lotterhos.

Lotterhos' facts are based on a study done by an alcohol task force at ECU in 1980.

The Engs and Hanson study is the first nationwide study of college drinkers. The research used the responses of more than 5000 students in 50 states. Their study shows that problems associated with alcohol abuse, such as fighting, lateness to class and damage to university property, are also leveling off.

Nationwide, 18.4 percent of the student population have missed classes because of a hangover; at ECU approximately 30 percent of the students have missed at least one class due to drinking.

Hanson believes part of the reason for the leveling-off might be because students are substituting other drugs, such as marijuana, in place of drinking, and ECU's Lotterhos tends to agree.

In the national survey students who reported driving a car while drinking has increased to over 45 percent. ECU students reported a driving-while-drinking rate of over 50 percent, with juniors topping out the list at 60.3 percent.

Lotterhos said, for the most part, the nationwide data is typical of ECU's drinking patterns.

Among other findings of the Hanson and Eng study: white students drink more than black, religious students drink less and students with a low GPA are more likely to drink heavily.

Even though, as the study suggests, student drinking is leveling off, college officials still have to contend with the problems related to campus alcohol abuse. Accidents, vandalism and other crimes have caused many campuses to institute get-tough policies on drinking.

ECU's Department of Public Safety has taken measures to curb drunken driving on campuses. Although, according to some officers, the rate is driving under the influence has gone down because of today's students use of other drugs.

Educators Cautious

Reagan's Aid Plan Considered

(CPS) — College lobbyists in Washington say they like President Reagan's proposal for a new education tax savings plan, but are withholding support of it until they hear the details.

"I think the principle the government is putting forward here is extremely positive," says Bob Aaron, spokesman for the American Council on Education and a leader in the lobbying effort last year that helped defeat the president's proposed financial aid cuts.

But Aaron says much depends on how the principle is put into effect.

The "principle" is something called the Individual Education Account (IEA), which would be similar to the Individual Retirement Account (IRA).

Under the plan, parents could put away a certain amount of money — say, $2000 a year toward their child's college education and deduct the amount from their total taxable income. Consequently, the parents pay less in taxes each year by saving toward college.

The money stays in the account, earning a high interest, until the dependent starts college. As the money is withdrawn, the parents reportedly would be taxed on the interest earned, but not on the amount they originally deposited.

The tentative plan was leaked to the press two weeks before President Reagan was due to publish his proposed budget, which would include the IRA if Reagan ultimately decides to adopt it.

One college lobbyist labeled it "a trial balloon" to "see if it would be palatable to replace the federal capital contributions to the National Direct Student Loan program, the State Student Incentive Grants and the Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant."

Indeed, most of the lobbyists questioned said they'd support the idea if it wasn't used to replace other forms of federal student aid.

"If the IEA would be a replacement for need-based aid we would not support it," Aaron said. "If it is a supplement to need-based aid, we would support it."

"Until we really see the budget package as a whole, we don't know how to react," adds Dennis Martin of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

"If I were king, as it were, I would hope it would not take away from any existing student aid," he said.

"If this is being proposed in place of a number of existing funds," observes William Laidlaw of the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, "I would not be in favor of it."

Laidlaw also wants to see the plan's details before supporting it. He wanted to know in particular how much the money in the account would be taxed when it is withdrawn.

"If you take a tax bite out of it when you're ready to use it, you would kill it," he asserts.

Details of the plan won't be available for the time being, says Duncan Helmrich, U.S. Department of Education spokesman. "Someone around here is working on it, but we don't have anything to release yet."

Even before it is released, the lobbyists' major criticism of the tax savings principle is that it benefits only wealthier families.

The tax break, Martin says, "works only to the extent that you have a meaningfully large income. You can't save money you don't have."

"A family of four making $12,000 a year is not going to be able to sock away $2000 a year for a college education," Aaron adds. "These (incentives) do not help the intellectually-talented children who are in the ghetto."

Aaron speculates that in the year 2001 "we will look back on this proposal and find the average family taking advantage of it had an income of $40,000."

It may take that long for the real benefits of the savings plan to appear, according to Martin. "We're talking about assistance that will come a generation from now. It does not speak to the needs of the students now."

Registration Resister Ford Stresses Sign Up Is Only One Step To Draft

Draft Registration resister Russell Ford spoke before several hundred ECU students Wednesday during seven public appearances on campus. Ford is the first person to be sent to prison for draft resistance since the Vietnam War.

The Wesleyan College undergraduate began his rigorous day at 9 a.m. and didn't finish his campus visit until after 9 p.m., when his final appearance in Mendenhall coffee shop ended.

Ford, 19, is one of 13 men indicted by the federal government for refusing to comply with the new registration law enacted during the Carter administration.

Ford, who is currently out on bail from Connecticut Federal Court, said there are between 500,000 and 1 million men who have not registered. Ford could face up to five years in prison and/or a $10,000 fine.

Like the other dozen inditees, Ford was open and vocal to government officials regarding his non-compliance with the law. Upon reaching his 18th birthday, Ford sent letters informing President Reagan, the Selective Service System and several other government officials of his intentions to not register. Failure to register for the draft is a felony.

During his campus talks, Ford told students that the federal government was using draft registration as a "trial balloon" to test the public response to the idea. Ford warned that a lack of opposition would be giving a greenlight to a full draft.

"Selective Service Registration is a trial balloon," Ford said. "The government wants to see if their program will be successful."

If successful, Ford believes the government will not only resume a full draft, but also use soldiers in a "Vietnam-like interventionist war in Latin America or the Middle East."

"Registration is part of the government's militarization of the United States," Ford added. He warned students that it would be their "classmates, friends and neighbors" who would be called on to fight in such a war.

Student response to Ford was mixed with an equal amount of students showing sympathy and disapproval with Ford's position. One English instructor who invited Ford to speak in his class noted that several of the students disagreed with Ford's position, but that

WZMB Celebrates Anniversary

By STEVE DEAR
Staff Writer

Yesterday marked the first anniversary of the broadcasting life of WZMB — and the students at the station are proud of what they have accomplished over the past year.

WZMB General Manager Warren Baker and Programming Director Jim Ensorman told The East Carolinian that the station's first year of broadcasting with what they call "an alternative concept to radio" was more successful than they had anticipated. "We've got a lot better station than anyone thought we would have," Ensorman said.

It had been a four-year struggle before the station finally went on the air last year. From the time in April 1978 when John Jeter, then the General Manager at WECU-AM

(which had suffered from unrepairable technical problems and eventually went under), first proposed what was to become the format of WZMB-FM on the morning of Feb. 2, 1982, when it began its first radio broadcast, the station has had many problems.

Equipment holdups, personnel changes, license mixups, transmitter problems and troubles with signal tuning were only a few of the problems that plagued the station's first four years.

Now those problems seem to be all over for the station. Baker and Ensorman said that most of the listeners' responses to the station's "album-oriented rock" programming, along with several different music programs, have been very favorable.

The station now presents a wide variety of feature, album-rock programs. These include: "The Electric Rainbow Radio Show," featuring heavy-metal rock from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Friday and from 12 a.m. to 6 a.m. on Sunday morning; "Adventures in Modern Recording," at 11 p.m. on Thursday in which selections from rock albums are reviewed; "Ennerveiw" (that's with an "E"), a program at 8 p.m. on Wednesday in which locally- and nationally-known rock bands are interviewed and "Forgotten Songs and Unsung Heroes" (the name speaks for itself) from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday. The station also plays songs by feature artists everyday from 9 a.m.

Wet Ground Hog Day

The Greenville ground hog probably stayed in his burrow yesterday as gusty winds and scattered showers made the day a little unpleasant to some. Mild temperatures continued Down East, however, to make the rain more endurable.

 on Saturday and Sunday night; and, a contemporary gospel music program from 6 a.m. to 9 a.m. on Sundays.
 Baker and Ensorman said that WZMB's news department has developed very much over the last year. The station now presents news programs eight times each day and in the future will present a news and public affairs program called "One Moment Please."

 Additional programs include "Tennis Shoe Talk Show" on Tuesday and Thursday at 2:30 p.m. when ECU intramurals are discussed. Also, a show featuring National Lampoon comedy albums is presented immediately after

"Ennerview" on Wednesday.
 During the last year WZMB has increased its staff from 30 to 50 members. All but five members of the staff are volunteer students.
 Baker and Ensorman told The East Carolinian that they strongly wish that the disc jockeys received payment. Baker suggested that they at least receive the minimum wage for the hours they are on the air. They added that with paid disc jockeys the station might be able to broadcast over vacations during the school year. The station does not broadcast during the regular vacations (when most of the students are not in Greenville). Baker said that the station received a number of complaints from listeners in Greenville because it did not broadcast during Christmas vacation.

 However, during both summer sessions last year WZMB did broadcast. Baker described the station's ability to broadcast then as "a monumental task."
 Baker and Ensorman said that the station does take suggestions and requests from its listeners. They stressed that WZMB is both a campus and community station. "Although the students come first," Baker said.

Throughout February WZMB will be celebrating its first anniversary by offering its listeners a variety of gifts (from grants donated by local businesses) and concerts at The Attic with little or no admission charge. Some of the gifts which will be given away this month are: T-shirts, albums, dinner coupons, and roses for Valentine's Day.

Morals Limit Job Choices

An ECU computer science student claiming that she cannot conscientiously work for any company or corporation that is contributing to the "proliferation of destruction" of the earth has written letters to several North Carolina peace organizations and Catholic church officials explaining her plight and asking their assistance in finding her a job.
 Mary Rider, 22, said that as a computer science major with an accounting minor, the road to her career is "pretty well paved; get a job with big business or the military and work my way up."
 "The problem is that conscientiously I can't go to work every day knowing that I'm helping to make our world a more dangerous place to be."
 Rider wrote letters to several Catholic priests including F. Joseph Gossman, the Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Raleigh and former ECU Catholic chaplain Father Charles Mulholland, who now lives in Cary, N.C., and directs the state chapter of Pax Christi, an inter-faith Catholic peace organization.

 In her letters, Rider described her dilemma with the question, "Where and how can I use my degree to work for peace and the betterment of our planet?"
 "I can not in good conscience go to work for a multi-national corporation that exploits the people of South America, Africa, the United States or anywhere else," Rider wrote. "Neither can I go to work for one which builds weapons or anything else that would be used for the destruction of my brothers and sisters and our world. This limits me greatly."
 Rider said that she had been struggling with this predicament for years and was hoping that some of the individuals and organizations she wrote to could help her find a solu-renovation was available through national headquarters. The ECU-TKE fraternity can apply for such aid if they desired. The national TKE board of directors would make the final decision on the loan.

 Blake said that although they had not ruled out the possibility of applying for the national loan, they might apply for a loan through a local bank because they wanted to incorporate the renovation loan into a complete new mortgage.
 Eperson said that an annual visit by the national organization to the local chapter would probably take place in March or April. There are approximately 350 chapters of the TKE fraternity nationwide.

 Blake added that he was working with the ECU TKE's on what he called "an extensive examination" of the policies and procedures of management being used by the fraternity. He said he would pay particular attention to finances.

NCAA Upgrade

New Importance For Academics

The NCAA's recent controversial upgrade in academic standards has brought with it not only the expected patent disapproval of several of the nation's black leaders but has also raised several questions about the feasibility and fairness of college entrance testing itself. Once again, the tides shift.

Critics have long condemned the Scholastic Aptitude Tests (SAT) for being "culturally-biased" in favor of white students, a problem some black leaders claim is evidenced by recent testing figures. In 1981, for example, 56 percent of all blacks who took the SAT scored under 700 (the NCAA's proposed minimum admissible score); in that same year, whites averaged 927 in combined math/verbal scores.

Perhaps the black leaders have a point; perhaps the method of standardized testing in the U.S. does not lend itself to an accurate estimate as to how a prospective student will fare in college. In fact, no standardized examination can ever be wholly and completely fair.

Thus, the black leaders decided at an opposition meeting called by Southern University President Jesse Stone in January to reassess their attack, which was originally aimed directly at the NCAA's revisions. Apparently, several of the leaders realized the futility of fighting the NCAA head on about the academics issue. Hence, they decided to restructure their own battle, attacking instead a system wholly unrelated to athletics. Despite their aiming the fight at the base of the problem, it almost seems they're trying to divert attention from the major issue at hand. Perhaps they don't have all the answers after all.

And wouldn't it seem just a bit strange if a group of black leaders — if, indeed, they take the title seriously — should condemn an upgrade in academic standards in NCAA schools? Think about it.

For too many years, the collegiate black athlete in the United States has been consistently exploited beyond shame. Consider the plight of the "average" black collegiate athlete (if there is such a thing) in recent years: Playing out his or her eligibility — and in the meantime, making money for the university — these students have all too often (but, by no means, always) been simply forgotten when the scholarships expire. What it all boils down to is that athletes are characteristically pampered for four years; they're encouraged — maybe not directly and definitely not at all schools — to downplay academics and to concentrate on sports.

So, at the end of four years, scholarships terminate, and where is the average minority athlete? Well, according to statistics, he's out in the cold — "not good enough" to make the pros and not educated enough to find a fulfilling job on the outside.

Along with the other black university presidents, Stone has called the NCAA's rule changes "patent racism," because, in his estimation, they will have the effect of barring many blacks from intercollegiate sports. Apparently then, Stone is a proponent of the status quo; apparently, he'd rather see the current practices of exploitation and subsequent trauma continue.

Indeed, it is time the NCAA put into practice the theory it has long preached. Academics must play a more important role in the life of a student/athlete if the all-too-familiar practice of cranking out mere four-year sports investments is ever to be eradicated.

Consider This...

Two hundred and sixty-seven years ago, on this date in history, it was February 3, 1716, and contrary to popular belief, Ronald Reagan wasn't yet born.

Central America On Edge As Reagan Recertifies U.S. Aid

By PAT O'NEILL

On Jan. 21, President Reagan, through the state department, certified for the third time that El Salvador should continue to receive U.S. military aid.

According to the Reagan administration, the government of El Salvador, despite "great obstacles," is making progress on human rights. In a 67-page document sent to Congress, Reagan also said El Salvador was laying the foundation for a democratic government.

Because of El Salvador's dismal record on human rights, the state department is required to give such certification on progress in human, political and economic rights every six months as a condition for continuing sending aid.

Three times, Reagan has supported the re-certification of El Salvador, and on each occasion, reputable human rights organizations throughout the world have issued statements of shock and disbelief.

Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, called the re-certification an "outrage." Several hundred protesters, including 10 from ECU, went to the state department on Jan. 24 under the banner: "We are saying 'No' to the lie of certification in El Salvador" and " 'No' to U.S. war movers in Central America."

The state department protesters issued a statement of their own: "While Reagan presents this facade of concern for human rights to North America, the people of Central America see a very different face of U.S. policy — genocide in Guatemala, not-so-covert war in Nicaragua, intensive militarization of Honduras, scorched-earth counter-insurgency in El Salvador."

For the most part, Reagan supported his human rights improvement claims by using the "body-count method." The administration claimed that "only" 5,840 El Salvadorans were killed last year through political violence. Human rights groups put the figure at well over 10,000. The administration's death counts were based almost exclusively on newspaper accounts of the killings... reported by the government-controlled press.

The policies of the United States in Central America are disgusting. Our military aid to El Salvador is being used by the military to kill thousands of innocent people. In Nicaragua, not-so-covert support of the former followers of Somoza is being used to destroy a decent government. Our military activities in Honduras, which borders Nicaragua, are expected to be used in the destabilization of their neighbors. Guatemala, like El Salvador, is another case of U.S. support of a murderous regime.

Of course, all U.S. policies are justified by the clarion call to prevent communism — at all costs — from swallowing up Central America. All Americans decry Soviet intervention in Poland and Afghanistan, yet U.S. activities in Central America, which are just a dead weight, are not subjected to the same scrutiny.

All Americans should be concerned about the injustices of our activities in Central America, especially college students, because if push comes to shove down there, it will be you who will be ordered to fight an interventionist war in the region. It's no coincidence that Reagan has continued registration for the draft. He's got a plan, and anyone who doesn't want to be part of it better begin to resist now by saying "No" to the U.S. war moves in Central America.

Independent Truckers Strike

Not A Viable Alternative

By MIKE HUGHES

Although it is still a relatively modern form of showing dissent to one degree or another, the workers' strike in the United States and abroad has become the most widely-used symbol of labor dissatisfaction in the 20th century.

In theory, a strike, a shutdown, or "walk-off," as it is equally commonly referred to, is generally intended to illustrate two things: dissatisfaction over working conditions and solidarity of union members.

Unfortunately, in many strikes, unification never seems to rise above the theoretical stage; those goals which are thought by some to be "common" among all union members and parties concerned, turn out to be the fledgling ideas, the whims, of only a few.

Such a "devout" exhibition of solidarity has become evident in the past few days. The loosely-organized national independent truckers strike, which entered its second day Tuesday, has been marred by several incidents of senseless violence and bloodshed. And for George Franklin Capps, a truck-driver from Selma, the strike exacted a most costly toll. A sniper's bullet, undoubtedly aimed from the gun of a disgruntled Independent Trucker, found its mark late Monday night. Capps was pronounced dead shortly after 11 p.m.

Shortly after the killing, two other truckers traveling U.S. 701 were also fired on, only nine miles from the site of Capps' murder. Another North Carolina man was injured early Tuesday near Baltimore, when a sniper's bullet struck just behind his head, shattering glass.

As of Wednesday, random shootings nationwide had resulted in 23 injuries among independent truckers and had damaged 250 rigs.

Subsequently, many non-striking truckers in Eastern North Carolina and nationwide are arming themselves, traveling in convoys of two or more and avoiding driving at night.

Although state and national officials claim they understand the complexities and seriousness of the situation, it is questionable whether or not they actually realize the far-reaching effects, the absolute perils, which lay just around the corner. In fact, the newborn "controversy" is fast growing into a veritable war, with the same senselessness, the same implications as a war.

The strike, called by the 30,000-member Independent Truckers Association, is the latest action by the organization protesting the recently enacted increases in trucking fees and gasoline taxes. But despite its national implications, it has been sanctioned by neither the Teamsters union nor a goodly portion of the Independent Truckers Association's own membership. Nevertheless, it goes on — toward what end isn't exactly clear — but it goes on.

Ever the "objective bystanders," state investigators maintain they have not yet determined whether these incidents are related to the controversial strike. Well, if that's not the case, then who in the hell else do they think would be responsible? It seems highly unlikely that hundreds of similar violent incidents around the country are mere acts of random discontent, having no connection whatsoever with the strike... Highly unlikely.

It is also unlikely that we have seen the worst of the strike. Undoubtedly, the violence will continue until an "agreeable" solution is reached. No shortage of goods has yet been seen by wholesalers or consumers, but analysts agree that shortages could ensue if the strike persists.

And in the meantime, those truckers courageous enough to rise above the fruitless protests — those who merely pursue making a living — will continue to be subjected to the violent harassment which has marked the controversy's first few days.

What's more, spokesmen for the Independent Truckers Association also appear to have delusions of grandeur insofar as supposed outside support. Bennett Whitlock, president of the American Trucking Association, has already called for an end to the violence and has condemned the strike as the work of "a few ill-advised and frustrated individuals."

But the delinquent truckers, intent on "proving their point" (whatever their "point" is), appear to have no intention of listening to reason. They have been assured repeatedly by Whitlock and other union officials that the ATA will take every necessary action to have truck fees reduced during this session of Congress.

Unfortunately, they want immediate action. And if they're not satisfied with outside efforts to reduce trucking fees and gas taxes, they've already made it more than obvious that they're ready and willing to take the initiative.

Campus Forum

Parking Poses 'Lots' Of Problems

I am writing this letter on behalf of many fellow students who are pursuing an education, especially in the fields of social sciences, nursing and medicine. Each one of these fields requires many hours of research at the Health Sciences Library. The new library is an excellent educational facility. But there is a definite parking problem at the library. As of late, the East Carolina campus police have started placing little pink stickers on cars if they are parked in "undesignated areas," with a fine of $12.00! I wish someone would pray tell me where a student can park! My car is not registered with the university since I live off campus. I am also an employee of Pitt County Memorial Hospital; therefore, I have a red hospital sticker. I cannot park my car at the hospital since I am not working while visiting the library, and the hospital also has a shortage of parking spaces. What I would like to say is that if students or faculty are to use the library, then they should have ample space to park.

I have always heard that a library was designed to aid a student. When you have to worry about your car being ticketed, how can you concentrate on your studies? Not only that, but what about the safety of the parking areas? The students have a parking lot across the street from the hospital which has a sign that reads: NO PARKING AFTER 5:00 P.M. If this is true, where do students park at night? How safe is it for a woman to be out alone in the dark walking to a poorly lit parking lot? The campus police have some good points though. They tell young women to go in pairs at night. Well, even if you can drag someone with you to the library, it still is not safe. What is so interesting to me is where are the campus police when they are needed? They are always available to ticket your car. But if you are being attacked by someone, you cannot find an officer for miles around.

I don't know what can be done about this. But it still remains a major problem. The main solution I have figured out is to turn the visitors parking lot into a visitors of the library parking lot; therefore, anyone who wishes to use the library can. There are two reasons for selecting this solution: (1) There is no reason to have to buy a university parking sticker if you are an off-campus student. (2) How many visitors come to the Brody Building at night when students need to use the library and its many fine sources?

Thank you for the extra worries you are causing all of us who are continuing our education.

Hoop Etiquette

Having read Randy Mizelle's letter in Tuesday's East Carolinian regarding Coach Andruzzi's appeal for respect from our fans, I would like to throw some new light on the idea of "fan participation" and "home court advantage."

Fan participation is an absolute must for a truly successful athletic program, and I am sure Coach Andruzzi would like to see a good deal of it. There is just nothing like the support of one's fans to inspire an athlete's performance. But as a former high school cheerleading sponsor, I instructed my squad to cheer for us, not against the other team. In other words, I refused their use of negative cheers like the old ire-provoking "Look at the scoreboard — see who's behind," and I forbade the leading of cheers during foul shots. Such actions as those constitute rudeness, not fan participation. Ideally, a player should be allowed to shoot a foul shot in silence, giving him (or her) the respect that Coach Andruzzi was calling for.

Furthermore, the home crowd advantage means that our crowd is here to urge our team on as it plays on its own familiar surface. The term has nothing to do with having enough fans present to add a foul shooter or yell rude remarks to opposing team members.

What this all boils down to is that Coach Andruzzi was asking for sportsmanlike conduct from our fans. Let's show our teams our enthusiasm, but let's aim that enthusiasm in the right direction, offering opposing teams the atmosphere of respect and good sportsmanship that we in turn hope to receive at their courts.

Leaders Shun Standard Exams

(CPS) — Black college presidents' opposition to the National Collegiate Athletic Association's new, tougher academic standards for athletes may soon broaden into a general attack on standardized tests, black leaders at a special meeting at Southern University last week warned.

overall it was a good debate because both sides were open-minded.

During an afternoon criminology class Ford was asked several questions regarding his five week federal prison sentence last summer. He said most inmates were sympathetic with his plight.

Ford made several points on the similarity between his plight and that of the early supporters of the slavery abolitionist movement. He said that those opposed to slavery were scorned and considered "downright un-American" for their positions, but later history proved them to be right in their beliefs.

Ford, who arrived in Greenville on Monday, is here at the invitation of the Greenville Peace Committee. He has also spoke at several local schools and held several press conferences.

"We have not fought hard enough against standardized tests," Southern President Jesse Stone told the press after the meeting. "This thing opens up a real Pandora's box."

Standardized tests like the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) and the ACT (American College Testing exam) can't predict accurately how the student is going to do in college, Stone added.

Stone led the opposition at the NCAA's convention in early January to new rules that will require athletes to maintain a 2.0 gpa in a variety of science and language courses and to have at least a 700 on their SATs or a 15 on their ACTs in order to be eligible to compete in intercollegiate sports.

Stone called the new rules "patent racism" because they would have the effect of barring many blacks from intercollegiate sports.

To press his charge, Stone called the meeting of 20 black movement leaders last week. But the leaders decided to go after standardized testing itself rather than the NCAA at least for the moment.

In a statement released just after the meeting, Educational Testing Service President Gregory Anrig agreed standardized tests shouldn't be used to determine academic eligibility.

"The proposed use of a fixed cutoff score on nationally standardized admissions tests will have effects that may not have been fully realized before this decision was reached," he wrote.

In using the tests as factors in admissions, different schools use different cutoffs.

In addition, Anrig noted that 56 percent of all the blacks who took the SAT in 1981 scored under 700.

Anrig agreed the "issue cuts across racial lines" because white students' average score in 1981 was 927.

Critics have long criticized the SATs for being culturally-biased in favor of white students. Stone says his group will first try to mobilize the black community to help him publicize those biases.

King's Mystique Coretta Spreads The Word

By PATRICK O'NEILL
Staff Writer

"When we allow freedom to ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will be able to speed up that day when all God's children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual: 'Free at last, Free at last, Thank God Almighty, we are free at last.'"

Martin Luther King, Jr. has been dead for almost 15 years. Despite his short life, King left an impact on United States history that will never die.

Besides his famous speeches and several books on the subjects of equality, justice and non-violence, King's message is being kept alive by the people who struggled with him in the movement for civil rights, a movement still in its embryonic stages. Coretta Scott King, wife of the slain "prophet" is one of the people who keeps this movement alive today. Though she doesn't possess the oratorical skills of her husband, Mrs. King has emerged as perhaps the most well-known black woman in the world.

She visited East Carolina this Monday and as is most often the case, the house was packed with standing room only accommodations. Standing ovations capped both ends of her lecture with two more in between.

In 1969 she founded the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, INC. in Atlanta, Georgia. Since that time King has traveled around the world trying to keep the "dream" alive.

The King Center is a living memorial to the late Dr. King reserving the legacy of what the civil rights movement accomplished under his leadership, while at the same time serving as a focal point for continuing the non-violent campaign for social political and economic justice throughout the world. Under her direct leadership, the Center promotes the concept of non-violence through seminars, workshops and institutions for teachers, community leaders and government officials.

During her lecture King praised her husband for the leadership he gave to the movement for "Justice, Brotherhood and Equality." King, was dressed in a finely tailored black outfit and seemed to show few visible effects that she had aged much in her 20 plus years of activism.

Words like "unity, togetherness and solidarity" were repeated many times to her standing room only audience which seemed to be equally filled with both young and older faces. There was, however, a noticeable lack of white faces. She spoke of poverty, racism, and war and violence as the "triple evils" in our world today, war being the "ultimate violence." "These issues effect people universally," she commented.

King also mentioned that the struggles for freedom and peace were particularly difficult ones for people living in the third world countries. She particularly mentioned nations which she said were struggling for their own self determination. King also spoke of the struggle for equality that blacks are facing in South Africa. She quoted her husband as saying that Johannesburg, South Africa was the most segregated city in the world. "Johannesberg is still segregated," King said. "But the system of apartheid in South Africa is not as strong as it once was."

King saved her strongest comments when recalling the struggle that black Americans made during the US civil rights movement.

King referred to the movement that was largely led by her husband as "a movement that changed the course of the history of this nation." She quoted her husband's comment that Birmingham, Alabama is the second most segregated city in the world.

Birmingham was one of the places where it all began. Citizens there, under the leadership of King, banded together for over a year in the successful effort to stop segregation on city buses. "they refused to ride segregated buses for 381 days," King said, "they were as determined to keep us in bondage as we were determined to be free."

King also recalled the actions of four college students in Greensboro, North Carolina, who in 1960 gained national attention by sitting at a segregated lunch counter. "nobody ever heard of Rosa Parks until she sat down," King said in another reference to a famous civil rights activist who sat down in the front of a segregated bus. "She sat down and freedom fighters everywhere stood up."

King spent a great deal of her lecture time promoting three things: the recently released movie about th life of Mahatma Gandhi called Ghandi; the activities and work of the Martin Luther King Center, and the next major event that the center is sponsoring which is the 20th anniversary celebration of the famous "March on Washington" which took place on August 28, 1963.

King referred to the 20th anniversary event as the "I have a dream celebration." She encouraged everyone who is concerned about the problems of unemployment, poverty and racism to attend the event.

Minimum Daily Requirements New Books Easy To Swallow

By EMILY CASEY

Encounters With the Future: A Forecast of Life in the 21st Century, by Marvin Cetron and Thomas O'Toole, McGraw-Hill (1982), 308 pp., $12.95.

The Metaphors of Consciousness, ed. by Ronald Valle and Rolf von Eckertberg, Plenum (1981), 521 pp., $25.

The first book is a sweet sweet cake with cherries in it. The second is cake too — a delicious, nutritious cheesecake, to be eaten and digested joyfully a wedge at a time.

Cetron, president of Forecasting International, presumably furnished data and conclusions to journalist O'Toole. O'Toole then put together a fascinating read. This review concerns the content not the style.

Cetron has three fairly rare strengths. He goes out on limbs. He is concrete. He puts together plausible international scenarios. Join these virtues with his insistence on validating exhaustive computer studies by checking with top experts, and you get a lot from the horses' mouths. Chapter 4, daring to consider the survival of nations, is particularly good for its stability analyses and telling details (France's separation from NATO, the Shah's major mistakes, Argentina's fragmentation, Iran's confused bleak prospects, Nigeria's polarization, more). Cetron bravely forecasts the reunification of Germany, with reasons!

Similarly, Chapters 8 (Telecommunications Revolution), 9 (Robotics), and 10 (Jobs for Tomorrow) are strong. Chapters 2 (What If People Lived as Long as Trees), 3 (Energy Sources for Tomorrow), and 7 on money are much weaker; I turn there now. Dramatic half-truths are tossed out concerning, for example, jogging, dopamine, aggression, and central nervous system repair, the section Life Span of 150 Years is a house of cards. Careless statements on the Alaskan pipeline, energy waste, fusion power, and aerospace stocks are easy to spot. There are a few troublesome contradictions (p. 283 vs. p. 287 on human space tolerance, p. 89 vs. p. 90 on the cost practicality of solar cells).

But this book, Encounters With the Future, is a fun read. Almost every page contains useful tidbits. But when social factors enter, look out for overlooked major forces. (Republican House gains in 1982 were predicted.) But I don't know that any future tank (see p. 6) has done better than Cetron's especially on international probabilities.

There is no way I can overpraise The Metaphors of Consciousness. Every one of its 25 chapters (by 25 authors, including forewordist Fritjof Capra) is a treasure. Many of them are not available anywhere else. The chapters on radical behaviorism, on Bohm's holomovement, and on Kant's recoil from vital "Thymos" were revelations to me. If Timothy Leary and Swami Rama write with intoxication, they can be forgiven for the thrill they give. And the other 23 chapters are written with responsible scientific care.

Hard Times: A Remembrance Of Old ECTC

By MIKE HAMER
Staff Writer

Fifty years ago the United States was in the middle of the Great Depression. Everyone has heard stories of what life was like then, and some have perhaps been curious about how their family members who were living back then fared through those hard times. Those persons who were attending college at the time were perhaps the lucky ones. Here are a few glimpses of life at East Carolina University in the winter and spring of 1933.

Tuition at the school was twenty-five dollars per quarter, or seventy-five dollars for an entire school year. Tuition plus room and board for a prospective teacher was $85 per quarter, or $255 the year. Student loans were available through trust funds which had been set up and donated by previous graduating classes.

In the spring of 1933, East Carolina University was called East Carolina Teacher's College. If one were a male student on campus at the time, it may have been a kind of awkward paradise. There were a thousand "girls" attending ECTC at the time and only a hundred "boys". The boys were called "co-eds". The university has grown significantly since those days. ECU currently has 12,400 students, 56 percent of which are women.

Mr. Troy Burnette, a native of Greenville, was one of those lucky males attending ECTC back then. He gave me an idea of what campus life was like in the "good ol' days." Burnette is currently retired after 35 years of running his own insurance agency in Nashville, N.C.

"I was a history and economics major back then," Burnette said the other day, "but I changed my mind when it came time to do my student teaching. Soon after I graduated from school war came up. When I returned from the war in 1945 I spent some time trying to figure out what I was going to do, and then I decided to get into the insurance business. I had my own insurance business for 35 years."

"I played as an end on ECTC's first football team," Burnette said, "and I played outfield and pitcher on the baseball team. I played center on the basketball team, too. There weren't many of us boys back then so those of us who played sports could be on all the teams." The Jan. 25, 1933 issue of the TECO ECHO, The East Carolinian's counterpart of that day, shows that Troy Burnette scored four points in a low-scoring game in which ECTC defeated Chowan College by a score of 38-27.

"A lot of the girls would come to the basketball game back then, and a lot of the townspeople would come, too. We played our games at Wright Gymnasium. I guess they have a new gym over there now, don't they?"

"I don't remember any mention being made of Hitler on campus those days," Burnette said. "There wasn't much discussion of current and political events on campus. Dr. A.D. Frank would discuss issues in some of his classes, but things were generally apolitical."

The Jan. 31, 1933, issue of the News and Observer carried a United Press lead story stating that Hitler had been named Chancellor of Germany. The story from Berlin read, "Adolf Hitler, dapper fascist apostle of an unfettered Germany was joyously acclaimed by a singing, laughing populace tonight as Chancellor of a new era."

The New York Times for the same day carried an editorial claiming that there was no need for immediate alarm concerning Hitler's election, but the editor called for a close watch on the political situation in Germany.

I asked Mr. Burnette if students talked about the Depression very much. "No, not really," he said. "Students basically accepted the fact that they didn't have any money. We didn't expect anything until it came our way. If you took a girl out, she wouldn't expect you to spend any money. The girls often talked about graduating, but they didn't talk about politics much."

In the six month period from January to June of 1933, the TECO ECHO only made two references to the Depression. One was an announcement that the previously mentioned Dr. Frank would be giving a lecture at Sheppard Library on the subject, "How the Government Can Control or Relieve Depressions." The other reference is made by a girl writing in the school paper that "...perhaps after the Depression the school will be able to have concrete walkways because the board walks are quite bouncy."

The Jan. 31, 1933 issue of The News and Observer had two front page stories dealing with the Depression. Only three jobs were listed in the "help wanted" section of the paper, and all three of the jobs in sales.

The editor of the Daily Reflector for the same date was complaining about the number of fines that were not being paid by the people in Pitt County. Perhaps the people had no money with which to pay the fines.

Blount-Harvey of Greenville placed an ad in the TECO ECHO advertising hats for the men in "New Spring Shades of Gray, Tans and Browns" for $1.98.

The Jan. 11, 1933, issue of the TECO ECHO announced that the first campus movie of the term was Attorney for the Defense. The comedy was Micky Mouse in Blue Rhythm. The paper announces that all comedies for the term would be either Mickey Mouse, Krazy Kat or Silly Symphonies.

In this same issue, Willa Mitchell Dickey wrote an appeal on the editorial page calling for an open forum in the newspaper in which the letters would be censored.

The YWCA sponsored a group of Friday night lectures for the term. Some of the topics were: "Men, Women and Romance" by Dr. Rebarker, "Do Students Need Religion?" by Rev. Lillycrop, and "What About Our Clothes?" by Miss Heltzclaw.

Bowen's store was selling new spring dresses for 95 cent to $5.95.

McLellan's was selling nationally known "Toilet Preparations" at the popular price of 10 cents.

The Wednesday, Feb. 22, 1933, issue of the TECO ECHO contained an essay on — hands. "Your hands may be clean, dirty, dingy or what have you. You look at a person's hands — you have an idea as to their personal pride. So often you are judged!"

Although some people may say that racial harmony has a long way to go today, one could safely say racial justice in the 30's was in dire need of improvement.

On Wednesday, Feb. 22, 1933, the Daily Reflector announced that a public meeting would take place at the court house to inform the public as to the dangers of tuberculosis. The meeting was an aftermath of a warning issued some time in the past by the Pitt County Department of Health in which the public was urged to be careful in employing young negro nurses or servants.

The paper said, "The statement said tuberculosis was quite active among young negro women and that the situation would become more serious unless they were subjected to complete physical examination before being employed in homes as maids or servants."

There were no such examinations at ECTC in 1933. The General Association of College-Born Teachers of the State of North Carolina, which shall be maintained by the state for the purpose of giving white men and such educational training as shall qualify them to be employed by the public schools of North Carolina.

The state of North Carolina repeated racial classifications in higher education in 1957. Black students entered ECU in 1957. Thirty years prior to 1933, a writer for the ECHO referred to black staff members "the date" percent of ECU students is black. A black woman returned to the for some teaching certification course. Lady Pirates Lose Second ODU Duel

By CINDY PLEASANTS
Sports Editor

Although the difference in scoring was almost the same, the game between ECU and Old Dominion Wednesday night was a sharp contrast from their previous contest this season.

The Lady Pirates lost to the nationally sixth-ranked Monarchs, 76-37, in a well-officiated, well-played game.

The only aspect of the bout that wasn't so good was the Lady Rats' shooting. Overall, ECU made 17 of 58 shots for a 29.3 percent shooting average.

In the last nine minutes of the second period, the Pirates only made five of 16 shots.

"What can you say?" said head coach Cathy Andruzzi. "We didn't take good shots."

But all-America senior Mary Denkler did make enough shots to place her as ECU's second all-time leading scorer in women's basketball history. Denkler scored 13 points to give her a career total of 1,571 points — one point over previous record-holder Debbie Freeman.

Right now, Andruzzi would like to have quite a few Mary Denklers on her team. With two backcourt starters out (Lorraine Foster, Delphine Mabry), Andruzzi is depending on her freshman players more than ever. But the head coach said she wasn't let down by the team's performance against ODU. "We're young. We're having people play different positions and getting used to playing with each other. Frankly, I thought they rose to the occasion."

An ODU player also rose to the occasion. While the Bucs were having trouble shooting at one end of the court, ODU's Medina Dixon was having a field goal day at the other end. Tying her scoring record, Dixon pumped in 24 points to lead the Monarchs. After playing 15 games at the University of South Carolina, Dixon transferred to ODU last year. Two years ago, Dixon was the most highly recruited player in the country.

ODU's highly-touted 6-8 center, Anne Donovan, was held to nine points by Denkler. Donovan, who averages 16.2 points per contest, has been held below double figures three times this year and has been contained twice by ECU.

ODU Coach Marianne Stanley complimented Andruzzi and the Lady Pirates for their performance. "I certainly feel for her (Cathy Andruzzi)," she said. "I don't think there's a coach in the country that would want to change places with her."

"She's done well to make the adjustments she's had to with all the injuries. They play good basketball. Even when we were up 38 points, I was nervous. I knew how they would come out and play."

During ECU's last contest with ODU, Stanley made accusations against Mary Denkler, claiming that she was intentionally hacking Donovan. Stanley also said that ECU "played dirty" and blamed the coaching staff for letting the game get out of hand.

But this game was in control and as far as both coaches are concerned, the two teams' last meeting is history. "That game's behind us," said Stanley. "I think the team was mentally prepared for this game. This was probably the best road game we've had this year except for the Tennessee game."

"This is the first time in 17 games I've seen them play with the killer instinct and by that I mean to play with intensity."

The Monarchs were up 30-16 at halftime, but the Pirates only hit 5 of 11 field goals during the start of the second period. ECU's Darlene Chaney scored 10 points in the final half and grabbed a total of 13 rebounds to give the Bucs a boost, but Miller and Dixon combined for 12 points to keep the Monarchs up, 58-35, with 5:14 remaining.

The Pirates didn't score again until the last 59 seconds of the game. Denkler hit a 25-foot jumpshot to push her over into second place in the ECU record book.

ODU's Pam Elliott and Dawn Cullen sank five freethrows between them in the final minute of the game to give the Monarchs a 76-37 edge over the Lady Pirates.

"They go right to the boards," said Andruzzi.

"We just don't have the caliber of individuals to handle top 20 schools. That's not saying anything against our kids. That's just being truthful."

ODU shot 49.2 percent from the floor and outrebounded the Pirates, 50 to 25.

Andruzzi described the game as a learning experience, and said the team mainly needs to gain more confidence. "They've got to start believing in themselves," she said. "I don't know what they know what they can do yet."

"They're 8-9 right now and that ain't bad. We've come across some top people. I thought they showed a lot of poise out there. They never gave up."

Andruzzi praised senior guard

Pirates Face GMU

By KEN BOLTON
Assistant Sports Editor

When ECU plays host to George Mason this Saturday afternoon, the Pirates will be going up against the nation's second leading scorer.

Carlos Yates, a 6-5, 210-pound sophomore, is currently averaging 27.8 points per game for the Patriots.

Yates was the rookie of the year in the ECAC-South last year, and has proven to be worthy of that award so far this season. In each of the last three games, Yates has scored over 30 points.

ECU head coach Charlie Harrison points out that the Pirates will stick to their aggressive man-to-man defense against George Mason.

"We're not going to do anything different for them," Harrison stated. "I don't think you can approach one individual or one team differently than any other."

"He (Yates) is playing extremely well right now," the first-year coach added. "He's going to get his points, but we're just going to have to play mistake-free and execute as well as possible."

ECU is currently 10-9 overall and 1-4 in the conference, while the Patriots are 11-7 and 2-3.

In this year's first meeting of the two teams, George Mason won by one point, 69-68, in Fairfax, Va.

The contest with the Patriots was ECU's first conference game of the year. The Pirates rallied from a nine-point halftime deficit to pull within one twice at the end of the game.

ECU had nine more field goals than Mason, but Mason made 27 of 33 at the line, compared to ECU's 8 of 15.

Yates was held to one of his lowest-scoring league games by the Pirate defense in the first meeting, as he scored 20 points. Andy Bolden, who led GMU with 21 points, will miss Saturday's game for academic reasons.

After playing seven games in 18 days, the Pirates are currently in the middle of a six-day reprieve, one which Harrison welcomes.

"Our kids need some rest," responded Harrison. "But more importantly, they need to get back to school. We've been on the road for a while."

The next couple of weeks will be important for the Pirates, as five out of the next six contests are conference games.

Former Tiger Assistant Hired By Pirate Staff

Rex Kipps, a 30-year old native of Blacksburg, Va., has been hired as ECU's new defensive line coach.

Kipps had been part-time tight end coach at Clemson for the past three years.

Previously, Kipps had been a graduate assistant at Richmond in 1977-78, and full time defensive line coach in 1979.

ECAC-South

ECU is currently in its second season of play in the ECAC-South. The Pirates joined the league in 1981, following four years as an independent.

The ECAC is the nation's largest athletic conference, comprised of 233 schools. The South Division is in its fourth season, while the ECAC as a whole was founded in 1938.

Upon completion of regular season play, the ECAC-South Tournament will be played in Richmond, Va. at the Robbins Center, March 10-12. The tournament winner will receive an automatic bid to the NCAA championship tournament.

The William & Mary Indians, ECU's opponent next Wednesday, are currently on top of the league standings with a 4-0 mark. Before a Monday night loss to VCU, the Indians had won eight in a row.

The standings will be important for all six teams, as tournament seedings will be determined by final regular season positions.

The current standings are:

	ECAC	Overall
William & Mary	4-0	11-5
Navy	2-1	11-6
James Madison	2-2	10-8
George Mason	2-3	11-7
Richmond	2-3	9-10

Women's Track Team Loses Runners

The ECU women's track team has trimmed down in size somewhat since the beginning of the season, with six runners exiting in all.

Head coach Pat McGuigan admitted that there were personality conflicts between her and some of the players. "You've got to remember that these girls are young," she said. "Sometimes it's hard for them to make the transition. Many of them acted like they were still in high school."

McGuigan said she would not tolerate any bad-mouthing from her team. "It's hard for these girls to come in and hear others talking with a lot of pessimism," she said. "All that poison was spreading."

Liz Graham, who was only one of two sophomores on the team, cited several reasons why she decided to turn in her sweat-suit. "There was a lot of conflict on the team — a lot of confusion," she said. "Then I had a heavy load with my schedule and working. Third, I couldn't deal with Coach McGuigan."

"As far as a track coach, she is quite competent. On a personal level, I think in relating to her athletes, she was immature."

Cindy Pleasants

A Look Inside

"She wanted to be a friend, a buddy first and then a coach. I think you lose a lot of discipline that way."

McGuigan contended, however, that immaturity was the sole reason why most of the girls quit the team. "They have to be motivated and want to work hard. The majority of the girls who quit came from well-to-do families. They've had everything handed to them."

But the nine remaining girls on the team are quite different, according to McGuigan. "These girls have never had anything handed to them on a silver platter. They don't take things for granted."

Another former trackster, Carolyn Carr, accused McGuigan of "getting into the girls' private lives."

"I don't think you should do that unless it interferes with track," Carr said.

McGuigan denied the accusation defiantly, saying, "We're not the football team. We don't have set curfews, so they have a responsibility not only to themselves but to the team."

"I merely checked up on them occasionally to see if they were upholding that."

Now with nine members remaining, the team is in much better shape now than before, McGuigan said. "We don't talk about the girls that quit," she said. "We're looking ahead."

McGuigan praised the team for being such hard workers. "They're putting back in 10 times more than the program is giving them," she said. "Because the budget is so limited, we really can't afford any more runners. The girls understand our limitations, though. They appreciate everything they get."

The Lady Pirates will travel to Virginia Tech this weekend to compete in four relay events: the sprint medley, the 55-meter, the one-mile and the 4 x 1 relays.

McGuigan said the team runs much better in relays than individual events. "They get all fired up and cheer each other on," she said.

"Individually, sometimes it's hard to get up if your teammates aren't doing well."

Richards Shows True Versatility

ECU Sports Info.

Now in his third year on the squad, Kevin Richards has become one of the leaders of the ECU swim team.

"Kevin is probably the most talented swimmer, in terms of multi-events, who has ever been at ECU," said head swim coach Rick Kobe. "He is also one of the most popular team members."

For most of last season and so far this year, Richards has swum the backstroke and individual medley events. But his role as backstroke wasn't planned. His best event in high school was the butterfly, which he swam his first year at ECU.

"Our backstroke didn't return," added Richards. "I don't mind which event I swim if it helps the team."

Kobe has come to count heavily on Richards.

"We don't have a lot of depth in the back events and we count heavily on Kevin," said Kobe. "So far, he's done well, scoring consistently in meets."

At the end of the regular season, Richards switches back to the butterfly events for the NCAA Eastern Regionals. Richards goals, both for the team and himself, center on the regionals.

"As a team, we're looking to move up from last year (when the Pirates finished fifth). Everyone who goes should be able to score. I want to place in the top three in all three of my events, plus I'd like to win one."

According to Kobe, "Kevin has the potential to be an Eastern champion — something ECU hasn't had in a while."

Last year, Richards set an ECU varsity record in the 200 fly at the regional meet. That wasn't bad for a swimmer who doesn't usually get a chance to practice his event.

"Kevin goes against swimmers who have had all year to practice; think what he could do if he didn't have to switch."

The 1982-83 swim squad is a young one, with the majority being freshmen and sophomores. As a junior, Richards believes that puts an extra burden on his shoulders.

"Some of the newer swimmers look to us as leaders," said the correctional service major. "I think it has helped me this year and next year I look forward to being a leader as a senior."

Richards is pleased with the blend of this year's team.

"It's a good team," explained Richards. "We're really close. Everybody pulls together for everybody else. In the past there were some divisions, but now we're working together. It's really fun."

Swimming is also a "family" at-

ECU's Johnny Edwards in earlier action against league-leading William and Mary.

Kevin Richards

fair for the Richards family.

"My brother John swam for two years at ECU and is swim coach for the Greenville Swim Club," said Richards. "My dad works as a starter at meets. And my brother Rose is a loyal supporter."

"I've been swimming since I was eight-years old and I still enjoy it," offered Richards. "After I finish swimming competitively, I'll probably still work out some. I think I might like to get into coaching, maybe as an assistant to my brother."

Favorites on the Court...
Several teams appear to be favorites as the intramural basketball season rolls into its second week. Strong favorites to repeat as champions in the men's independent division are the fabulous Joint Eight, who have averaged 87 points per game. Jones Enforcers Level II are picked to win the men's residence hall division, while Alpha Phi Alpha appears to be the team to beat among the fraternities. The Fastbreak and the Heartbreakers are destroying the nets in the women's independent division. Garrett, Clement, and Fletcher are in contention for the women's residence hall title. Alpha Delta Pi and Alpha Phi are undefeated in the sorority division, with the Kappa Sigma Little Sisters favored to win the Lit Sis Division.

Rollers Roll On...

The fast-paced action of intramural roller hockey is near finishing one complete week of stiff competition. Even though many participants have discovered the hardness of the floor, many teams still remain in the race for the playoff selections. Some of these top teams include: Rolla Doobie, El Loco Flyers, Night Cruisers, True Pros and Slay Hippies on Wheels. defending champs, Night Cruisers, met sticks with the Puckers. The skill level between these two teams appeared to be equal. The Night Cruisers led by Bill Burnette managed to score four goals by the end of the first half while the Puckers squeaked in one point. During the second half of the contest, Teresa Vick scored two points for the Puckers while the Night Cruisers answered a scoring drive with one final goal. The Night Cruisers held to their namesake, "cruising by" the Puckers with a final score of 5-3. Joy Admarak and Julie Bassett led the Night Cruisers on the defensive side of the contest. Arm Wrestlers "Grip" Into Action...

The Intramural/Budweiser Arm Wrestling Tournament began Tuesday as the men's 151-175 lbs. weight class division went into first round action. Some of the favorite strong arms that advanced included Curtis Sendek, Steve Elgin, and Reggie McDonald. The competition continues tonight, with the quarter-and semi-finals on February 8 and 10. Other favorites in the tournament are Laura Quisenberry (135 lbs. and under), and Susan Bass (136 lbs. and over) in the women's and in the men's, Al Adams (150 lbs. and under), Scott Thompson (176-199 lbs.), and Racquetball Doubles...

Stale Borg Won't Return

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Bjorn Borg, unable to regain the winning spirit that made him No. 1 in the sport, said he hopes his fans will remember him "as a great tennis player."

Borg, 26, said Wednesday his decision to retire, announced two weeks ago in Thailand, was "final."

"I knew I still had four or five years of top tennis left but I felt that I needed to do something else in life," said Borg. "For me, the most important thing is to enjoy and be happy with what I'm doing."

The Swedish-born player, whose 11 years of professional tennis ranked him among the sport's top money winners, said when he began practicing last October to try to regain his No. 1 World ranking, he found he had lost his love of the sport.

Pirate Cager Drops From B-ball Team

Mike Fox, a junior guard from Raleigh, N.C., has decided to quit the ECU basketball team in order to concentrate on school work.

"Mike has talked about this for some time," ECU head coach Charlie Harrison said. "He has decided that basketball is secondary to his school work and his grades."

Fox played in high school at Raleigh's Sanderson High. While playing for coach Bill Harrington, Fox won all-conference and all-metro honors his senior year.

He averaged 18 points per game as a senior, 14 as a junior and 13 as a sophomore. "Mike has elected to concentrate on his studies," Harrison said of the 20-year old business major. "I'm a bit surprised of his decision, but yet understand and honor his decision."

Karen Truske for her efforts. "Karen Truske played a heckuva game tonight," she said. "She only played a few minutes last year, and tonight she was guarding a 5-8 superstar (Helen Malone)." In the first half, the Pirates made the first two points of the game but then went 8-10 without scoring while ODU racked up 16 points.

Freshman Sylvia Bragg hit a bankshot to break the ice, but the Pirates were unable to catch up as the Monarchs completely dominated inside the lane. ECU made seven of 29 shots for a 24.1 percent average in the first period. The Lady Pirates again return to the road this weekend to take on James Madison University on Feb. 5 at 2 p.m., and then play Richmond on Feb. 6 at 3 p.m.
