Budget Cuts Force Professors To Move On

From Staff and CPS Reports

With universities and colleges in parts of the nation undergoing severe budget cuts the last three years, professors have been keeping their eyes on the want-ads for job prospects. Most educators are moving from depressed economic areas, such as the Detroit area, to the Sunbelt.

Angelo Volpe, vice chancellor for academic affairs, said ECU is not experiencing trouble keeping faculty members and believes the school is benefiting from the faculty exodus in other parts of the country. "We have had no large turnover," he said, "and applicants for positions have increased in number and quality."

No one knows exactly how many teachers are moving. Estimates range from 30,000 to 100,000. Most likely to move are the 100,000 non-tenured teachers now working on U.S. campuses, said Irving Spitzberg, retiring head of the American Association of University Professors, the third biggest college teachers' union.

Young teachers in non-tenured track positions make up a majority of the faculty who leave ECU, according to Volpe.

Spitzberg said he can't estimate how many tenured professors are preparing to leave.

"I don't think anybody can give you a number," adds Victor Stone, AAUP president in Illinois and a law professor at the University of Illinois. "I do know the numbers are large."

Faculty members, says Spitzberg, are simply "tired of hard times on campus." Those hard times often translate into salary freezes, increased workloads and even prohibitions from cash-short schools against buying needed materials for class work.

A salary freeze in Nevada means a significant brain drain, said Allen Mori, chairman of the University of Nevada-Las Vegas' Faculty Senate.

At West Virginia, the faculty vacancy rate is four times higher than ever before, mourns Dr. Herman Mertins, vice president of university administration. Consequently, the school has cut the number of course sections it is offering this fall.

Some faculty members are retaliating. West Virginia Professor Thomas Cady, for example, sued Gov. Rockefeller for "malevolent evisceration of higher education" this summer. The suit asks the court to restore $2.5 million in budget cuts to the school.

In August, 32 University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point teachers advertised their services en masse to schools with more commitment to education and, not coincidentally, no salary freezes. University of Wisconsin at Madison faculty members quickly disassociated themselves with their peers in Stevens Point.

Last week, Colorado State University English instructors wrote letters to students' parents complaining that CSU's treatment of liberal arts programs had caused a "severe loss of morale" that, in turn, could damage students' educations.

Volpe said the recent cuts at UNC schools have not soured professors on North Carolina's commitment to higher education. He said the system's record has encouraged many to stay at ECU, even during the recent budget cuts.

ECU isn't the only one getting a glut of applications. The University of Oklahoma had 350 people for three administrators' openings during the summer.

"Teachers are probably moving in the direction of the Sun Belt states," says David Poisson of the National Education Association in Washington, D.C.

West Virginia, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Oregon, Idaho and Montana are having the hardest times holding onto college teachers, said Perry Robinson of the American Federation of Teachers.

The reason that faculty are moving, some experts say, is low salaries.

During 1982-83, independent college faculty members earned an average $28,680, compared to $27,860 at public schools, the AAUP says. Professors at ECU make an average of $33,273.

CP&L Given Rate Increase By N.C. Utilities Commission

RALEIGH (UPI) — The North Carolina Utilities Commission Monday approved an 8.22 percent, $91 million rate increase for Carolina Power & Light Co., far short of the utility's $165 million request.

CP&L had requested a 14.92 percent rate increase, but the commission said the company's poor management of its nuclear facilities argued against granting the full request.

The approved increase will raise the bill of an average residential customer to $71 per month from $65. Those figures are based on usage of 1,000 kilowatt hours per month.

William E. Graham Jr., CP&L's executive vice president, said the company was disappointed it did not receive its entire rate request.

"We believe the evidence... fully supported the entire request and are disappointed the commission reduced it substantially," Graham said in a news release.

"When considered with the last commission order (in September 1982), it means the company has been allowed to increase its rates a total of only about 9 percent on those rates based largely on 1980 costs."

The commission said the 8.22 percent increase would allow CP&L to earn an 11.38 percent rate of return on its property if it uses sound management practices.

CP&L had sought rates that would allow the utility to earn an 11.74 percent rate of return on the original cost of its property and a 15.5 percent rate of return to its stockholders.

The commission's order said CP&L's history of poor plant performance and its "imprudence" in managing nuclear plants warranted only a 14.55 percent return upon stockholders' equity.

The commission also denied CP&L's request to include in the rate request debts stemming from the abandoned Cherokee nuclear project in South Carolina. The commission said its refusal to recognize those costs would make it harder for CP&L to earn the rate of return the commission approved.

The commission continued a rate penalty imposed on CP&L at the company's Sept. 24, 1982, rate hike, but reduced the penalty to .75 percent from 1 percent.

The penalty was originally imposed because of CP&L's management of its nuclear facilities, the commission said, and was reduced because of initiatives taken by CP&L to reorganize management oversight at the Brunswick nuclear plant.

The commission said a major factor behind the approved rate hike was commercial operation of the Mayo Unit No. 1 nuclear plant, which began in March. The commission said increased costs associated with bringing the unit on line were approximately $41 million of the approved $91 million increase.

Total cost of the Mayo unit was approximately $488 million.

In its order, the commission directed the company to attempt to improve customer participation in efforts to reduce its system's peak demand.

$24,100 Pledged To Date

ECU Alumni Raise Funds

By TINA MAROSCHAK

The ECU National Alumni Telefund has raised $24,100, almost half its goal, in the first week of its annual fund raising drive, Vice Chancellor for Institutional Advancement James L. Lanier said Monday.

The alumni relations department kicked off the telephone drive Monday, Sept. 12. The fund raiser is conducted by the ECU Ambassadors and seeks support from university alumni who live outside areas in which alumni chapters are organized.

Lanier said this year's goal is $55,000 — $14,000 above last year's and $10,000 above the 1983 total receipts for the campaign.

"After the first week, we are significantly ahead (of our goal)," said Lanier. "This is a result of the enthusiastic work of student volunteers. Their efforts are paying direct dividends in our ability to offer additional scholarships and enhance the quality of our academic program," he said.

Lanier estimated that 150 students would be involved in soliciting contributions from alumni before it is completed. Any student may volunteer to work with the drive, but the ambassadors are coordinating student efforts.

The gifts will be disbursed throughout the university for departmental activities and faculty research. The money will also provide 100 merit-based scholarships, which are given by the alumni department each year to outstanding students.

Lanier said the number of scholarships could increase next year if the fund raising drive exceeds its goal.

The telephone fund raiser held each fall is part of the alumni center's year-long fund raising efforts. A drive is held each Spring to solicit funds from former students who are active in alumni chapters, mostly within North Carolina. The center raises approximately $250,000 a year.

SGA Presidents Hold Meeting

By JENNIFER JENDRASIAK

"The ECU Student Government is in much better condition than a lot of the other student governments," SGA President Paul Naso said Monday after attending a meeting of the University of North Carolina Association of Student Governments.

The UNCASG consists of student government presidents from each of the sixteen universities in the UNC system. At this year's first meeting, guidelines were laid out and policies and methods of dealing with the presidents' responsibilities were discussed. "We all ran into the same problems," Naso said.

A major issue discussed was the raising of the drinking age. Naso said the group was opposed to the law itself and would continue to fight it.

The association discussed various ways that the SGA can work with campus security and administration officials to help protect the students and prevent them from violating the new law, Naso said.

The group also proposed an SGA hotline. Through the hotline, communications between all the student governments could be made more efficient, Naso said. The hotline would allow student governments access to the documents of other schools so that information could be shared.

At the meeting, Naso gave information about the Pirate Walk escort service to other SGA presidents. Currently only UNC, N.C. State and ECU have escort services.

Being an SGA president is an "awesome responsibility," Naso said. He said the UNCASG "wants to get information out and let people know we are the voice of the students."

Legislatures Provide Funding

After two years of dramatic cuts in the amount of money they've been giving colleges, state legislatures are being more generous this year.

Of the first 35 states reporting to Illinois State University researcher M.M. Chambers, who tracks state appropriations to schools, only six cut or froze funding from last year.

The 35 averaged increases of 6 percent, thanks largely to large new tax hikes imposed recently.

Of the six who cut or froze funds, five granted big increases in 1982. Only South Dakota has cut funds two years in a row.

The N.C. General Assembly has doubled its per-student appropriations to UNC schools since 1977.

Teacher Requirements Debated

The New Jersey state education board will vote on the plan to let all B.A.s teach in the state, with or without a teacher's certificate.

The plan was meant to meet criticisms that teacher education programs emphasize teaching methods at the expense of the substance of subjects like reading and math.

But the state National Education Association chapter says the plan would put unqualified teachers in the classroom, and create so many teachers that salaries for education majors would be driven downward.

Computer Gender Gap

Stanford researchers say boys are more likely to have and use computers than girls, and that most computer games are perceived to be largely male-oriented.

Dating Violence Frequent

One of five college students may be victims of physical and psychological "premarital abuse," say two Murray State University psychologists.

Rosemarie Bogal-Allbritten and Bill Allbritten say their survey found 19 percent of the students they asked had been involved in violent incidents with the people they'd been dating.

The incidents were mostly "pushing and shoving," and the victims were mostly female.

Ban Wanted On Game Ads

The National Coalition on T.V. Violence wants to ban ads for a stalking game similar to the campus "K.A.O.S." craze of two years ago.

This version, called "The Survival Game," gives participants guns that fire paint pellets and puts them in woods instead of on campus.

University of Illinois' Dr. Thomas Radecki wants ads for it banned from TV because the game, like K.A.O.S. before it, "reduces your sensitivity to and abhorrence of violence."

Video Revenge

The University of Texas' Arcade games now demand an apology from Andropov if students lose in "Joust," and lets players shoot at "aggressive Soviet ships" in "Stargate."

It's a way to "get our 2 cents in," said co-owner Todd Bove.

Women Voters Meet

Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters President Rhea Markello addresses the organization at a meeting which took place Sunday night at 7:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church on the corner of Elm and 14th Streets.

Walk Director Appointed; Karate Club Offers Help

By DENNIS KILCOYNE Staff Writer

Mike Pitts was named the new director of Pirate Walk Thursday for the 1983-84 school year. Pitts hopes to improve the image and effectiveness of the escort service.

Pirate Walk, which just completed its first year, provides male escorts to female students who must walk alone at night. Escorts can be scheduled in advance by calling Pirate Walk at Mendenhall Student Center.

The governing board of Pirate Walk, chaired by SGA Vice-President Lindsey Williams, chose Pitts over four other applicants. "Everything about Mike impressed me," Williams said.

Pitts, a sophomore drama and speech major, will receive a salary of $150 per semester. He said he wants to emphasize punctuality and competence among this year's escorts. Such emphasis, he said, will improve the service's image and lead to greater use by female students.

To improve the service's image, Pitts accepted a proposal by the Karate Club offering its members as escorts. "The stereotype of guys in karate — macho, muscular, good-looking — should be a big help in getting girls to take advantage of it (Pirate Walk)," Pitts said. He hopes the influx of club members will increase the prestige of Pirate Walk and attract more and better escort applicants.

Pitts expressed concern that despite the rapes and assaults on and near campus, many co-eds are not using the escort service. "It's necessary to make the girls feel safe and secure," he said.

Pitts appointed Tommy Sherbert as Pirate Walk assistant director and Wes Draper as secretary/treasurer. Pitts thinks many female students, who are fearful about walking alone at night, still fail to take advantage of Pirate Walk. He said women should not have to feel afraid since Pirate Walk is available.

Pirate Walk

New Image Not Necessary

Pirate walk is back, and with it comes a new director — Mike Pitts. Paul Sumrell's shoes will be hard to fill. But, if Pitts' recent expression of dedication for the program carries throughout the whole school year, we are sure Pitts will get the program back on its feet.

We do, however, encourage the sophomore Drama and Speech major to be cautious in his attempt to improve the system. We are not against using the Karate Club for escorts, but promoting the "stereotype of... macho, muscular, good-looking" is not the image that will make girls take advantage of the system. We do not agree with Mr. Pitts' logic that the Karateers will increase the prestige of Pirate Walk and help to attract more and better applicants. If anything, the reverse will be true.

Guys who would have been escorts in the past will feel less inclined to help out if their body and skills don't measure up to macho standards. Don't promote any image except one of trustworthiness and reliability. The guys, and consequently the girls, will come around if they know they are part of an organization that is respected on campus for these reasons — not the ones you mentioned.

Some people will argue that macho is needed in case an attacker needs to be subdued. Although we know a person with karate skills would probably offer more protection, we think each escort would be dedicated to do his job properly.

We know Mr. Pitts is concerned; we know he will do what is needed to sustain and maintain the escort service in true Pirate tradition. We have only questioned the necessity of one of his ideas, not his attitude in general. His stressing the punctuality and competence of his volunteers is exactly what is needed.

This will be the Pirate Walk's second year, and when it starts back up next week with Mr. Pitts at the helm, women on campus should take advantage of it. Whether you get an escort who can throw a lightning fast karate kick, or whether you get one that can't, you know the escort will be there to help you as much as possible.

So, Mr. Pitts, we hope you will heed our suggestions in good faith. Students on campus should be proud, like we are, that you have the willingness to continue a worthwhile program. The Pirate Walk is good for the students and the university. Take care of it.

... No Landing

Last week the governors of New Jersey and New York agreed to ban the Soviet airplane carrying Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko from landing at civilian airports in their states. Gromyko was to arrive aboard an Aeroflot jet to attend the Fall session of the United Nations. State Department officials said Gromyko's plane would have to land at a U.S. military base and be escorted to the U.N.'s New York headquarters.

Though the concern of New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean is certainly understandable, the Soviets still should be allowed to land at the civilian airports. The governors fear citizens would turn out in droves to protest or even riot against the Soviet foreign minister, and the burden on local police and security would be too much to ask. Nevertheless, the ban could be used by the Russians as an excuse not to come to the U.N. session — one in which they would face hard questioning and denunciation over the Korean airline incident.

The U.S. should make it as easy as possible to let the Soviets attend the meeting, where they will face harsh condemnation for their irresponsible action and subsequent response. The U.N. is a place where the whole world could put the Soviet Union under the spotlight, and the Soviets would have a hard time answering for an inexcusable incident.

The airport ban does not technically violate international law, under which the United States, as the host country, must provide free access to the U.N. meetings. Likewise, Gromyko's plane is not a regular commercial flight of Aeroflot, whose planes haven't been allowed to land in the U.S. since the invasion of Afghanistan. Other Western nations temporarily banned the airliner in response to the Soviet attack on the Korean airline.

The anger and logic that the governors use to justify the airport ban is understandable, but the Soviets, in the larger view, will get a much stronger reprimand in the United Nations. Let's let them come and get what's coming to them.

Congrats Vanessa!

Black leaders from New York to Los Angeles are viewing the crowning of Vanessa Williams as Miss America as a sign that racism is waning in the nation. Williams, the first black ever to hold the honor, began her reign Sunday annoyed by the fact that so much attention is being focused on her race.

We do not echo the hopes of former congresswoman Shirley Chisholm when she said that racism is diluting itself in America. As much as most people wish that her statement was a reality, the facts point to a picture not quite so rosy. Racism may no longer be as open as it was before the 1960s, but its ugly head is still reared in private. A lot of white people practice selective discrimination: condemning black people in general and then making exceptions for those select few who "act white."

We, of course, do not condone such activities. Miss Williams should not hide from her color. She should be proud that she is able to make a statement for her race in particular and people in general. The Miss America pageant is an optimum forum to display the fact that most of the country is committed to equality, not inequality.

Yet, those people who insist on condemning people because of their race are holding the country back. We must strive for the equality that Chisholm and other black leaders say has arrived. Congratulations Miss Vanessa Williams. Congratulations America.

Conservatives Divorce Reagan Policies, Might Fight Against Their Hero in '84

By GREG RIDEOUT

A once steamy love affair is slowly ending. Ronald Reagan, the darling of the New Right ever since Jerry Falwell became a holy household word, has fallen from grace in the conservative world over his handling of the Korean jetliner incident. They feel betrayed, and rightly so.

They have become activists over the issue. Ronald didn't do what Falwell, Helms and company expected him to do when he had the chance to replace rhetoric with deeds. Conservatives have taken to the streets and proclaimed the president null and void for catering to the pragmatists in the administration. But, Richard Viguerie, the moneymaking champion of the New Right, is not convinced that James Baker and other moderates in the White House are the problem. He believes Reagan himself is to blame; he labels him a turncoat.

The administration is loving it. They have convinced liberals and moderates that he is not a trigger-happy fool who will pull his nuclear guns out of his atomic holster if given a chance to evaporate the evil empire. One official claimed that for every vote Reagan lost from conservatives, he gained two from the people who worried about his reliability not to press the big button.

But, the eventual divorce has been a longtime brewing. New Right leaders had been coming increasingly disenchanted with his perceived slack stance on economic and social issues. Now, the main artery running through the veins of all true conservatives — anticommunism — was slashed by their former hero. Reagan broke rule number one of the red, white and blue New Right creed: Don't give an inch to the Soviets. Reagan did.

With conservatives across the country calling for massive and major retaliation in the wake of the airliner atrocity, Reagan is reaping the political ill-gotten gains. But, is the reality all an illusion. Richard Viguerie told a Washington Post columnist that hard-core conservative support of the Republican candidate in an election could influence the outcome. They have money and fervor when backing a "true" candidate. They had it in 1980, but the zest, says Viguerie, won't be there in 1984.

In fact, the last two hard fought elections were lost by Republicans — Nixon in 1960 and Ford in 1976. Mr. Reagan better think twice while basking in his new moderate popularity. It may be good now, but with his former supporters turning into his current enemies, he better be on the lookout.

Right wingers weren't hungry for a win in those years because of the moderacy of the respective candidates. And as Viguerie says, look at the results. But, Reagan and his men are laughing at the New Right's threat to vote elsewhere on Election Day; as they say, "these people have no place to go."

With the president rapidly taking the candidate's approach on current issues, he finds himself in an odd position of not having the support of those who helped him in 1980. He better not take lightly the threat of less enthusiasm from his former hard-core supporters. Or Ronnie could find himself out in the cold. Washington streets come January 1985.

AFTER YEARS OF LIVING A LIE, DEALING WITH GUILT AND SHAME, AFRAID OF SOMEONE UNCOVERING MY DOUBLE LIFE, I'M FINALLY COMING OUT OF THE CLOSET...

Bible Belt Tight On Gays

A week ago in The East Carolinian there was a front page article concerning the ECGC, in which president Gary Faircloth condoned and perpetuated ideas and statements that we feel deserve a corrective response. Our quarrel is not with individuals of the ECGC, Faircloth, or Sister Shondell but with the concept that Christianity and homosexuality are "intricate things that can work together." With this in mind, our intent is not to judge (Matthew 7:1), but to let God's Word, which is the Bible, speak for itself (Hebrews 4:12,13).

The Bible speaks clearly on homosexuality. Leviticus 18:22 states that "you shall not lie with a man as with a woman, it is an abomination." Romans 1:18-27: "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who suppress the truth in unrighteousness... therefore God gave them over in the lust of their hearts to impurity... the men abandoned the natural function of the woman and burned in their desire toward one another, men with men committing indecent acts and receiving in their own persons the due penalty of their error." (AIDS?)

According to his word, it's obvious homosexuality is a sin. Let us emphasize that the sin of homosexuality is no greater than any other sin. The point is all sin separates us from God.

In the article, Sister Shondell states, "The Christian message has always been to provide support and love for the outcasts of society... the gays have been outcasts in this community." It is true that Christ did "provide support and love for the outcasts;" however, he did not condone nor "support and love" their lifestyles of immorality. Again, let the Bible speak for itself. (John 8:11) Christ, speaking to an outcast says: "Go and sin no more." It is inconsistent and contradictory for Faircloth and Sister Shondell to maintain that one can continue practicing homosexuality while claiming that it does not conflict with Christianity. The problem is that their Christianity is totally contrary to biblical Christianity.

Anticipating rebuttal, it must be stated and understood that the Bible is the basis of Christianity and is not to be twisted and distorted to appropriate an individual's "alternative lifestyle". Thanks be to God that He has given us the "alternative lifestyle" (i.e. A brand new life in Christ based on his love and forgiveness).

Most Rapes Go Unreported

By ANDREA MARKELLO Staff Writer

Fifty one percent of all rapes are committed by someone the victim knew, and three out of four rapes are not reported at all, according to Rhonda Gurley of the ECU campus police. Gurley made her comments after attending the N.C. Conference on Sexual Assault in Raleigh last week.

Gurley said the information is important to college students because the age group that includes college freshmen and sophomores, 16- to 20-year-olds, has the highest percentage of violent sexual assault.

Gurley also said a victim is more likely to report a rape by a stranger than by someone she has met or knows, such as an ex-boyfriend.

Gurley compiled the following list of preventive measures from the conference that women can observe to reduce the chances of a violent attack: never walk alone at night on campus; travel in well-lit areas and avoid wooded areas; carry a flashlight or whistle in hand where it is easily accessible don't pick up hitchhikers; check backseats before entering vehicles; don't jog alone - bring a dog for protection; don't open doors in residence halls until the caller has given proper identification; never enter a dorm elevator with a suspicious-looking person; be aware of the emergency blue-light phones on campus and use them.

An FBI cast study has devised five categories of rapists: The power-reassurance rapist whose acts are premeditated and uses minimal force on the victim; the power assertive rapist who enjoys "putting the female in her place;" the anger-retaliator rapist who is a spontaneous attacker and likes to punish women; the anger-excitation rapist who will torture the victim and take ten years to plan a crime; and the opportunity-rapist of which little is known.

Statistics on forcible rape in North Carolina list 1,300 reported in 1982 with 708 arrests made. June was listed as the most frequent month, Saturday the most frequent day, and a black female the most frequent victim. The victim's home was listed as the most frequent place of occurrence.

Because of severe beating, 314 rape victims in 1982 required medical treatment, whereas 986 attained no injury. Twenty percent of the victims were under the influence of drugs or alcohol at the time the offense occurred, and 18 percent of the offenders were under the influence of alcohol or drugs when the crime was committed.

One forcible rape was reported on ECU campus in 1982. "Each attack presents its own circumstances. Potential victims need to be alert and develop a mental awareness of their surroundings. Rape is increasing more than any other violent crime in the U.S. The victim is constantly made aware of her vulnerability and the physical, social and psychological trauma may take years to heal," Gurley said.

Honest Wage For Professors

After "trying all summer to get people's attention" for a new system-wide salary, Kelley and his colleagues decided to make their anger public. They chipped in $150 for the Aug. 31 ad in the nationally-circulated business daily.

The two-sentence ad, which ran in the "Situations Wanted" section of the Journal's classifieds, was headlined "Professors," and read: "Many professors in all academic disciplines are available for an honest wage at universities with a commitment to quality higher education. Contact department chairs at the University of Wisconsin." University administrators, needless to say, "were not pleased with the ad," said Steve Schumacher, spokesman for the 13-campus Wisconsin system.

And the Executive Faculty Committee at the main Madison campus chastised the Stevens Point instructors for claiming to speak for the faculty members on all campuses.

"Our own view is that the advertisement is inappropriate and self-defeating," the committee said in a letter to the Board of Regents. "We do not believe most faculty members are prepared to write off the future of their university as readily as the ad implies."

But Kelley, who is also president of the Stevens Point chapter of the Association of University of Wisconsin Faculty, said he and many other instructors were serious about looking elsewhere for employment.

"We have hundreds and hundreds of angry faculty members in this state," he said.

With minimal 5- and 3-percent raises over the last several years, Kelley said, "this year's freeze represents insult on top of injury."

Kelley said he placed the ad "because we wanted to speak to a national audience and voice our concern that if there's not a constant commitment to quality education, faculty will begin to leave."

"But has it gotten them any money?" asked Matthew Finkin, chairman of the American Association of University Professors' Committee on Tenure and Collective Bargaining. Finkin thought the ad was "a little silly."

But that doesn't faze Kelley, who said the ad at least brought the anger into the open. "There are times to do outrageous, even silly things to get attention," he said.

"Pressure is the currency in which you conduct politics, and I know we have at least brought pressure on the issue."

Attention Whimps, Nerds, Whiners Like Gere, You Too Can Be A Stud

By MICK LASALLE
Staff Writer

Guys say, "Eh, Mick. How can I score with women the way you do?" I tell 'em, "Go see An Officer and a Gentleman."

There's lots of basket cases walking around this campus, guys 20, 21-years-old, who might have been all right had this flick been around a few years ago. Richard Gere has got the moves down. Now all you have to do is sit back and take it all in.

Richard Gere offers what amounts to a course in manipulating the fairer sex. And any guy who tells you he's not interested in manipulating women is either a liar or a three-dollar bill... or else he's a guy like Phil Donahue. You know, the kind who tries to manipulate women by saying he doesn't want to.

You don't have to be an officer and you don't have to be a gentleman. You don't have to be in great shape, like Richard Gere, or talk with a take-charge-Brooklyn accent — though let's face it, these things help. All you have to do is see An Officer and a Gentleman this week and learn these few important tips. Then you too can score like Richard Gere and... yes, I admit it — Mick LaSalle.

RULE ONE: Either touch her or don't touch her, but if you're gonna touch her, touch her.

I was driving through downtown last week, and I saw a guy and a girl leaving the Elbo Room. They were about to cross Fifth Street. The girl was drunk and happy. The guy was drunk and nervous. He wanted to touch her. His hand edged cautiously up her back. I think the girl was embarrassed for him.

I see the opposite all the time too. I'll be in a place like Pantana's or Rafter's. A guy'll make believe he's a helluva lot drunker than he really is so he can grab a girl as hard as he can.

Both guys are nerds. Both guys are working from the assumption that the last thing any girl wants is to be touched by them. So nerd number one touches her hoping she won't notice, and nerd number two grabs her so hard she can't run away.

Now check out Richard Gere. He meets Deborah Winger.

They walk across the dance floor, and right there he puts his hand flat against her lower back. He assumes he has the right to — and so he does. His touch is firm, but gentle. If she wanted to run away, she could. But why should she? She knows she's not with a nerd.

RULE TWO: Every woman wants to be kissed by a guy who knows every woman wants to be kissed.

Somewhere into their first dance, Richard Gere looks at Deborah Winger, lifts up her chin and kisses her — and good. He assumes she wants to be kissed, and he knows he's the man.

What a change from some of these clowns you see trying to turn being scared into some kind of I'm-shy-hesitation-doncha-think-I'm-cute routine. Cute ain't sexy. Cute is nice. And when a woman says, "You're so nice," that's a sure sign you'll never see her with her clothes off.

Gere, on the other hand, moves fast. But his hands move slow. He's not anxious because he knows the woman won't stop him. So she doesn't.

RULE THREE: If you have to, tell her you were stationed in Moscow.

If you just got back from a date and think you really did good because you talked about yourself all night — hang it up, Clyde. The next time you call her she'll be washing her hair. The time after that she'll have a test the next morning. The time after that a guy'll answer.

Richard Gere and Deborah Winger talk. She tells him the story of her life. He stays cool. When she presses him, he tells her he was stationed in Moscow. Since when does the United States have a Navy base in Moscow, right? She realizes this, and it's a big laugh. But still, he hasn't said anything. He's held something back, and so she comes away figuring he's interesting.

RULE FOUR: Don't answer

Richard Gere is a man's man, and Deborah Winger is his lucky woman. Girls, is your guy like Gere, or is he a whining whimp or a stupid question.

Deborah Winger asks, "Zack, how do you get rid of a girl when you get rid of her?" Richard Gere doesn't answer the question. A question like that is a set-up. Any way you answer, you lose. She's trying to get him to play her game. Richard Gere knows not to play those games; Mick LaSalle knows not to play those games, and now you know too.

RULE FIVE: Try not to tell her the worst thing that ever happened to you until you know her more than 15 minutes.

So many guys want a woman they can cry on. If they have a girl's attention for 15 minutes, they start telling her how this other girl hurt them, or how they got locked in the closet for a month once when they were a kid. Girls are usually polite, but they don't want to hear it. They're looking for a good time, not a nerd. Mick LaSalle gives the advice (story), and Gere gives the example in AN OFFICER AND A GENTLEMAN.

Everybody's got some bad things in his or her past. Richard Gere's character, Zack, got a doozy. His mother killed herself when he was a kid. But Gere doesn't lay this on his woman until she really is his woman. He's looking for understanding, not sympathy. When he tells her, he just lets her know — without shoving the weight on her. He's a man about it, not a whiner.

If you learn these five points, you'll get from this movie what it took guys like me 20 or 30 years to figure out. You'll learn what makes guys like me guys like me. And you'll learn what makes Richard Gere Richard Gere.

A woman can't help but like a guy like Phil Donahue. But she probably wishes she could like him better. When a woman shuts

The Boomers Rock Greenville With Up-Beat Boogie Sound

By ROBIN AYERS
Staff Writer

Dancing shoes was the rule Friday and Saturday nights when The Boomers stepped onto the New Deli stage with music guaranteed to inspire the body into rhythmic motion.

I was there Saturday to hear this Raleigh-based trio play sets that featured original tunes by such diverse names as Waylon Jennings, Willie Nelson, The Clash, Stray Cats and Rockpile.

Vince Brooks, drummer, bassist Craig Dittmar and guitarist Bill Painter are an energetic group who played two long sets for an appreciative crowd. The Boomers prefer long sets and short breaks as opposed to groups who like it the other way around.

It seems that a band, or any organized group, has a spokesperson who stands out and takes the wheel. Bill Painter fills this position well. Vince Brooks is rather calm as drummers go. Craig Dittmar is "the quiet one." Craig said, "They call me Mr. Sunshine... chuckles... the ox." Ah, the strong silent type.

The band has a three-phase plan for putting an audience under their spell. Before is the phase in which the band builds up a feverish momentum. During, phase two, is an effort to maintain the momentum. After, phase three, is a slow down for the audience because it's time you "got a rent a room..."

"The Official Dance Band of the 1984 Olympics" began the night with "Ain't Living Long Like This," by Waylon Jennings. Elvis Presley's "That's Alright Mamma" and Eddie

Young, Vaughn, Stray Cats Inspired By Elvis, Jerry Lee

By MIKE HAMER
Assistant Entertainment Editor

When Elvis Presley made his first recordings with Scotty Moore and Bill Black for Sun Records back in 1954, he created a stir in the pop music culture that hasn't died down yet. Presley, as well as Carl Perkins, Johnny Burnette, and Jerry Lee Lewis, were among the first white artists to combine the black, "race" sound of the blues and rhythm and blues with the white sound of country music. That synthesis gave us rockabilly music — the roots of rock n' roll — and it took the nation by storm. Two generations later while musicians are still playing rock and roll in every style from new wave to hard rock, we are hearing a revival of that simple, brash early rock and roll sound.

In Everybody's Rockin' by Neil Young and the Shocking Pinks on Geffen Records, we find Young bouncing back from his technopop release of this past winter to a smooth rendering of some original tunes that sound like they were written back in the days of Dwight D. Eisenhower and James Dean. Young covers tunes by Elvis, Jimmy Reed and James Moore, but I'd recommend the original versions in each case.

The problem with this record is that it's too smooth. If we have ever needed some of Young's jangling lead guitar work, we need it on this record, and it is conspicuously missing. Perhaps these California players are so used to playing in a laid-back style that they can't cut the rough edge needed for this early rock and roll music.

Not one of the cuts on this record is bad; there just isn't the edge or the sadness that we've come to expect from an artist of Young's stature. Only one song, "Wonderin'," is up to Young's usual high standards.

In the tradition of such Texas-based guitar players as T-Bone Walker, Gatemouth Brown and Johnny Winter, we now have another Texas blues guitarist to add to the list — Stevie Ray Vaughn. The listener can hear the echoes of the great blues guitarists in Vaughn's playing — and even some echoes of Jimi Hendrix.

With Texas Flood on CBS, Vaughn, with drummer Chris Layton and bassist Tommy Shannon, has succeeded in putting out an album of solid tunes that serve primarily as a vehicle for his guitar work. There are no

N.C. Art Museum Shows Old Masters In New Galleries

By RENE MEYER
Staff Writer

Last August the doors to the North Carolina Museum of Art in downtown Raleigh closed. The paintings were packed and the move began to the museum's new location on Blue Ridge Road.

In April the new museum opened amid a fanfare of parties and special events. The galleries containing 20th century American works and ancient art were the featured exhibits. The treasured European collection remained under wraps awaiting its turn. It finally came two weekends ago.

Once again the museum celebrated with parties, tours, lectures, concerts and educational films. Works by Botticelli, Raphael, Rubens, Gainsborough and Monet were among the 150 paintings from the old masters collection chosen for exhibit — a mere third of the total. The intention is to avoid the crowding of by country and chronology through the ten galleries, a logical and harmonious arrangement. The museum's 18-foot ceilings recreate the spaciousness of the churches and halls that the paintings were originally located in. Gallery walls, painted soft pinks, grays and blues, provide a pleasing but neutral background for viewing the works. The large gallery rooms, covering 16,000 square feet, allow children to scamper about without disturbing their deeply involved parents.

The new museum is designed with the non-museum goer in mind. Helpful explanations are at every corner giving such tips as why the acid on your fingers can damage the art work. Guided and recorded tours can be rented for special exhibits.

Boomers Love To Boogie Hard

Cochran's "20 Flight Rock" followed in swift succession.

The personality of a band is reflected in the music it plays, and this is true of The Boomers. In "I'm Trying to Decide," they wail, "One's too many and a hundred's not enough."

Guitar solos were prominent. Bill Painter, who studied music two years at North Texas State University, plays his instrument well. A good musician knows his limit, and Bill seems aware of his. On "Is It You Banging On the Front Door," a slow, bluesy song, Bill is careful with the solo bridge when the pace quickens. His playing is clear, and nothing is lost.

Craig Dittmar is well versed on bass, complementing the guitar and standing out on his own. Drummer Vince Brooks makes the drums a part of the music, and he doesn't use them for filler or over-extended solos. The Boomers are a tight ensemble who go for a group effort.

Each of the trio sings and takes turns taking the lead. Craig was featured in "It's All in the Papers," a lively dance song with a staccato-like tempo that gives a twist to the rock rhythm.

Vince sang out on "You Can't Make Up Your Mind." It is especially difficult for a drummer to sing melody while trying to maintain consistent rhythm, but Vince held his own. Commenting on the fast pace of their lively repertoire, Vince said, "We wear out dancers a lot."

Together about 18 months, all the members are original. Prior to the Boomers, Craig, Vince and Bill played in The Real Gone Cats, a band who played Greenville during their time together. The Cats played a lot of Buddy Holly and the Beatles, as well as original songs.

Although most of the program consisted of songs by established writers, The Boomers are working on their own songs. Vince said it is hard to be original, "for the sake of originality."

"What More Can I Do" is an original composition of The Boomers, and its quality is as good as any of the songs by more renowned artists. Of the songs they play, Bill said they, "Adapt (the songs) to our own style." The songs performed by The Boomers Saturday night did indeed sound fresh and were enthusiastically played. The group strengthens its playing ability by arranging. A good example is Vince and Bill's arrangement of "Just Like Romeo and Juliet."

With more original songs in the works, Bill said with his tongue planted in his cheek, "We knew we had to write some songs with heavy commercial potential," his tongue planted in his cheek.

"Basically," Vince said, "the whole point of the band is to have fun...Add more always for variety." The Boomers' attitude shows in their music and in their exuberance in playing. The band and the dancers shared the floor, and it was easy to get caught up in the music because there was the feeling of being a part of it. The band says it is hard to find songs for three instruments, but they'll try anything and, "Anything anyone wants to do...gotta take some chances once in awhile."

When asked whose music they grew up on, Bill said, "It's hard to say...we draw from so many sounds." The sounds inspiring The Boomers range from The Fabulous Thunderbirds of Texas to Prince and The Time (Prince's proteges) of Minneapolis.

The band said, "We think there's a lot of discrimination on radio." They were referring to black artists not getting as much airplay as they should. The most heard from seems to be Prince and Michael Jackson. The field is large but the playing bench is small. To keep the music fresh, The Boomers like to practice a lot but their best practice is playing gigs. At home the band keeps their music and wit nimble at Cafe Deja Vu, P.C. Goodtimes, and Grinderswitch in Durham.

The Boomers goals include having 2000 song by this time next year to help maintain the freshness of the band. They are also looking for a manager. Bill said, "If there's any budding managers, dance on over."

When asked about Pirate Country, Bill said, "We really like Greenville, but we got our clothes ripped off last time. Greenville's got some radical people. I've been to 14 bars tonight and everybody's crazy. I dare not say anymore."

new blues lyrics here--just some fair renditions of several blues cliches. But if you're a fan of hot guitar leads, you'll like this record. Vaughn plays well and he plays aggressively; he squeezes a myriad of textures out of his instrument. In fact, I would say that his main weakness is his tendency to play too much.

"Dirty Pool" is an example of a song where Vaughn lets it all out; he's giving his ex-lover the third degree, and he flails away at the guitar throughout. This aggressiveness works, but the song would have been even more powerful had Vaughn allowed himself to kick back and let his guitar rest in various places in the song.

Vaughn will likely get the most mileage out of "Pride and Joy." It's a good song and has been released as a single, but it's not my favorite on the record. My favorite is an instrumental called "Lenny." This song has more soul--more feeling, than any other tune here. The title track, "Texas Flood," is also worthy of mention.

The Stray Cats don't only rant and rave on their second release, (Rant n' Rave, EMI) they also growl, strut, and purr. The best thing about these cats is that you can't help but believe them. They have the primitive feeling and the looseness about early rock and roll that reminds me of the way the Rolling Stones approach the blues.

Guitarist Brian Setzer wrote all of the songs on the album, with the exception of a couple of songs on which he collaborated with bassist Lee Drucker and drummer Jim McDonnell. Setzer writes within the rockabilly genre, but he writes with authority and authenticity and thus avoids the cliches that Neil Young has fallen into.

I have some favorites on this record. "Look at that Cadillac," in which Setzer celebrates every young man's longing for that big ride, is a classic. The addition of Mel Collins' horn work shows Dave Edmunds' production expertise. If the Stray Cats can keep Edmunds as their producer, they should be assured of continuing success.

The ballad "I Won't Stand in Your Way," shows Setzer's versatility as a writer. This is the only slow song on the record, but it works just fine; it shows off some brilliant guitar sound from Setzer's old Gretsch.

Two other favorites are "She's Sexy and 17," a celebration of the joys of rebellion and of adolescent love and "Too Hip, Gotta Go," a song about cutting free from the bonds of a commitment to explore the fast world of rock and roll.

With all of the technology that is available to musicians these days, it's comforting to know that a group can put out such a solid sound using only one guitar, a string bass, and a bare bones drum set. Simplicity comes through again.

If you like this early rockabilly--rock n'roll music, it would behoove you to check into some of the reissues that are available these days. The classic one is Elvis' The Sun Sessions on RCA. I would also highly recommend any of Carl Perkins' early releases on Sun Records. You may also want to try Johnny Burnette's The Rock n' Roll Trio on Solid Smoke. The Best of Jerry Lee Lewis is still available, as are good reissues of Eddie Cochran and Gene Vincent material.

Thank-you, Mick.

ACC Players Picked

GREENSBORO (UPI) — North Carolina State linebacker Vaughan Johnson and Virginia safety Lester Lyles were named Atlantic Coast Conference defensive players of the week today.

Johnson, a senior from Morehead City, was named the league's outstanding defensive lineman for the second straight week after making four solo tackles and four assists in the Wolfpack's 45-0 shutout of the Citadel.

Johnson also made a second-quarter interception in the game and broke up three pass attempts.

"Vaughan had an excellent overall game," North Carolina State coach Tom Reed said.

Lyles, a junior from Washington, set up the Cavalier's winning drive against James Madison when he intercepted a pass in Virginia's end zone with the score tied 14-14. Following the interception, Virginia drove 76 yards to score and ice the game, 21-14.

Baker Praises Unity

There are many reasons for the Pirates' success offensively, but Baker lists team unity as the biggest. "We don't have one or two superstars on offense," he said.

"We have 11 good players who do their job for the sake of the team. I think the closeness of this group is best exemplified when after scoring a touchdown, the entire team huddles in the end zone and congratulates each other."

When speaking of the goals for his offensive unit, Baker doesn't have any. "My only goals are for the team," he said. "I just want everybody to take one game at a time, and if we can't do that, there's no telling how far this team will go."

Allison Grabs Lead

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Bobby Allison's third consecutive victory, a come-from-behind victory over Geoff Bodine in the Dover 400, propelled him into a 101-point lead in the Grand National point standings, according to weekly NASCAR statistics released Monday.

Allison's victory Sunday gives him 3,733 points to 3,632 to Darrell Waltrip, who finished fifth at Dover.

Ironically, Allison held a 101-point lead over Waltrip at the same time last year.

Waltrip managed to catch Allison in the final races of 1982 and captured the point championship.

Bill Elliott holds third place with 3,411 points, while Richard Petty is fourth with 3,317 points and Harry Gant with 3,218 is fifth.

Mack, Smith Chosen

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Clemson fullback Kevin Mack and North Carolina flanker Mark Smith were named Atlantic Coast Conference offensive players-of-the-week Monday.

Mack, a senior from Kings Mountain, carried the ball 15 times for 91 yards in the Tiger's 16-16 stalemate with Georgia. Currently the ACC's sixth leading rusher, Mack has earned more than 90 yards for two straight weeks.

Smith, a senior from Fayetteville, hauled in six passes for 121 yards and three touchdowns in North Carolina's 48-17 drubbing of Miami of Ohio.

Smith and Mack were chosen as offensive players-of-the-week by a special committee of the Atlantic Coast Conference Sportswriters Association.
