Rules 'Blunder' Causes Election Cancellation

By JENNIFER JENDRASIAK
News Editor

Because of election rule violations, the SGA elections were cancelled shortly before noon yesterday, making this the second year in a row that elections have been cancelled because of procedure violations. They have been tentatively rescheduled for Oct. 3.

This year's problem arose from a list of Greek candidates distributed by campus fraternities and sororities. Greek candidates running for representative positions were listed, along with selections for write-in positions. While the sheet itself was not in violation of election rules, copies of it were found at some of the polling places, violating a rule prohibiting campaign literature within 25 feet of the polls.

SGA President John Rainey said he received a call from East Carolinian Managing Editor Greg Rideout at 11:15 a.m., informing him that one of the sheets was on the voting table in front of the Student Supply Store.

"I went down there to check on it and found three sheets on the table so I took them and threw them away," Rainey said. "I then told the poll tenders that there is no partisan literature permitted within 25 feet of the polling places."

More sheets were found at the Croatan he was asked if he was a Greek. When he said yes, one of the poll tenders then showed him which candidates to vote for.

Following the discovery of the violations, Rainey and Elections Committee Chairman Howard Lipman decided to cancel the elections. "This was unfortunate because of all the hard work and preparations that had gone into planning the elections," Rainey said.

Rainey stressed that no one individual or group was at fault in the incident. "It's just something that happened," he said.

Lipman said one of his elections committee members noticed some of the Greek flyers at a polling place shortly after the polls opened and informed the poll tenders of the rules. Lipman said that the people tending polls at the Croatan said they were unaware of the flyers' presence.

"From what I've heard, it was a major blunder," Lipman said. "There were just too many people at too many places," he added.

Lipman did not assign blame for the "blunder" to any one group or individual either. "I think it was basically due to a lack of knowledge," he said. According to Lipman, the sheets of paper were left at the polls because students who had used them when voting had neglected to take them away.

The major problem was that the availability of the sheets was "unfair" to the students not listed on them since it might affect the decisions of some voters, Lipman said.

"I don't believe there was any malice intended, it was just a communications breakdown," Lipman said. "The issue lies with the polltenders," Rainey said. "They should have removed them (the flyers)."

Lipman said in order to avoid the same mistake members of his committee will be stationed at each of the polls when the elections are held again next week. "I'm not blaming anybody for it, it was an honest mistake. I just don't want to see it happen again," Lipman said.

The incident was termed "unfortunate" by Glenn Conway, president of the Inter-Fraternity Council. "Everything we did was above-board," he said. "Unfortunately a few Greeks were a little too zealous." He added that he feels most of the sheets were left at the polls through an oversight on the part of those utilizing them.

Conway was quick to point out that there is no connection between the fraternity and sorority members manning the polls and this incident. "It had nothing to do with the polls being manned by Greeks," he said.

"Just so there is no suspicion next week, I would prefer to get other people to man the polls," Conway added. He attributed the incident to a lack of communication.

Pee Dee Receives Publicity, But Little Respite From Name

By JENNIFER JENDRASIAK
News Editor

A battle being waged against Pee Dee, the mascot of the ECU Pirates, is receiving some publicity but is not making much progress.

A meeting of the advisory committee on the use of the university logo was held Wednesday to determine procedures concerning the use of the logo. The committee concluded that any use of the character in a way that "would demean or distort it," according to University Attorney David Stevens, is illegal. The committee was uncertain of its role in deciding on the fate of the name of the mascot but will ask Chancellor John Howell if it is proper for them to decide this issue.

The controversy arose because of plans made by The East Carolinian to print t-shirts with a "Pee Dee busters" symbol, similar to the Ghostbusters symbol. According to a patent attorney consulted by Stevens, this would be illegal. Additionally, while an informal polling by East Carolinian staff members found a vast majority of students to be opposed to the name of the mascot, approximately 50 percent liked the actual character.

Because of the results of the poll, actions have been taken to facilitate a name change for Pee Dee, including a question concerning the Pirate's name on the SGA elections ballot. The name was chosen in a contest held for area school children as part of a marketing effort undertaken by the Athletic Department.

Although the name Pee Dee is not patented or licensed, technically it has been made official by the Athletic Department. Director of Athletics Ken Karr said the mascot and its name are an integral part of the university's current marketing strategy, and to change them would "set the marketing program back three years."

After speaking with Dr. Howell, either another meeting will be called to address the name change issue or The East Carolinian will be advised to use different channels to air its grievances.

Requirements Change

Students have historically had difficulty registering to vote in Pitt County because of residency requirements. The North Carolina State Board of Elections recently released an administrative directive which should help solve this problem. Among the items included on the directive are:

All county boards of elections shall immediately cease use of any questionnaire when taking an application to register from a college student.

No such questionnaire is permissible unless such questionnaire is required from all applicants who apply to register.

All county boards shall inform all registrars, judges and registration commissioners that students may not be denied permission to register where they attend school solely on the grounds that they are living in a dormitory or are students, provided they are otherwise qualified.

SGA Legislature

Program Gives Freshmen Experience

By HAROLD JOYNEE
Assistant News Editor

The Freshmen Aide Program at ECU offers interested freshmen an opportunity to gain hands-on experience in the Student Government.

According to Staci Falkowitz, freshman aide coordinator, the selected student will have a chance to actually work with various student government officers. She said, "Each student will work with the SGA president, treasurer and the legislature for a few days so they learn how the system works." Falkowitz added, "This is an excellent program for freshmen who are interested in becoming involved with the student government."

Any interested student may fill out an application at the SGA office, located in Mendenhall Student Center, before Oct. 1. Falkowitz said a committee will review the applications and screen the students. "What we're looking for," she said, "are enthusiastic freshmen who are genuinely interested in the student government." She said she invites all freshmen to become involved with the program, before it is too late.

"I feel there is a lot of student apathy on campus," she said, "so the Freshmen Aide program was developed to help these interested students become actively involved with the student government. Also, by the time they are a junior or senior, they will have a full understanding of student activities and I definitely think this will make a stronger student body. I encourage all freshmen to consider this opportunity to meet new people and to find out how our student government operates."

Falkowitz also said a student leadership conference has been tentatively planned for Oct. 8 and these selected freshmen will be able to attend this function. Chancellor Howell will be one of the scheduled speakers.

Shown above is a student using a list provided by campus Greeks in order to select his candidates in yesterday's SGA elections. The elections were cancelled and moved to next Wednesday.

Free Delivery

15 minutes is not a bad delivery time considering he had to go to all this trouble. Heck, I might even give him a tip; mighty generous of me, huh?

Drinking Law Causes Campus Changes

(CPS) — For the first time in memory, University of South Carolina students who are under 19 can't drink this fall.

The result, as USC officials concoct a way to enforce the new 19-year-old drinking age the state just adopted, seems to be a sort of chaotic uneasiness.

Officials can't even decide how student groups should pay for alcohol consumed at social events, since using activity fee money would be "unfair" to under-19 students, says Mike Shaver of the Campus Alcohol Project.

Even the campus bar is changed. The Golden Spur is replacing beer with pizza just to avoid the hassles the new drinking policy creates.

Wild rumors, closed-down campus haunts, job losses and even complete overhauls of college social activities have been marking the first weeks of school as scores of colleges open up for the first time under new legal minimum drinking age laws or tougher on-campus drinking policies.

Many experts worry the new regulations are confusing, ill-planned and virtually unenforceable.

Alcohol, moreover, is so closely associated with college life that many students simply don't know how to spend their leisure time without drinking, says Charles Tucker, a University of South Florida sociologist.

The rising drinking ages and tougher campus drinking rules nationwide are "sure to cause concern and turmoil on many campuses," adds Gerardo Gonzales, a University of Florida counselor and director of BACCHUS, a national group aimed at controlling student drinking.

It's "a situation that administrators realistically cannot enforce," he asserts.

If schools are going to make the new rules work, they need to provide alternative social activities, say Tucker.

Without help, students are left to entertain rumors of undercover campus police infiltrating dorm and rush parties to catch underaged drinkers.

That rumor was so widespread at Arizona State that ASU police two weeks ago had to issue a public denial to reassure students.

And University of California-Berkeley administrators last week chastised the student newspaper, the Daily Californian, for running an article that told students how to get fake I.D.s to obtain liquor despite the university's newly-adopted restrictions.

On some campuses, new drinking rules are costing students their part-time jobs.

At the University of Illinois-Champaign, local bar owners recently predicted as many as 150 students could lose their part-time waiting and bartending jobs if the town government decides to require all liquor servers to be 21.

Some observers even fear the new crackdown on student drinking could boomerang, forcing younger students to become "underground" drinkers.

Left with no place to legally drink on campus, they warn under-aged students will do more off-campus drinking, more drinking and driving, and be less inclined to drink responsibly.

"Most of the campus drinking programs are community-wide programs that deal generally with all students," notes Howard Blane, professor of education and psychology at the University of Pittsburgh.

"There's been precious little research done on such programs, and of the little that has been done the results aren't very encouraging," he says.

The nationwide trend to raise all drinking ages to 21 has "shifted the focus from alcohol education to policy enforcement," Gonzales complains.

"We encourage alcohol education and responsible drinking, rather than blanket prohibitions," he says.

But blanket prohibitions seem to be the trend these days.

While 23 states had minimum drinking ages of 21 a year ago, this fall the total has climbed to 27, with a number of states still debating -- or planning to debate -- raising their drinking ages to 21.

And with a new federal law which will withhold federal highway funds from states that haven't raised their drinking ages to 21 by 1986, college students can expect further clampdowns as the remaining 23 states with under-21 drinking ages rush to meet the deadline.

"I imagine we'll see some pretty hot legislative battles in the coming year," says Bob Bingham, director of the State Student Association in Washington, D.C., which has helped student governments nationwide lobby against drinking age hikes in their states.

"I personally think (raising drinking ages to 21) is unfortunate," says Pitt's Blane. "If 18-year-olds are allowed to vote, fight in the military, and sign contracts, they should be allowed to drink. We're simply driving student drinkers undercover."

The new clampdown on drinking "is an example of linear thinking that does not really meet the problem on its own level," concludes Robert Conyne, study author and director of UC's Alcohol Education Center.

Student Injured In Accident Is Recovering

By HAROLD JOYNER
Assistant News Editor

An ECU student who was seriously injured in a hit-and-run accident following a party at the Kappa Phi fraternity house in early September said he is recuperating well at the Rehabilitation Center at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Arthur Griffin, a junior

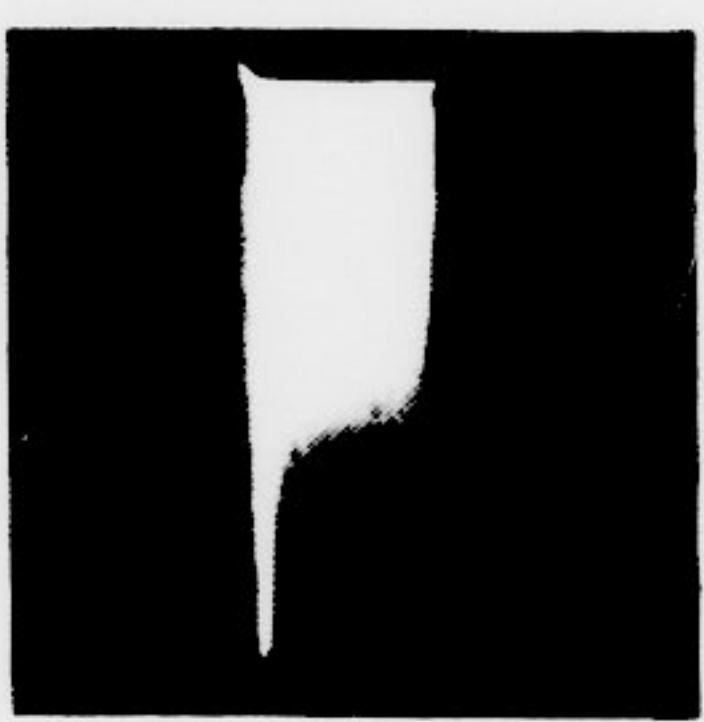

English major, said he is still unsure of exactly what happened the night of the accident but is slowly remembering facts pertaining to the accident.

"Right now, I am spending about 4 to 5 hours a day in therapy," he said. This includes occupational, physical and psychiatric therapy. "Hopefully I won't be here much longer," Griffin added.

Griffin is still an enrolled student and said he is able to complete his class assignments through the rehabilitation program.

"The doctors at the center are really pleased with my progress," he said. "I had to go to Duke for surgery on my head and I am healing from that now." Griffin said he lost the vision out of his left eye.

Elections

Ignorance Stops Balloting

Two times up to bat; two strikeouts. Not a good record, but it's the one our SGA elections have grabbed onto. Wednesday morning the balloting was cancelled due to partisan campaign literature at the polling booths. It was there, basically, because of ignorance. The votes at the Student Supply Store and Croatan polling areas were thus tainted and the election called off.

We're not here to blame the Greeks or their idea. In fact, the active effort by the Greek organizations to get their members elected to the SGA Legislature is admirable. In an era of increasing apathy about the political system, a concerted effort by anyone to increase awareness of the system should be applauded. We have no qualms with the Greeks passing out a list of who to vote for, we just ask that they not be handed out within 25 feet of the polling stations.

The individuals we are going to put a little blame on are the poll tenders. They were instructed by the elections chairperson on the rules — what is and is not allowed to happen. Their fault may be due to ignorance or just plain stupidity, but no matter what, the people manning the polls at the student store who let the list stay on their table should have known better. Common sense tells you better.

Perhaps, as the Inter-fraternity Council president said, the Greeks manning the polls were a little over-zealous in trying to get support for the Greeks. We are sure they'll know better next time. Keep that zealous spirit — it's needed in the electoral process — but leave the lists off the tables.

We are glad the elections have been cancelled and new ones slated for next week. It was the right thing to do under the circumstances, and a courageous decision in light of last year's blunder. SGA President John Rainey and Elections Chairperson Howard Lipman should take it in stride and remember Murphy's Law next week. To the Greeks, keep up the electoral spirit. And, lastly to the poll tenders, know the rules.

Sniffles Signal Voting

By IAN CASE PUNNETT
Collegiate Features Syndicate

My sniffles have spoken; Election Day '84 must be nigh.

One good snort tells me a lot. Calendars notwithstanding, my annual end-of-summer cold is the sure sign that fall has befallen the Great Plains again. Sleeping with the windows open as late into September as I can, there comes a morning that shows the warm night air has flown south; my runny nose is once more off to the races and November is lurking behind the first pile of dead leaves.

And as sure as the snot on my upper lip, November will kick off with the usual bi-partisan snowjobs which forewarn the coming blizzards of winter. And so, like every other Election Day, my sniffles remind me of all the past years I have been shivering inside of voting booths, unable to warm-up to either of the major presidential contenders.

Unless something extraordinary happens soon — like Reagan gets a Mohawk or Mondale has the air let out of his face — I will remain convinced that neither of these political pin-ups has the chutzpah needed to return this nation to authentic greatness.

After three-plus years of Reagan's hardline, after Mondale's three-year campaign and after the self-defeating Democratic primary, neither candidate seems much more than a political posterboy.

Like the Jerry Lewis telethon, the national conventions in San Francisco and Dallas were little more than star-studded pitches for more support (equals money), with Reagan and Mondale emerging as nation-saving symbols of their respective parties. After many hours of this sitcom, a podium appearance by the nominees on leg braces and crutches seemed noticeably absent.

Further, pursuant to the repetition of history, neither of these Republican or Democratic symbols has made a move nor dared a statement unless it has been pre-approved by six white guys in striped silk ties. Both Reagan and Mondale are campaigners not of inspiration but of constipation — always holding back until the other one goes first.

For this, I am accused by some of being too flippant about the seriousness of our nation's political process. To that, I promise to take voting more seriously when and if I am given a serious candidate for whom to vote.

The first sniffles of the season, therefore, serve to remind me that again we are faced with another election all of default: white collars supporting Mondale only because they want to take the guns out of Reagan's hands until he learns not to point them at other boys and girls; blue collars rallying for Reagan only because Mondale looks as politically appetizing as a plate of dried mashed potatoes. Dried, instant mashed potatoes.

Without the democratic spirit stirred in me, my ballot seems as Kleenex and my alternative returns: cast a vote on it or blow my nose in it. There is hardly a difference. Come Election Day, a lot will depend on how my cold is doing.

For if I am to vote for simple symbols, then I prefer to wait until I can vote for a candidate which symbolizes substantial things. Let's start with a man or woman who knows the difference between "peace" and "not fighting," between "economic growth" and "white people getting their jobs back."

Still, until then I am told, it is my responsibility as a free American to exercise my right to vote. Voting, I am lectured, is the most glorious duty citizens of the world can have. It is, I am scolded, nothing to sneeze at.

But as the apolitical frosts gather on my closed window sill, my nose itches and the temptation becomes increasingly harder to resist.

Voting For Helms Is Unintelligent

I too share Scott Thomas' amazement ("Debate Doo-Do", Sept. 25, 1984) over the third televised debate between Gov. Jim Hunt and Jesse Helms. I am also amazed at the number of people with whom I have spoken who intend to vote for our beloved Senator in November.

It is beyond my realm of comprehension that any intelligent, well-informed college student could have the poor judgement to support Helms for a position as important to the people of this state as Senator. If I may reiterate what Mr. Thomas declared, not once did this "fine spokesman" address an issue pertinent to the people of our fair state, not once did he justify his harmful actions in the capital and not once did he take a stand save for repetitiously describing himself as a Reagan conservative. (Possibly Brother Jesse hopes to ride back to Washington on the coat tails of the president).

Those of you who have told me that Jesse stands up for that which he believes in must not be aware that the only reason he's standing is so he can get high enough out of the gutter to hurl false or misleading accusations at the next Senator of North Carolina.

I say the next Senator of North Carolina because I have enough confidence in the people of my home state to believe that while many support Helms the majority of North Carolinians are conscientious enough that they want a Senator with integrity, intelligence and ability.

State Stats

It's that time of year again when the Pirates invade Raleigh. Over the years, this rivalry has generated a lot of excitement and some impressive statistics.

As Chief for the NCSU campus police; however, I want you to be aware of some other statistics of which none of us should be proud. Each year this department makes more arrests for disruptive behavior during and after the ECU-State football game than for all the others on our home schedule combined.

Let's make sure that these "statistics" are not the reason that this great rivalry is ended! Enjoy the game but restrict the "action" to the team on the football field.

Reagan's Record

"The one card that's been missing in these (arms control) negotiations has been the possibility of an arms race."

Ronald Reagan
Oct. 2, 1980

Last Tuesday, The East Carolinian noted an undisputable fact: Soviet-American talks of any kind should be hailed as a major breakthrough at this point. However, Reagan's talks with Andrei Gromyko should not overshadow the Reagan record on arms control. Nor can we afford to overlook what beyond arms control is Reagan's overriding motivation in meeting the Soviet leader — his reelection.

Let's get the Reagan record straight: In the last 25 years, six American presidents have produced 20 arms control agreements. Ronald Reagan has failed to produce a single arms control agreement.

In 1963, Ronald Reagan opposed the Limited Test Ban Treaty. In 1968, Reagan opposed the Non-Proliferation Treaty. In 1972, Reagan opposed the SALT-1 agreement and the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty (both negotiated by Richard Nixon).

Ronald Reagan has also opposed SALT-II and the Peaceful Nuclear Explosions Treaty.

The message to be gained from all of this is clear: Ronald Reagan has not only failed to produce an arms control agreement but has opposed the bipartisan arms control efforts of the last quarter century.

The talks have included no specific agenda and no specific proposals considered. Except to assist in Reagan's re-election, the talks promised and produced no results. Reagan's record on arms control remains intact.

Voters this year are offered a choice between a president who has never supported any arms control agreement and a candidate who not only supports arms control but helped negotiate SALT II. On this issue, as with many others, the choice is Democrat.

Register Now

I wish to address the topic of voter registration on this campus. The N.C. Board of Elections has cleared the way for all students of ECU to register for the upcoming elections. It doesn't matter if you are from out of state or in state for registration purposes.

Being an important election year for both parties, there will be a non-partisan registration drive on campus. The days will be Oct. 1 and 2 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the following places: Mendenhall Student Center, Student Supply Store, the Croatan and the allied health building. It is very important for all students to register for this election and hopefully this registration drive will accomplish that goal.

At Recital Hall

New Music

By CARLYN EBERT
Staff Writer

A Festival of New Music featuring works by two young American composers will be presented Thursday, Oct. 4 at 8:15 p.m. in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall. Composers Edmund Cioneck and John Anthony Lennon will be on hand to watch the Instead Players, ECU's New Music Ensemble, which includes students, faculty members and a guest artist. They will perform five pieces written since 1979 at the free concert.

The program includes Cioneck's duet for soprano and piano Four Love Songs, and a solo marimba performance of A Tide of Voices. His Rumble, a jazzy trio for tuba, double bass and percussion, features the additional color of a tape-recorded drum machine track. Lennon's works on the bill are the solo guitar Another's Fandango, and Distances Within Me, a lush, impressionistic duet for piano and alto saxophone.

"Both of these composers have responded to the prevailing tendency in music today, toward what's being called the 'New Romanticism,'" said coordinator Donna Coleman. "It's tonal."

A Festival of New Music featuring works by two young American composers will be presented Thursday, Oct. 4 at 8:15 p.m. in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall. Composers Edmund Cioneck and John Anthony Lennon will be on hand to watch the Instead Players, ECU's New Music Ensemble, which includes students, faculty members and a guest artist. They will perform five pieces written since 1979 at the free concert.

The program includes Cioneck's duet for soprano and piano Four Love Songs, and a solo marimba performance of A Tide of Voices. Lennon's works on the bill are the solo guitar Another's Fandango, and Distances Within Me, a lush, impressionistic duet for piano and alto saxophone.

"Both of these composers have responded to the prevailing tendency in music today, toward what's being called the 'New Romanticism,'" said coordinator Donna Coleman. "It's tonal music, as opposed to the very abstract or cerebral style of the '60s and '70s."

Coleman, assistant professor of piano and director of the Instead Players, invited Cioneck and Lennon — both schoolmates of hers from the University of Michigan — to give Greenville a taste of the different musical expressions produced by the two composers with a common background and training. In the '70s, the three musicians performed in a group called the Electric Candlelight consort. "Their music is complementary to each other," said Coleman. "I think people will enjoy them."

Cioneck, a New York-based freelance composer and arranger, studied composition at the University of Michigan and at the Ecole Normale de Musique in Paris as a Fulbright-Hays Fellow. He has taught at the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh and at Nassau Community College. Cioneck, 34, is an assistant at the New York Art Ensemble and the New York Quintet, both of which have premiered his new compositions to critical acclaim.

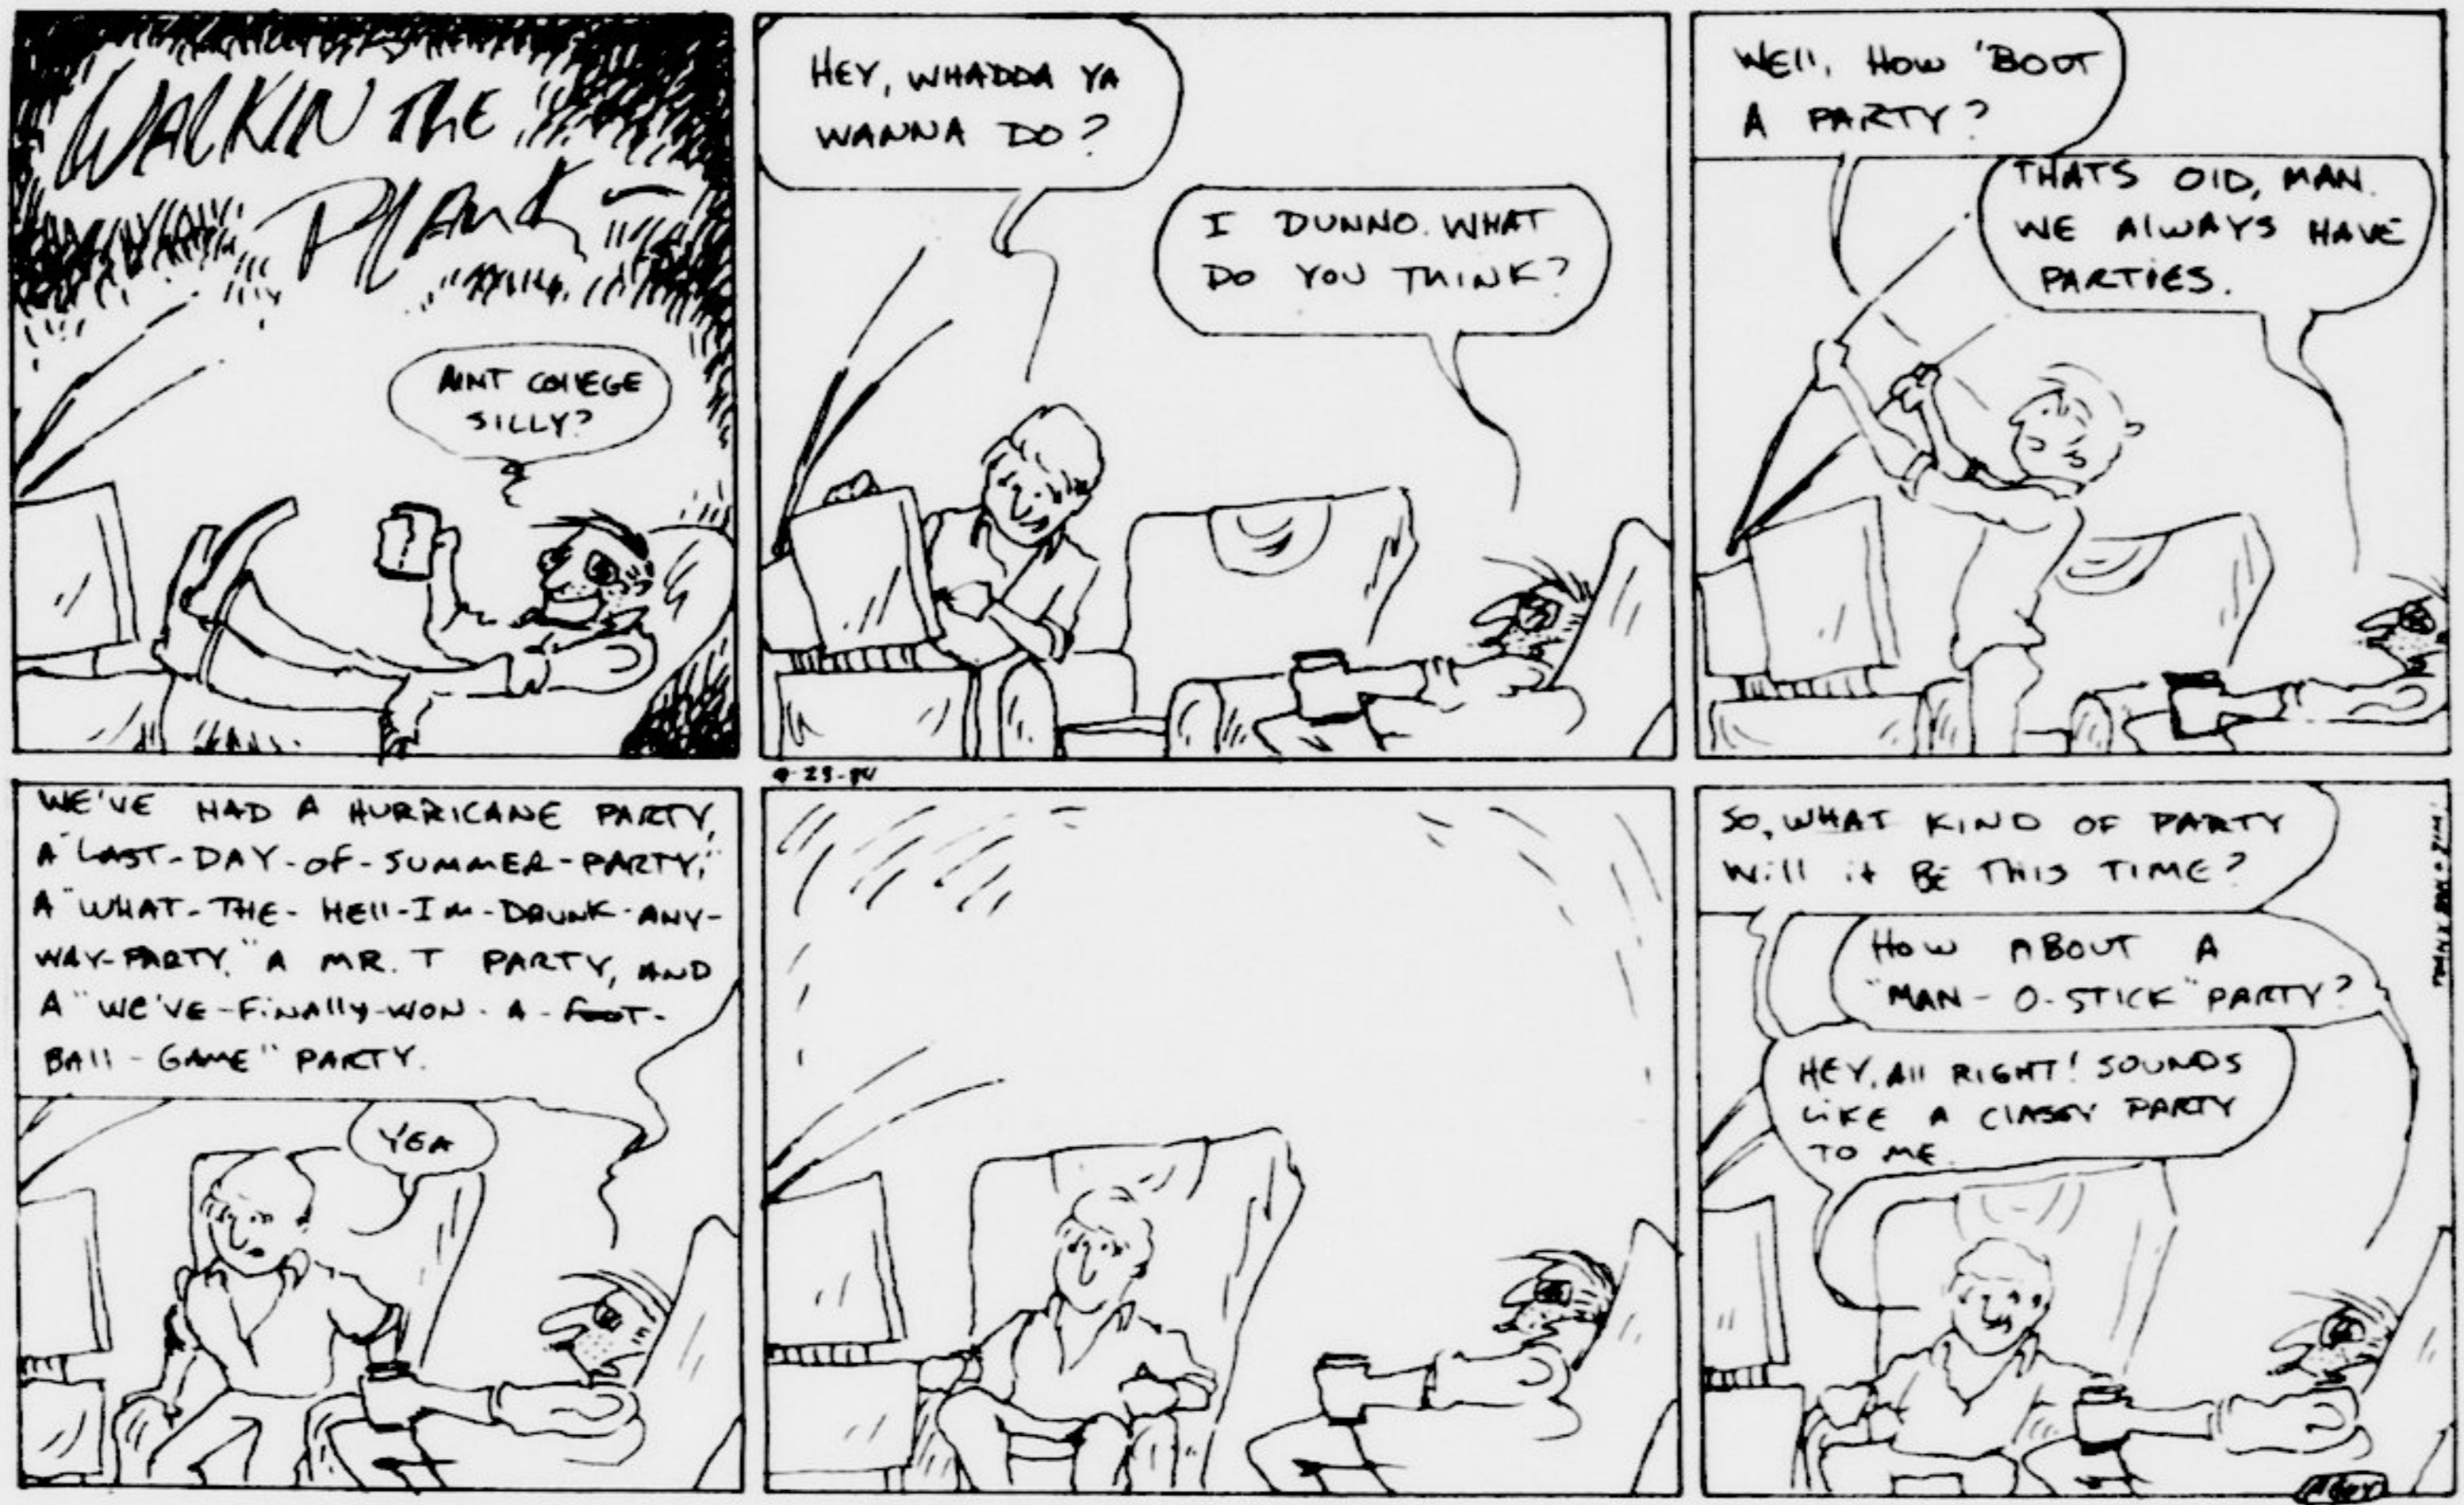

North Carolina native Lennon, 34, teaches composition and theory at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. With composition degrees from the Universities of San Francisco and Michigan, he has received numerous honors including the a Guggenheim Award, the Charles Ives Prize from the American Academy of Arts and Letters, a National Endowment for the Arts grant, a David Bates Prize and a Norlin Foundation Fellowship with the MacDowell Colony.

A dress rehearsal in the Recital Hall on Wednesday, Oct. 3 at 7 p.m. is open to the public, as is a lecture-discussion led by the guest composers at 11 a.m. on the day of the concert.

Coleman points out that no special understanding of "new music" is necessary to appreciate these works. "The whole point of going to a concert is just to enjoy it, not to make a big intellectual study," she said. "This particular concept of new music will be very enjoyable to all."

(CPS) — In-state students at Michigan's four-year state colleges and universities won't have to pay any more tuition than they did last year.

But students at Arizona's three state universities will pay 14 percent more, even though the national inflation rate has been around four percent since last fall.

Students nationwide, in short, are finding a mixed tuition picture as they start fall classes. While scattered colleges and university systems have managed to hold increases to a minimum, many other schools have imposed tuition hikes well above the inflation rate.

"There's no trend toward freezing or raising tuition that I'm aware of," says Brooke Breslow of the College Board. "There will be different states and institutions each year that freeze. Some stay stable for two years, then go up. Then others freeze the next year."

In mid-August, the College Board predicted total college costs — which include room and board, books, supplies, transportation, and personal expenses as well as tuition — will rise an average six percent this fall.

Some colleges, of course, have been more successful than others in keeping increases down.

Administrators at all of Michigan's four-year colleges took Gov. James Blanchard's offer to freeze in-state undergraduate tuition in exchange for an 11 percent increase in state funding. "There was some concern among administrators that tuition was too high," says Ron Jursa of Michigan State Higher Education Management. "Colleges were afraid of being priced out of the market."

"I think the freeze is good," stresses Jim Labadie, a senior at Wayne State University in Detroit. "But tuition is still fairly high. I think we're still among the top ten in the country in terms of high tuition rates."

Tuition freezes, in fact, typically don't last. The University of New Mexico has followed last year's tuition freeze with a 10 percent hike this year. "The 10 percent reflects the change in state funding," says UNM budget director Jim Wiegmann. "We also needed to make up somewhat for the 1983-84 freeze."

And this year's freeze in the state of Washington could translate into a 24 percent increase during the 1985-1987 period at state community colleges, says Kate Brown of the Washington Association of Community Colleges.

The cost of education continues to climb, she notes, and while inflation is only four-to-five percent nationally, the Higher Education price index, which measures the cost of goods and services to colleges, is running at 10-to-11 percent increases.

Colleges will spend a total $85.5 billion this school year, according to a National Center for Education Statistics report released last week.

In Arizona, legislative pressure on campuses to raise more money to pay the higher costs convinced the Board of Regents to kick up tuition 14 percent at the three state universities.

"Tuition is set by the regents," says Otis Elliot, spokesman for the regents. "But it's certainly influenced by the governor and the state legislature."

But when legislators and the governor attempted to raise in-state tuition at the State University of New York system, student protest helped kill the proposal.

"The students made their unhappiness clearly known," says Dick Gillman of SUNY Affairs and Development. "We have a pretty strong student body. They went directly to the legislators. Tuition stayed where it was, which pleased us very much."

At least one school managed to roll back tuition this year.

First-through-third-year students at George Washington's med school will pay 1.3 percent less — or $250 — than last year. Fourth-year students get a $100 tuition decrease, from $17,000 to $16,900 a year.

Even those tiny rollbacks, however, are rare nationwide as many schools impose double-digit increases again this fall.

Penn State's increase, for example, is 10.8 percent for 1984-85. An administrative study shows costs at Penn have increased 170 percent since 1972.

"We have looked at every available avenue for breaking the 16-year cycle of tuition increases," university President Bryce Jordan said this summer. "Unfortunately, this year's budget reflects the cumulative effects of past underfunding."

Oklahoma students face 10 percent in-state and 15 percent out-of-state increases this year because of legislative cuts in education funding.

Private colleges and universities are averaging tuition increases of approximately 7.5 percent in 1984-85, the College Board says.

Stanford raised tuition 7.5 percent, considerably below its 10.7 percent average yearly increase since 1971. But in the past decade, the school has risen from eighth to sixth place in tuition costs among comparable institutions.

Cornell and Dartmouth students will pay 7.9 percent more this year. Administrators blame higher energy and maintenance costs and diminishing federal college aid funds for the jump.

University of Miami student leaders blame administrative "mismanagement" for a 7.5 percent cost hike there.

Breakthrough Made In Registration

By JAY STONE Staff Writer

Rob Mullins, a representative of the National Student Campaign for Voter Registration, recently announced a major breakthrough in student voter registration. Previously, according to Mullins, many county officials administered oral or written questionnaires to students. These would help to prohibit a student from registering to vote in the town where he attended school.

The questionnaires employed, Mullins said, dealt with the issue of establishing one's residency. Students were asked questions designed to prove non-residency. These questions were not asked of any other group, Mullins added.

According to Mullins, the breakthrough came when Leslie Winner, a Charlotte lawyer, was contacted by him and asked to study the problem. Ms. Winner then reportedly spoke with the State Attorney General and Chairman of the State Board of Elections, Robert Spearman. Spearman issued a memo advising all county Boards of Elections that the use of discriminatory questionnaires aimed expressly at students is unconstitutional.

"I believe this represents a big breakthrough for students all over the state," said Mullins. "In many places, this will make the first time that students haven't been discouraged from registering to vote. As a result, I'm confident we can set records for student voter registration this year."

Mullins, who is the North Carolina coordinator for the NSCVR, added that his organization is involved in organizing a broad-based coalition of campus groups aimed at registering one million new student voters nationwide. In North Carolina, Mullins said, the goal is 20,000.

"This is a bipartisan effort," Mullins said. "We want to include as many groups as possible in this registration effort."

"It is important to get students to vote," Mullins said. "Only by voting can students expect to have their interests represented."

NAACP Sponsoring Drive

The ECU Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored Persons will be helping with a voter registration drive to be held in a Greenville park from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Oct. 8.

Wilma Case, president of NAACP, said she wants to remind students that the deadline to register to vote in the November elections is very close. She added that anyone interested in helping the group with voter registration should come to a meeting to be held Oct. 1 at 5:30 in the Coffeehouse on the ground floor of Mendenhall. "Students who want to help but can't attend the meeting can help with flyer distribution on Oct. 4 and 5," Case said.

The NAACP is also in the process of holding a campus-wide membership drive with chairmen for different areas of campus. NAACP meetings are held on the second and fourth Monday of each month at Mendenhall.

"The NAACP has been molding the lives of several generations since 1909," Case said. She said the organization's main goal is to protect and advance the rights of minorities, especially where hiring policies are concerned. Voter registration and membership drives are the other two important goals, she said.

An Extremely Common Flick

All the France you ever dreamed of from Paris to La Napoule — elegant restaurants, a boatride past castles and cathedrals, candlelit nighttime scenes, and farmhouses in the country. All these set the tone for a seemingly romantic movie. Even the title Until September sounds romantic. In reality, however, it's just an answer to the question, "How long can you stay?"

Until September starts in an airport and ends in the same place, but in between there are several rain scenes, most pouring with passion. From the very beginning Mo Alexander (Karen Allen), a mid-westerner from Missouri, is captivated by the charming Frenchman, Marcia (Thierry Lhermitte). She is especially attracted by his clear, piercing green eyes — the only outstanding feature about him besides his smooth accent.

After missing a flight to chaparrone high schoolers throughout Europe, Mo finds himself staying in an apartment owned by a friend who just happens to be on vacation. The apartment is also located adjacent to Marcia's. Destined to meet, the two go out on a date and before long they find being separated intolerable.

So what's the big conflict? Mo can't get a passport to any other country for two weeks and the Frenchman is married. Fortunately for him, the rest of the family is vacationing in the south of France. But as for Mo, she's not used to being treated like one of Marcia's amny mistresses. Yet the couple have something special in common — bathtubs, bedrooms and buns.

I guess most young, adventurous couples do have these things in common, but what really holds them together? After all, it can't be the common elements of culture. It's more than difficult to argue with a Frenchman as Mo finds out after making the American dish "french toast." While Marcia demonstrates his knife and fork eating routine, Mo asks if he is ever wrong. Of course that would be impossible for him to admit and in his reply he says, "No. I may not always be right, but I am never wrong." As for the french toast? "Definitely not french at all."

On the flip side was music — light and romantic, and at times flaring and intense. Although it sounds like music for a sofa opera, there was one outstanding performance on classical guitar by newcomer Hutton Cobb, originally from North Carolina.

With little suspense and drama, you might wonder why you paid to see this...acting. There are a few moving scenes, but they are all resolved in the same manner — being frustrated, cry, go to bed, wake up hoping he or she is still there. And all this happens in four weeks? The real question is — is it love or does she just admire him because he's finally learned how to bring a glass of wine to his lips while holding it between his toes and sitting Indian style?

Will Lhermitte Replace American Idols?

(UPI) — Time was when American women melted under the romantic charm of such French lovers as Charles Boyer, Maurice Chevalier, Louis Jourdan and, more recently, Yves Montand.

Today Hollywood doesn't have a resident French cliché leading man.

The suave, tres charmant Gallic lover has given way to the likes of Tom Selleck and Robert Redford or Rob Lowe and Michael Jackson.

However, for American women who still dream of Parisian smoothies with that soft, seductive French accent there is newcomer Thierry Lhermitte, who stars in the new movie Until September.

His name may be unpronounceable, but it is thoroughly French.

Thierry is tall, slender, in his 30s and handsome. But he is hardly cast in the mold of his French predecessors. For one thing he has a Sam Shepard haircut — it stands straight up in unruly disarray. His accent, alas, is barely discernible.

Thierry, moreover, has no intention of becoming another boyer.

"I don't know why Americans expect romance from the French," he said during a quick promotional stop in Hollywood.

"I suppose they still think of us in terms of 19th century novels." "The guy I play in this picture is very earthy. Like most Frenchmen, he leads a very structured life and falls apart when he falls in love. But then again he is involved in the typical French dilemma of love. He has a wife, a mistress and also falls in love with a beautiful American tourist."

The tourist in Until September is played by Karen Allen.

"I think other Frenchmen have played similar roles," Thierry continued, "but I don't intend to follow in their footsteps. For one thing, I understand some Hollywood French actors faked their accents."

"The longer they stayed in America, the thicker their accents became."

Thierry, who is married and the father of two children, studied English in school and devoted two months to intensive tutoring to perfect his English, which he now speaks idiomatically.

He hopes to appear in more American movies and realizes his chances are slim unless he perfects his English. Jean-Paul Belmondo and Alain Delon, two of France's top stars, bombed in Hollywood, unable to surmount the language barrier.

"Hollywood doesn't need actors with heavy French accents," Thierry said. "There are thousands of competent actors right here. Why should producers go with a guy their audiences can't comprehend?"

"With a French accent you might be able to build a career playing maitre d's, chefs or comic lovers, but that is the extent of it. The only French accent that has produced a star in the past 20 years was Inspector Clouseau in the Pink Panther pictures. Peter Sellers' French accent was perfect."

"Of course, Frenchmen resented Clouseau at first. He struck too close to home. But as the Pink Panther pictures increased in popularity, all was forgiven."

"The cultural differences between France and the United States are greater than most people in both countries can believe. Sometimes it is quite subtle. We French are self-conscious about expressing our feelings. We are more reserved while Americans are more outgoing. We are not effusive and would never tell total strangers, 'Have a nice day.'"

"The French tend to doubt the sincerity of the overfriendly American. We try to be more diplomatic because the French ego is more easily bruised." Thierry, unlike many another Gallic import, has a rich sense of humor and a self-mocking attitude untypical of his countrymen.

He is a rising star in Paris. In the past two years he has starred in seven French films, not all of which, he is quick to add, were unqualified hits.

"Our film industry is flourishing," he said with a touch of pride.

"We make about 150 movies a year, many more than a decade ago. They are not made on so lavish a scale as Hollywood. An ordinary French film would cost one million dollars, an expensive film two million. Very small budgets for Hollywood. But then our pictures are released only in French-speaking countries — France, Belgium, Switzerland and sometimes Canada."

"To become an international star, of course, European actors must appear in Hollywood films. Now that I have made a start, I have plans for two additional American pictures, one with Karen (Allen) and another with Michael Gruskoff, who produced Until September.

"First it is necessary to see what happens when this picture is released."

"Until September" is playing at the Plaza Cinema in Greenville.

Sneak Preview Set

By ELAINE PERRY
Staff Writer

Places in the Heart, the first sneak preview of '84, will be shown on Sunday, Sept. 30 at 7 p.m. in Hendrix Theater.

The film stars Sally Field, Danny Glover and John Malkovich are the two male supporting actors. Directed by Robert Benton (who also directed Kramer vs. Kramer), Places in the Heart takes place during the 1930's depression in Wabasha, Texas. The movie is serious and emotional. Jack Kroll of Newsweek said of the movie, "this kind of sensitive craftsmanship is welcome in this day of noisy, blatant movies. Benton's direction is a triumph of his artistry. The movie will also give us a chance to see Sally Field in a role that is very different from her previous work. She plays a woman who is struggling to survive during the depression. The movie is a powerful and moving story that is well worth a sneak preview.

-A Worthwhile Service-

By AMY BONESTEEL
Staff Writer

Hospice, a branch of East Carolina Home Health Services, is a term used to describe the care of persons who have a terminal illness (advanced cancer). It is a private, non-profit organization run by volunteers. The purpose of Hospice care is to help deal with the physical and psychological pains of the patient, give some support to the patient's families, give people a "support system" to help deal with the idea of death, and to help people learn more about terminal illnesses. These objectives are carried out in the home environment, where the patient and family will feel more comfortable.

There are different services available to patients, generally divided into two main categories: Palliative care includes medical relief of pain and other symptoms, while Supportive care is mentally helping the patient and family deal with the patient's illness.

The various professional services include skilled nursing by R.N.'s, Physical Therapy, Occupational Therapy, and Speech Pathology. Other volunteers may be Home Health Aides which are trained by the Agency to provide personal care such as bathing, feeding, and other personal care. Hospice also provides emotional support and counseling for the patient and family. The services of Hospice are provided by a team of professional staff, including nurses, doctors, social workers, and chaplains. The team works closely with the patient and family to provide the best possible care. Hospice is a service that is truly worthwhile and should be considered by anyone who is facing a terminal illness.

Game Lovers Lap Up Trivial Pursuit

and John and Yoko, Timothy Leary, Rosemary, Tommy Smothers, Bobby Dylan, Tommy Cooper, Derek Taylor, Norman Mailer..."

"He won't stop! Can you help, Doc?"

Possibly. Tell me Fred, has your roommate been playing any games lately?"

Just Trivial Pursuit. His girlfriend bought it last week. Now it's the only thing he and Tracy do from dusk to dawn.

"Trivia before sex, tsk, it's just as I thought. I'm sorry Fred, but Mason appears to be suffering from HTP."

"HTP?"

"Hyper-Trivia Pursuit. His mind is functioning as a trivia vacuum cleaner, sucking up and spewing out worthless, seemingly unrelated facts. It's all he can do, and I'm afraid there's not a cure..."

"And bishops, Fishops, Rabbits, and Popeyes, bye-bye..."

Bye-bye Mason. Perhaps someday they'll name a question after you. "Who was the first man to continually..." If you know the answer, or wish you knew the answer, or just like stealing Richard Dawson's job and asking the questions, welcome! The Trivial Age is upon us!

The three Canadians responsible for Trivial Pursuit (and $400 million for Selchow and Righter) have just completed the Genus II set of new question cards. Genus I consisted of the game's original 2,000 questions, the answers for which taught us more than we wanted to know about birthrates and death rates, and Liberty Bells, and Bob Bell, and Henry James and James Bond, and James Lofton and Charles Laughton. Especially Charles Laughton.

There were enough Genus I questions about Charles Laughton to comprise a Charles Laughton edition of the game.

Not that there's anything particularly harmful about trivia, which is, by its very nature, trivial. Most parents would agree that it's safer to have our nation's youth enraptured by the cheese pies of a Trivial Pursuit board than out roaming libraries and classrooms, getting an education and consequently acting upon their newfound enlightenment by voting our president out of office.

No, trivia is fairly harmless, it doesn't cause cavities and no one has spontaneously combusted while pursuing it.

But how far past the wagon-wheel borders of TP's gameboard can we pursue before America becomes a nation of trivial minds? Before TP prowess outweighs MTV familiarity in the status ranks of high schools across the country?

The danger is real, as the exploding proliferation of trivia pursuit has begun with the TP prototype at its forefront. In addition to Genus, Sports, Silver Screen, Baby Boomer and Genus II editions, bookstores this fall will be swamped with TP calendars, greeting cards and stationary sets.

ABC is planning a special and radio stations across the country are playing their own versions.

Granted, TP marketing won't change the world. Trivial Pursuit could hang tough for a while, then go the way of Smurfs or fade as fast as Pac Man fever. TP could be this year's Hula Hoop.

It's the other 40 games you have to worry about.

There's "People Magazine's," and "TV Guide's," and "Solid Gold's" ("Who is the oldest Beatle? Paul McCartney! Wrong! Ringo? Right!"). Any recognizable media entity from Culture Club to PTL Club, from Mr. Ed to Mr. T is eligible to, and probably has, spit out the questions and rushed out his or her game.

In an interview with Time (surprising since Time's trivia game sells right behind the original), TP's creators reveal their three secret question categories. Most fall into "the broad middle ground" where anyone, regardless of age or education can answer them. Then there are "stoppers," such as "What is Arizona's area code?" Finally come the infamous "mongies" (short for Mongoloid) which even a VJ could answer. "What are the three colors found in the American flag? What are three colors found in America?"

If you think TP's questions are inane, play the rest. That's when it gets scary. Imagine a world more terrifying than any Orwellian nightmare, a planet inhabited after a trivia Babel in which each individual was left speaking his own worthless tongue.

Think about the inevitable, impending trivia gap which will stretch between generations until one day our children will have to ask who Larry "Bud" Melman or Rhoda was.

Or just look at the present, take "People Magazine's" version...please. "People" divides their game into some of the same generic categories as the mag: Song, Tuge, Screen, Jocks. A typical card's answers include Juice Newton, Modern Art, Senator Bill Bradley, Indira Gandhi.

You Jeopardy fans can provide the questions, I'm going to read up on Charles Laughton.

Trivial Pursuit has captured the hearts of many college students.

Guys

Is Ugly Really Bad?

(UPI) — Being selected the "ugliest man" of the campus of Indiana University of Pennsylvania does have its advantages. Just ask Bruce Morgan.

Morgan won the dubious honor Saturday night, beating out six other finalists in a contest inspired by the College Book, in which author Lisa Birnbaum claimed IUP has the ugliest men in the country.

In addition to a prize of a wig with a dead muskrat on it, the title also brought pizzazz to Morgan's love life.

"Three girls asked me to marry them," said Morgan, 24, Canonsburg, Pa. "They were hanging all over me."

Clem Pantalone, manager of Poor Carl's-Caleco's College Pub who put on the contest, said Morgan, 6-foot-3 and 300 pounds was the obvious choice for winner.

"He's perfectly suited for our definition of ugly," Pantalone said. "Bruce is everything we wanted. He's big, he's ugly and packed with 300 pounds of character."

Morgan said he plans to use the title for everything it's worth.

"I've just been waiting to become famous and I guess this is the time," he said.

And does he feel bad about being called ugly?

"Man, I ain't ugly," Morgan said. "My mom's been telling me for 24 years that I'm the best-looking guy in the world."

Books Study Religion's Role

(UPI) — The books that are the subject of this review are two of the most important recent studies done on the changing role of religion in the world. A careful reading and inner dialogue with the ideas expressed in each of them is indispensable for anyone who wishes to learn more about this vital subject.

It has been 19 years since Harvey Cox, a professor of theology at Harvard University Divinity School, wrote The Secular City. In that earlier work, Cox offered his view that the modern urban secular society was an outgrowth of the biblical world and not some kind of aberration brought about by sin.

In his latest work, Cox turns his attention to the postmodern world, that nascent period that is emerging out of the ashes of the modern world. Far from disappearing, religion is more evident than ever in the postmodern era, Cox finds. Its ultimate placement in the postmodern world is still being determined, however.

Cox writes that "the world of declining religion to which my earlier book was addressed has begun to change in ways few people anticipated. A new age that some of the 'postmodern' has begun to appear. No one is quite sure just what the postmodern era will be like, but one thing seems clear. Rather than an age of rampant secularization and religious decline it appears to be more of an era of religious revival and the return of the sacred. No one talks much today about the 'long night of religion or the zero level of its influence of politics.'"

From his travels throughout the world, particularly in Latin America, Cox has seen firsthand the changes being wrought in the body politic by liberation theology. He quite correctly points out that the plural form "liberation theologies" should be used to characterize this collection of religious beliefs that are transforming the thinking of many theologians and ordinary believers with its emphasis upon the poor and oppressed.

Cox has certainly done his homework, not to mention his fieldwork. The section on liberation theology details life in a Christian base community in Latin America to which he gives the fictional name "La Chispa" in order to protect the people and their priest. Cox says there are many ways in which this tiny, threatened band of Christians resemble the early Christian communities.

Cox also analyzes the strong antimodernist tendency in religion that is surfacing in the United States. He writes with deep perception about the Rev. Jerry Falwell and his congregation in Lynchburg, Va.

But Cox is at his best when he writes about the demise of modernity. He uses a modern big city airport as a metaphor of the hollow emptiness of much of modern life.

Richard John Neuhaus, a Lutheran pastor and theologian from Brooklyn, N.Y., provides an engrossing look at the place of religion in public life in The Naked Public Square.

Neuhaus addresses the relationship of religion and democracy with great erudition and intellectual skills. "The cultural context is shaped by our moral judgments and intuitions about how the world is and how it ought to be."

Neuhaus says it is essential to the survival of free government that the public believes that its form of government is also good. He also explains that "for the great majority of Americans such moral judgments and intuitions are inseparable from religious belief."

He argues that all political systems require some form of moral underpinnings. When these moral foundations are excluded from public life, then what results is the naked public square.

"When the democratically affirmed institutions that generate and transmit values are excluded, the vacuum will be filled by that agent left in control of the public square, the state," writes Neuhaus. "In this manner, a perverse notion of the disestablishment of religion leads to the establishment of the state as church."

Speed Named Starting Quarterback For Pack

By RANDY MEWS
Sports Editor

The ECU football team finally appears to have its quarterback dilemma resolved, as Pirate head coach Ed Emory announced in his weekly press conference that Darrell Speed would start against N. C. State this Saturday.

Robbie Bartlett appeared to have the starting job wrapped up, but he went down for the season with stretched knee ligaments in a 17-12 loss to Central Michigan. Since that time, Speed has filled in admirably completing 16 of his last 25 passes for 220 yards.

In the Pirates' 34-27 victory over Georgia Southern last weekend, Speed got off to a sizzling start completing eight of his first nine passing attempts, and for the first time this season it appeared that the offense was able to move the football.

However, Emory said the defensive play has yet to match that of the offense. "I was disappointed with the play of our defensive line," Emory said in reference to Southern quarterback Tracy Ham's 26 of 52 completions for 403 yards. "It wasn't that our secondary was doing so bad, we just weren't putting any pressure on the quarterback."

"About 80 percent of the problem was Ham's quick release and his ability to move in the pocket," Emory continued, "but if we plan on stopping Tim Espisito (State quarterback), our defensive ends are going to have to get more into the game."

Although the Pirates are listed as a three-point favorite, Emory said the contest in Raleigh will be their toughest game to date for his young team. "State is hungry for a victory, and they'll be pumped up to play us."

The Wolfpack drew less than 35,000 fans for their games with Furman and Wake Forest, and if nothing else, Emory said the 57,000 expected to show up at Carter-Finley Stadium will be motivation enough for State to put an end to their two-game losing streak.

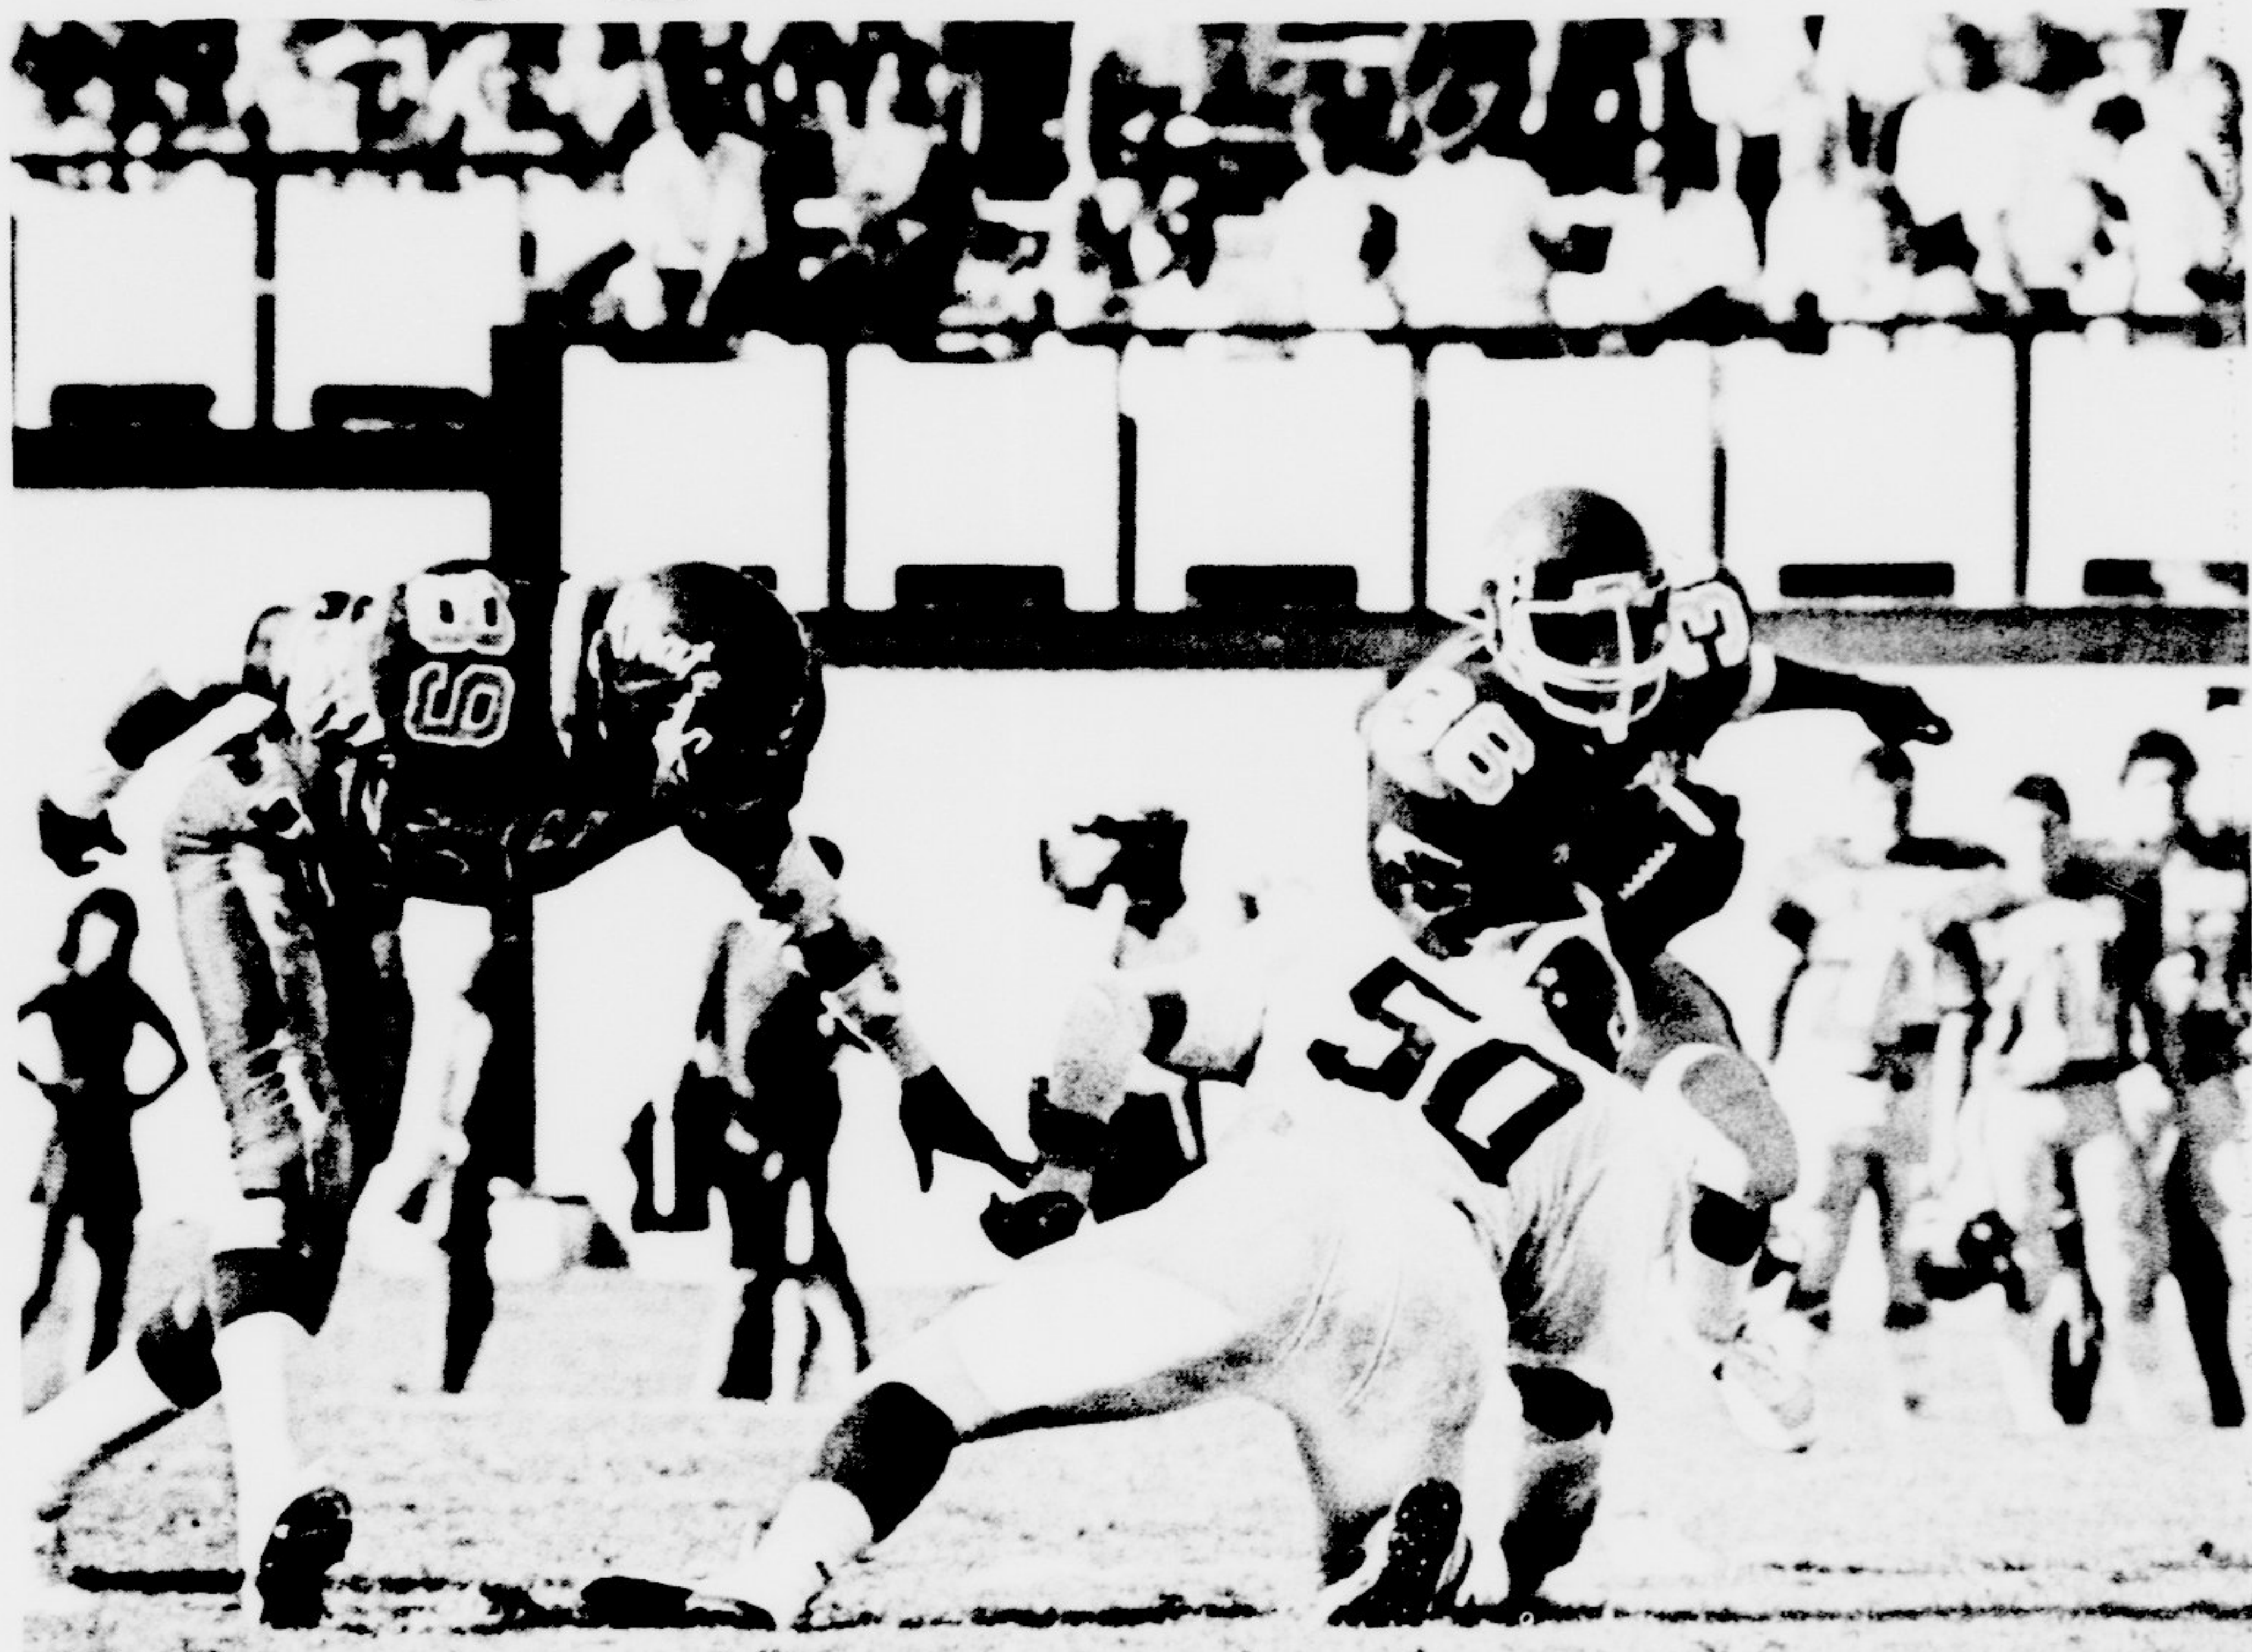

According to Emory, the fact that ECU is coming off a win, and State has dropped two straight, won't have anything to do with the outcome of the game. "We're going to have to play our best game of the year in order to come away with a victory," the head coach said.

Emory referred to the Wolfpack as a veteran team, making note of the fact that they have 19 of 22 players returning that were either listed as first or second team last year.

Although the defense is Emory's primary concern going into the game, the Pirates' offensive line is still in a questionable state. Starting offensive tackle Tim Dumas will be unable to play because of a pulled hamstring, while counterpart Brad Henson will only see limited action.

Emory said both his team and the Wolfpack are struggling, and thinks Saturday's contest will prove to be the pivotal game in both club's seasons.

"One of the goals of this year's team was to finish the season as the top team in North Carolina," Emory said. "If we beat State, I think we'll still have a good shot at achieving that goal."

Darrell Speed was named the starting quarterback for the Pirates' contest with N.C. State this Saturday. Coach Ed Emory made the announcement at his weekly press conference, and said he expects a capacity 57,000 people to be on hand.

Daugherty Improving At New Position

By SCOTT POWERS
Assistant Sports Editor

If anyone were to ask Jesse Daugherty if he would be playing goalie for the ECU soccer a few years ago, chances are he would have given that person a funny look.

It's definitely been a roundabout road for him to get where he is today.

After picking up the game in Germany a few years ago, his family moved to Pope Air Force Base, just outside of Fayetteville. He soon became the starting goalie for the Reid Ross High School soccer team during his senior year of high school, and his love for the game continued to grow from there.

He then moved on to Campbell College for his freshman year of college, but decided against playing soccer after a couple of practices.

After one year at Campbell, he transferred to ECU, but the closest that he came to playing varsity soccer that season was playing for an intramural team from Aycock Hall, Men Without Talent, which he organized mainly from people who had never played the game before.

The team, anchored by his goalkeeping, won the Residence Hall championship and advanced to the All Campus finals before being defeated by an Independent team, Sensation, 3-2.

He then decided to give the varsity team a try during the spring. His continuous improvement, and a lucky break, has put him in the position of starting goalie for the varsity team in his first year of college competition.

His lucky break was when stand-out ECU goalie Grant Pearson went down with a knee injury that sidelined him for the year, and left the team with two goalies that had never played at the college level.

After watching teammate Greg Brandie play most of the first game against George Mason, he stepped in and has played the last four games, and according to head coach Steve Brody, improvement has been his trademark.

"When he came out and started working with us in the spring, we didn't think that he would be a factor," Brody said. "There were some technique problems and some hand problems all the way up to the first match."

"But after that first match, Jesse started to hold everything, work hard, and now everything is starting to fall into place. He's very coachable, a very hard worker and very intense. I guess that it just took some time."

Daugherty knows that he has had some breaks, but instead of just taking what is given to him, he is using them to his advantage. "I was fortunate this year that there were only two goalies on the team," he said, "but I can see some improvement in my game. I didn't have much competition in high school, but it's a different story now."

He has nothing but respect for Brody. "He is very knowledgeable about the game. He has already helped to make me a better player," he said.

As does Brody, he feels that the team's best days are still ahead. "We are playing better, with a lot more tenacity. I think that we will get our share of wins," he commented.

As long as he keeps improving his game, there is no doubt that the team will improve. But the one thing that is impressive with Daugherty is that he is still able to keep sports in perspective with the rest of his life.

"I'm just out there having a good time," he said — and anyone who can keep that perspective is bound to be successful.

GOLF: The ECU golf team, led by senior medalist Chris Czaja, finished in a tie for fourth place in the Wolfpack Invitational at the Wake Forest Country Club in Raleigh.

Czaja, who went into the final round trailing Art Robertson of North Carolina State by one stroke, shot a two-over-par 74 while Robertson faltered and shot a nine-over-par 81.

In doing so, Czaja became the first Pirate golfer in three years to win a tournament, with the last being Don Sweeting who won the Old Dominion Tournament in 1981.

ECU golf coach Bob Helmick was extremely pleased with Czaja's performance. "Chris did great. He's a senior and it's his first individual win on the collegiate level — I am really proud of him."

Although Helmick was pleased with Czaja's performance, he felt the team should have finished first as well. "Going in to the last round we were one shot behind, if we had gotten some help for Chris Czaja and Mike Bradley we would have won."

Helmick felt the Pirate linksters had too many rounds in the eighties, but also added that this was a "rather long course with narrow fairways."

Following Czaja's 219 total for the Pirates was Mikke Bradley, who had rounds of 74-80-73 for a total of 227. Helmick felt that Bradley "ran out of gas during his second round of the day" on Monday, but he came back on Tuesday to fire a 73.

Paul Steelman was next for the Pirates with scores of 76-76-83 for a three-round-total of 235. Mark Arcilesi had rounds of 79-78-81 for a total of 238, while David Waggoner rounded out the Pirate scoring with scores of 83-77-81 for a three-round-total of 241.

Campbell University won the team competition with a three day total of 901. Old Dominion was next at 906, followed by the N.C. State red team at 912. ECU finished in a tie for fourth with Guilford at 914.

Sports Update

Helmick had predicted before the tournament that the Pirates would improve on last year's performance, and that held to be true as the Bucs scored ten strokes better and finished four places higher in the team standings.

Helmick said "we should have won, but there is no use in crying over spilt milk — we did improve over last year, so that's good".

The Pirates' next tournament will be the MacGregor Inter-collegiate Golf Classic Oct. 5-7 at the Pickens Country Club in Pickens, South Carolina.

—Rick McCormac

VOLLEYBALL: The ECU volleyball record fell to 1-4 Tuesday night, as the Pirates couldn't overcome a resurgent Virginia Commonwealth squad 15-4, 15-8 and 15-5.

VCU ended a slump with an excellent week of play during a tournament at James Mason, including a win over previously undefeated George Washington, while placing second in the ten-team field.

ECU was unable to stem the tide of the VCU momentum as the Pirate defense faltered against the power of the VCU offense, although the East Carolina offense played good also.

"Defense let us down," Coach Imogene Turner said. "I haven't prepared them to be mentally tough. Our offense has to be matched by our defense."

Donna Zecounis was the brightest star defensively, according to Turner. "Donna did a tremendous job blocking," she said. "Martha McQuillan had a number of kills and hit well, also."

Sharon Shank has returned to action after a pre-season sprain and is doing a good job, but should play even better when she gets over her injury fully. Her leg was sore after the match, but apparently okay, the coach said.

A potential bit of good news is the possible return to action of Barbara Chadwell, who broke her ankle during practice prior to the season opener. She's been working on her timing and is a possible starter for the next match this week.

ECU returns to action tonight at 7 p.m. as they host Methodist College in Minges Coliseum.

—Tony Brown

SOCCER: Even though the ECU soccer team is showing improvement every game, they still cannot break into the win column as they dropped their fifth straight game of the year last Friday, falling to Virginia Commonwealth by the score of 3-1.

The team had to face many trying circumstances before they even got to play the game, according to head coach Steve Brody. "When we got to VCU, we had to turn around and go 30 minutes south of the school to another field," Brody said. "When we got there, the field conditions were about 10 to 15 times worse than the worst intramural field."

The field was also a lot smaller than the average soccer field, and that may have affected the team's play, but Brody was not making excuses for his team. "We should have won the game," he said.

The team once again fell behind early, and the team's inability to put the ball in the net kept them from taking control of the game. A David Skeffington goal was all that the ECU offense could muster.

Brody sees improvement in the team's play, and feels that it is only a matter of time before the team will get its share of wins.

One of the bright spots on the team has been the play of defensive players Jeff Kime, Rand Hamilton and goalkeeper Jesse Daugherty.

The booters have one more game left on their current road trip, travelling to Fayetteville this Saturday to face Methodist College. ECU returns to Greenville next week for home games against American University and Campbell University.

—Scott Powers

Treble Slams

TENNIS: Galen Treble (above) slammed, jammed and outmaneuvered his opponent 6-0, 6-1 on the varsity tennis courts Tuesday afternoon. The rest of the ECU men's tennis team was successful as well, as they defeated Campbell 7-2 to pick up their first victory of the season. ECU now stands at 1-2 on the fall season.

ECU and N.C. State: Last year's 22-16 ECU victory over the Wolfpack snapped a five-game losing streak for the Pirates at the hands of N.C. State. The game, televised nationally on Super Station WTBS (Atlanta), drew 57,700 fans, at the time the largest crowd to witness a football game in the state of North Carolina.

Fifteen fourth-quarter points offset a 16-7 State lead and gave the Pirates only their fourth victory in the 14-game series, which began in 1970. Every game in the series has been played in Raleigh's Carter-Finley Stadium. Eight of North Carolina State's

Morris Speaks Senate About

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Miami Dolphins running back Eugene "Mercury" Morris, serving a 20-year sentence on drug charges, was excused from prison for a day to give a Senate panel his views on how to curb drug abuse.

Appearing Tuesday before a Senate subcommittee on alcoholism and drug abuse, Morris said law enforcement agencies will never be able to halt the seemingly endless flow of illegal drugs into the United States.

Morris, who was accompanied by three federal marshals, said the problem can only be attacked successfully through an education program.

"The borders of this country can't be protected well enough to put a dent in the amount of drugs coming into this country," he said. "The dealers often aren't users. They're in it for the money."

ECU Looks For Second Win Against State

ECU and N.C. State: Last year's 22-16 ECU victory over the Wolfpack snapped a five-game losing streak for the Pirates at the hands of N.C. State. The game, televised nationally on Super Station WTBS (Atlanta), drew 57,700 fans, at the time the largest crowd to witness a football game in the state of North Carolina.

Fifteen fourth-quarter points offset a 16-7 State lead and gave the Pirates only their fourth victory in the 14-game series, which began in 1970. Every game in the series has been played in Raleigh's Carter-Finley Stadium. Eight of North Carolina State's Top 20 crowds have been when ECU has visited Carter-Finley Stadium, and the series has averaged 51,962 fans each time the two schools, separated by approximately 100 miles, meet. Five of State's Top 10 crowds have appeared when ECU has been the opponent.

Last season's crowd is now the second largest in North Carolina history, surpassed only by the 57,800 that witnessed North Carolina's 42-14 victory over Stae on Oct. 15, 1983. Last season's victory was ECU Coach Ed Emory's only one over the Wolfpack in four attempts.

Heath and the record book: With his 10 points against Georgia Southern, junior placekicker Jef Heath moved into seventh place on ECU's all-time scoring list with 149 points. Heath, who connected on field goals of 38 and 33 yards while also converting on four-of-four extra points, surpassed Leander Green (144 points) and Eddie Hicks (146 points), and trails No. 5 Kenny Strayhorn and Butch Colson (164 points) by 15.

Heath also now has 29 career field goals, a school record. With his four extra points against Georgia Southern, Heath has now converted on 62 of 65 extra points, with all three misses coming in the 1983 season.

Stefon and Ricky: Senior split end Stefon Adams gained sole possession of 10th place on ECU's career receptions list with his four catches against Georgia Southern. Adams, from High Point, N.C. now has 45 catches for his career, pushing Billy Ray Washington (41) out of the No. 10 spot. Senior flanker Ricky Nichols holds down the No. 11 spot with his 43 catches. Nichols is now No. 9 on the school's career yardage list with his 818, and needs just eight yards to move past Jimmy Adkins (825) into the No. 8 spot. Nichols needs 32 yards to take over the No. 7 spot, held by Norwood Van (849 yards).

Georgia Southern rolls: Although the Pirates snapped their three-game losing streak with a 34-27 victory over Georgia Southern last week, it didn't come easy. The Eagles, a Division I-AA independent in only their third year of existence since reviving football in 1982, shattered one NCAA I-AA record, tied another, broke four Ficklen Stadium records and tied two others. The following are the records Georgia Southern, now 3-1 this season, broke or tied:

set by Portland State vs Weber State, Nov. 22, 1980)

Ficklen Stadium: Most First Downs Opponent — 35 (previous mark 26 by William & Mary, 1981)

Most First Downs Passing — 20 (ties mark by William & Mary, 1981)

Most Passes Attempted — 52 (previous mark 47 by Murray State, 1983)

Most Yards Passing — 403 (tied mark by William & Mary, 1981)

Most Offensive Plays — 103 (previous mark 89 by William & Mary, 1968)

Most Yards Total Offense — 645 (previous mark 493 by West Texas State, 1967)

NCAA: Most yards gained by a losing team — 645 yards (previous mark 554 by Nevada-Reno vs Weber State, Nov. 6, 1982).

The Eagles' 645 yards of total offense was the most allowed by an ECU defense since the Seminoles of Florida State rolled to 558 yards in their 47-46 victory to open the 1983 season.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Miami Dolphins running back Eugene "Mercury" Morris, serving a 20-year sentence on drug charges, was excused from prison for a day to give a Senate panel his views on how to curb drug abuse.

Appearing Tuesday before a Senate subcommittee on alcoholism and drug abuse, Morris said law enforcement agencies will never be able to halt the seemingly endless flow of illegal drugs into the United States.

Morris, who was accompanied by three federal marshals, said the problem can only be attacked successfully through an education program.

"The borders of this country can't be protected well enough to put a dent in the amount of drugs coming into this country," he said. "The dealers often aren't users. They're in it for the money."

"The addicts don't see themselves for what they really are. The drugs make you feel as though you don't have any responsibilities," Morris told the subcommittee, led by Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla.

Morris joined coaches, school administrators and other former professional football players in urging Hawkins to help establish an education program against drug abuse.

They agreed that the program should be directed at junior high school students and their parents.

Morris was sentenced two years ago after being convicted in Miami on drug trafficking charges. He played for the Dolphins from 1969 through 1976, but he said he did not get involved in drugs until his football career was over.

"When you're doing good, you don't get involved in drugs," Morris said. "When people have to deal with reality on the downside of life, that's when they get involved."

Well, everyone on the panel is happy this week.

Sad Sam is happy that he has been able to hold on to at least a share of first place every week thus far, and Tina Maroschak is happy that Virginia won, helping her to pull into a first place tie.

Jennifer Jendrsiak is happy because she's always happy.

Scott Powers is happy not to be a cellar dweller anymore and Greg Rideout is happy to finally get a little peace and quiet down in the basement, even though we still have a Pee Dee.

But Randy Mews is the happiest of all because he finally got to see Jennifer Jendrsiak in a bathing suit.

After looking at these picks, however, I doubt that anyone will be happy for long. Check next Thursday as the weekly drama continues.

Ramseur, Clover Win ACC Offensive Honors

GREENSBORO, (UPI) — Wake Forest tailback Michael Ramseur was named the Atlantic Coast Conference's offensive back of the week Monday for scoring twice in the Deacons' 24-15 win over North Carolina State.

Maryland center Kevin Clover, who led the Terrapins to a 29-17 victory over West Virginia, was picked the conference's offensive lineman of the week.

Ramseur, the Deacons' third all-time leading rusher with 2,042 yards, is averaging 149 yards a game this season.

Against North Carolina State, the junior from Landis, N. C., played with a hip injury and ran for 149 yards on 35 carries. He also caught four passes for 35 yards.

Glover, a senior from Upper Marlboro, Md., led the Terp linemen who cleared the way for Maryland's 195 yards rushing and 369 yards total offense against West Virginia.

The weekly selection of ACC players of the week is made by a special committee of the Atlantic Coast Sportswriters Association.
