Election official works to avoid past problems

By ANDY LEWIS
News Editor

With all the candidates for SGA Legislature in, the committee in charge of the elections has taken measures to see that the election runs more smoothly than last school year's officer election, according to the chairman of the election committee.

But many of us remember the last week in March, when a number of sticky issues delayed the completion of the elections for weeks....

Scott Thomas and Dillon Kalkhurst were declared the winners in the race for president and vice president. Kalkhurst was disqualified because he did not meet the gpa requirement of the office (2.0).

Meanwhile, opponents Rick Brown and Steve Pierce filed formal complaints, alleging that some poll attenders were biased and telling voters to vote for Thomas and Kalkhurst. They also alleged that some students wrote their greek letters on the ballots, and that this was a "gross misuse of the ballot."

An emotional student rally on the mall brought television and state newspaper reporters to the campus to see the anger some students felt about the possibility that the elections had been tampered with.

Tony Porcelli was appointed as the new chairman to the election committee, and in the final counting, Thomas became president and Ross Renfrow became vice president.

Porcelli was busy Wednesday, gathering the applications for candidacy and taking them to campus officials to check to see if the candidates met the gpa requirement. Porcelli is still chairman of the elections committee, and he said he will recruit people from different organizations to attend the polls.

He said he hopes this will quiet any claims that poll attenders will be biased.

Porcelli also said the elections committee will keep a closer watch of the ballot boxes.

There will be fewer ballot boxes in this election, SGA President Scott Thomas said. This will allow the elections committee to keep tighter control over the elections, he said.

Thomas also said the new election rules, which were created since the spring election controversy, provide an official channel for candidates to file appeals concerning alleged rule violations by other candidates.

The elections will be held 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday. Students must bring their student ID to the ballot box with them to vote.

The following is a list of the polling sites:

Mendenhall Student Center, Student Supply Store, Croatan, the bottom of College Hill Drive, Belk Building (Allied Health), the bus stop in front of Tyler Hall, Jones Cafeteria, Erwin Building, the corner of Graham Building, the corner of Cotten Dorm and the Health Sciences Library.

Police to investigate allegations

The district attorney's office in Greenville has subpoenaed a television station's video tape of Saturday's arrest of ECU students by Greenville police at a block party, according to reports.

District Attorney Tom Haigwood reportedly subpoenaed the tape Wednesday as part of an ongoing investigation into allegations that police used excessive force as they arrested three ECU students Saturday night.

Matthew Hall Moore, Anthony Joseph "Tyge" Pistorio and Michael Hart were arrested at the party on Biltmore Street between Fifth and Fourth streets.

Hart was charged with being drunk and disruptive and Moore and Pistorio were charged with drinking in public and resisting arrest. Moore also was charged with assault on a police officer.

Sgt. Doug Jackson said he is in charge of an in-house investigation into the allegations of excessive force. Jackson is getting statements from eye-witnesses, the arrested students and the arresting officers, he said.

Jackson said acting Police Chief Randy Nichols initiated the investigation.

A spokeswoman for WNCT-TV said Wednesday that a videotape of the incident was subpoenaed.

One student at the party said the officers on the scene were holding Moore down and beating him. Other students claimed the officers choked Pistorio. After the party, students circulated a yellow pad for people to sign as witnesses to the alleged excessive force.

Captain Nelson Staton said the officers only used the force necessary to make the arrests.

Pirate Walk at a standstill

By ANDY LEWIS
News Editor

With ECU now well into the second week of the fall semester, students may wonder where the gold-jacketed Pirate Walk escorts are.

Pirate Walk coats hang empty in the organization's SGA office.

Pirate Walk is a service that SGA has offered for years; it has taken calls and provided escorts to students who need to walk through campus at night.

But the second-floor office in Mendenhall Student Center has been empty since school began.

SGA President Scott Thomas said in an interview Wednesday that the Pirate Walk governing board is "getting things ready," and is seeking a director, escorts and telephone operators.

But Thomas said he also wants to see some changes in the program.

"I think it (Pirate Walk) could be a lot better than it has been in the past. I don't think it has been used as much as it could be used. We've had problems in the past as far as participation as far as workers, operators and stuff."

Thomas also said Pirate Walk has had troubles with getting a director to stay with the group on a regular basis.

Thomas said he didn't want to start Pirate Walk without a director because it would make the program operate badly, which would give users "a bad taste in their mouth" about the program.

Pirate Walk is "a very important service," Thomas said. Furthermore, Thomas estimated that the service should be ready within two weeks.

Fraternity sponsors fundraiser

Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity, is sponsoring a "Football Run" to benefit the Ronald McDonald House of Eastern N.C. A football will be carried from Greenville to Raleigh on the weekend of the ECU-NCSU football game, according to a press release.

Activities will begin on Friday, Sept. 4 at Ficklen Stadium with local personalities and pediatric patients beginning the run. Those scheduled to participate include: Chancellor Richard Eakin; Leslie Garner, mayor of Greenville, and Brian Bailey, WNCT-TV sportscaster.

Pledges are being solicited for each mile that the football is run. Fraternity members and other interested individuals are participating in the actual running. Proceeds will be presented to Ronald McDonald House representatives at the ECU/NCSU game.

Additional pledges are needed. For more information, contact Matt Hermes of Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity or Kathy Brown of the Ronald McDonald House.

People tell financial aid woes, answers given

By TONI PAGE
Staff Writer

Over 5,000 students at ECU have applied for financial aid so far this year, and many of those students are frustrated and anxious about money they have not received.

"It's getting harder and harder to get financial aid, it seems all we do is wait and put up with red tape," said one student coming out of the financial aid office.

"I have to work to pay for rent plus go to school 18 hours this semester because I'm still waiting for my financial aid to come through. This is cutting in on my studying and has an effect on my grades."

"It makes you wonder what the point of getting money for an education is all about," said another student in the financial aid office.

Due to the number of changes at the federal level brought on by the Reorganization Act of 1986, there is more burden on the administrative level than ever before, according to officials. This burden is met by frustration on the part of the recipient because of the increase in paperwork and the amount of time it takes to screen financial aid applicants.

Congress has enforced a very rigid criteria for students receiving financial aid due to so many students manipulating the system receiving money that was not badly needed, officials say.

Ray Edwards, director of the financial aid office said, "Although many students are complaining, the fact is that we have increased the amount of financial awards almost three times what we awarded last year.

"Last year the final figure was 1450 awards and this year by the time fall arrived, 3000 students had been notified of awards." Edwards added that along with complaints he had also received many positive remarks on the financial aid process this year.

Some students even voiced surprise when they received their financial aid on time. Edwards added that this has been the best and most efficient registration in the last two years and that the outlook for the next year looks even better.

Edwards said the financial aid office is in the second year of a new method of processing. They have received additional manpower which was much needed and are making new use of computers.

Financial aid is very complex and confusing and many times a student feels a communication barrier between themselves and the financial aid staff.

"They don't seem to care if I get my money or not. As soon as I think I have all of my paperwork turned in, they hold me up even longer and surprise me with more demands for information. I can't even remember what I asked for by this point," said one frustrated financial aid applicant.

"This is a common attitude among students" said Ray Edwards. "It is true that financial aid is not simple, and there is no way we can make it simple. Students must read what we send them thoroughly and must apply on time. They should spend as much time finding out what you are supposed to be doing as you would be as if applying for a job.

"Apply as early as possible, and if we request additional information then get it back as soon as you can. We are simply doing what is required by law and we can do nothing else but that."

Edwards estimated that over 45 percent of the student body is receiving financial aid. The aid is determined according to the "Needs Analysis Formula" nationalized by the Department of Education.

Over 800 students who applied this year were not eligible.

Students should always be aware of changing laws in the financial aid office. "Even with all the information we put out, students still do not seem to be well informed. We hold a Financial Aid orientation seminar every December which is advertised at length.

"Last year over 5,000 students received financial aid of some form — only 6 showed up to the orientation program. It is up to the student to become familiar with financial aid and the changing laws that are always taking place. This would cut down on the frustration and communication barriers," Edwards said.

And Edwards added that by Spring, the actual review and decision on applications which is considered to be the basic red tape will all be done by computers.

"Financial aid is an inhuman process" Edwards said. "It is our job to translate it and make it more workable for people. We are not where we want to be yet, but we are far from where we were two years ago."

Teaching fellows study at ECU

(ECU News Bureau) — Sixty-four of North Carolina's 400 Blue Ribbon Teaching Fellows are enrolled at East Carolina University in the School of Education.

"They're bringing a new level of excitement to teacher preparation on our campus," says Dr. Charles R. Coble, dean of the School of Education and director of teacher education at the university.

"The impact will be in the interest they generate in teacher education," Coble said.

With their programs and activities including special seminars, meetings and honors classes, the Teaching Fellows "can serve as models for teacher preparation all across our campus, not just in the School of Education," Coble said.

Each of the Teaching Fellows, chosen on the basis of scholarship, leadership and service, receives a $5,000 annual scholarship to major in education on the condition that they teach in North Carolina for at least the same number of years, a minimum of four.

The purpose of the new state-funded program "is to assure that North Carolina has a pool of academically talented students entering the teaching profession," according to Dr. Betty Levey of the School of Education, campus coordinator for the Teaching Fellows program.

"Four years from now we will have 400 new teachers who would have exposure to leadership opportunities — a cohort of 400 teachers who can network to benefit North Carolina's schools," Dr. Levey said.

Nine university campuses were selected for the pilot year of the Teaching Fellows program and four more will be added in 1988. The scholarship recipients were selected last spring and summer and orientation programs were held for the students and their parents.

Last weekend, Cynthia Zeger of Salisbury, North Carolina's 1987-88 Teacher of the Year, visited the ECU campus and spoke as a role model at an on-campus orientation.

Zeger, one of two North Carolina teachers selected for the Teacher in Space program in 1985, added inspiration to the group's enthusiasm, Levey said. "It was one of the very best presentations I've ever heard," Coble said.

Forty of the ECU Teaching Fellows were planning to enter ECU for teacher education careers "in any event" Coble said. The additional 24 have made no appreciable difference in class size, he said.

"They're being folded in," he said. "We haven't set any special sections." Actually, Coble said, ECU normally has approximately 2,000 teacher education candidates and has registered a 25 percent increase in teacher education enrollment across campus in recent years.

"We're very proud of the Teaching Fellows and the program," Coble said. "They're here, they are fitting in well, getting organized and bringing a new level of excitement."

For one thing, he said, they have "raised the level of SAT scores for teacher education candidates." Last year's teacher education average SAT was 910 and "the Teaching Fellows has SATs in excess of 1100," he said.

Mathias Rust, a 19-year-old amateur pilot, faces up to 10 years in prison on charges of violating Soviet airspace and flight rules and "malicious hooliganism."

After the charges were read, Rust told the judge, "I am aware of my guilt," but later said he did not acknowledge guilt on the charge of malicious hooliganism because he had no intention of harming anyone. He defended his flight as a peace mission.

Rust admits guilt in first day of flight trial

(AP) — The West German teenager whose daring flight to Red Square shook up the Soviet defense establishment admitted to a Soviet court today that he broke the law in the "greatest mistake" of his life.

Mathias Rust, a 19-year-old amateur pilot, faces up to 10 years in prison on charges of violating Soviet airspace and flight rules and "malicious hooliganism."

After the charges were read, Rust told the judge, "I am aware of my guilt," but later said he did not acknowledge guilt on the charge of malicious hooliganism because he had no intention of harming anyone. He defended his flight as a peace mission.

Rust, looking pale but speaking in a firm voice, tried to explain his goals during almost five hours of testimony on the opening day of his three-day trial for the May 28 flight.

He said he wanted to meet with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to discuss a new political system that would bring East and West together in "full democracy, democracy in the fullest sense of the word."

Under questioning from his Soviet lawyer, Vsevolod Yakovlev, Rust told the court that with the perspective of the last 14 weeks in Lefortovo prison, he realizes that his approach was wrong.

"I threatened the lives of people. That's my opinion today.

I will never repeat it," he said. "It's the greatest mistake I've made in my life," he said.

Yakovlev asked Tuesday that the youth's mother, Monika, be permitted to testify as a character witness for her son, and the judge agreed. Mrs. Rust and another son, Ingo, 15, arrived at the courtroom shortly before the trial began but did not speak to reporters.

The trial is being conducted by Presiding Judge Robert Tikhomirov and two lay people: Estonian engineer Juta Klettenberg, 45, and machine shop foreman Vasily Kuznetsov, 52, of Moscow.

The verdict is decided by a majority vote, but in practice, the lay people do little during trial and defer to the judge's opinion.

Rust has been charged with illegal entry into the Soviet Union, which carries a one-to-three year penalty; malicious hooliganism, which carries a one-to-five year term; and violating international flight rules, which can be punished by a term of one-to-ten years in prison.

Rust began his journey with a flight in mid-May from Hamburg, West Germany, to Iceland, the site of last fall's summit meeting between Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and President Reagan.

"I was very concerned that the summit meeting did not have any positive results," he testified.

He said he chose to fly to Moscow because of the impact the publicity would have on world public opinion, but did not think about what he would do upon reaching the Soviet capital.

After he landed his plane between the Kremlin wall and St. Basil's Cathedral, he said, "I waited for what would happen next. I only thought about landing in Moscow. What would happen after, I practically didn't think about."

Rust's flight in a single-engine Cessna 172b from Helsinki, Finland, to Moscow stretched over 400 miles of heavily guarded Soviet territory.

Train runs over demonstrator

CONCORD, Calif. (AP) — Dozens of people watched in horror as an anti-war demonstrator was run over and dragged by a munitions train as he knelt on a track while trying to stop it, leaving him critically injured Wednesday.

Bouquets of flowers and pebbles spelling "Peace" marked the spot where S. Brian Willson was struck Tuesday outside the U.S. Naval Station during a protest over weapons shipments to Central America.

Shortly before he was struck, the 47-year-old Vietnam veteran told a reporter for the Oakland Tribune, "I have to say, 'You cannot move the train without moving my body,'" the newspaper reported today.

"He lunged for the train, like he was angry," said the Rev. David Duncombe, who was standing next to Willson.

Willson of San Rafael suffered a skull fracture, and one leg was severed below the knee, said Sandra Ryan, spokeswoman for John Muir Hospital. Surgeons amputated the other leg below the knee, she said. He was listed in critical condition early today.

Willson, who was about to start a 40-day fast, was leading 25 demonstrators outside the weapons station, the largest in the West.

After a news conference, he knelt on the track with others trying to stop the three-car train as it left the depot.

But the train, operated by a civilian Navy employee, hit him as about 30 people, including a contingent of Marines, demonstrators and his family watched in horror.

"They've killed my dad! They've murdered my dad!"

shouted Gabriel Rauen, 14, who had to be restrained.

David Wylie of the San Francisco Nuclear Weapons Freeze campaign and Willson's wife of two weeks, Holley, and others waved for the train to stop.

"The engineers shook their heads at them," he said.

Margie Wall of Concord said she and a friend were in an automobile about to leave when they noticed the train speeding up and moving toward the protestors.

Willson and five demonstrators had stretched a banner across the tracks, said John Skerce, one of the five.

The two nearest Willson managed to jump clear, but Willson did not, he said.

"He was on his knees, forced backward and then dragged ... about 25 feet," Skerce said.

Navy spokesman Dan Tikalsky said witnesses told military authorities the train was traveling at 5 mph, but protestors said a video tape they had taken appeared to show it moving faster.

Base Commander Lonnie Cagle said witnesses told Navy officials some protestors jumped onto the tracks a short distance before the train struck Willson.

"The engineer saw no one on the tracks as far as I am aware," Cagle said.

He added that the investigation initially was hampered by the crew refusing to be interviewed or tested for drugs or alcohol until Navy counselors arrived.

The Navy will conduct its own investigation into the incident, he added.

The bodies of 10 other miners not in the elevator have been found. Five injured miners were rescued.

"In these circumstances, there is no hope that any of the 40 could be found alive," said St. Helena Chairman Steve Ellis.

Rescuers continued working their way toward the elevator, which they believe is among 130 feet of concrete and steel debris at the bottom of the No. 10 shaft.

Marching Pirates

Since you've arrived here at ECU, I realize that moving in, band camp, and the start of classes have kept your lives in total chaos. I do hope that things are beginning to run smoothly for you now. There is still much work to be done.

You have accepted an extreme responsibility by accepting the opportunity to march with the Marching Pirates. The responsibility stems from the time tradition harvested by the Marching Pirates many years before you arrived. It has become evident, during the short time we've been together this year, that you do have some of those unique qualities that are so characteristic of past years. However, to be the best we can be, we must continue to enhance our senses of dedication, sincerity and unselfishness.

You see, since its origin, the marching band world has constantly been searching for a true identity. By expanding its musical repertoire to all musical genres and by using new innovations in drill design, the marching band has finally identified itself as a true art form. For example, new, state of the art drill designs enhance the music being performed by not just creating "pretty" symmetrical designs, but through an increased emphasis on transitions from one design to another, whether symmetrical or asymmetrical.

Unfortunately, the majority of college and high school programs have not grasped the concepts indicative of "the new state of the art marching band". However, with the special arrangements of music written especially for you this year (thanks to Dr. Goolsby) and the state of the art drill designs that you will march (thanks to John Erdogan), you have the distinct opportunity to educate your audiences by performing these new and exciting innovations that are currently taking place in the marching band world.

That's right, I sense a new respect being born towards you and your accomplishments, a respect stemming not only from high school marching programs and patrons of ECU athletics, but other highly recognized college programs, the world of Drum Corps International, and dedicated fans of the sport from all over the continental U.S. Each and every one of you should be proud to have such an opportunity. Let's start this season off right... and EDUCATE STATE!

Cholesterol

Easier way to lose it

WASHINGTON (AP)—A new drug offering hope for millions of Americans who cannot or will not reduce their cholesterol levels by diet and exercise will be on the market in a few weeks.

Although the drug, lovastatin, won Food and Drug Administration approval Tuesday as a treatment of last resort, the availability of such a treatment offers an alternative to physicians whose patients are at high risk of heart attack and stroke because of too much cholesterol in their blood.

"Lovastatin is more effective than a good diet," said Richard Havel, director of the Cardiovascular Research Institute at the University of California, San Francisco. "It can lower cholesterol by 30 to 40 percent, while diets currently recommended for wide use can only lower it perhaps 15 percent. But the safety of diet is well established, and it should be used first."

Havel commented in San Francisco, where his center was one of the facilities that began clinical trials of lovastatin in 1984.

The drug has special meaning for the estimated 400,000 Americans who suffer from a genetic defect that renders their bodies incapable of maintaining a proper level of cholesterol no matter how healthy their lifestyles.

Cholesterol occurs in all foods of animal origin and also is manufactured in the body by the liver. It is essential to bodily functions, but too much in the blood results in deposits along the walls of the arteries which can restrict blood flow and, if serious enough, result in heart attack or stroke.

The FDA instructions accompanying lovastatin say it is intended only for patients whose cholesterol levels put them at significant risk of developing cardiovascular disease and who have not responded to diet and exercise.

However, doctors can prescribe any drug however they see fit once it wins FDA approval, and the decision on when to turn to lovastatin tablets for a particular patient will remain with the doctor. The greatest risk of misuse of the drug will come from doctors who turn to it before being certain that diet and exercise are not working for a particular patient, said Antonio Gotto, chairman of the Lipid Research Clinic at the Baylor College of Medicine in Texas.

Officials of the pharmaceutical company said the new drug, to be sold under the brand name Mevacor, will be available in drug stores in two or three weeks.

They said the cost to the pharmacy will be $1.25 per tablet, considered the daily dose for most patients. The actual price to the patient will vary, depending on the retail markup placed on Mevacor by the local drug store.

Because of liver and eye changes noted in people participating in clinical trials, patients who receive lovastatin should have their blood tested for liver function every six weeks and have an eye test once a year, the FDA said.

Psych. of the famous revealed

LOS ANGELES (AP)—You know what Oliver North said, but Dr. Joyce Brothers will tell you why he said it in a news segment that looks at the psychological issues behind current events.

The segments, called "The Psychology Behind the News," are being offered by USTV and will feature a two-way satellite link that will allow each station news anchor to question Brothers.

"I've really been doing this kind of thing for years on an informal basis," Brothers said. "Newspapers and broadcast people call me all the time to ask about the psychological why behind a story."

"About Gary Hart, about Elvis Presley memorabilia and why collectors of the expensive stuff are men and not women. About Col. North and the Contra hearings. I got one call asking me why people were upset about (Supreme Court nominee) Robert Bork's beard. Studies have shown that people generally associate a man with a beard with wisdom."

"But if it's an unruly beard, as Bork's, it signals indecision. The surgeon general, Dr. Koop, has that kind of beard, too, but as a scientist he can be unpredictable. The last thing you want in a judge is indecision."

No starting date has been set for the new program, which she plans to do in one-minute segments on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Then the anchor from each participating station will have one minute to ask a question.

In the pilot, she talks about North and why he was seen as a hero.

The series is the brainchild of George Merlis, who developed "Good Morning America" into a hit and also produced "The CBS Morning News," "The Dick Cavett Show" and "Entertainment Tonight."

Brothers was in Los Angeles to film a cameo appearance for the first fall season episode of ABC's "Moonlighting."

She played herself on "Mike Hammer" last season. She's also been on "Mr. Belvedere," "Mama's Family" and "Taxi."

Miss Brothers is no longer a practicing psychologist. "I think now that I don't have a practice I have a much better idea of what interests people and what disturbs people," she said. "In practice you only see five or six people a day. Now, I see and hear from thousands of people all over the country."

However, she still gives out a lot of advice to people who call her on the telephone or stop her in public.

She writes a monthly column for Good Housekeeping magazine, does a daily radio show for NBC, writes a daily column for King Features Syndicate and does psychologically oriented news features for WABC-TV in New York.

She is married to a physician and has a daughter who is a physician. Although she travels frequently, she said she loves to stay home and cook on weekends.

She carries a tape recorder with her and is constantly seeking information from people. She also sends psychology students to medical meetings to help her keep up on developments.

Barge garbage finally burned

NEW YORK (AP)—The first bales from the nation's most laughed at bargeload of garbage have been burned and buried after a 6,000-mile odyssey that officials said at least made Americans aware of its waste-disposal problems.

"It really served as the Paul Revere of garbage," said Frank Jones, town supervisor in Islip, where the first truckload of ashes was buried in a landfill Tuesday.

The commercial trash from Islip, New York City and Nassau County began traveling in search of a dump March 22 after it was turned away from the same landfill for lack of space.

The barge was rejected by six states and three nations, repeatedly inspected for hazardous contents, lambasted by politicians, ridiculed by comedians and challenged in court. But the ash was buried with little fanfare.

"Good riddance," said city Sanitation Commissioner Brendan Sexton at an incinerator in Brooklyn, where the first bales were taken off.

Bulldozers broke up the bales, and environmental workers in white suits and masks probed the debris with pitchforks before it was burned.

Incineration of the 3,186 tons of trash and burial of the ashes in Islip is expected to take a couple of weeks.

"We used it every chance we could to say there is a garbage crisis," Sexton said. "You cannot wish it away. You cannot demonstrate it away. This helps people visualize that there is no where else to put the garbage."

But he added: "Enough's enough. It's time to end it."

Disposal contractor Lowell Harrelson of Bay Minnet, Ala., had planned to unload the trash at a garbage-to-methane gas operation in North Carolina, but it was turned away for lack of proper permits.

Then came angry rejections from Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Florida, Mexico, Belize and the Bahamas where officials feared it contained hazardous waste.

Iran attacks

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP)—Iranian gunboats attacked a cargo ship and an oil tanker today, and Iraq said its jets hit two tankers in a dramatic escalation of the 3-year-old Persian Gulf "tanker war."

Three other tankers were hit by Iranian ships Tuesday night, gulf shipping sources and Lloyd's of London insurers said. A Cypriot tanker was struck by Iraqi jets Tuesday night, Baghdad Radio reported.

In Paris today, Defense Minister Andre Giraud said France has ordered three warships into the gulf area to help search for mines. The minesweepers were ordered into the region of Khoral-Fakkan, an anchorage used by ships going to and from the gulf and the scene of recent mine scares.

U.S. warships have been escorting Kuwaiti tankers, reflagged with the Stars and Stripes, through the gulf since July 20.

In the latest Iranian attack, at least three Iranian speedboats opened fire on the 97,286-ton Greek tanker Dafni off the northern Saudi Arabian coast near Farsi island, marine salvage executives said. Casualties and damage were not known, they said.

It was the fifth such attack reported in the gulf in less than 24 hours as Iran continued its apparent reprisals for Iraq's weekend resumption of hostilities after a six-week lull in the waterway.

The Iranian attacks today followed Iraqi strikes Tuesday on South Korean, Japanese and Spanish tankers, gulf shipping sources and Lloyd's of London insurers said.

The five strikes were the most by Iran in a 24-hour period since the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war spilled over into the gulf in February, 1984.

Federal re

(AP) — A sweeping law designed to curb illegal immigration requires the nation's 7 million employers today to begin documenting the status of employees with a special form, and many business people griped about the new responsibility.

Under the Immigration Reform and Control Act, which makes it a crime to knowingly employ illegal aliens, employers generally must have the new I-9 forms completed for all workers who were hired since the measure was signed into law Nov. 6.

The forms must be signed by employers after they review supporting documents that attest to the employee's eligibility to work, such as passports, alien cards, visas.

A national business check press indicated compliance enforcement of the law spread distrust among employers.

Many employers, however, complained that the law was too broad, and that it would have hurt workers who were supporting families.

'Dirty Dancing' rocks

(AP)—Dirty dancing is what the young employees of a Catskills summer resort do to unwind after a long day of catering to the demands of the New York vacationers.

Their dancing is not all that dirty — this is 1963, after all. But its loose-limbed, hip-throbbing sensuality first alarms, then transfixes "Baby" Houseman when she stumbles into the workers' quarters. Her fascination centers on Johnny Castle, who has escaped his rough background to become dance instructor at the resort.

"Dirty Dancing," a richly satisfying little film from the fledgling company of Vestron Pictures, compares favorably to "Saturday Night Fever" and "Flashdance" in its depiction of how pop dancing can elevate determined people above their commonplace lives.

The Houseman family arrives for a pleasant holiday at Kellerman's — the doctor (Jerry Orbach), his understanding wife (Kelly Bishop) and their disparate daughters, the dull-witted Lisa (Jane Brückner) and Baby (Jennifer Grey), an idealist with her sights on the Peace Corps.

The family tranquility is broken when Baby falls under the spell of Johnny Castle (Patrick Swayze).

When Johnny's dance partner (Cynthia Rhodes) becomes pregnant and opts for an abortion, he needs someone to help him fulfill an appearance at a nearby resort. In Henry Higgins style, Johnny teaches the inept Baby the mambo routine. She also submits willingly to his passion.

Houseman is shattered by what he considers his daughter's deception, and Johnny is fired by the iron-fisted resort operator (Jack Weston). You can bet that all the misunderstandings will be overcome by the rousing dance finale.

What elevates "Dirty Dancing" above the flood of "Rocky" clones is the incisive script by Eleanor Bergstein, razor-sharp portrayals by a talented cast, the joyful choreography of Kenny Ortega and the energetic direction of Emile Ardolino. Perhaps all the plot pieces fall together expectably, but this is not a social treatise about morality in the Kennedy years. The film is meant to entertain, and it does so, royally.

Patrick Swayze has all the right moves as Johnny Castle. He is sensual on the dance floor and off, conveying the frustration of his struggle to escape the streets. Jennifer Grey is a revelation, an actress of remarkable range. All of the supporting performers are memorable, notably Weston, Orbach and Rhodes.

Produced by Linda Gottlieb, "Dirty Dancing" is rated PG-13, apparently for language and bedroom scenes. Running time: 100 minutes.

sians for a thorough cover-up Once Petrosky begins his assignment, he takes over the elimination of the comrades. KGB generals played by Ned Beatty and Ray McAnally discover someone high in the KGB is unfolding a dangerous plan. The viewer sees a few Russians as good guys trying to find the bad guys in their own organization. Such a more rounded point of view hints at "Gorky Park" where Russian police officer William Hurt must uncover KGB doings.

Unfortunately the Russians aren't in the film enough — more focus lies on Preston's actions within his spy organization.
Much of his trouble is not in locating the spy, but in overcoming company politics. More interesting also is Petrosky's mingling into British middle class. Pet-rosky does not merely meet the couriers in dark alleys; the drops blend into everyday life casually — as casual as the murders of those whom stumble into the exchanges.

Though the big draw for "The Fourth Protocol" is THE BIG CHASE, the subtleties in the acting do more than merely fill in the holes. Such traces of realism are expected of Michael Caine, and are seen in such scenes as when Preston shares revealing moments with his son as he sits information through his computer.
Pierce Brosnan comes across more as an accomplished actor than as an ad for "GQ." Brosnan's Petrosky knows just with no outlet, his duty before bed attitude coupled with frustration shows a more believable KGB agent than those usually portrayed as deep-frozen cunctics.

Ned Beatty assumes the role of the KGB general as a Russian romantic, a man at home deep in the woods in a log cabin. Imagine Grizzly Adams in the KGB service. Joanna Cassidy always colors any role (usually too small for her talents), portraying Brosnan's accomplice. Matt Frewer (a.k.a.
Max Headroom) offers slight comic relief as a goofy/likeable American Air Force officer.

"The Fourth Protocol" stamp-edes in on the forces of Michael Caine, Frederick Forsyth and its predictable chase. The core of the film comes out in its exposition as fully developed characters substantiate the film's quality.

"No, sir, our manager let sizes

This struck me as rather an odd

"Your manager wouldn't hap-

"That's real deep, Sasha," I thought, "why don't you walk a

Ready for Pack Hunter out to make point as Pirate QB

By TIM CHANDLER
Sports Editor

When East Carolina and North Carolina State meet on the football field Saturday night in Carter-Finley Stadium to kick off both teams' seasons, one ECU player in particular will be out to prove a point.

That player is Pirate sophomore quarterback Travis Hunter. Hunter, you see, has, for nearly all his life, had to listen to doubters telling him that he would never make it as a quarterback on the collegiate level.

"People have told me ever since I was in high school that I wouldn't be able to play quarterback in college," said Hunter. "I don't like for people to say that I can't do something. That makes me want to try that much harder to do it."

And try he has, according to ECU head coach Art Baker.

"Travis has probably worked harder this year than at any other time in his life," said Baker. "He has worked harder on his game on the field and he has also worked harder in his studies. He earned the job as starter with a great spring and he has continued to improve this fall in practice."

Starting at signal-caller Saturday for the Pirates will not be something new for Hunter. He got the nod as starter on three occasions last season, a season that saw the Pirates finish 2-9 for the third consecutive time. Hunter's backup this season, sophomore Charlie Libretto, was the starter in the other eight contests.

Hunter's strongpoint, according to Baker, is his ability to run the option. That along with an improved passing arm makes Hunter the choice to direct the Pirates' run-and-shoot offense.

"Travis' strength has always been in running the option," said Baker. "But, he has also greatly improved his throwing arm and his ability to read defenses, which makes me feel very confident about our quarterback situation heading into our season-opener Saturday."

And, having a quarterback that you can be confident in is the first step towards having a winning football team Baker added.

"The quarterback is the key to a team's success," said Baker. "Few teams are good enough to win if the quarterback is not capable of leading the team. Take (N.C.) State for instance. They beat the three toughest teams in the ACC last season (Clemson, Maryland and North Carolina) with Erik Kramer as the starter. But, when Kramer missed the Virginia contest they were beaten. In fairness to any team, it is difficult to go into any game without an experienced quarterback."

Winning Saturday's contest against the Wolfpack is important for ECU for several reasons said Hunter.

"We want to make up for last season's game up there (a 38-10 loss)," explained Hunter. "We felt the Wolfpack.

embarrassed in the fourth quarter (State scored 28 unanswered points). Plus, after State, we have Florida State and Illinois the following two weeks.

"It would mean a lot to the players to go up there (Raleigh) and win," continued Hunter. "We have been through a lot of hard times, all we want to do is win the game. We can't think negatively at all. We have to play to win."

Baker agreed with Hunter saying, "The N.C. State game is our biggest game of the season. Our players want to go back up there and prove that they can win. It would also be a big enhancement for our entire season if we could win our first game."

Many have compared the fleet-footed Hunter to former Georgia Southern College great Tracy Ham. But Hunter doesn't mention Ham when he talks about players that he admires.

"My man has always been Turner Gill from Nebraska. Now he knew how to run the option," quipped Hunter.

Hunter, a small 5-11, 190 pounder, grew up in Winter Garden, Fla., a small, sports-oriented town about 20 minutes from Orlando. Sandlot football and pick-up basketball games were the name of the game in the town, according to Hunter.

"There were a lot of young people in the town and it seemed like that no matter what we did, it was competitive," said Hunter. "We'd get up on Saturday's and go play sandlot football or get up a basketball game or go down to the pool. But, no matter what we did it was competitive. Everybody wanted to play football the best, or have the best basketball game, or even be able to dive the best at the pool."

"I guess that's where I picked up some of my competitiveness," continued Hunter. "You had to be competitive if you wanted to play."

Hunter comes from a fairly large family. He has two older brothers, who are no longer at home and a brother and two sisters that live at home with his mother. Hunter, however, grew up with his grandmother and he is first to admit that she plays a big role in his life.

"When my father and mother divorced I went to live with my great-grandmother," explained Hunter. "I think she is responsible for me having the mental toughness that I do. She helped me to realize that no matter how bad things seem to be, they could always be worse."

But the biggest factor that Hunter points to for his success is God.

"I don't believe that anything is possible without God," said Hunter. "He has given everybody a talent and it is up to them how they use it. I believe that my talent is to play football, so I want to strive my best to play the best that I can."

And for Travis Hunter, the strive towards playing his best will get underway Saturday when the whistle blows to start the game with the Wolfpack.

Pirate cross country teams gearing up

By STUART GANTT
Sports Writer

East Carolina's men's and women's cross country teams are gearing up their second season of competition which begins Saturday at the Campbell University Invitational.

Head Coach John Welborn returns a nice combination of veterans and newcomers in 1987. This year the Pirates look to improve upon last season when the men finished seventh and the women fifth in the Colonial Athletic Association—a talented cross-country conference.

The men's squad will be led by three outstanding runners—Mike McGehee, Matt Schweitzer and Rob Rice. McGehee is coming off a good 1986 season in which he logged the best time of any ECU runner in the conference championship. Schweitzer was the top runner in last season's University of Richmond Invitational and should be a tough competitor this season. Rice is a consistent runner who should perform well again in 1987.

Other returnees, all of whom are Patrick, improved and should perform admirably, are John Byrd, Rusty Williams and Vince Wilson. Five newcomers complete the men's roster—Rusty Meador, Miles Layton, Joe Corley, Freddie Fuller and Henry Leading the way for the women will be Terri Lynch, Stefanie Ingram and Kim Griffiths. Led by Lynch, action this season.

Four talented newcomers greet Welborn this season. Bibi Roasa, a junior college transfer; Leigh Ann Harrison, a transfer from UNC Charlotte; Dawn Tillson and Judy Wilson. All four should see plenty of action for the Pirates.

Again in 1987 the Pirates have a challenging schedule highlighted by the State of North Carolina Championships in mid-October and the CAA Championship in November.

Welborn is excited about the season and is looking forward to success, especially if the team can remain reasonably healthy throughout the season.

"We must be careful with injuries," Welborn said. "We're short on manpower in that we don't have any depth in numbers."

He added, "Both the men and women will be improved this season. Our times and finished will be an improvement over 1986."

Soccer squad shuts out Frances Marion

By GEORGE OSBORNE
Sports Editor

East Carolina blanked Mt. Olive, 4-0, in a pre-season scrimmage Tuesday. The scrimmage marks the end of pre-season workouts for the Pirates as they prepare for their season opener against Francis Marion Sept. 6.

"I feel real good about the scrimmage," head coach Charlie Harvey said. "I know now what we are going to have to work on to have a good season."

Robert Larsson led the Pirate offense scoring the first goal 17 minutes into the match and last goal with 10 minutes left. T.J. Aspden assisted Larsson on each of his goals.

Newcomer Mark Gibson scored the second Pirate goal 42 minutes into the first half on an assist from Frank Marsh. Jeff Kime, on a pass from Matt Richter, opened the second half scoring.

The Pirate keepers behind starter Mac Kendall had only three saves between them as the Pirate defense kept Mt. Olive at bay for most of the match. Freshman Scott McCullough and Gregory Mortimer both saw time at the ECU goalie position.

Coach Harvey played the entire squad in the scrimmage starting with his first team and substituting throughout the match.

"I was very pleased with the way our players off the bench performed," Harvey said. "Of the 26 shots on goal that we had, they were divided among 13 players. That's a good ratio."

ECU, off to a good start as it strives for a winning season, will take the rest of the week to prepare for the regular season. The scrimmage allowed Harvey to plan his upcoming practices in preparation for Francis Marion.

"Out of the scrimmage I feel that I have a set backfield and midfield," he said. "What we need to work on this week is our timing and our ability to maintain possession.

After the Francis Marion match on Sept. 6, the Pirates open conference play Sept. 9 at William & Mary. ECU returns home to host George Mason University Sept. 12 at 12 p.m.

Student ticket pickup

Student pickup for East Carolina's first home game of the season begins Friday, Sept. 4.

The first home game of the year for the Pirate grid squad is scheduled for Sept. 12 at 7 p.m. The contest will be played against nationally-ranked Florida State.

Friday will be designated for group ticket pickups. The tickets can be picked up at Minges Coliseum from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. or from the Mendenhall Student Center Ticket Office from 10 a.m.-6 p.m.

Regular student pickup will resume on Tuesday, following the Labor Day holiday. Students can pick the tickets up at both Minges and Mendenhall at the same times listed above. The student pickup will continue Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at the same times or until the allotment has been exhausted.

Any tickets that are still remaining after Thursday will be put on sale to the general public on Friday.

This same procedure will be followed for every home game this season with the exception of the group student pickup hours. The group student pickup will be on Monday for every other home game. The group pickup day was moved to Friday for the Florida State game because of the Labor Day holiday on Monday.

In order to pickup a ticket, a student must have a valid ECU student I.D. and activity card. No more than two I.D.'s may be used to pickup free student tickets. Guest tickets may be purchased by students for half price.

The ECU ticket office will be open on Monday, Sept. 7 (Labor Day) from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. for the sale of individual game tickets or season tickets to the general public.

Wishful thinking

Pirate fans are hoping that the scoreboard Saturday night in Raleigh will much the same result as it did in 1985. In that contest, the Pirates led 33-14 in the fourth quarter. ECU went on to win the contest by the same score.

Intramurals sets signup dates

The Department of Intramural-Recreational Services will be holding registration for a number of activities during the month of September.

To start off the Intramural Sport schedule, registration for flag football will be held Sept. 8 from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. in room 104-A Memorial Gym. Teams will be able to compete in a number of divisions set up for enjoyment and competitive purposes. Co-rec softball sign up will also be held Sept. 8 at 5 p.m. in room D-103.

Registration each Monday and Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in Memorial Gym, co-rec cageball Sept. 23, home run derby Sept. 30 and racquetball through Sept. 4 with sessions beginning Sept. 30. For more specific information, call 757-6387 or come in person to room 204 Memorial Gym.

The Aerobic Challenge Club has been developed for avid aerobicists through recreational means. This program is an individual program open to all intramural sports, flag football and co-rec softball officials will be earned through participation in the month of September. The Intramural aerobics program will have possibilities of earning awards through an accumulation of 75 points or Memorial Gym. Water Basketball, more. The PEPSI Physical Fitness Club, and basketball officials will be needed throughout the fall semester. For more information call Todd McCollum at 757-6387. No experience is necessary.

The Department of Intramural-Recreational Services Physical Fitness Program is offering a variety of innovative programs this fall. Swimming, pushing (wheelchairs), or a combination of activities. Points are earned through participation in these activities with awards given for achievement in the activity of choice. For information on any program offered by the Physical Fitness Program, contact Kathleen Hill at 757-6387.

In conjunction with Jeffrey's Beer & Wine (BUD LIGHT), the Department of Intramural-Recreational Services will be sponsoring the Annual ALMOST ANYTHING GOES competition at the bottom of College Hill Sept. 17 from 3-7 p.m. The event is comprised of a variety of unusual activities designed strictly for fun and enjoyment. No prior athletic abilities are needed in this fun for all event. Each participant will receive a FREE Bud Light/Almost Anything Goes t-shirt with trophies given to individual first through fourth place finishers.

Only 48 teams will be allowed to compete with registration being held Sept. 14 from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. To sign up, come by room 104-A Memorial Gym.

The Informal Recreation Division offers a wide range of services for individuals who wish to recreate in an organized fashion. Gymnasium free play, free swim and weight room hours are available in Memorial Gym and Minges Coliseum. Corked bat screws Houston's hitting king

HOUSTON (AP) - A corked bat of Billy Hatcher claims he merely grabbed off the bat rack may play a key role in the National League West if the Houston Astros' leading hitter is suspended for using it.

Hatcher was ejected from Tuesday night's game against the Chicago Cubs after he was discovered using the bat that contained cork.

Hatcher had singled when the bat cracked. He was then ruled out and ejected from the game.

Houston Manager Hal Lanier is concerned about the punishment that might be assessed and the effect it might have on his team's chances in the pennant race.

"I'm sure there will be some type of punishment," Lanier said. "We're in a pennant race, and to lose a player the caliber of Hatcher could lose you the pennant."

It was the first such ejection since 1974, when Craig Nettles of the New York Yankees was ejected from a game for using an altered bat.

The 3-2 loss to the Chicago Cubs gave the Astros a seven-game losing streak and put them five games behind the San Francisco Giants in the National League West.

Hatcher disclaimed any knowledge of the cork in the bat and said that the bat was not his.

"I just grabbed a bat off the rack because all of my bats were broken," Hatcher said. "It was one of the pitchers' bats. I don't even know who it belonged to and I didn't know it was corked. You can check any of my bats if you want to."

With Gerald Young on first and no one out in the fourth inning, Hatcher hit a ground ball to shortstop Shawn Dunstan when his bat cracked. Chicago third baseman Keith Moreland retrieved the bat and showed it to home plate umpire Dana DeMuth. DeMuth then took the remnants to umpire crew chief John McSherry.

McSherry examined the bat, and after conferring with Lanier, called Hatcher out and ejected him from the game.

"We've been hearing a lot about (corked) bats lately, but this is the first one we have seen," McSherry said. "It was hollowed out with a groove and about three or four inches of cork was inside it."

Houston relief pitcher Dave Smith later admitted the bat belonged to him but denied any knowledge of how the cork got inside the bat.

Lanier defended Hatcher. "Billy was really innocent," Lanier said. "He didn't know what he had in his hands. That is one of the bats our pitchers use to play their silly little games to see how far

Terp coach takes

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) - Coaching of Coach Joe Krivak of Maryland will be looking at the game from a different perspective when the Terps open their football season at Syracuse Saturday night.

Krivak will not only be serving as head coach for the first time, after 18 years as an assistant at three schools, he also will view the action from an unfamiliar angle.

After 13 years of watching from the press box level, Krivak will be the traditional sideline spot reserved for head coaches.

"It's different, but each time there I feel more comfortable," Krivak said Tuesday of the sideline position he has worked from in simulated games.

While he has trouble spotting downfield, Krivak said of his new location, "I get a better feel for what's going on... the chemistry of the players, the flow of the game."

Krivak said he would continue to call the plays for Maryland quarterbacks, while being fed the kind of information he used to provide from the press box.

When he's calling plays, Krivak said, "I sort of get the rhythm and feel... things just flow out."

Terp coach takes new look

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) - Coach Joe Krivak of Maryland will be looking at the game from a different perspective when the Terps open their football season at Syracuse Saturday night.

Krivak will not only be serving as head coach for the first time, after 18 years as an assistant at three schools, he also will view the action from an unfamiliar angle.

After 13 years of watching from the press box level, Krivak will be in the traditional sideline spot reserved for head coaches.

"It's different, but each time there I feel more comfortable," Krivak said Tuesday of the sideline position he has worked from in simulated games.

Krivak said he would continue to call the plays for Maryland quarterbacks, while being fed the kind of information he used to provide from the press box.

When he's calling plays, Krivak said, "I sort of get the rhythm and feel things just flow out."

Krivak's play calling and his coaching of quarterback and receivers in the last five years helped Boomer Esiason, Frank Reich, Stan Gelbaugh and Dan Henning become the most prolific passers in Maryland history.

Henning will return this year as a senior after setting eight school records in his first season at quarterback, passing for more than 300 yards in four games.

"I feel very comfortable with Dan Henning," Krivak told the media at his first weekly news conference. "He provides good leadership, and I feel he's going to be a very productive player."

Syracuse is led by Don McPherson, a quarterback who ran off 111 yards and passed for 204 against Maryland when Terps beat the Orangemen 35-18 in the 1985 Cherry Bowl.

"The key will be to contain the McPherson," Krivak said. "He's a good dropback passer, but he's most dangerous on the option and the option pass. He can move around, and has the knack of being able to find people downfield. He's a major problem."

Maryland is a bit inexperienced in the four-deep secondary that has replaced the three deep of the deposed wide-tackle six defense. But Krivak said he had confidence in the unit, adding: "this will be a real good test."

The game also will be a test for Krivak as he makes his head coaching debut at his alma mater.

"I'd be lying if I said I didn't have butterflies and anxiety," he said while revealing he had difficulty going to sleep Sunday night while thinking about football.

After winning nine of the last 11 games against Syracuse, Maryland has tied the all-time series that began in 1920 at 14-14-1.

The Orangemen are 3-point favorites to take the series lead.

they can hit the ball in batting practice. It just happened to be the same model of bat Billy uses and he was out of bats, so he picked it up."

Chicago Manager Gene Michael believes a severe penalty is appropriate for anyone who is caught cheating. "Isn't it something. We always seem to be involved. They have to do something about this," Michael said. "There's more cheating going on now and we've got to have some rules to stop it."

Pirates tabbed in worst 20 poll

By PAT MOLLOY
Assistant Sports Editor

For the second year running, ECU football has made it into the Penthouse 20 Worst Teams list. Unlike last year, however, the Pirates don't seem destined to fulfill that prophesy.

Larry Linderman is the man responsible for compiling the list. Exactly what Linderman's credentials are in relation to collegiate athletics has never been established.

We think he probably played ball at SMU. Nevertheless, the Pirates have been listed at number five—that's a granddaddy-step down from being the 16th worst last year—and aren't expected to produce this season.

"East Carolina, 2-9 last season, has become a professional opponent," Linderman writes. "no matter how overmatched they might be, the Pirates will show up anywhere for a fat payday." The article goes on to list the scores by which East Carolina lost big games last year, and continues to berate the team for trying to upgrade their horns beyond repair. There's no doubt Texas will feel the heat, but ECU isn't among bad company, they'll hardly fall so low as to be the 20th worst team in college ball.

Middies of the Naval Academy, producers of Heisman Trophy candidate Napoleon McCallum. Linderman lists lack of defense as Navy's main problem.

At number six is Colorado State who finished 6-5 last year, "the Ram's first winning season of the eighties," he says, "the fact of the matter is this: Colorado State football is about to hit the skids." We think Larry should loosen his underwear a bit.

Memphis State shows up at the 11 slot. Granted, the Tigers haven't fared well as of late, (1-10 last season) but to say "Don Shula couldn't win with this bunch" seems a bit harsh. Linderman doesn't figure to be the hit of the party circuit.

"This is a 15-year rebuilding program," says Howard Schnellenberger, head coach of the Louisville Cardinals, ranked 15th worst. Sadly, Linderman is correct in his assessment of the Cards. Schnellenberger has had to downgrade his schedule simply to have a chance to win games.

Falling in at number 20—the best of the worst, as it were—is Texas. Not traditionally a loser, Linderman feels that inner struggles, such as the loss of 12 academically ineligible players will hurt the Longhorn team in the nation, is, Columbia. I have to concur here, also. The Lions currently have the longest losing streak in college football, 31 games.

Columbia hasn't won a football contest since 1983—people have enrolled and graduated amidst this team's losing streak. The Lions have only four more games to lose before they break Northwestern's NCAA losing record. Trust me, they'll do it.
