History team teaching program 'successful', part of a trend

By DOUG WHITE
News Editor

A new team teaching program in ECU's history department has been very successful during its initial semester, according to Dr. Bodo Nischan, a professor in the department.

The new approach is being used in a history course titled, "Survey of Western Civilization Up to 1500."

Nischan, along with Drs. Robert Gowen and Anthony Papalas, rotate the teaching load in order to allow each professor to cover his speciality.

Papalas specializes in ancient history, Gowen in non-western and Byzantine civilizations, and Nischan in the Medieval and Reformation periods.

According to Nischan, the new program is part of a national trend towards revitalizing history in increasing its appeal.

"Team teaching has been very successful across the nation and is part of a national trend," said Nischan. "Up until two or three years ago, there was a declining interest in history."

"However, many schools are now putting history back into the core curriculum. We hope to restore history to a more prominent position in a student's education."

Nischan said the history faculty has been looking for a new approach to teaching world history since many students think the course is hard and since it is not as popular as it should be.

Dr. Gowen was instrumental in the program's implementation since he has taught under a similar arrangement at Toledo University, according to Nischan.

Recent class surveys indicate that most of the 24 students enrolled in the course approve of the program.

"We regard this program as an experiment, and we expected some problems," said Gowen. "But out of 21 students surveyed, 18 approved of the program."

One problem with the program is the adjustment students must make for each test.

"I have no complaints about the program, other than having to get used to three professors and three kinds of tests," said Thomas Leake, a student in the course.

Efforts are being made to remedy this though, according to Nischan.

'A chance for all Greeks to get together'

'Greek Week' underway

By JEANNIE WILLIAMS
Assistant News Editor

Greek Week, a conglomeration of all Greek activities, began Saturday and will culminate this Saturday as fraternities and sororities compete against each other for top honors in activities such as a bed race, car cram, track and field meet, beer-chugging, and dancing and partying, according to Jay Chambers, treasurer of the Inter-Fraternity Council.

"Greek Week is a Greek get-together, a conglomeration of all Greek activities," said Chambers.

"It's the event of the year," he added.

"It's a chance for all the Greeks to get together and participate in a lot of fun activities. Usually not much studying gets done," said Chambers.

On Saturday, the beginning of Greek Week, a field day was held at the Pi Kappa Phi house.

Greeks competed in volleyball tug-of-war and other activities-- including not being thrown into the pond in front of the fraternity house.

A track and field meet was held yesterday at Harrington Field. The Kappa Alpha's won the meet for the fraternity division while the Tri-Sigs won the sorority division.

On Tuesday, at 3:30 p.m. Delta Sigma Phi fraternity will hold a "Bed Race" on the Mall, and the Alpha Delta Pi sorority will have a car cram. The car to be crammed will be a Volkswagen. The Inter-Fraternity Council Banquet will be held Tuesday night at 6 p.m. at the Moose Lodge.

New officers will be inducted and scholastic, academic and individual recognition achievements will be awarded.

The annual Raft Race down the Tar River, sponsored by Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, is set for Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. Starting point will be the boat ramp at the Tar River Park.

Fraternities and sororities will race downriver in homemade, self-styled rafts.

On Thursday, Kappa Sigma fraternity will hold a beer-chugging contest at 3:30 p.m. at the Kappa Sigma house. Winning team will receive $150.

Concert cancelled due to floor damage

By DOUG WHITE
News Editor

A concert featuring Brick and Mother's Finest, originally scheduled for April 2, was cancelled because permission to use Minges Coliseum could not be secured, according to Charles Sune, chairperson of the Popular Entertainment Committee.

"After the Styx concert, the administration was upset with the condition Minges was left in, especially the floor. The floor was damaged by cigarette burns," Sune said.

The Student Union received complaints from the administration soon after the concert.

Sune, along with Dennis Ramsey, Student Union president met with Cliff Moore, vice-chancellor of business affairs. Moore has the authority to approve or deny the use of any building on campus by any organization.

"We were given the option of either paying a deposit to replace the entire floor in Minges for every concert we held there, or we could purchase a floor covering to cover the entire floor, including under the bleachers, instead of just the seating area which is presently covered by canvas sheets during concerts."

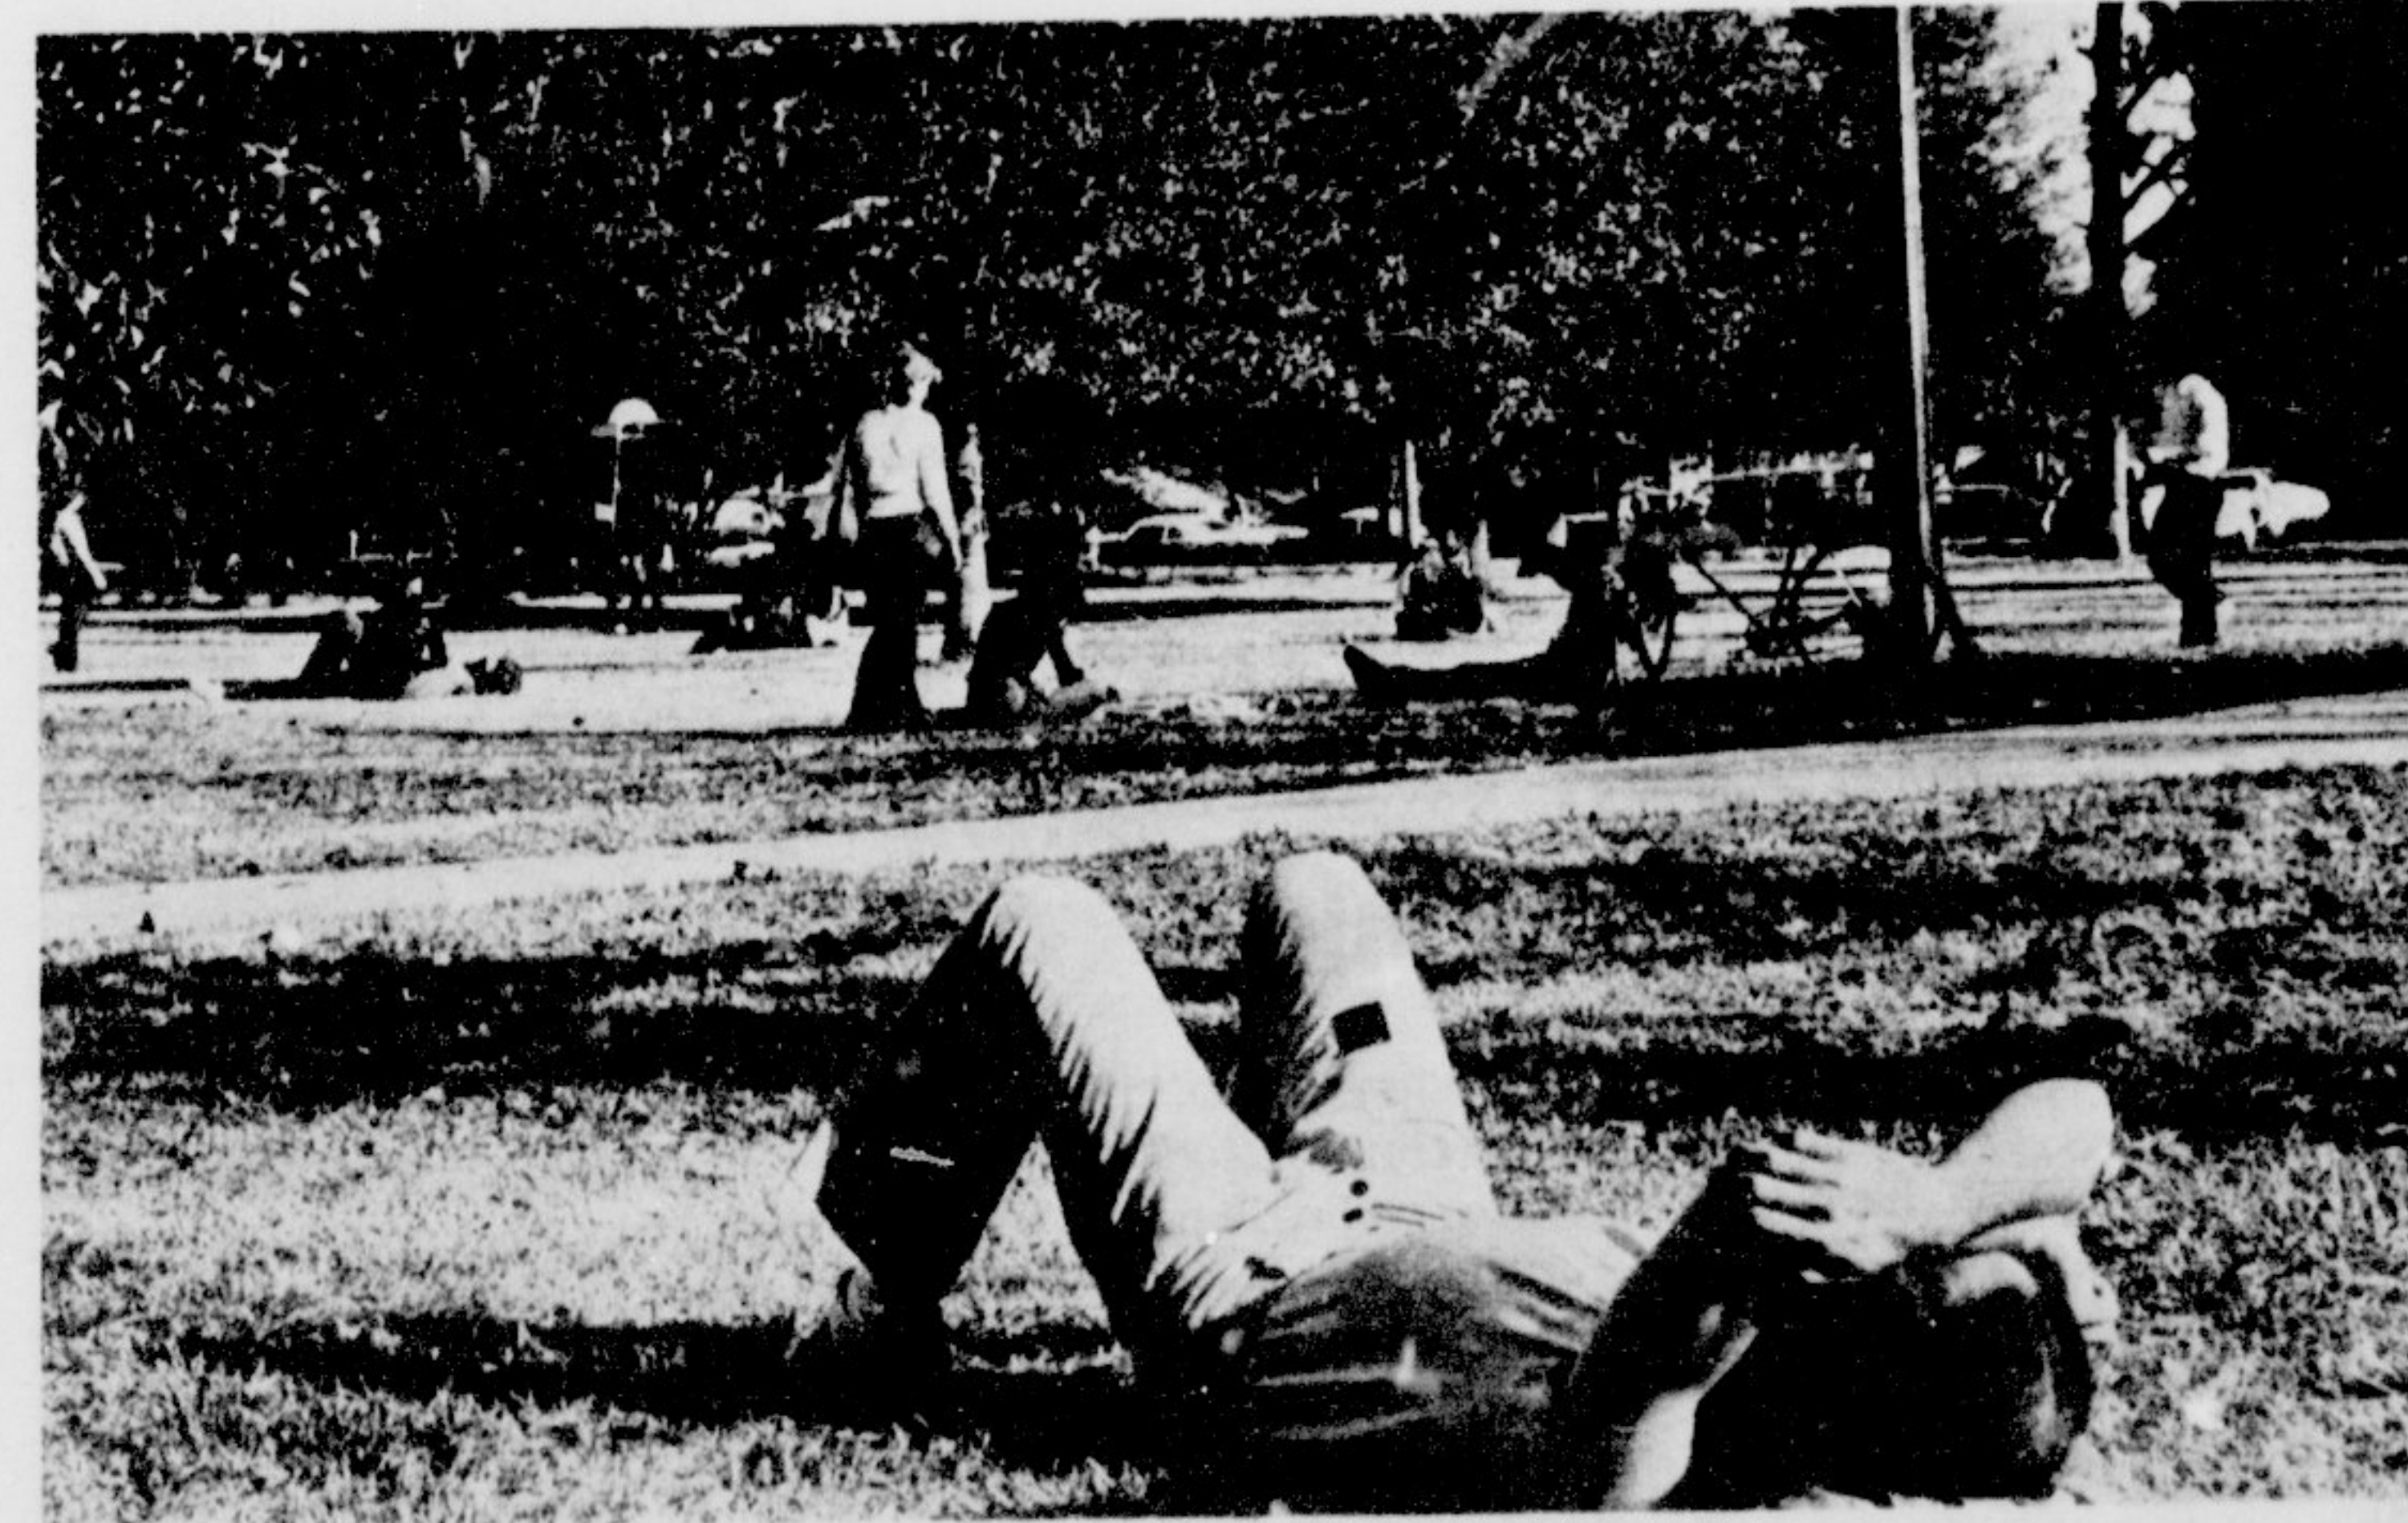

Sune said. "We also need some type of non-flammable covering which can't be penetrated by cigarettes, like canvas," Sune added.

The Student Union decided to buy a floor covering that would meet the requirements specified by the administration.

"The purchasing branch of the university is presently investigating several possibilities. We have received estimates of anywhere from $10,000 to $20,000 for a covering. All the profits we've made from the concerts this year are being directed to the floor covering," Sune said.

"Word of the Brick/Mother's Finest concert had leaked out sometime in March, and many students were excited about it, myself among them. However with the purchase of a floor covering, disappointments like this probably won't happen anymore," Sune added.

Although there will be no more indoor concerts this year, the Popular Entertainment Committee has signed Glass Moon for a mall concert Tues., April 18 at 8 p.m. There will also be a mall concert the following Tues., April 25, featuring Symbol 8.

STUDENTS FLOCK TO the mall in droves as soon as temperatures rise above 70. Some even take time out for a nap on the green.

Jobs

Hundreds of U.S. students will find jobs in France, Ireland and Great Britain this summer through the Work in Europe program sponsored by the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE).

For the past nine years, this popular program has provided students with the direct experience of living and working in another country and, at the same time, helped them reduce the cost of their trip abroad. The Work in Europe program virtually eliminates the red tape that students faced in the past when they wanted to work abroad.

Participants must find their own jobs but will have the help of the cooperating student travel organizations in each country.

In France they may work during the summer; in Great Britain they may work at any time of the year for up to six months; in Ireland they may work at any time of the year for up to four months.

Salaries are low, but students generally earn enough to pay for their room and board while they work.

A typical job would be that of chambermaid in a hotel in London's West End.

But last summer one enterprising student found work as an apprentice jockey for one of Ireland's racing stables.

To qualify for CIEE's program, students must be between the ages of 18 and 30 and must be able to prove their student status.

To work in France, they must also be able to speak and understand French.

For more information and application forms, contact CIEE, Dept. PR-A, 777 United Nations Plaza, New York, New York 10017; or 236 North Santa Cruz, #314, Los Gatos, California 95030.

Colleges sponsor summer schools abroad

By DENNIS LEONARD
Special to FOUNTAINHEAD

Summer Schools Abroad, sponsored by Guilford College and UNC-Greensboro, offers summer schools for 1978 in France, Greece, England, and Germany (East and West).

Each school is nine weeks of individual travel, allowing the student to pursue his/her own interests.

Students may take two courses the equivalent of eight credit hours under the Guilford System and six under the UNC-G system. Classes are held Monday through Thursday in the mornings, leaving the afternoons and evenings free for program activities, field trips, or free time.

The program includes activities such as guided tours through museums, opera, and theatre performances, sightseeing, student meetings, and excursions to places of historic and cultural importance.

For a little more than the cost of the same hours on campus, participants have the roundtrip flight, travel, hotels, two meals per day, admission fees, guides and faculty leadership provided for the six weeks of study.

During the last three weeks, students handle their own expenses and time. At the end of the three weeks students from all the schools will meet back in Paris for the return flight.

The French group will spend the first month in Paris, living and studying together in a Latin Quarter hotel. In addition to excursions within Paris, the program will also include trips to Versailles and Chartres.

The fifth week will be spent in the Loire Valley with the last week of the formal study time in Provence, in the south of France. The courses to be offered are "French Conversation" on both the intermediate and the advanced levels, and "French Culture and Civilization."

The German Summer School will spend several days in Paris before arriving in Munich to begin classes. The group will leave Munich on June 10 to travel through East Germany, stopping at several cities before arriving in Berlin on June 18.

Phi Sigma Pi initiates nine

By DOUG WHITE
News Editor

Phi Sigma Pi, national honor fraternity, initiated nine new members April 1, according to Reed Warren, President.

Initiated were: Linda Barber, Susan Bowden, Colleen Flynn, Judy Fordyce, Lee Huggins, Lowell Oakley, Dale Pitt, Donna Southall, Ellen Thomas.

The members were honored that evening with a chicken picking and party.

Phi Sigma Pi is the oldest fraternal organization on campus and is based on the tripod of scholarship, leadership, and fellowship. They have won the most outstanding chapter in the nation award consecutively for the past 12 years, Warren said.

To be eligible for membership, a student must have a 3.3 grade average or better, have sophomore or junior status, possess the qualities of scholarship, leadership, and fellowship.

The new members were required to attend three pledge meetings, obtain 75 per cent of the present members' signatures, score 90 per cent or better on a pledge test, hold a fund raising project for the Todd Scholarship Fund, attend the informal initiation, present their philosophy of life, and attend the formal initiation.

Mead approves of coed dorm living

New York — Anthropologist Margaret Mead today praised college students living in coeducational dormitories for developing a kind of "taboo" against serious dating among themselves, saying it will help prepare them for future non-sexist relations in the working world.

"Young women and young men who later will have to work side by side, in super-ordinate and subordinate relations as well as equals and members of a team, and finding their way toward a kind of harmony in which exploitative sex is set aside in favor of mutual concern, shared interests and a new sense of friendship," Dr. Mead explained in her monthly column in the (April) issue of Redbook magazine.

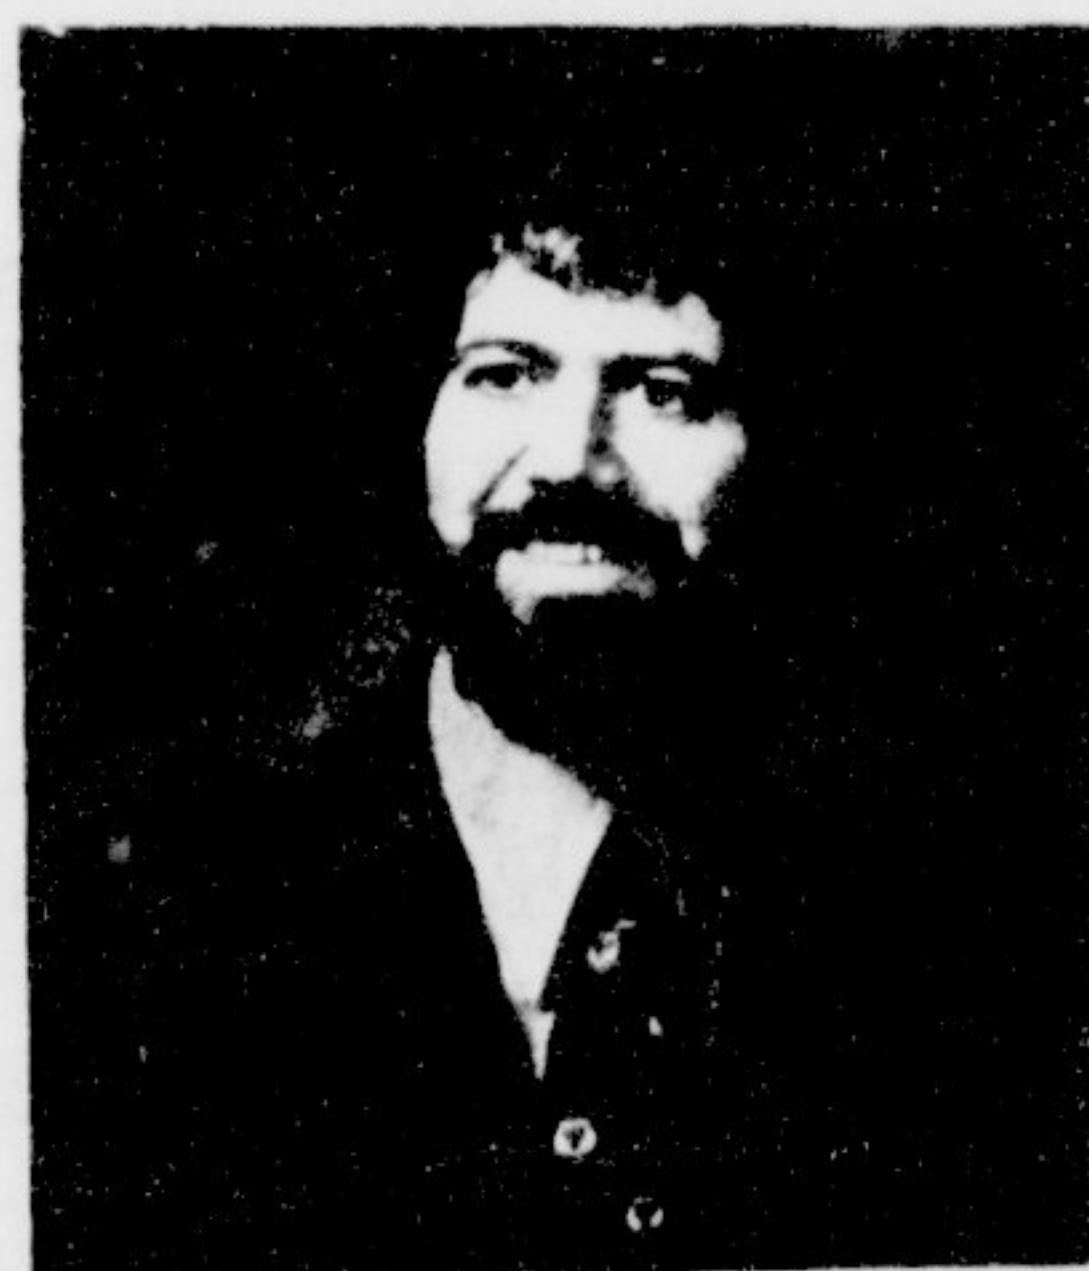

Dr. Mead added that although many of their elders objected to coeducational dormitories, assuming them to be a vehicle for freer sexual access, young men and women have used the living situation to become friends and to discover that they are alike as people in many ways.

"It is just a beginning, but students can set a style that will carry over into working relations in which skill, ability and experience are the criteria by which persons are judged, and appreciation of a woman or a man as a whole person will deeply modify the exploitation and the anguish of sexual inequality," Dr. Mead commented.

She advocated that a similar taboo be adopted by the business world.

"We need one that says clearly and unequivocally 'You don't make passes at or sleep with the people you work with.'"

Students deserve longer drop period

Many students sometimes find themselves in classes that they are not sure whether they want to be in or not. Many try to stick it out, thinking that they will make it through the semester.

After 30 days on the semester system, the drop period ends. For many students, a nightmare begins. First, the professor (who has not given a test all semester) decides that the day after the drop period ends is a good day for a test.

After the student takes the test, he sometimes begins to wonder if perhaps he made a mistake in deciding to stick with the course. Try though he might, he cannot drop the course unless he withdraws from school or produces a medical reason to withdraw from the class.

The Credits Committee of the Faculty Senate spent a good deal of time deciding when the drop period should end, according to Dr. Susan McDaniel, associate vice-chancellor of academics affairs.

The committee decided that, on the quarter system, 20 days was sufficient time to allow a student to decide whether he wanted the course or not. When ECU converted to the semester system, the number was changed to 30 days.

The Course Drop Appeals Committee submitted a resolution to the Faculty Senate a couple of years ago that would have required professors to give a test within the drop period. The resolution was not approved.

Students are forced to stay in classes which may or may not benefit them. Thirty days is certainly enough time for a student to decide whether he should stay in the class or not, but if the professor does not test the class, how can the student know whether the class will be beneficial to him grade-wise?

Whether students attend college to learn is sometimes debatable, but certainly all students are interested in doing the best they can in the classes they do take.

Since the students and their parents are the ones who are paying for their educations, then it would appear that they should at least have more than 30 days for the drop period, a time when professors should give at least one test for the students' benefit.

Letter provokes informed non-smoker

To FOUNTAINHEAD:

I was provoked to write this letter by Marc Adler's asinine comments on cigarette smoking and Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare Joseph Califano.

Adler's knowledge of facts concerning cigarette smoking is obviously non-existent. He comments that a "trend of thought" founded by "several statistics" support "the idea that cigarettes do harm to a smoker's health."

There is nothing ambiguous about the fact that every year in the U.S. alone 300,000 people die prematurely from the effects of smoking.

No major medical or health agency questions the facts about the unhealthfulness of smoking. Adler also claims that "there is no substantial evidence to form a sound theory that cigarette smoking does cause harm."

This statement is totally false, as thousands of carefully documented studies have been conducted concerning cigarette smoking and health.

Also, the idea that Califano is "not totally sincere" about fighting smoking is ridiculous. HEW is seeking public awareness about health, and is in no way attempting to legalize the smoking of tobacco.

If a government agency such as HEW does not take the responsibility to inform the public about such health-related topics, where is one to get up-to-date, factual information?

HEW is not trying to command anyone's life. It is merely presenting the facts - that smoking is the leading cause of emphysema, chronic bronchitis, cancer, and heart disease.

As for Adler's entreaty that we imagine "cigarettes being bootlegged or sold on a black market": this is a thing of the present, not of the future.

Transports of cigarettes are smuggled across state lines daily to be illegally sold elsewhere at cheaper prices.

Living in N.C. also adds another bias to already distorted views towards smoking due to public ignorance. Anything against smoking goes directly against the tobacco industry - the states major source of income.

It is extremely unfortunate that the so-called "progressive" government of N.C. cannot understand the fact that it is a gross injustice for non-smokers to have to be subjected to other people's toxic smoke fumes in public.

The U.S. Surgeon General has said "Nonsmokers" have a much right to clean air and wholesome air as smokers have to their so-called right to smoke, which I would redefine as a so-called right to pollute. It is high time to ban smoking from all confined public places such as restaurants, theaters, airplanes, trains, and buses. It is time that we interpret the Bill of Rights for the nonsmoker as well as the smoker."

The public needs to realize that smoking is not glamorous, and is linked to disability and death. The last thing our society needs is individuals such as Adler to confuse and distort the facts about smoking.

Setting the record straight,
Wendy Gronert
An informed non-smoker

Art student angered at theft

To FOUNTAINHEAD:

It makes me sick to think that someone could be so vicious and unfeeling as to rip off a senior show guest book.

I have spent the past four years working hard toward my senior art show. I was quite proud of it and would have liked to have known what others thought of it.

With no thanks to some malicious "person", I now will never know. To the "person" who has stooped so low as to take my book, I would like to know what use you could possibly have with it.

That book had much sentimental value to me. It is irreplaceable, and can't possibly mean anything to anyone except me.

In my four years at ECU, this is the most disgusting thing that has happened to me here. If anyone knows anything about the whereabouts of my senior show books, I would appreciate them letting me know.

Human Resources gives money to support perinatal program

ECU News Bureau

The Department of Human Resources has awarded $180,000 to Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the ECU School of Medicine for the development and support of the 29-county eastern regional perinatal program.

The perinatal program provides special care and treatment for high-risk expectant mothers and critically-ill newborns who face problems which may result in infant mortality.

A 33-bed neonatal intensive care unit currently under construction will serve eastern North Carolina as a regional center for infants requiring specialized care.

Chairman of the ECU Department of Pediatrics, Dr. Jon B. Tinglestad, said $40,000 of the budget will be used to purchase a vehicle for transporting high-risk mothers and babies from the 29-county region to the center in Greenville.

The van is a "neonatal intensive care center on wheels," according to Tinglestad.

"It will have the most sophisticated diagnostic and therapeutic equipment available, and in most circumstances involving critically-ill babies, surface transportation via the van will offer more support than fixed-wing or helicopter transport," he said.

Phi Beta elects officers at convention

Phi Beta Lambda's annual state convention was held March 31-April 2 in Winston-Salem at the Hyatt House.

Sharon Perry and Maxcine Spivey, members of the Omnicron Chapter of Phi Beta Lambda here at ECU attended the convention along with the advisor, Ricard Dupree.

The state convention consists of the election of new officers for the next school year, and the discussion of old and new business. It also consists of members from different schools competing in various areas of business, such as accounting, banking, data processing, Ms. Future Business Leader and many others.

Most of the events consist of a written test, although some of the competition involves oral responses.

Competitors scoring the highest grades and responding to questions the most accurately and impressively receive awards and certificates. This year there were certificates extending up to fifth place winners.

Maxcine Spivey competed in the field of business administration and was also a voting delegate. Sharon Perry competed in the field of economics and won second place.

"Everything the baby and mother need will be in the van, and it will be staffed with qualified personnel," he said.

The perinatal budget will also be used to purchase equipment, such as respirators and monitoring equipment, which will be used in the present nursery at the hospital until the neonatal center is complete.

The remainder of the budget will fund staff positions for the neonatal center and help pay hospital costs for patients who lack the financial resources.

Dr. Kilgore will be featured at two sessions on Thursday, April 13. "Keeping Marriage Alive in the 70's," at 11:00 a.m., and "Keeping the Family Alive in the 70's," at 2:00 p.m.

The ECU Family Life Committee, an inter-departmental Campus Committee chaired by Dr. Charles Snow of the Department of Child Development and Family Relations, is presenting the conference in cooperation with the Student Government Association and the Department of Sociology.

Dr. Thomas Clark has published numerous articles on marital and family health and frequently speaks to various religious, medical and public groups.

Clark is currently president of the North Carolina Association of Marriage and Family Counselors.

Dr. James Kilgore's article on "How to Stop Arguing About Money" is featured in the July, 1976 issue of Reader's Digest.

Books which he has written include: Being a Man In A Woman's World, Letter on Life and Love, Try Marriage Before Divorce, and Getting More Out of your Dollar.

Team teaching: 'more work for profs'

The professors are trying to integrate their exams more and have included study guides to help students prepare for examinations, according to Gowen.

"I think the readjustment is a small price to pay for the benefits the students get from the program," said Gowen. "We only had two exams so far, and the class average is high. Very few people are in trouble, fewer than in a normal course of this type. Grades have been above average."

The new approach also makes the teachers work load a little heavier.

"When a class is only partly yours, you think through your lectures and exams a little more," said Gowen. "A lot more thought goes into this type course than the usual course."

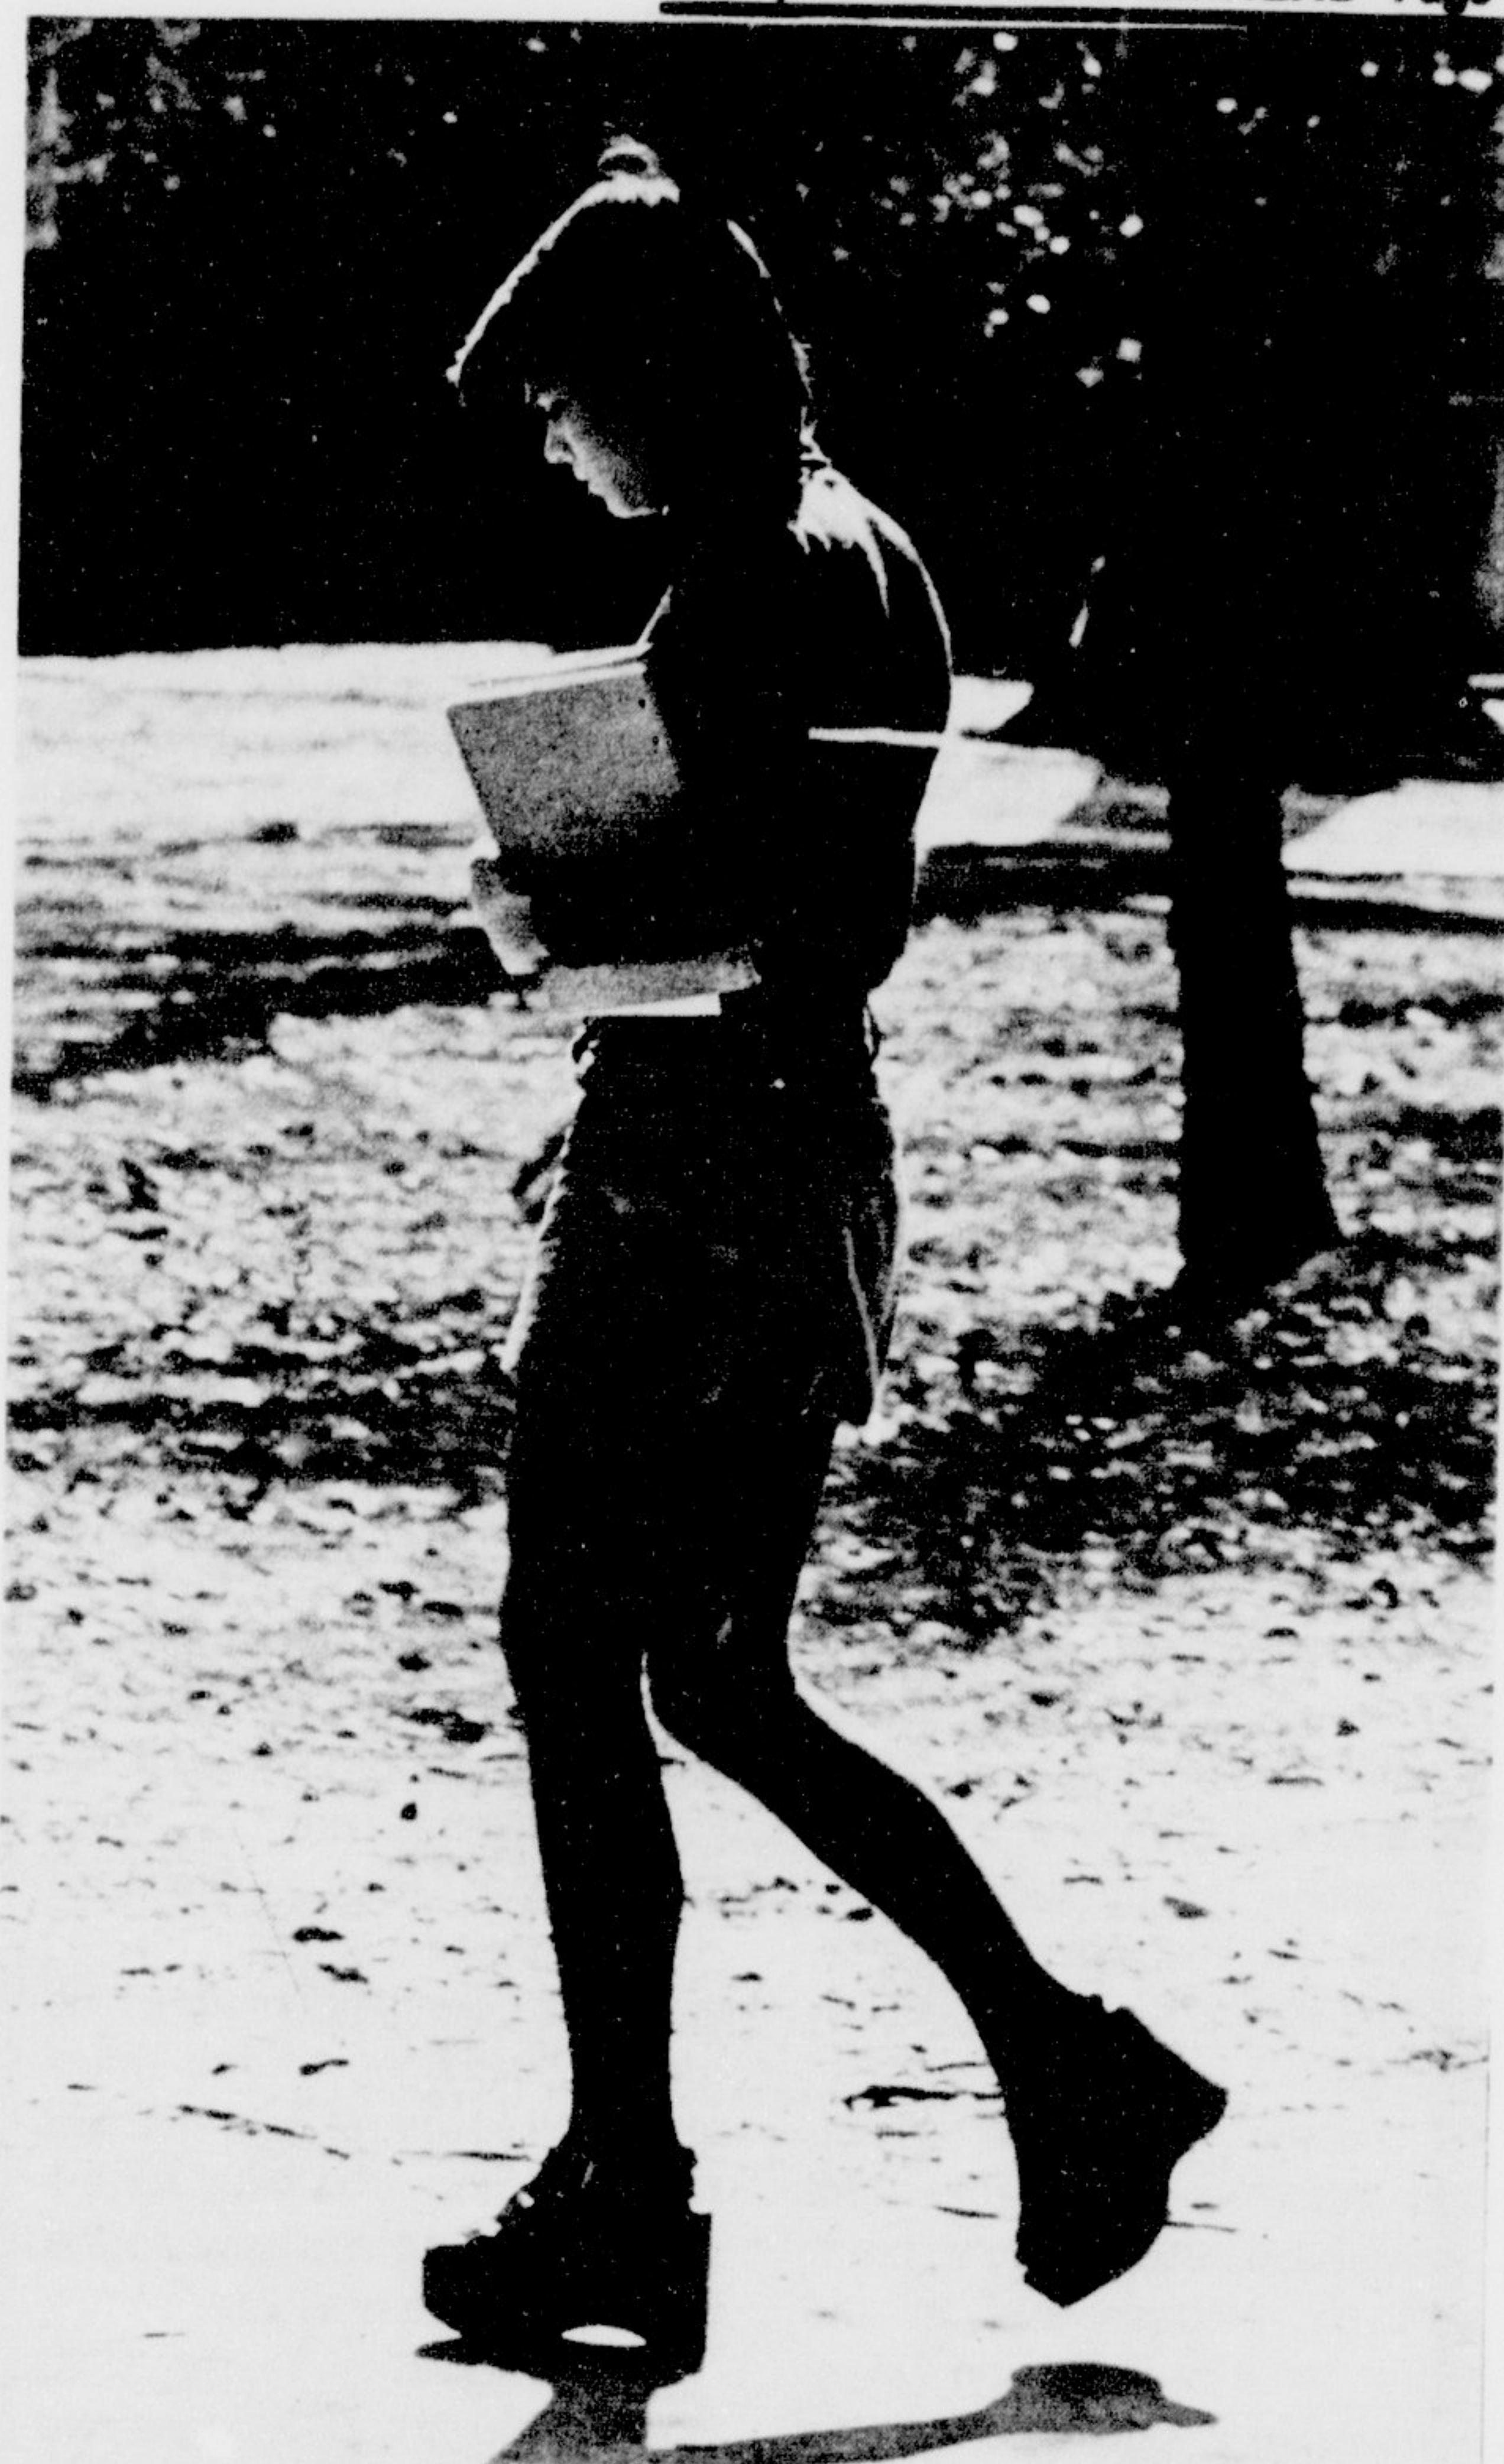

"You're working with two other teachers and still trying to be fair to the students."

"One thing we've tried to do is to shape our material and delivery to make to relevant and meaningful to students' lives and to get them to see that history is a building process to get us where we are today."

"We try to learn from the successes and failures of the past, especially what causes decline and growth of civilizations," Gowen said.

As a reward for their efforts, the professors are treating the class to beer at the Rathskeller in downtown Greenville.

"We've been very pleased with them, and I think they deserve it," said Gowen. "Plus, in an informal situation such as that, you can learn a lot from students that you wouldn't normally hear in routine student-teacher encounters."

WALKING TO CLASS somehow takes a lot longer now than it did in winter.

Radiation exposure may cause cancer in industry workers

(LNS) Just when some alarming results were about to emerge, a long-term government funded study of cancer among nuclear industry workers was quietly redirected.

According to a recent article written by Chicago Daily News Service reporter William Hines, the study suggests that radiation risks exist even at the low levels prevailing in nuclear power plants and that cancers arising from this exposure may not appear for decades.

Government and nuclear power officials have repeatedly assured workers that current exposure limits are safe.

The study was begun 14 years ago by public health researcher Dr. Thomas Mancuso. Mancuso organized a follow-up of people who had worked at the government's large Hanford plutonium factory in eastern Washington.

His projects was to match employment records and radiation exposures of Hanford workers from 1944 with the eventual causes of their deaths many years later. About 35,000 workers were involved in the study.

Meanwhile, another investigation of occupational causes of death in the state, conducted by Dr. Sam Milham of the Washington State Department of Health and Social Services found in 1973 there was "too much cancer in Hartford workers."

Milham notified Mancuso of his findings and proceeded to write up a report for publication. However, when Milham attempted to talk to government officials at Hanford he encountered a roadblock.

"I went over and talked to the AEC (Atomic Energy Commission) people in Hartford, and they sort of said they'd be a lot happier if I didn't publish right then; you know, there was a lot of anti-nuclear feeling," Milham said.

Carolyn Leona Cline, senior student in the ECU physics department, is the 1978 recipient of the department's James Fenly Spear Memorial Award.

The award is given each year to an ECU Physics student on the basis of scholarship, citizenship and leadership.

Selection of the recipient is made by the physics faculty.

Established by Nell C. Spear of Chapel Hill in memory of her son, a former East Carolina student who was killed in World War II, the award carries a cash prize of $50.

Carolyn Cline is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Rohlfeder of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Cline of Gaffney, S.C.

"The only real problem is that everyone underwrote," Futrell said with a smile after reading a few of the class material.

"I just knew I'd have to tell all of you to cut it down," he chuckled.

Futrell stayed long enough to share some of his experiences as a newspaperman and editorialist before returning to Washington.

As he left he added, "write what is in your heart and that will be right for you."

Hodges discusses issues with ECU students

By STUART MORGAN
News Editor

The leading Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, Luther H. Hodges Jr., visited Greenville last Tuesday and had dinner with a small group of ECU students.

A poll commissioned by The News and Observer and released Feb. 24 showed Hodges 10 percentage points ahead of his Hodges said this state's industries are not hiring increasing numbers of persons and cited the textile and furniture industries as examples.

"Such industries are employing a static or declining number of people largely because they're becoming more capital intensive with more machines," he explained.

"Unless this state has job skills at the labor level, it will not be able to attract the kinds of industry that will require more highly educated people, particularly liberal arts graduates, at the young management level," explained Hodges.

"However, although a lot is being done to integrate, the problem is that it just didn't begin soon enough and isn't occurring fast enough.

"The situation is complicated by the fact that our system doesn't really need a whole lot of new programs in higher education right now," explained Hodges. "If we wanted to implement three new doctoral programs or other programs, they would go to the predominantly black institutions.

"But, we're not in the position to be developing," Hodges further explained. "We have more higher education classrooms than any other state in the nation per capita, public and private."

And, he suggested the best way to do that would be to spend more money on public education and to have more persons graduate from high schools who would be willing to attend college.

"That seems to have been lost in this debate," said Hodges. "Now it's over whether or not HEW can tell UNC to merge schools and programs and move programs—things that on the surface would immediately change the ratios."

Hodges said he was against HEW doing so and defended UNC's position by saying UNC is doing all it can to further integration.

In addition to being a current member of the UNC Board of Governors, Hodges has had experience as a university faculty member and has served on the Board of Trustees of Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte.

"I DON'T EVEN think Jesse is a part of the government, not at all. He's just an echo, a voice."

Trends

nearest rival for the Democratic nomination, John R. Ingram.

The Democratic Party hopes to defeat Republican incumbent, Senator Jesse Helms, and return the seat to a Democrat.

Despite the difficulty of defeating an incumbent senator, Hodges claims he can accomplish the feat.

"People have been saying that Jesse is unbeatable, and people have been writing it, but it isn't so," Hodges said in the March issue of Campaign News, a newspaper published by his supporters.

"He can be beaten, and we're going to do it."

Twelve students, selected randomly, attended the dinner held last week at Parker's Barbecue.

During a brief interview after the dinner, Hodges discussed opinions and offered suggestions on such current issues as unemployment and education in N.C. and the HEW/UNC conflict.

"Whether you're talking about black unemployment, student unemployment, or professional unemployment, I relate it to the fact that we need to get the economy moving more at its productive capacity," said Hodges.

"North Carolina needs further growth to get the national economy to where people are investing in and creating new jobs," he added.

"It all goes hand in glove," he further explained. "You must attract all kinds of jobs, not just manufacturing. You must have a growing service economy appeal to a liberal arts graduate."

As a member of the UNC Board of Governors, Hodges said he is especially discouraged to think that bureaucrats in the department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) can dictate how the state university system is to be run.

And he said he considered the desegregation plan submitted to HEW to be both ambitious and practical.

"I wish I could solve that complex situation," said Hodges.

'People have been saying that Jesse is unbeatable, and people have been writing it, but it isn't so... He can be beaten, and we're going to do it.'

SENATORIAL CANDIDATE HODGES speaks with two young supporters after a reception in his honor.

"Governor Hunt is doing some things. He has started some programs to upgrade basic education, which is needed," admitted Hodges. "And, there are certainly some federal programs which have helped."

However, Hodges said his personal educational priorities are the imparting of the basic skills of reading and writing. And, he explained that without those basic skills a person can not very well find or maintain a job.

Hodges accused Sen. Helms for being "the most negative senator in the business on education."

During the last few minutes of the interview, Hodges discussed ECU.

"This university is an integral part of this community, and every time I've visited here for political reasons, I have become involved with this university," said Hodges.

He then mentioned that he first announced his candidacy while on the ECU campus, and that he has always felt very close to ECU.

Just before Hodges left, he was asked for his opinion of the Republican Senator, Jesse Helms, whom he hopes to defeat in the election of Nov. 2, this year.

"I don't even think Jesse is a part of the government—not at all. He's just an echo, a voice."

If you can't scare 'em, nauseate 'em

By DAVID WHITSON
Staff Writer

"If you can't scare 'em, nauseate 'em" seemed to be Robert DePalma's credo while filming "The Fury." It is nearly unbelievable that the director of "Carrie" and "The Phantom of the Paradise" brought this ill-conceived crock of footage to the screen.

The camera work, intended to be dazzling, is instead dizzying; rather than being suspenseful, the film is sickening.

Watching this movie is like being stoned, DePalma must have been when he directed it. Scenes with heavy dialogue are sprinkled with annoying visual distractions which divert the viewer's attention. Either people are jerking around spasmodically while they talk, or some jerk is doing calisthenics in the background.

In one scene, the camera pans back and forth so much that the cameraperson (What, me sexist?) deserved a travel allowance.

One of the major flaws of this flick is that it involves too much diverse material. Agents from a secret government agency (Top secret—they "don't spend a dime on public relations") constantly slink across the screen, walkie-talkies at ready.

In the guise of P.L.O. guerillas, they make the mistake of attempting to snuff Kirk Douglas as they nab his psychic son, Robin. Big Kirk refuses to die, so he spends the rest of his time chasing the secret agents who are chasing him.

The only person who can figure out where Robin has been spirited away to is Gillian, the little rich girl played by Amy Irving. (She was the sole survivor of "Carrie's" carnage.)

Of course she wants to help find the missing psychic son, otherwise, she has no way of diverting herself except by derailing toy trains and making people bleed.

And bleed they do. (I wonder how many chickens had to die for this movie.)

"THE MOVIE IS so full of cliches that it could've been a great parody of horror films. Unfortunately, DePalma took the film too seriously."

The pseudo-sexual bleeding imagery of this film makes the flow of hemoglobin in "Carrie" look tastefully understated. In "The Fury," people bleed from the eyes, nose, mouth, and ears; they bleed from the fingernails; they even spin in the air and bleed.

In summary, the film lacks power. Symbols provide a powerful means of delving into the unconscious and subconscious minds of horror film viewers, but DePalma fails to develop the symbolic potential of the film.

What could have been more strongly developed as a struggle between good (Kirk and Gillian) and evil (Big government and the brain-washed Robin) fizzles into a cheap parody of "The Exorcist," as an otherwise good kid talks dirty to his daddy.

This movie is so full of cliches that it could have been a great parody of horror films. Unfortunately, DePalma took the film too seriously and produced a klunker.

N.C. art museum needs funds for relocation

By JOHN WEYLER
Staff Writer

A major fund raising effort, conducted by the N.C. Museum of Art, is underway to finance relocation of the museum and construct new headquarters.

$10 MILLION NEEDED FOR RELOCATION

The committee's goal is to raise a minimum of $10 million needed for the relocation.

$50 MILLION COLLECTION

The museum's collection, worth more than $50 million, is considered to be one of the finest in the nation, but it is kept, according to the book Palaces for People: A Social History of American Art Museums, in "...the drabest, ugliest, least ingratiating museum building in all the country, if not all the world."

The building is also too small. More than 80 per cent of the museums approximately 4,800 artworks have to be kept in

THE SECOND RENDERING of the new Museum of Art in Raleigh. To meet the immediate challenges and raise the desired funds for a new museum, the Campaign Fund of the N.C. Museum of Art has been organized. "...I think it would be nice for Washingtonians and New Yorkers to have to travel to North Carolina to see some really fine exhibitions. You know, the new museum will be a tourist attraction unlike anything else we have in this state."

Moussa Domit, Director of the N.C. Museum of Art storage.

MOVE TO WAKE COUNTY

The new building, to be erected in Wake County, will have adequate space to display what the museum now has, and provide for future growth. It will also have a new educational facility for visiting school children, and a gallery for special exhibitions.

The state legislature appropriated $10,750,000 for preliminary planning and construction. The remaining ten million must come from private contribution.

DONORS NEEDED

Finding these donors is the task of the campaign fund of the museum.

"It is ironic. The museum professionals in Washington all about the North Carolina collection. And art experts in New York and London and Paris know about specific pieces - like our Giotto - in the collection," said the museums director, Moussa Domit.

"But thousands of people in North Carolina, not to mention Virginia and Georgia and Tennessee, don't even know that North Carolina has a museum. I think it's because we don't have a bona-fide one. The new building will be a museum, and that will make all the difference in the world.

There is an opportunity in this great project for all private citizens who wish to participate; for those who have the means and the desire to name galleries, rooms, and other areas for those they love; for those who want to add their own names, their efforts, and their gifts to help make this the greatest museum of its kind in the nation; for those whose love of art is great, but whose gifts can be only as large as their means permit.

A candidate for the Bachelor of Music Education degree, Miss Braxton is a violin student of Dr. Rodney Schmidt of the ECU strings faculty.

the engagement, the firm, Helms' mother, Helms. So you literally throw off all constraints. With a pop and a zip and a flip of the hip - you're out of it."

So runs a bit of conversation between pretty Allyn Macy and suave Dr. Carter Brown.

Carter has been called in by his nephew, Helms Fell Harper, the youngest corporate vice-president in the U.S. to treat Allyn for her unusual complex: whenever she drinks champagne she has an uncontrollable urge to take her clothes off, which is quite an embarrassment to her fiance Helms.

Allyn is a young career who is an editor at Fortune magazine.

Helms is a very proper, well-to-do young executive. Carter is a gentleman of 40 who owes his "doctor" to PhD, not an MD.

These three form one of the most interesting triangles in dramatic comedy.

The delightful comedy CHAMPAGNE COMPLEX will be presented at ECU Mendenhall Center Dinner Theatre Thursday-Sunday, April 20-23.

Directed by Dana Mills and Wanda Edwards of the Mendenhall Center staff, the production will feature Charlotte Cheatam as Allyn, Bob McCutcheon as Helms and Gene Hollar as Carter Brown.

Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m., and the play will begin at 8 p.m., except on Sunday, when serving time is at 4:30 p.m. and curtain time is 6 p.m.

Public tickets are $8.50 each and must be purchased at least 24 hours in advance. Since only 100 places are available for each performance, early reservation is advised.

SELF-SATISFACTION
By Jim Bellows

A love affair is:
A relationship a man will work on
For months to gain
A lasting unity
And in which a woman can end in one short hour.

If the man's heart could have
Just one small assurance
That he excelled in one small act, thought, moment or touch.

That in her mind
Could not be surpassed
By any other person - That

Would be enough self-satisfaction
To erase some of the heart-ache of losing

Self-satisfaction is not a lot
But to someone who has lost
Their first-love; it is their only
In what seems is a world of frowns
Seems to be

Jim Bellows is a junior from Greensboro majoring in Education.

Faculty work presented

Art collection catalogued, June exhibition scheduled

By KAREN BREAM
Staff Writer

ECU's permanent art collection is being catalogued for the first time through the combined efforts of Aaron Karp, the gallery director, and David Chrismon, a community arts management student.

The collection includes more than 300 pieces, mostly paintings, but some prints, sculpture, and ceramics as well.

Eighty percent of the works are by former ECU students.

PICASSO AND CHAGALL

The collection also boasts one print each by Picasso and Chagall and there are several works by members of the art faculty, according to Chrismon.

For the last few years most of the paintings have been on loan to various departmental and administrative offices on campus, but were recently recalled for cataloguing.

DEPARTMENTAL COOPERATION

Chrismon said all departments cooperated fully in helping him collect the works.

The larger works, such as Robert Edmisten's "Wind Song", which stands in front of the music building, the lath wood piece behind the Student Supply Store and the stone sculpture in front of the old cafeteria are permanently located, said Chrismon.

The collection also includes a bequest by Mrs. Norma Gray of 14 works in memory of her husband, the late Dr. Wellington B. Gray, former dean of the School of Art, from their private collection.

WORKS BY FACULTY

Works by Donald Sexauer and Wesley Crawley, both of the art faculty, and a painting by Dr. Gary are included in the bequest.

After all the works had been collected, Chrismon developed a registration system adapted from the one used by the N.C. Museum of Art to record the medium, the artist's name and the measurements of each work.

Each piece will also be photographed.

Once the existing collection is catalogued, Karp said he hopes to acquire additional works for the collection.

He said materials are being prepared outlining the directions and needs of the gallery to use in approaching the community for donations.

COLLECTION EXHIBITION

Selections from the permanent collection will be exhibited in the gallery from June 5 to Aug. 15, according to Karp.

Sexauer print accepted

ECU News Bureau

ECU faculty printmaker Donald Sexauer has had a color intaglio print accepted by a jury for the 30th National Exhibition of the Boston Printmakers.

Sexauer's "Dreamer's Greenhouse" and other selected works will be on view at the Boston Center for the Arts April 16-May 14.

The Boston Printmakers is a non-profit organization which promotes a national competition, a members competition and several traveling exhibitions each year.

Sexauer chairs the ECU School of Art's printmaking department.

His works are included in numerous private and public collections and have been exhibited in museums and galleries throughout the U.S.

GARBAGE: one cause that doesn't need your contribution.

Last year, Americans threw away 150 million tons of materials—enough to fill garbage trucks lined three abreast from New York to California. Our throwaways cost us more than $4 billion each year. This collection and disposal of trash is now the second largest item in most city budgets, surpassed only by public schools.

The problem is more than litter along the highway. It is the waste of our nation's resources—resources which are becoming more scarce and expensive.

We need to conserve materials now more than ever. And you can help—by not making a contribution. For example, by repairing worn items, you can save yourself money, reduce energy waste and conserve materials.

Buc batters pound Tarheels 12-3; Britt 7-1

By ANDY STEWART
Staff Writer

Last Wednesday night at Harrington Field the Pirate baseball team shocked the North Carolina Tarheels with a score of 12-3.

The Pirates played perfect defensive ball behind their ace pitcher Mickey Britt.

Earlier in the season at Chapel Hill, the Tarheels defeated the Pirates 4-2.

This was the only loss that the Pirate pitching ace, Mickey Britt, had obtained.

The Tarheels tried to jump on the Pirates in the first inning. UNC was able to get two men aboard the base with two singles. Then Jim Atkinson came to the plate trying to give the Tarheels their third hit of the inning and possibly start a rally when the Pirate Defense clamped down.

Atkinson hit a bobbling grounder to East Carolina's second baseman, Pete Paradossi. He scooped the ball up, tagged the runner trying to advance to second, and made the throw to first to complete the double and the inning.

The Pirates showed their strength on offense then.

Best singled to arrive at first during the bottom of the first inning.

With Best on base, Butch Davis hammered the ball over the left field fence to give ECU a 2-0 lead.

In the second inning, the Pirates manhandled the Tarheels by retiring them three up and three down.

This remained about the same till the eighth inning for UNC.

In the third inning the Pirates still had their bats on fire. With two men on base, Best got his second hit to drive in two more runs.

In the fourth, with Jerry Carraway on third, Pete Paradossi

BUTCH DAVIS SMASHED a two run homer in the win over UNC-Ch. Davis is the Pirate's designated hitter.

si hit a long fly ball to sacrifice Carraway home. Then with Eddie Gates still aboard the base David drove him in to make the score 6-0 in favor of ECU.

In the sixth inning Gates scored on a Davis hit to make the score 7-0.

In the seventh inning the Pirates were able to rip away five runs. Three of the runs scored came when Best hit his first home run of the season, with two men on base. Then Bobby Supel singled to drive in Paradossi and Davis.

By the eighth the Tarheels did manage to put three runs together to put them on the scoreboard.

ECU's Mickey Britt was the winning pitcher with relief help from Pete Conaty in the ninth. Matt Wilson was the losing pitcher.

Best was 4-for-4 with five RBI's and a three run home run in the seventh inning.

Butch Davis, Tim Hardison and Jerry Carraway added three hits each to pace the East Carolina attack.

BILLY BEST LED the Pirates in a rout over UNC-Chapel Hill as he went 4 for 4, had five RBI's and clouted a 3 run homer.

Gillman to show strong suit as "national letter of intent day" approaches

By STEVE BYERS
Assistant Sports Editor

to sign a scholarship pact with the Pirates.

With national letter of intent day being this Wednesday, East Carolina basketball fans have reason for optimism.

The same recruiter that landed Cartwright, Boynes and Hardy (of San Francisco fame) along with Pirate star Oliver Mack is at work again.

Coach Larry Gillman has already signed South Carolina transfer David Underwood to add to the Pirate stable and unabashedly says, "He could be the second best player on the team."

Underwood a strong inside man should help considerably in the area the Bucs need help the most; rebounding.

And speaking of rebounding, a 6'10" center from D.H. Conely high school, Al Tyson is expected

The Conely pivotman has signed an agreement that binds the school to him, but not him to the school. Pirates look hopeful for a final signature this week.

Coach Gillman has commented that as many as five players could be signed since the team is allowed 15 players on scholarship. Ten Buc players now attend school on grants.

Rumors that Gillman will ink players from the New York area are not unfounded as three of last years recruiting crop emerged from the north.

Gillman's freshmen put in a lot of time for the team last season and hopefully this years newcomers will prove as mature.

Pirates outmuscle Elon 8-2

By ANDY STEWART
Staff Writer

The East Carolina baseball Pirates captured their third straight win in a row by defeating Elon 8-2, on Thursday night.

The game started off on a shaky note for the Pirates. Paul Judy reached first base on an infield error by ECU.

Then Billy Freeman slammed one over the fence to give Elon an early 2-0 lead.

Elon then handled the Pirates in the bottom half of the inning to the tune of three up and three down.

The Pirates did not give up but showed what they were made of. They came up in the bottom half of the second inning and managed to score Butch Davis on Robert Brinkley's sacrifice.

The inning was not over yet. Pete Paradossi got on base by a fielder's choice, then was driven in by Raymie Styons.

In the third inning Eddie Gates started the inning off by hitting a home run to make the score 2-2.

In the fourth inning, Robert Brinkley, started off with a double. He was then driven in off Eddie Gates single to make the score 4-2.

In the fifth Butch Davis singled to start the inning off.

Raymie Styons then doubled to score Davis. Hardison then received a walk and Brinkley reached first off an error by the pitcher to load the bases up. Jerry Carraway then doubled to drive in three runs to make the score 8-2.

Tim Stiller was the winning pitcher. He went the distance only giving six hits and striking out eight batters.

This was Tim Stillers first victory. His record now stands at 1-1.

Debbie Freeman receives All-East, State honors

By DAVID MERRIAM
Staff Writer

Volleyball is a relatively quiet sport and certainly doesn't get half the publicity it deserves, however when an athlete from ECU makes the All-East squad, it certainly does deserve some extra print.

Debbie Freeman has been named to the Greensboro Daily News All-State volleyball team and will be played in a North Carolina East-West volleyball match last Saturday night at 7:00 in Greensboro to the Underall's Womens College basketball All-American East-West game.

Debbie has become the first ECU player to receive such a post season honor in volleyball and is the only ECU player on the East squad.

The remainder of the team consisted of six other players Duke and NCSU. E.J. Howard, who has coached Duke to several state championships, will be the coach for the East team.

The West squad was composed of seven players from High Point, Wake Forest, and UNC-Ch.

The West was coached by Beth Miller, head coach of UNC-Ch state championship basketball program.

After the East-West affair, the fourteen women aided former professional basketball great Wilt "The Stilt" Chamberlain and his professional volleyball team the Dippers, in a demonstration match.

Freeman also was the only ECU player named to the Greensboro Daily News All-State basketball team this winter.

Front ace teammate Rosie Thompson received honorable mention.

this weekend

This weekend presents an excellent opportunity for East Carolina students to see some first class road racing.

Atlanta, Georgia will be hosting events that normally only occur in faraway places such as Watkins Glen and Laguna Seca.

Over $80,700 in prize money is posted for the Camel GT Challenge event at Road Atlanta April 15th and 16th. Purse and contingency money total a new high for the popular Georgia circuit. This new dimension has attracted a large field of entries for the event for all four races: Camel GT, Camel GTU (under 2.5 liter), Champion Spark Plug Challenge and American Challenge.

David Hobbs, winner of the last Camel GT Challenge event at the track, will be driving a new Turbo-charged BMW 320T trying for his second victory. Hobbs says, "Road Atlanta is the most difficult course in the country, but we feel good about our car and the possibility of taking the checkered flag first."

Newcomer to the series, Gianpiero Moretti, 39-year old driver from Milan, Italy, clearly showed that he will be a top competitor at the Road Atlanta track when he debuted last week at the Talladega 6 Hour. Driving a Turbo-Porsche, his performance proved to be a real threat to the other Porsche drivers: Peter Gregg, Dick Barbour, Hurley Haywood and Danny Ongais. Moretti is president of MOMO Industries, manufacturer of racing accessories including steering wheels and road wheels. He jets to his factories in Milan, Mexico and Brazil in between his racing commitments.

The series is attracting a growing number of international drivers from the Caribbean and South American countries as well as Europe. Ferrari has returned to the scene of the Camel GT Challenge with the entry of

Curtis Tedesco leads improving tennis team

By DAVID MERRIAM
Staff Writer

This year, for the first time ever, ECU has a potential All-American tennis player. Not only does East Carolina have a lot to offer him, but he, Curtis Tedesco, has a lot to offer the school.

"Curtis was ranked among the top ten tennis players on the East Coast in high school, and yet picked ECU for tennis.

Although ECU is not noted for their powerhouse tennis program," stated head coach Randolph, "at least we're not a powerhouse club yet."

"But the program is getting stronger, much quicker than most people are able to see."

Within the past four years there have been five coaches. Coach Randolph and assistant coach Rick Friedl are the first two coaches to return to the program two years in a row—for many years.

"I think I brought some stability to the team. We need to feel secure, and I think we felt very secure at the start of this season," said Randolph.

But of course injuries and some unexpected disappointments to the team have hindered this season from being the best year ever.

"Our first setback was losing one of our premier players, someone we recruited heavily and then had him quit the team. Next we lost Curtis for a couple of weeks, he pulled his lower back muscle and it hurt him to walk, no less play tennis. But he would play, and then we would lose him in doubles," said assistant Coach Friedl. "It's hard to get the season rolling with setbacks like those to get over."

However with Tedesco back in full swing, the team promptly began re-organizing and defeating some powerhouse clubs.

One team ECU beat by surprise was an unsuspecting Old Dominion team.

Last year ODU beat ECU by a smashing score. This year the Pirates won handily 8-6.

Ford Smith could be a frontrunner due to his familiarity with his home course.

The Champion Spark Plug Challenge is crystallizing into one of the largest fields of cars at the Road Atlanta circuit.

The American Challenge, scheduled as a 75-miler, will be the race to watch as all entrants seem to be evenly matched. Dave Sloyer, General Manager of Road

"Curtis played well, but the rest of the team gave him some fine support," said Randolph. "All year long the rest of the team has been playing well."

Number two man for the Pirates is senior Tom Durfee.

Hailing from Toledo, Ohio, Tom has been number one man since his freshman year.

Inconsistency has been the only thing keeping Tom from being a truly great player.

Randy Bailey is the only other senior on the club. He plays the number three position and plays it well. A very smart player Randy strives for big achievements.

Number four man is Maurey Werness, a freshman from Norfolk, Va. Maury was ranked number one in doubles in Va. and number eleven in singles. He shows a lot of potential and could be a big help in the tennis program.

Last year's MVP returns at the number five slot. Henry Hostetler is probably one of the most consistent players on the team. Although he doesn't possess a tremendous amount of strength, he is very smooth and out hussies many opponents.

sess a tremendous amount of strength, he is very smooth and out hussies many opponents.

Also returning is sophomore Kenny Love. Kenny was the recipient of two awards last year; "The Coaches Award" for hard work and also the "Most Improved" trophy.

"Kenny worked his way up the ladder," said Randolph. "He did it all himself. He was a pleasant surprise to me, he really has worked hard."

Two walk-ons have also proven surprises to Coach Randolph.

Buddy Campbell and Wes Singelton (seven and eight respectively) have made the team after a walk-on try-out of some forty plus athletes.

"Those two made it the hard way," commented Randolph. "I'm glad to have those guys."

So ECU tennis is enjoying a very productive year, along with many new experiences. Hopefully the tennis program will continue to blossom and mature.

TOM DURFEE ABOVE and Curtis Tedesco are the Pirate tennis leaders.
