Law Day features Robert Morgan

By STEVE WILSON
Staff Writer

Senator Robert Morgan (D-NC) spoke on the topic "Law: Your Access to Justice" in Greenville Friday, April 21.

Morgan's address was sponsored by the ECU Law Society and the Pitt County Bar Association.

The theme observed was suggested by the American Bar Association in observance of Law Day 1978, which falls on May 1.

Jerry Cox, president of the Law Society, began the program by briefly outlining the purpose of the Law Society for the audience.

Dr. David Stevens, ECU Attorney, introduced Morgan.

Stevens said that he first met Senator Morgan when he was in the Air Force Legal Services and Morgan was attorney general of North Carolina.

Stevens said that when he related his background to then N.C. Attorney General Morgan he didn't realize that he and Morgan had anything in common. Dr. Stevens learned that Morgan was not only an ECU graduate, but was also chairperson of the Board of Trustees of the school at the time.

After attending ECU, Morgan attended Wake Forest University's School of Law.

Morgan then worked as a defense attorney in Harnett County before entering politics. He served in the North Carolina State Legislature, and later served as attorney general.

Morgan succeeded Senator Sam Erving in the U.S. Senate.

Morgan said that working as a defense attorney spawned his interest in civil liberties concerns. He said that one of the first things he undertook as attorney general was the disposal of surveillance equipment that the State Bureau of Investigation had "no legitimate use for."

Shortly after he became a senator, he was assigned to the Select Committee on Intelligence, whose responsibility is to study misdealings by the U.S. Intelligence Departments.

Morgan said that his initial work with this committee exposed him to "some of the real dangers inherent in our society" caused by the abuse of power by elected officials.

Morgan said that the extent into the ranks of those guilty of abuse of power shocked him [See MORGAN, p. 6]

Legislature appropriates money to cheerleaders

By JEANNIE WILLIAMS
Assistant News Editor

The Student Government Association (SGA) held its last regularly scheduled meeting of the spring semester yesterday.

During summer school the acting SGA will consist of the executive council.

During the business meeting the legislature appropriated money to the 1978-79 budget for the ECU Cheerleaders.

The money will be added to the 1,000 given by athletics and the $600 given by the Student Union.

Visual Arts Forum president Biff Bream and treasurer Patricia Knight reported to the legislature on how monies delegated to the VAF had been used and thanked the SGA for their support.

SGA treasurer Zack Smith reported to the legislature on SGA funds.

Smith said that there was $9,547.59 cash in the bank and 137,797.28 in savings for a sub-total of $147,344.86.

Funds appropriated but not spent totaled $153,950.50 with $6,394.37 left to be appropriated.

Local towing is a 'legitimate and flourishing business'

By STUART MORGAN
Staff Writer

If your vehicle should ever be towed, perhaps you should think twice before secretly removing it from the towing company's storage area without paying the towing fee.

At least, if you wish to avoid being charged with a misdemeanor.

"I've lost many vehicles—as many as three a week, from students stealing their towed vehicles," claimed James "Curt" Smith, owner of Smith's Amoco on the corner of 10th and Evans.

"You might read that memo on the wall over there," suggested Smith, pointing to a sheet of paper taped to the office's wall just inside the doorway.

The memo was dated March 23, 1978, and it was from the Greenville Police Department addressed to: All officers, Sheriff Ralph Tyson, all magistrates, all towing services, ECU police, and the district attorney's office.

It stated the punishment for violating N.C. General Statute - 14-115: "Secreting property to hinder enforcement of (e)in (claim) or security interest" to be a fine of not to exceed $500, imprisonment for not more than six months — or both.

Towing, despite how much it hurts the vehicle owner's budget, is both legitimate and a flourishing business in Greenville.

"Yes, I'd say I make around $240 a month towing vehicles — sometimes, I do better than that," admitted Smith. "I take strictly cash for my towing, I don't accept checks."

"On average, I tow four vehicles each week," he added. "Sometimes, I never get to tow any during the week, and some weeks I tow as many as seven."

Every summer a letter is sent to each towing company in Greenville which includes a list of five requirements it must meet to be able to tow vehicles from campus, according to Joseph Calder, director of security.

The requirements are as follows: The towing company must agree to maintain a 24-hour service, return cars during appropriate hours, maintain a secure storage area, pay for any damage done to a vehicle, and charge a lower towing fee for vehicles towed from campus than those towed in the surrounding city.

"If they obey those requirements, we must put them on our list," said Calder.

Right now, there are five towing companies meeting those requirements and regularly towing vehicles from campus.

They are: Tenth and Evans '76, Smith's Amoco, Dunn's Body Shop, University Exxon, and Donn's Auto Parts.

"We're supposed to tow on a rotation basis," said Smith. "No, I don't think there is any competition among the five of us — we just want an equal share of the business."

"And, if you go ask any of the other four towing services these

Rugby club prepares for two tournaments

By MARCADLER
Staff Writer

The Rugby Club has come a long way in a short time, according to its founder, Kieran Shanahan.

"I started the Rugby Club my freshman year with help from Dr. Wayne Edwards," Shanahan said.

The Rugby Club has been supported by the Intramural Sports Club Program for two-and-a-half years, Shanahan said.

"However, there are two seasons per year," according to Shanahan, "a fall and spring. Thus, we have had five seasons."

The club has received $1,000, transportation, and trainers from the Intramural Sports Club Program, according to Shanahan.

The athletic department does not financially support the Rugby Club since it is under the intramural program, Shanahan said.

"About 50 students are involved with the club," states Shanahan. "But 15 players are needed on the field."

During the Spring Break (March 3-11), the Rugby Club received a formal invitation from Freeport University to attend a tournament there in the Bahamas, Shanahan said.

In order to attend this tournament, the Student Government Association (SGA) voted to fund $1,000 to help pay the club's way, Shanahan said.

Also, the players did many things to raise money. Projects included car washes, raffles, and happy hours. The club also manned the ballot boxes during the recent publications referendum, Shanahan added.

"The club had four matches in the tournament," Shanahan said.

"The teams which the club played were the University of Miami, a British school, and two Freeport teams," Shanahan said.

The club won one and lost three in this competition, according to Shanahan.

The club usually plays other college teams in North Carolina and Virginia and the South East, Shanahan said.

As of now, the club is preparing for a tournament in Greensboro and Richmond.

"The club has done so well because of the quality of ballplayers on the team and because of the support from the Intramural Department," Shanahan said.

Congressmen didn't represent the people

Congress made perhaps one of its most unforgivable mistakes when it ratified two treaties supporting the give-away of the Panama Canal. The United States built the Canal in the early 1900's. Construction took several years and cost the U.S. approximately $380 million.

American citizens labored to construct the canal, struggling against the tropical diseases of the jungles and swamps. Those diseases took many lives before the canal was completed.

A poll conducted by the Opinion Research Corporation of Princeton, N.J. showed that 75 per cent of the American people were opposed to giving the Canal to the Panamanians. Only 12 per cent favored the action, and 13 per cent had no opinion or were undecided.

Whether Congress was wise to sign the Canal over to the Panamanians remains to be seen, but certainly the members of Congress did not represent the people while taking action in the House and the Senate. When Americans go to the polls to vote politicians into office, they expect them to do their jobs of representation. Certainly the Congressmen did not forget their duties while deciding the fate of the Panama Canal.

The American people, of whom a majority were against the treaties, should remember which of their Congressmen represented them in the Panama Canal issue and which of them did not. Those who did not must not be voted back into office when elections tumble upon the American people again.

Lecture Series needs students' support

By MARTY CRAWFORD
Editorial Writer

The Lecture series is threatening to cut down on or eliminate all together certain types of lecturers due to poor attendance. For example, according to the committee, they have threatened the Journalism department after a disastrous turnout for the recent Jack Anderson appearance.

Have the students of East Carolina been culturally deprived for such a long time they can't realize just how entertaining and educational a lecture can be? However unfortunate this may be, alas, it must be true, because the blame cannot be placed on the lap of the committee.

The Lecture Series committee has presented this university with a diverse group of people to speak in an effort to cater to the diverse tastes on this campus.

It is a staggering thought that college students can sit idly by while distinguished people grace our campus trying to forward and develop the minds of tomorrow's leaders. When will college students realize that now is the time for education instead of making the never-ending pilgrimages to the shrines of the local bars?

The Lecture Series is given freely to ECU students with the students' best interests at heart. What a shame it would be to have it canceled for the select few who do wish to enrich their lives all because of the majority who have no drive within themselves for betterment.

Perhaps the blame can be given to peer publicity. Or, perhaps it would be better said that "hopefully" the reason is peer publicity. We want to hope that the interest is there, but students are unaware of the series and thus there is no participation.

Whatever the reasons may be, something must be done soon to save the Lecture Series. Whether it is more publicity, still wider variety of speakers or a rescheduling of times in order to accommodate more people, this program needs help.

However, the aid should come, not from the committee which is already bending over backwards to serve, but from the students for which the program originated.

Soon there will not be a Lecture Series to avoid anymore and then everyone will realize it and feel deprived and grumble, but the committee will have all the right in the world to sit back and say you won't have the Lecture Series to kick around anymore.

N.C. editor addresses SCJ students

A North Carolina editor emphasized the importance of preparing for "three basic routines" when he addressed the Society for Collegiate Journalists Thursday evening.

Jerry Ausband, editor of the Shelby Daily Star, urged the journalism students and members of campus publications staff to learn to spell, become familiar with the dictionary, and to write simple sentences.

Earlier in the day he had spoken to journalism classes and conferred with a number of students.

His campus visit was sponsored by the Newspaper Fund of the Wall Street Journal, Ausband's own paper and ECU.

The cooperative project is known as the Editor-in-Residence program.

Cindy Broome, editor of FOUNTAINHEAD, presented the speaker at the SCJ meeting. At a social hour later, Ausband and Prof. Ira L. Baker, SCJ advisor, were presented gifts of appreciation from the society.

At an earlier business meeting the group elected new officers for next year as follows: president, Kay Williams; vice president, Richy Smith; secretary, Joyce Evans; treasurer, Arah Venable; historian, Stuart Morgan.

The Society will co-sponsor, along with the university Department of Continuing Education, a workshop for high school publications scheduled for Sept. 30.

Honor Council imposes sentences on five students

By TRISHA VAUGHAN
Staff Writer

Two cases were reviewed and sentences commuted during the last session of the Honor Council.

The first, a male sophomore caught stealing a keg of beer, pleaded guilty to a charge of violating Section 5, Article G (theft) of the Student Government Association (SGA) handbook.

The Honor Council found him guilty and imposed a sanction of suspended suspension for the remainder of the semester.

It implied that if within the stated period of time the student is again found guilty of a violation, he will face an automatic suspension.

The second case was for four male freshmen who were charged with Section 5, Article B (use of abusive and obscene, vulgar language) of the handbook.

With a plea of guilty, the students were given official reprimands by the Honor Council.

That meant that an official letter was to be sent to each student indicating his violation and stating such conduct as unacceptable.

Many students remain unaware of the ECU Honor Code and Honor Council until they find themselves in violation of its rules.

Knowledge of the rules and regulations of any university is an important part of adjustment to campus life.

The procedure of referral to the Honor Council begins when a student is reported to the Dean of Men or Women for some violation.

If considered necessary, the dean then refers the student to the SGA Attorney General. The attorney general then decides whether the case should be brought before the Honor Council.

greatly at first, and cited some of the FBI's misdealings with North Carolinians.

Morgan added, however, that the "vast majority (of agents) are honorable men doing the right job."

Senator Morgan said that he learned from his experiences that former President Nixon was not the first president to abuse the power of his office. Many former presidents were guilty of abusing their power while in office, even such highly respected presidents as Franklin Roosevelt.

Morgan believed that the "crisis of self-respect" brought on by incidents such as Water-gate is passing.

He also said that HEW Secretary Joseph Califano is guilty to some extent of abuse of the power of his office.

Morgan said Califano's anti-smoking campaign is an unreasonable advancement of his own personal ideals. Funding for Califano's anti-smoking campaign comes from a special fund voted into existence by the Executive Branch, and Morgan is challenging Califano to bring the matter up before Congress since it is of public concern and is funded by the public.

Travel Committee sets 1978-79 trips

By DOUG WHITE
News Editor

The Student Union Travel Committee has recently selected the trips for the 1978-79 school year, according to Bill Martin, committee chairperson.

The first trip will be New York City during Thanksgiving Break. It will cost approximately $65.

"This year there will be two trips at Christmas. The Hawaii trip is for eight days and seven nights and will cost approximately $500. The Ski Trip, to either Pennsylvania or Vermont, will be for one week during Christmas Break, and it should cost less than $200," Martin said.

During Spring Break, the Bahamas Cruise will be sponsored for the third year. Three nights lodging in Fort Lauderdale has been added to the Bahamas cruise trip this year. The trip will cost approximately $400.

The New Orleans - Atlanta trip will also be during Spring Break.

"Four days in New Orleans and three days in Atlanta will cost approximately $200," Martin said.

After Commencement 1979, a two week trip to England has been planned.

The first week will be spent in London. The second week will be spent touring the English countryside in a houseboat driven by trip participants.

The England trip will cost approximately $600.

"Trip prices and dates are not yet final. The trips will go on sale the first day of classes in the fall. The Travel Committee presents these trips for the vacation enjoyment of students, faculty, staff, dependents, and alumni of ECU," Martin said.

Caraway donates $1,000 to establish Curriculum Library

By ED WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

A $1,000 bequest has been left to the English Department by the late Hermine Caraway to establish a Curriculum Library.

The library will be used to help prepare students who are planning to teach English, according to Dr. Erwin Hester, head of the English Department.

It will attempt to show these students diversified teaching methods.

It will be part of the Undergraduate Teachers Education Program which is tied in with obtaining a B.S. degree.

The library now consists of Dr. Caraway's books and her teaching materials which were donated by her two sisters, Mrs. William Sineath and Mrs. J. Herbert Hildreth, Hester said.

"We have a good nucleus to build upon," Hester said.

"We will furnish the library with more materials once we receive the bequest."

Hester indicated that such materials would include books on theoretical teaching, films and film-strips, audiovisual aids, and current periodicals.

Caraway was born in Wadesboro. She received her A.B. degree at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and her M.Ed. and Ph.D. degrees at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Dr. Caraway came to ECU in 1959.

She was Assistant Supervisor of the Teacher Training Program of the English Department from 1959-66.

In 1965 she became a full professor at ECU.

She was named Director of Student Teaching in English in 1966, a position she held until she died last February, Hester said.

"She was very interested in Teacher Education and she was completely dedicated to her job," Dr. Hester commented. "This is an appropriate way to commemorate her."

The Curriculum Library will be open for some use in September, according to Dr. Hester.

"This is the realization of a long-felt need," Hester said.

The Executive Department voted to name the library after Dr. Caraway, according to Dr. Hester.

Male student assaulted by two in dorm room

He was then taken to Pitt County Hospital where he was treated and released.

Eddings intends to press charges for assault.

A male student was injured, but not seriously, when he was allegedly assaulted by two male students in his dormitory room Tuesday night, according to Francis Eddings, chief of campus police.

The injured student was identified as Mark Oravitz of Umstead dormitory.

The assault occurred in Oravitz's room and was allegedly unprovoked.

After being assaulted, Oravitz went downtown where he later collapsed.

'We don't make money towing' questions, you know what they'll say? They'll tell you to go to hell," Smith said with a perturbed facial expression.

"You would be wasting your time to see Donn - he doesn't tow enough," advised Smith. "He doesn't have the proper facilities to store vehicles, he just tows occasionally to keep himself satisfied and remain in the business."

Calder said there was competition among the towing companies and about once a week, one of them calls complaining they are not being called as frequently as their competitors.

"We run this system as fairly as we can," said Calder. "We give one towing company a call, if they don't answer, we call the next one."

"No, we don't make any money towing cars, but no one is going to believe you if you say that," said Calder, leaning back in his office chair. "It has been suggested that we should, but we won't."

"UNC receives $2.50 from each vehicle towed," said Calder. "If we were to do so, how could you convince people here that we would not be towing for the money?" asked Calder.

The towing fee for cars towed in the city is $20 during the day and $25 at night. But, the fee on campus is five dollars less at $15 and $20 respectively.

Smith said he was included on the city police department's towing list, along with 13 other wreckers in Greenville. And, he said he received calls to tow vehicles not only from the campus police, but from the city and state police as well.

"That works on a rotation basis also," added Smith.

"I have to wait for calls to go around the other 13 towing services before I get my turn."

Calder said at this time of the year, most vehicles are being towed because their owners have collected and excess number of tickets.

Owners collecting three or more unpaid tickets, as well as owners of illegally parked or unregistered vehicles are also subject to having their vehicles towed.

"I've towed as many as 26 vehicles in one day - that's a full day's work," boasted Smith. In that case, I believe a row of cars was illegally parked on the side of a road.

"My storage area is on the corner of Washington and Tenth Street," said Smith.

The storage area was surrounded by at least an eight foot high wire fence and was secured at the gate by a lock and chain.

"I can put as many as 40 to 60 vehicles in there," added Smith. "And, if vehicles are left in there I'll charge from one to two dollars for storage each day - it varies for students."

Smith said he allows the owners of every vehicle about to be towed around 15 minutes to arrive and remove their vehicles. If they do so, he only charges half the fee.

'Hot Wax' covers 'early days of rock and roll'

By DAVID WHITSON
Staff Writer

Two decades ago, the rock and roll industry wasn't a billion dollar business—it was a battlefield.

THE CHESTERFIELDS ZOOM from ghetto streetcorners to the opening act at Alan Freed's Big Beat Show in Paramount Pictures' "American Hot Wax," a film that re-creates the exciting early days of rock and roll.

In the late 50's, the contagiously energizing sounds formed by the synthesis of black delta blues and the electric guitar was just beginning to invade the eardrums of white, middle-class America, outraging staid suburbanites with its primal rhythms and sexually suggestive lyrics.

"American Hot Wax" captures the hectic days of the birth of a truly American musical idiom, known by its slang name (a sexual euphemism in itself)—rock and roll.

The protagonist in the story is the legendary Alan Freed, the first white D.J. to play R&R on the New York airwaves, and, according to some, the first to call the music rock and roll.

Through Freed, recording company promoters, group managers, and individual talents sought to reach the first rung on the ladder of success.

In spite of Freed's tremendous clout, all does not go well for him.

Rock & Roll is simply too "subversive" for some people's tastes; so, for the bastions of propriety, Freed is anathema. Realtor's refuse to sell him the estate he has been negotiating

TIM MCINTIRE, PORTRAYING legendary disc jockey Alan Freed, drives the audience wild as he introduces the hottest acts in rock and roll during his Big Beat Show in Paramount Pictures' "American Hot Wax," a film that re-creates the exciting early days of the music that defined the 50's generation.

Freed, played with aplomb by Tim McIntire, was a cult figure of the airwaves in New York during the '50's, much like Wolfman Jack on the West Coast during the '60's.

Due to Freed's immense sway over the teeny-bop population segment of the local population, what he said, went.

For this was the time when the teen-age population, swollen by the post-WWII baby boom, was rising to numerical, and commercial, ascendancy.

Trends

on, (they would prefer not to sell to any-sniff-"music people"), his job is threatened because he grabs his hottest tunes from the station's "Don't Play" list, and rumors are circulating that his baby Big Beat Show at the Paramount Theatre will never come to pass.

Tension mounts as the night of the 1st Anniversary Rock 'n Roll Show approaches: Chuck Berry, Jerry Lee Lewis, Fats Domino, and Screamin' Jay Hawkins are contracted to headline the show; the Planotones and the Delights are hired; and a new band, the Chesterfields (the movie's only fictitious act is rehearsed to perform sweet little Louise's music. (Say! isn't she that girl on "Saturday Night Live?")

Contrary to the hopes of many, the show does go on, erupting first into ecstatic exuberance, then into a full scale riot as the New York constabulary move in to close down the show.

Now they know better—they can make far more money by busting the audience.

Film may stand as milestone in modern cinema'

'Straight Time' realistic portrait of criminal

By DAVID WHITSON
Staff Writer

"Straight Time" is a film which presents a straightforward, no-nonsense portrait of the professional criminal.

Not the political terrorist, nor

DUSTIN HOFFMAN AND Ulu Grosbard on location with "Straight Time."

the rebel without a cause, but the man who, having "graduated from the school of schools," chooses crime as a profession.

For Dustin Hoffman's earthy portrayal of ex-con Max Dembo the film is laudable.

But Hoffman's performance cannot carry the entire film.

Something is missing in Ulu Grosbard's direction. Max's character is never fully developed. There is a natural affinity between the audience and the ex-con, threatened by a society whose rules he doesn't understand, but this affinity is never developed.

In Max, there is none of the desperate nihilism of Al Pacino's "Dog Day Afternoon" performance, only a sullen listlessness which is somehow almost completely predictable.

Although the film involves three getaway scenes, a bank heist, and a jewelry store robbery, one never feels the throw-back-your-head-and-hoot desparado exuberance of "Bonnie and Clyde."

But, as stated, Grossman is trying to present a portrait of a working criminal rather than a classic martyred bad guy of the Bogart/Cagney era of Hollywood.

Instead of fast-paced shoot-

'em-up action, Grossman uses suspense—the last hectic seconds which divide the robbers' exit, stage left, from the cops' entrance stage right—to achieve his dramatic effect.

The relationship between Max and Jenny Mercer (Theresa Russell), the girl who harbors him when he skips parole to go back into business, could have been more fully developed; and Max's murder of the flustered getaway driver scores him no points in the public popularity poll, but this is all in keeping with Grossman's realistic approach to the portrayal of the convict.

For Grossman's novel approach to an otherwise cliché-ridden theme, this film may well stand as a milestone in modern cinema.

Steven's 'The Greatest Story Ever Told' retold

By JOHN WEYLER
Staff Writer

The greatest story ever told is the story of Jesus. Or at least according to George Stevens, for so he named his 1965 film depicting Christ's life.

That film has been made into a book, which is the subject of this review.

This The Greatest Story Ever Told is not the novel The Greatest Story Ever Told by Fulton Oursler on which the movie was partially based.

This is rather a collection of photos taken from Steven's film.

The photos are printed in a handsome way: in color, on slick, glossy paper. Many of them are printed the full size of the pages, which measure 12" by 9".

These huge frames, while not quite reproducing the full, glorious Cinermama and Ultra Panavision in which the film was shot, do show some of the film's drama and majesty.

They range from panoramic shots of earth and sky with Mary and Joseph or a few disciples walking along in the foreground, to a close-up of the anguished, tortured face of Jesus, as impersonated by Max Von Sydow.

There are many shots of crowds, hundreds of hooded and robed extras, listening, following and shouting and reaching out for the Son of God.

Many poignant moments are captured: Judas receiving his thirty pieces of silver, the Last Supper, the Crucifixion.

Interspersed with the large photos are small pictures of the individual characters that make up the story of Christ.

A cast line is included in the book, which shows a few surprises in who portrayed these people. You would expect to see Pat Boone (as the young man at the tomb) in a religious movie, but John Wayne? Telly Savalas? (As the Centurion and Pontius Pilate, before it the beauty and the extraordinary nature of Him who represents many things, and one thing.

To recall, or is it to challenge, one's own image of Christ—an image derived from a word, a panel of stained glass, a Gothic-lettered Christmas card, a burst of organ music, an inner exaltation, an experience.

[See JESUS, p. 11]

respectively).

How about Jamie Farr, looking very Klingler-like in a long robe, as one of the Apostles?

Others whose pictures are shown are Charlton Heston as a muscular John the Baptist, Claude Rains as Herod the Great, and Roddy McDowall in his pre-ape days, as Matthew.

A short text piece, explaining the mystery of Jesus and the nature of the film, is included in the slim (37 pages) book.

The film, and the portrait achieved by the represented Christ, do not so much attempt to answer. Pilate's question, "What is truth?" as to intensify each individual's desire to discover that answer for himself within his own experience, past and future.

A play, a film, a single performance—any work of art—undertakes to provide answers from within the beholder. The film moves to excite the imagination of the audience by rendering

ECU Choir heads this week's School of Music events

ECU NEWS BUREAU

The East Carolina University Choir will perform at the First Presbyterian Church here Wednesday, April 26, at 8:15 p.m.

The Choir is directed by Brett Watson of the ECU School of Music faculty.

On the program are several pieces of sacred music from the Renaissance and Baroque eras; songs by Johannes Brahms, Samuel Barber and Ned Rorem; and several folk songs and spirituals.

The choir will divide into a double-choir formation for its performance of the Heinrich Schutz setting of Psalm 100 and the Bach Motet II, "The Spirit Also Helpeth Us."

The Presbyterian Church is particularly well-suited for Baroque music performances, said director Watson, because of its tracker-action Zimmer organ.

Membership in the 45-member choir is based upon a successful audition at the beginning of each academic year.

Each singer in the choir is a voice student.

The choir has toured widely in the eastern U.S. Last spring the choir performed before approximately 4,000 persons on a tour that included performances at Rockefeller Plaza and St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York and Washington Cathedral in Washington, D.C.

The Wednesday evening concert is free and open to the public.

STEVE WALLACE: ARIAS

Steve Wallace will sing songs and arias by Faure, Massent,

Schumann, Puccini, Rorem and Holst in his recital Fri., April 28.

The program will begin at 8:15 p.m. in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall and will consist of two Faure songs; selections from the Schumann "Dichterliebe"; Holst's "Journey's End"; Rorem's "See How They Love Me" and two arias: "En ferment les yeux" from Massent's "Manon" and "Che gelida manina" from Puccini's "La Boheme."

He will be accompanied by pianist Lorene Carraway.

A student of Antonia Dalapas of the ECU School of Music voice faculty, Wallace is a junior and a candidate for the Bachelor of Music degree in vocal pedagogy.

During his study at ECU he has been active in several Opera Theatre productions, as well as in musical productions sponsored by the Theatre of West Virginia.

He has also appeared as a soloist with the Greenville Community Chorus and the Carteret County Choral Society.

TWO SENIOR PIANO STUDENTS

Two senior piano students in the ECU School of Music, Laura Soles of Virginia Beach, Va. and Pamela Wilson Wilkins of Mount Olive, will perform in recital April 25-27.

Both are candidates for the Bachelor of Music degree in piano performance. Each recital is free and open to the public.

Pamela Wilkins, a student of Dr. Charles Bath of the ECU keyboard faculty, will perform Tues., April 25, at 8:15 p.m. in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

Her program will include Liszt's "Sonetto 104 de Petrarca" and "Etude de Concert, No. 3"; Debussy's "Images," Book I; the Beethoven Sonata in A flat Major, Opus 110 and Prokofieff's Sonata No. 3 in A minor.

Ms. Wilkins is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O.E. Wilson of 513 West James St., Mount Olive.

Performing Thurs., April 27, at 8:15 p.m. in the Mendenhall Student Center Theatre, Laura Soles will play the Haydn Variations in F minor, three Ravel compositions, Scriabin's Etudes, Opus 8 and Mendelssohn's Fantasy, Opus 28, in F sharp minor.

MARSHBURN IN RECITAL

Sheila Marshburn, a student of Paul Tardif, will perform at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 26.

Her program will include the Soler Sonata No. 84 in D and Sonata No. 90 in F sharp; Beethoven's "Waldstein" Sonata, Opus 53; Schubert's "Impromptu," No. 2, Opus 90; and Liszt's "Sonetto 104 del Petrarca" and Tarantella from [See MUSIC, p. 11]

ECU News Bureau

A child's view of art was the subject of presentation by Phil E. Phillips of the ECU art education faculty at the recent convention of the National Art Education Association in Houston.

Phillip's report was based on research done with a group of Chicago area schoolchildren who were shown color slides of realistic paintings—a selection of individual and group portraits and landscapes.

The photos and text are profound while not exceptionally beautiful or elevatory.

Purpose of the study was to identify what children find interesting in paintings, Phillips said.

"The children were asked to explain exactly what they were looking at when a slide of a painting was taken away," he reported.

"Results showed that a significant number of the children within each grade level looked at similar parts of the painting.

"Little similarity was found when grade levels were compared."

Phillips also noticed less tendency to deviate from the norm among the younger children.

Primary-aged children looked at similar parts of the paintings "with much more consistency" than high school students, he said.

"With children of all ages, the most realistic paintings obtained the most similar answers."

Phillips' findings are believed relevant to classroom teachers of art, who regularly present reproductions of paintings to their pupils.

A doctoral candidate at the University of Illinois, Phillips joined the ECU art faculty last fall.

Last year, Americans threw away 150 million tons of materials—enough to fill garbage trucks lined three abreast from New York to California. Our throwaways cost us more than $4 billion each year. This collection and disposal of trash is now the second largest item in most city budgets, surpassed only by public schools.

The problem is more than litter along the highway. It is the waste of our nation's resources—resources which are becoming more scarce and expensive.

Mountaineering #2.

SELECTING THE PROPER GEAR

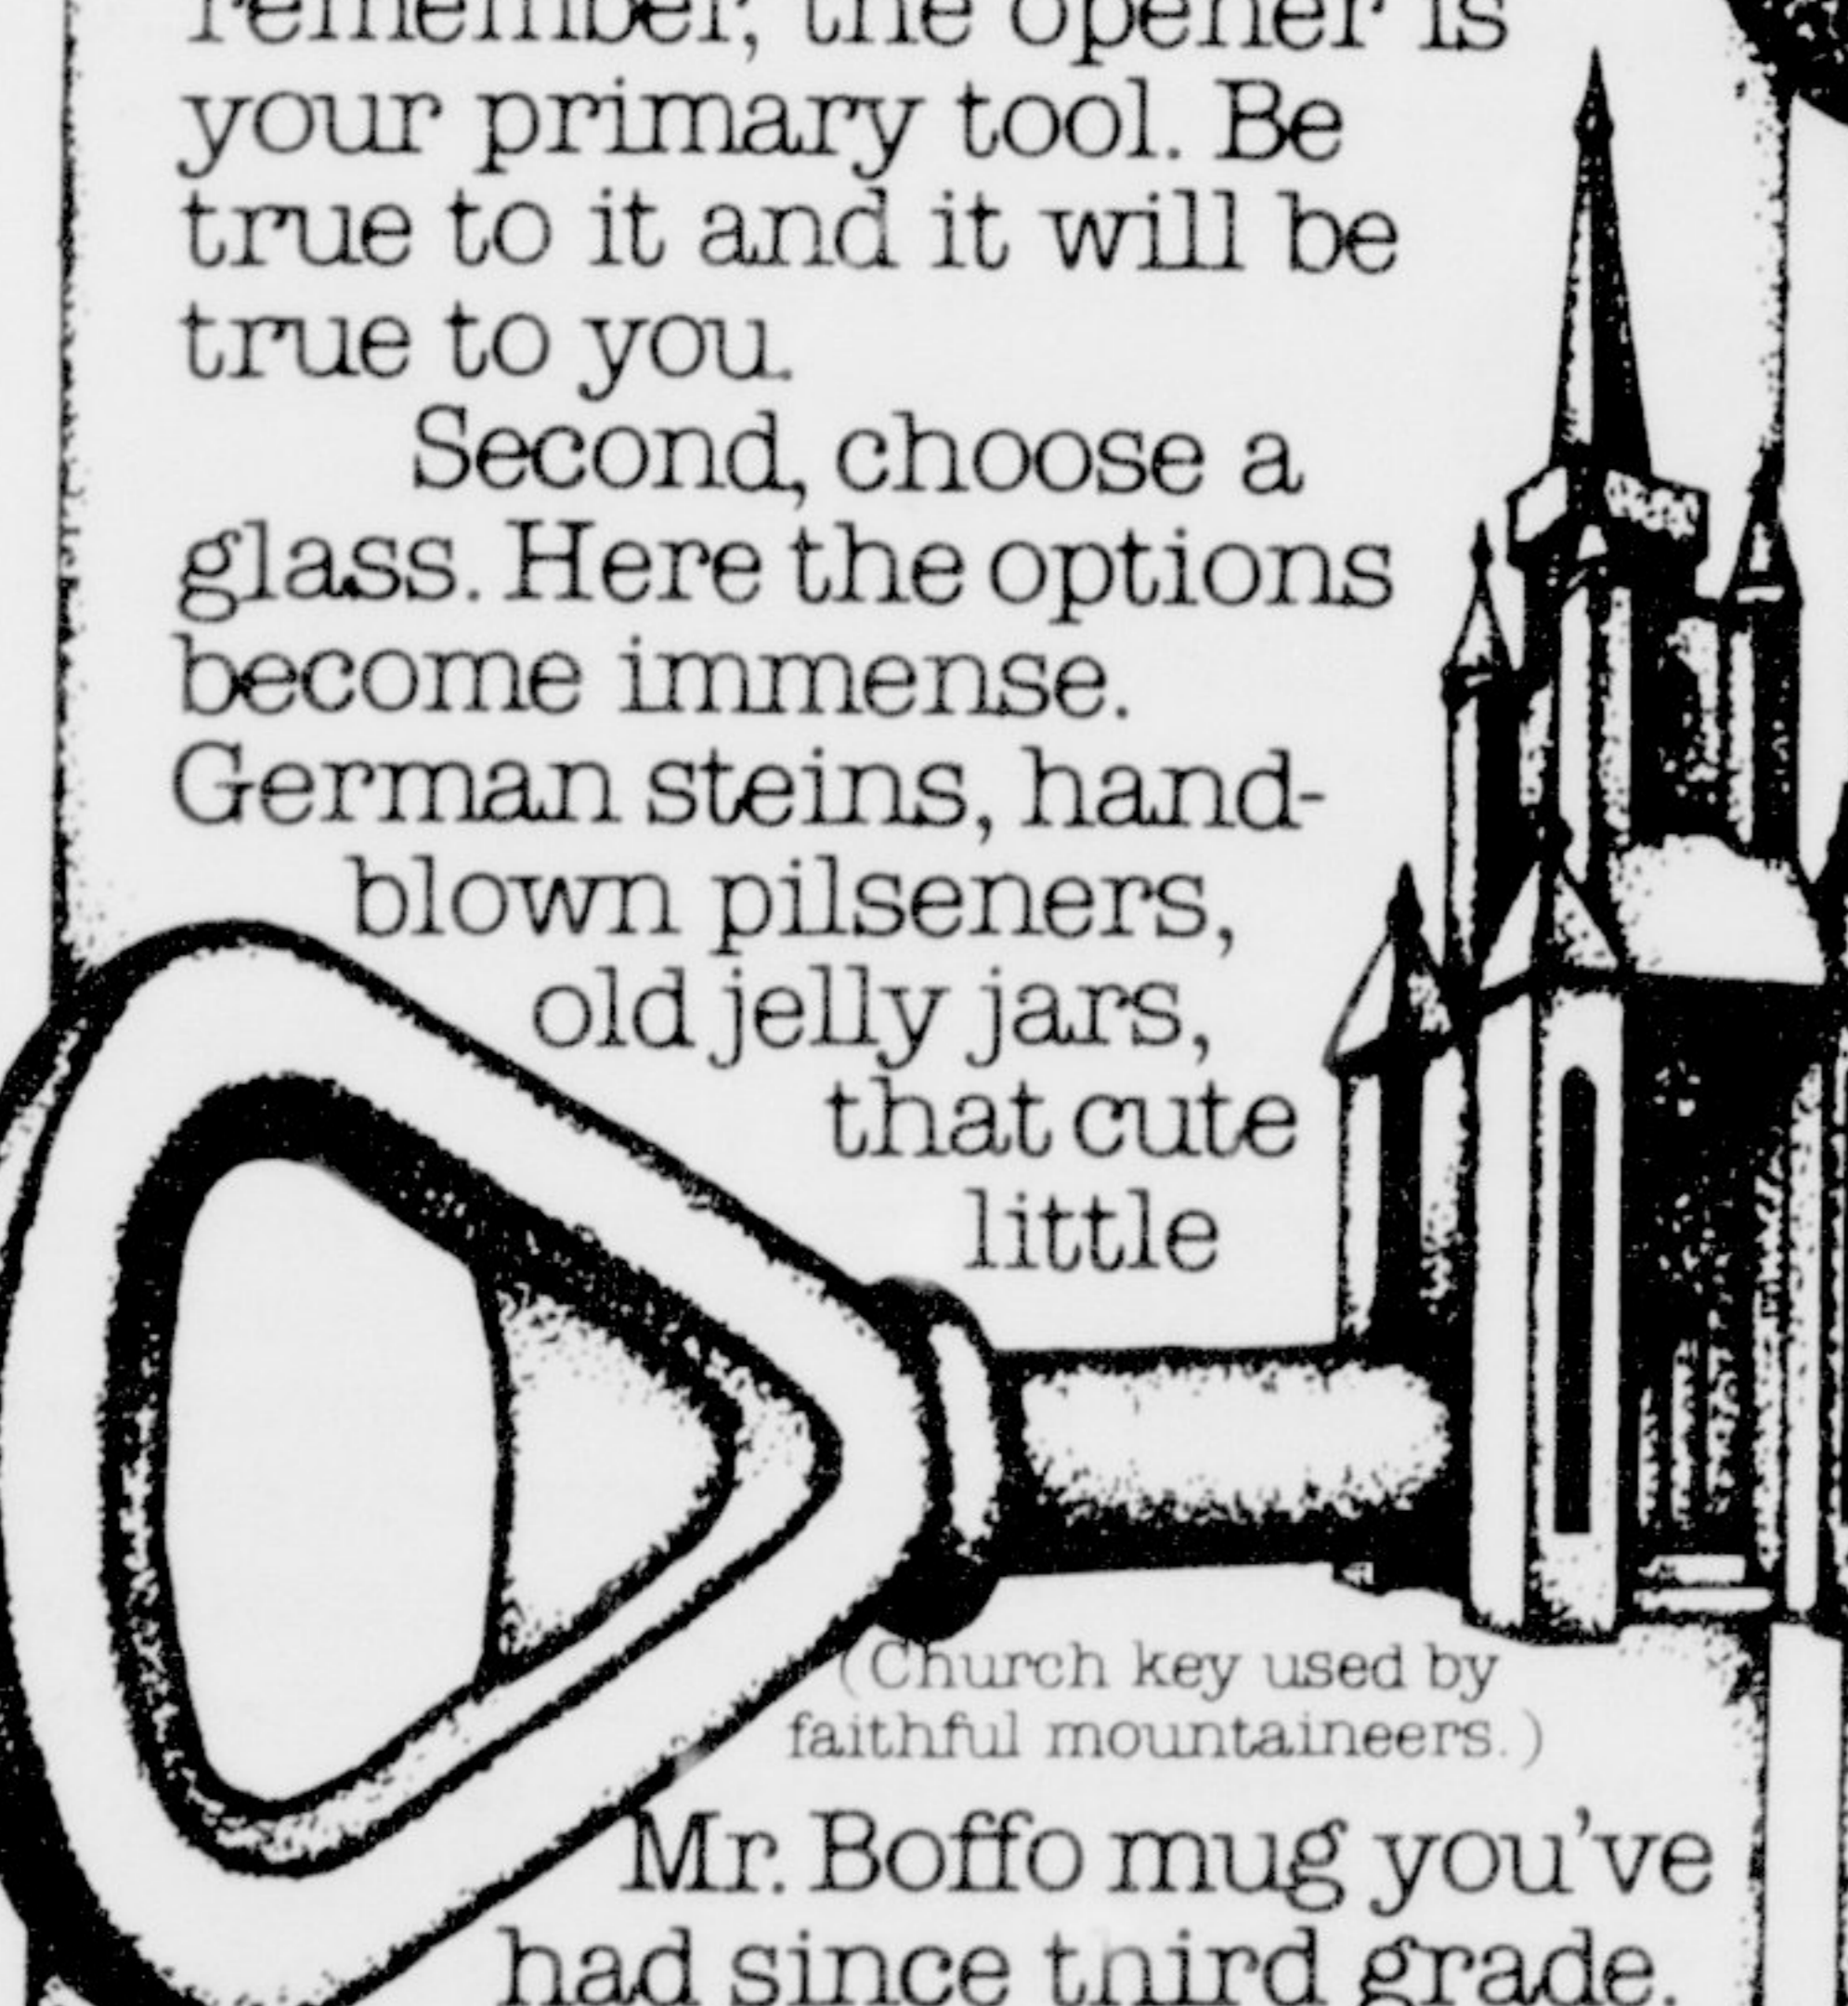

The Busch® label is where it all begins. Note the snowy, craggy peaks affixed thereto. They are the mountains.

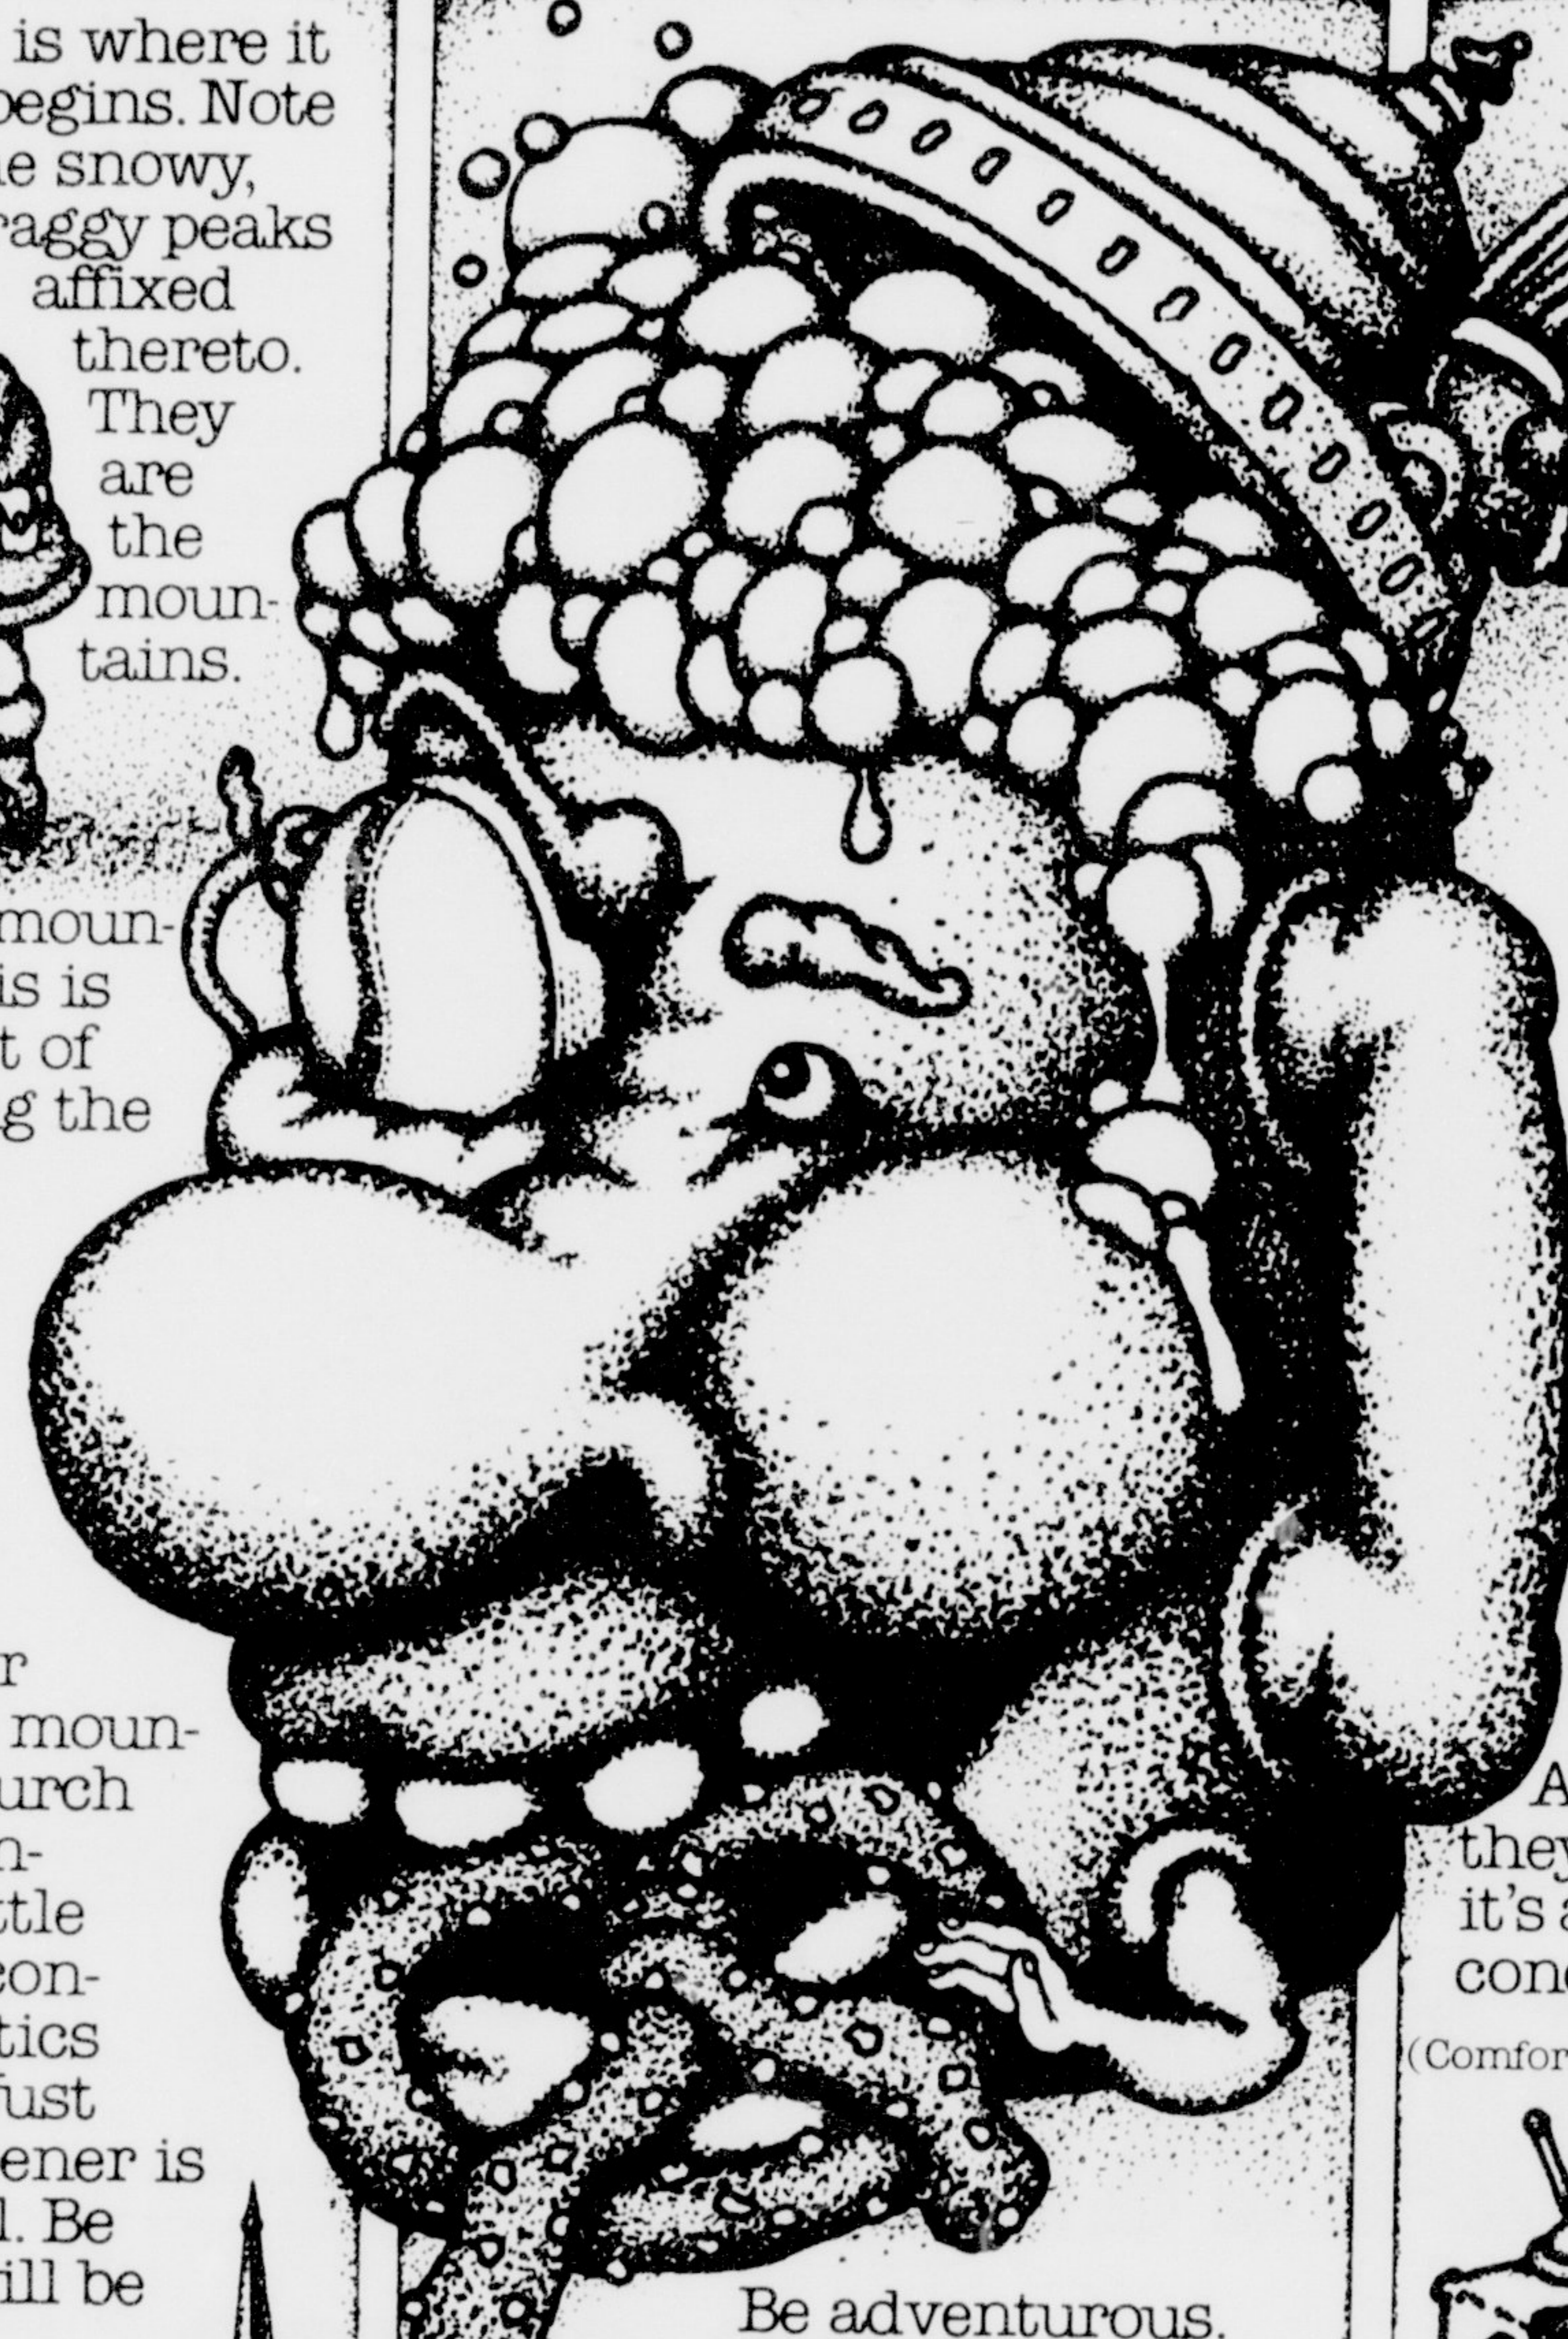

You are the mountaineer. And this is an ad. The subject of which is selecting the proper gear for mountaineering. (It all fits together so nicely, doesn't it?)

First and foremost, you'll need to pop the mountain top. For this task, faithful mountaineers use a church key. Secular mountaineers use a bottle opener. Don't be confused by these antics with semantics. Just remember, the opener is your primary tool. Be true to it and it will be true to you.

Second, choose a glass. Here the options become immense. German steins, hand-blown pilseners, old jelly jars, that cute little (Church key used by faithful mountaineers.)

Mr. Boffo mug you've had since third grade.

Be adventurous. Experiment. Most mountaineers have a personal preference. You'll develop one too.

Food is next. Proper mountaineering, not to mention proper nutrition, requires a smorgasbord selection of snacks. Some mountaineers have suffered from a potato chip deficiency, a pretzel imbalance or other serious dietary defects. Plan ahead.

Comfort is crucial. If you mountaineer in public, pick a padded bar stool, preferably one that spins (to facilitate admiring the scenery). At home, a comfortable chair or sofa will do. Rule of thumb: if it feels good, and the police don't seem to mind, do it.

Then turn on the tube or spin a tune or crack a good book. The choice is strictly between you and the dominant hemisphere of your brain. Of course, some mountaineers say the smooth, refreshing taste of Busch is entertainment enough. And thank goodness they do, because it's an excellent conclusion.

(Comfort is crucial)

Conaty two-hits Camels

By ANDY STEWART
Staff Writer

The East Carolina Pirates were able to score their seventh straight win by dumping Campbell College by a score of 11-4.

The Pirates were able to break loose and score three runs in the fourth off of three hits and two errors.

The Pirates were able to put together two more runs in the fifth off two more Camel errors and one base hit.

In the sixth the Pirates ripped off four more runs off of four clean hits to make the score 9-0.

In the seventh inning the Camels were able to stop the Pirate attack.

The Bucs still were not out of fire power as they proved in the eighth. With Pete Paradossi on and one out, Bobby Supel slammed the ball out of the park to make the score 11-0.

The winning pitcher for the Pirates was Pete Conaty who fired a two hitter by the Camels. He did not give up a hit until two were out in the sixth. His record now stands at 6-4. The losing pitcher for Campbell was Keith Waters who's record is now 2-5.

PETE CONATY NOW stands 6-4 on the season with two hitter over Campbell.

Pirates nap through UNC-W doubleheader, get whipped 7-4, 4-3

By CHRIS HOLLOMAN
Sports Editor

The Pirates' problems on the road continued Sunday as ECU dropped two baseball games to UNC-Wilmington 7-4 and 4-3.

Of the 15 games lost thus far this season, 11 were away games. ECU has only won 4 games on the road and are now 19 and 3 at home.

In the first game the Seahawks drew first blood with two runs in the first inning.

During the third inning the Pirates scored when Butch Davis singled and Bobby Supel hit him home. Styons then hit and Supel was able to score.

Supel and pinch runner Chip Giannettino advanced on an out. Giannettino scored when Jerry Carraway reached base on an error.

In the top of the fifth ECU loaded the bases but were unable to score after a UNC-W double play.

Wilmington added 2 runs in the bottom of the fifth when an error allowed the Seahawks to make it home.

UNC-W rounded out the scoring in the sixth inning by adding one more run on another Pirate error. The run was scored by former Raleigh Enloe standout Ronnie Peoples.

In the second game of the twin bill ECU jumped out to a quick 3-0 lead only to see it vanish in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings.

The Pirates jumped on top first with a score by Eddie Gates.

In the third inning ECU added two more. Gates hit a single and Billy Best sacrificed Gates to second.

Paradossi then hit a single to become the all-time hitter in Pirate history.

Butch Davis doubled then Gates and Paradossi came in on a fielder's choice.

UNC-W came back in the fifth, however, when Terry Greene scored.

In the sixth inning another former Raleigh Enloe standout, Ron Broadwell hit a double and pinch runner McLean scored when Jerry Carraway committed an error.

The Seahawks scored again in the seventh and forced an extra inning.

During the ninth inning UNC-W scored to win the game.

The losses dropped the Pirates record to 24-15.

SPORTS IN REVIEW

By Steve Byers

Basketball just around the corner ?

After East Carolina's disappointing basketball season, one might think the Pirate players could do without seeing the round object for at least six months; but such is not the case.

One need only look inside Minges Coliseum every afternoon to see most of the Buc players working out and staging pick-up games continuously.

As if keeping in touch with the game isn't enough, the team members have imported members of the football team to provide behemoth, if not graceful competition. Even ex-Pirate running back, turned TV announcer, Kenny Strayhorn played in a recent pick-up game much to the dismay of his dangerously relaxed muscled.

However encouraging this is to East Carolina supporters, it is equally discouraging to the seldom exercised body I now possess. Just as I have mastered the ten foot jump shot, Oliver Mack just as effortlessly flies through the air and drops the ball through the hoop with two-thirds of his body above the net.

But my own inadequacies aside, the team looks amazingly dissimilar to the squad that left the court over a month ago. A confidence that can only be displayed by veterans of a college basketball season is evident as the team members play.

Roger Carr has developed a new method of celebrating a basket. Carr's turnaround jumper is deadly from nearly anywhere on the court, yet his practice of falling on the court is nearly as consistent. Oliver Mack says "Roger spends half the game on the floor." Carr's only competition in the "odd-shots" department has to be Bernard Hill. The slender 6-7 forward becomes a flash of elbow and knees as a shot emerges from a cloud of dust and is usually accurate. Called "Ice" because of his similarity to San Antonio's George Gervin, Hill showed some of his moves this past season. However, he must have spent a week in seclusion dreaming up some of his new regalia.

Herb Krusen, referred to by some onlookers as the "great white hope," is still the deadeye of seasons past and some moves of Hill and Carr appear to be rubbing off.

However in all seriousness, Carr appears to be in his best shape ever and is gaining confidence rapidly. Expect a strong battle for the three front court positions as no less than eight players have a shot. One of Gillman's first problems will be deciding between Carr, Hill, Herb Gray, Greg Cornelius, Herb Krusen, Kyle Powers, David Underwood, and freshman signee Al Tyson.

A tall line-up would feature 6'10" Tyson, 6'7 1/2" Gray, and newcomer Underwood; but then what becomes of Krusen, the best pure shooter on the team, strong Roger Carr and Cornelius, a hustling Powers and flashy Hill. Coach Gillman can only smile about this "problem."

In case you didn't notice the Pirates will have all but two of last year's players back when practice starts in the fall.

At the risk of using a severely over used word, the "optimism" in next year's team seems to be stronger than ever. All of it will be needed as Gillman prepares to release the schedule in about a month.

Speaking of the schedule, the Bucs will play no less than six NCAA or NIT playoff contenders of the past season. Gillman has already revealed NCAA participants Duke, Indiana State, and Notre Dame will be on the schedule along with NIT teams Detroit, North Carolina State, and South Carolina. How does the team react? "I'm ready for South Bend," smiled Mack.

The ECU women's track team took 1st place Saturday at the South Carolina Invitational for the second year straight. ECU had a team total of 198 points this year followed by NC A&T with 94 points. The 1st place finish by ECU came at a good time - it set the stage for next Friday's NCAAIAW meet held at ECU.

There were quite a few first place finishes at South Carolina as well as some personal best performances.

Linda Mason once again won the 400m hurdles with a 68.8 sec. run. This run made Linda's fourth win out of five meets this year.

Maria Gudjohnson placed first in the the 100m hurdles with a time of 15.5 and she was closely followed by Sandy Sampson of ECU for 2nd place. Maria also placed 1st in the long jump with a fine jump of 18' 1/2" with Cookie McPhatter jumping for 2nd place with a personal best of 17'9". Dianne Gatlin was 3rd with a personal best of 17'4 1/2". Cookie McPhatter placed 1st in the 400m and in the high jump as well as being anchor leg in the mile relay for another 1st place. Cookie put in a fine performance in the 400m with a run of 57.2 for a personal best.

Other running events ECU did well in included the 100 m with Lydia Roundtree placing 2nd and the 800 m with Joy Forbes also placing 2nd. The 1500m run was one of the high points of the day with Anna Bailey running a 5:09.9 for a personal best of 17 seconds. She took 1st place with a strong kick in the last 200 yards of the race. Anne Holms had a personal best of 5:18.4 for fifth place, Anna Bailey also did well in the 3000m with an 11:57.7 for 2nd place. And Anne Holmes placed 4th with 12:13.4.

In the field events, Debbie Freeman was a triple 1st place winner with 2 personal records. In the javelin she threw a 137'8", followed by Debbie Knight and Elaine Davis in 2nd and 3rd respectively. In the shotput Debbie heaved a fine 40'9 1/2" put and the discus in 123'10". Debbie has shown consistent improvement this year and will be a top competitor this Friday at the state meet.

Laurie Arrants, coach of the winning team, feels that this year's team has great depth with two or three good competitors in each event. The NCAAIAW meet this Friday begins at 12:00 with 8 womens teams in competition. East Carolina is favored with UNC-Chapel Hill and NC A & T in close competition.
