

BRIEFS

Shooter will not go before grand jury

Staff Reports

Special prosecutor Angela Corey announced Monday that she would not take the Trayvon Martin shooting death before a grand jury.

According to WITN, the announcement means the decision now rests on Corey, who has a reputation for not presenting cases before grand juries if not required.

Florida law states that only first-degree murder cases require the use of grand juries.

Martin was killed on Feb. 26 during a confrontation with George Zimmerman in a gated Florida community.

Zimmerman has claimed self-defense.

Amendment One rally to be held

Staff Reports

A rally against Amendment One is being planned for April 28 in downtown Greenville.

The event will be held from 5-10 p.m. and will be supported by local businesses.

Planners are currently working to book bands, set up voter registration and organize a potluck with free food for attendees and volunteers.

There will be giveaways for creative "Vote Against" signs.

Greenville police investigate shooting

Staff Reports

Greenville police are currently investigating a shooting that occurred over the weekend.

The shooting happened at 1910 Kennedy Circle just after 6 a.m. on Saturday, according to WITN.

Police said that Milton Sherrod had been shot in the right side of his chest below the armpit.

Sherrod was taken to Vidant Medical Center with non-threatening injuries.

Sherrod has outstanding warrants for assault. No arrests have been made yet.

Chancellor to give university address

Staff Reports

Chancellor Steve Ballard will present the State of the University address at 11 a.m. today in Hendrix Theater in Mendenhall Student Center.

Faculty, staff and students, as well as members of the community, are invited to attend.

Parking will be available in the Mendenhall Student Center parking lots.

ECU student runs for ASG presidency

MORGAN HOPEY | THE EAST CAROLINIAN

Ron Hinton, sophomore communication major, is running for ASG president. Elections will be held from April 20-21.

Cameron Gupton
ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

Ron Hinton, a sophomore public relations major at ECU, is currently running for the position of president in the Association of Student Governments.

Hinton is currently the ASG vice president of Government Operations and Constituent Services.

ASG is an organization made up of student leaders from UNC-system schools. The organization began in 1971 to serve as a forum for planning and cooperation.

The association is funded by a $1 fee, which is collected from every UNC-system school once a year.

In recent times, the association has had trouble reaching quorum, or having the majority of participants in attendance at meetings, thus creating some issues for the group. At their most recent meeting, only 25 out of 68 participants were in attendance.

Hinton and his vice president, Kevin Kimball, a junior political science major attending UNC-Chapel Hill, are aiming their efforts at repairing the internal structure of ASG and informing more students of the association's existence.

"ASG needs to work towards goals and not just show up," said Hinton. "I want to have inclusion."

Hinton hopes to bring the association back to the "family atmosphere" that once existed among its members and have the organization become more productive.

"I'm not going to just be a president, but be (the students' friend)," said Hinton. "If they're hurting, I'm hurting."

Hinton wants to bring about more awareness of the association among students statewide.

"Many do not know what the association is," said Hinton. "I want to involve the common student."

Hinton could not reveal much about his campaign efforts, but said they are "going well."

"It couldn't be any better," said Hinton. "People are responding and are open to my vision."

Hinton has many points in his platforms that he is striving to make a reality, including (but not limited to) bringing strong leadership to the association and giving students their money's worth, creating an online bill tracker, contacting students on a state level, and involving alumni in processes.

"ASG might not exist if strong leadership does not take hold," said Hinton.

Hinton and his vice president will create an online bill tracker, which was proposed by N.C. State for students to follow ASG bills, committees and delegates.

The two will also work to send out statewide emails to students with the help of campus SGA presidents.

Kimball is undertaking an initiative to provide cheaper textbooks for students, and both want an ASG alumni association to guide the association and help provide scholarships for students.

Police remove all barriers

RYAN HARPER | THE EAST CAROLINIAN

Students walk around an unbarricaded downtown on Saturday night three years after a shooting killed Andrew Kirby, manager of Michaelangelo's and ECU student Landon Blackley outside of The Other Place nightclub. The incident prompted police to add barricades from Thursday to Sunday nights since 2009.

Cameron Gupton
ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

The barriers that once blocked key intersections of downtown Greenville on the weekends have been removed.

The barriers were mainly concentrated in the vicinity of Fifth Street and surrounding areas.

Barriers were initially utilized in 2009 after violence swept through the city and came to a climax with a drive-by shooting downtown.

According to the Greenville Police Patrol Bureau's Downtown Deployment Strategy plan, which was updated only a month after James Richardson shot and killed Andrew Kirby and Landon Blackley outside of the Other Place nightclub in June 2009, the barriers were to aid in "traffic calming."

The downtown police were to use "barricades, traffic cones and temporary barriers" at night when patrolling the downtown area.

Originally, the barriers were set out on Wednesday through Saturday nights from 10 p.m. to 3 a.m., in order to help the traffic diversion plan, according to WNCT.

Floodlights were also implemented as part of the original plan and were placed strategically in three different parking lots.

Intersections that used to be barricaded included East Fifth and Reade streets, East Fifth and Holly streets, Cotanche and East Fourth streets, Evans and Fifth streets, Evans St. and Dickinson Ave., and the Contache St. exits of the 420 and Hodges parking lots.

These specific intersections were chosen "to eliminate vehicular traffic through the downtown area during nightlife activities," according to the strategy.

Sgt. Joe Friday of the Greenville Police Department recently stated that the removal of the barriers was at the discretion of the supervisors of the strategy.

Friday also stated that the barriers were employed with consideration to the size of a crowd downtown and whether or not officers felt they could safely control the crowd.

Many students do not agree with the decision to remove the barriers from the area.

"I like that they had the barricades up," said

Darcy McPhail, an art history major. "If people are drunk, they aren't aware of their surroundings."

Greenville mayor Allen Thomas, recently stated, in an interview with WNCT, "You've seen the barriers come down, you've seen a little bit different type of policing in this downtown area, and this will be a very positive move for our community."

The city wants the results of the recent barrier removal to make Greenville safer and more attractive for people.

The decision to remove the barriers came after a meeting of police and downtown business and club owners.

The mayor said that the goal is not just to increase safety downtown only, but also to increase safety citywide.

He also hopes to spread more police officers around Greenville after making adequate progress downtown.

SGA winners split between Ticket One, Ticket Two

Last Thursday, the results of the new Student Government Association cabinet for the 2012-2013 school year were announced. Results were posted after 5 p.m. and showed a split ticket result, with winners coming from both Ticket 1 and Ticket 2. Justin Davis, Ticket 1, will be the new president, winning by just 94 votes. Matthew Paske, Ticket 2, took the vice president chair, while Eric Green, Ticket 1, won treasurer chair, and Ashley Wooten, Ticket 2, won the secretary position. 2,565 votes were tallied in all.

"I'm someone who is paying for my own education, so the reduced textbooks would be helpful," said Amelia Hayes, a sophomore child life major.

However, one obstacle is hindering Hinton's campaign: the fact that he was not a delegate for ASG, but a future bill may change that soon.

Historically, someone running for presidency must have been a delegate, but a new bill proposes that one running must have been a delegate for half a semester, an executive member, or a full-time student of a UNC school.

If this bill passes, Hinton will be able to officially run for and serve as president.

"The fact that he's from ECU means he might get more support because ECU tends to support their own," said Rachel Schillo, a sophomore nursing major.

Schillo hopes that Hinton will come to speak to more groups on campus. "He needs to get his name out there and come speak to organizations and events."

Hinton said he needs the help of all students during the election. "Student activism is the key to change and success," said Hinton.

ASG elections are being held on April 20-21.

HOROSCOPES

Aries (Mar 21 -Apr 19)
Your fiery energy is pushing you in a new direction today — be sure you're ready for it! You might meet up with a new person or try a new activity, but in one way or another, you are changing for the better!

Taurus (Apr 20 -May 20)
You need to deal with a hyper-active subconscious today — it may be that you can't get a tune out of your head, or that you need a break from constant daydreams. A good friend can help.

Gemini (May 21 -June 20)
Try not to fall back on your old ways today — you need to keep moving if you want to succeed! It's all too easy to rely on what was true for you many years ago, but it's braver to forge ahead.

Cancer (June 21 -July 22)
You need to deal with someone whose idea of service may involve you taking care of them. You're not into one-way relationships, though, so let them know how it has to be for you.

Leo (July 23-Aug 22)
Your living, breathing energy is amplified today, and should help you make sense of some issues that have been bugging you, maybe for years. It's easier than usual to let go of things.

Virgo (Aug 23 -Sept 22)
Try to go with the flow today — it's much easier and more effective than struggling against the currents of fate. You may not control where you end up, but relax and believe it'll be somewhere good.

Libra (Sept 23 -Oct 22)
You've got some great ideas for how to handle things today — and tomorrow, and for the rest of the year. Your mental energy keeps you fresh and feeling positive, so try to keep it up!

Scorpio (Oct 23-Nov 21)
Something smells fishy today — so back away. Not everything that glitters is worth its weight in gold, and you need to be extra wary at a time like this, when someone else is in a position of dominance.

Sagittarius (Nov 22-Dec 21)
You have more confidence than ever today — so live like it! Make that play at work, ask out that super-fox or see if you can get that high score down at the pinball place. Your energy is unstoppable!

Capricorn (Dec 22-Jan 19)
You feel pretty good about your situation, though you couldn't say why exactly. It's just an unconscious insight that you can get more done than usual, and it's working for you. Don't question it!

Aquarius (Jan 20 -Feb 18)
You need to increase the size of your group. It could be at work, in your neighborhood or online, but new members are vital. Someone comes your way that you just can't turn away!

Pisces (Feb 19 -Mar 20)
Try to say as little as possible today — and to think hard before every word. It's too easy to spill secrets or to offend delicate sensibilities today, and if you don't want to do that, self-editing is essential.

Battle of the Bands winner rocks Tipsy

Rex Rose
COLUMNIST

For Matt Phillips and the Philharmonic, their strength comes in their creative musical sound. The band, which played last Saturday at the Tipsy Teapot, does a striking job in combining a vast array of musical instruments into a hip-swaying, jazzy, and somewhat of a big-band sound.

For a band that just started in September 2011, they show extreme musical expertise. Four of the five ECU students who make up the band are or were music majors, and this musical background shows in their ability to incorporate trumpet, saxophone, bass guitar, drums, harmonica, keyboard, and acoustic guitar into each of their songs. This symphonic mix of music gives them the ability to create different sounds for each of their songs.

The five-member, seven-instrument band piled onto a small stage in a darkened room at the Tipsy Teapot directly after a three-person country band called "Be the Moon" finished their performance. The small crowd of around 20 people looked on as the band set up, half-heartedly expecting more of the same one-track, same-rhythm, three-instrument sound that the part-bluegrass, part-country band had just finished delivering. Matt Phillips said a word or two of introduction and then began playing.

In about 30 seconds, the atmosphere went from one of contentment to that of excitement as the band produced a jazzy sound accompanied by soulful vocals. All eyes were on this orchestra of a band and the room quickly turned into a witness of a musical combination that was widely unexpected. Saxophone player Travis Huff performed beautiful solos that stole the show on more than one occasion, while Matt Phillips sang, played guitar, and offered up great keyboard playing. The entire band, from drums to trumpet, worked together to produce a mellow and mature sound that moved the crowd from their seats to the front of stage.

A few songs in, the entire crowd was nodding their heads and swaying their shoulders, while a brave couple ventured up to the stage to dance to the R&B beats. Phillips bantered with the crowd in between songs, which worked well as he transitioned from song to song, sometimes explaining the meaning behind each song, and in one instance introducing his fellow band members. The only downside to this ensemble of musicians was that, at times, the music was so powerful that the lyrics were lost from the listener's ears.

An attention-grabbing performance is nothing new for this band, who met over Facebook and gained members through the ECU School of Music. They used the

The gang's all here in 'American Reunion'

Grade: C+

The "American Pie" gang returns to familiar form in "American Reunion," an unnecessary sequel that does little more than muster a few nostalgic feelings and the realization that the right soundtrack can make even the blandest of movies interesting.

In 1999, the tale of four friends trying to lose their virginities before graduation lit the box office on fire. The original "American Pie" featured raunchy humor, over-the-top antics and the assumption that every young man is led only by his uncontrollable desire for the female form. This formula played for three films, completing the trilogy with 2003's "American Wedding," which featured the marriage of the series' main couple, Jim and Michelle. In this fourth installment, Jim, Michelle and the rest of the gang return to East Great Falls for their school reunion. Once home, their need to show they have matured past their high school behavior only leads to more insanity and debauchery. However, the fact that most of these antics are, once again, easily avoidable makes the journey seem rather pointless. But I guess simply telling one's significant other, "Hey, I have a drunk, naked teenager in my car and I don't know what to do with her," would indeed speed the narrative along, and producers need a nice lengthy runtime.

One impressive feat going for this film is that it managed to reunite every single cast member from the first film, something that is rare for a sequel filmed 13 years later. The main cast hasn't been together since 2001's "American Pie 2," so seeing them all interact is one of the only entertaining things about this film. The laughs are OK, but play like an old writer trying to keep up with the youngsters of the day, featuring moments of excessive "Facebook page" and YouTube talk, both of which were nonexistent at the start of this franchise. But this does play along with the idea that our main group of guys has returned to the high school nostalgia of yesteryear, so the references aren't completely out of left field. One twist at the end will, however, have fans rolling at how the series has indeed come full circle.

To add to the few positives of the film, the soundtrack to the last 30 minutes, which takes place at the titular '90s-themed reunion, is a spectacular playlist of some incredible '90s music and almost does more in the way of taking the audience back to this time period than the actual storyline does. By the end, it's rather evident that not much has changed for the franchise. The laughs are the same, the characters haven't grown anymore likeable than they already were (especially Stifler, who is as annoying and creepy as ever), and the sex still flows as freely as any high school comedy would make it seem. "American Reunion" is tolerable, but apart from a few laughs, one may just want to rent the first film for a glimpse at when this series at least pretended to be original.

'Titanic's' magnificent return

Grade: A+

There's nothing quite like experiencing "Titanic." Even after almost 15 years, James Cameron's masterpiece does nothing short of amaze and move audiences beyond the point of simple passive viewership. It is a true piece of cinema that hasn't even begun to lose its shine, if it ever will.

Celebrating its 15th anniversary (and the 100th anniversary of the real Titanic's infamous voyage), "Titanic 3D" only adds to the odyssey that is this film, immersing audiences even further into the on-deck world and presenting it in a whole new way. Here, the usually eye-popping 3D technology is never utilized to throw an iceberg, or any other debris for that matter, at the audience, but instead, to deepen the aesthetics and sharpen every image and frame a film that looks as good and truly realistic as it did the day it was released.

For many, 3D is nothing more than a gimmick, and some may invoke that opinion for this rerelease. But for those of us who are truly moved and inspired every time we watch this film, "Titanic" could be shown backwards, upside down or even out of sync, and we would still be front and center taking in every moment. In this case, 3D is used as another way for fans to celebrate the strong emotional connections they have with this movie.

But even more to the point, "Titanic" never needed anything to jump off the screen and pull in its audience. Its narrative, its characters, its heart-breaking depiction of such a tragic moment in history and, of course, its once-in-a-lifetime love story, have always given it the substance it needed to be more than a two-dimensional movie. It's a journey, thanks to the wonders of the cinema, which can never be duplicated.

Speaking of love, the relationship between a youthful Leo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet is as swoon-worthy as ever, never losing the aura of the young, untainted love that so many have latched onto for years. The two actors' youthful appearances, coupled with iconic moments like his "king of the world" proclamation, their sunset kiss on the stern, that infamous drawing and one well-placed hand on a fogged window, only bring back memories of watching these two over and over again as the past 15 years have flown by.

As its unforgettable score flows through the theater and its themes of love, sacrifice, acceptance and tremendous loss ring as true as they did in 1997, "Titanic," following the advice of its hero Jack Dawson, makes its triumphant return to theaters count. Some may say that its return is unnecessary, but this is simply not the case. "Titanic" is something that will stay with those it touches for the rest of their lives. Seeing it on the big screen once more, in all its magnificent glory, is nothing short of a true honor.

same musical mix to defeat three other groups in the Battle of the Bands contest that was held in Wright Auditorium on March 18. Their 30-minute performance won over the crowd and, more importantly, the judges, and gave them the opportunity to perform at Barefoot on the Mall on April 19.

While the success of the band is due to all its members, Matt Phillips' talent and leadership has helped transform the band from a group of college kids to a band with more serious aspirations. Phillips, who started the band, actually has his own solo record entitled "Bones," which he just released this year.

"We called it 'Bones' because it is really stripped down with only piano and guitar playing and my vocals. The point of it is to let the songwriting speak," said Phillips.

The process of making this album helped solidify Phillips' hopes to become a professional musician.

"Working on this project made me realize how much I love music and it made me feel like I am ready for the music profession," said Phillips.

Phillips also plans to begin working on another album at the end of this year, only this time he plans on recording with the musical talent of his band.

"We will be able to expose our music to a lot more people," said Phillips. "I am really excited."

From competition-winning performances to album plans, Matt Phillips and the Philharmonic combines stellar songwriting, great vocals, and an ensemble of musicians into a unique band with what seems like a very bright future.

Senior earns C-USA weekly hitting award

Staff Reports

Senior Timothy Younger was named Conference USA Hitter-of-the-Week following the Pirates series win over Houston this past weekend at Lewis Field inside Clark-LeClair Stadium.

For Younger, it is his first career honor and the Pirates' third weekly honor following Drew Reynolds (Mar. 12) and Tyler Joyner (Apr. 2).

The Clearwater, Fla., native batted a team-best .500 (9-for-18) last week and helped the Pirates to their second-straight C-USA series win over Houston (2-0-1). He recorded multiple hits in all four games on the week and scored at least one run in all three C-USA contests, totaling five.

At in-state rival UNC-Wilmington on April 3, Younger was 2-for-4 (both singles) and reached base three times (hit by pitch). In the series opener against Houston, he was 2-for-4 with a pair of RBIs, a run scored, and reached base four times (two singles, a walk, and a fielder's choice). Younger followed that with his third-straight multi-hit performance, going 2-for-4 with a pair of runs and a walk. In the series finale, he tied his career-high with three hits (two singles and a double) and scored a pair of runs.

On the season, Younger, the ninth recipient of the honorary No. 23 jersey, is having a career year, batting a team second-best .359 (37-for-103) with a career-best 18 RBIs and 22 runs. He has collected a career-best 11 multi-hit and five multi-RBIs contests. With his seven hits on the weekend (a team best), he improved in average in C-USA play to .429 (15-for-35) and has three doubles, 11 RBIs and scored 11 runs.

Men's golf finishes fourth in Wallace

Staff Reports

Liberty University won the team title and Duke's Brinson Paolini claimed individual medalist honors at the 2012 River Landing Intercollegiate on the 6,904-yard, par-72 River Course at River Landing.

The Liberty Flames finished nine strokes ahead of Duke and N.C. State, who tied for second place. Liberty fired a 54-hole total of 18-under, while the Wolfpack and Blue Devils each finished at 9-under 855. ECU and UNC-Chapel Hill tied for fourth place at 5-under 859.

Paolini entered the third round three strokes off the lead, but posted a 6-under 66 in the final round to capture individual medalist honors. Paolini shot a 54-hole total of 8-under 208 (73-69-66). Liberty's Niklas Lindstrom finished runner-up with a 7-under 209 (71-70-68).

Liberty's Robert Karlsson and Winthrop's Jordan Sease tied for third at 6-under 210.

After posting a 304 in the first round Friday, Ryan Eibner rallied to record the lowest team score of the tournament in round two (274), and then posted the second-lowest score of the final round (281) to move from 10th place into fourth.

The Pirates' Zach Edmondson claimed his second consecutive top-10 finish by shooting 4-under 212 to place seventh. Eibner also finished among the top-10, tying for eighth at 3-under 213, his third top-10 finish of the spring.

Newcomer Eric Brady also finished under-par with a 54-hole tally of 1-under 215 to tie for 13th. Connor Sock shot par to tie for 19th. Senior David Watkins finished at 1-over, while classmate Adam Stephenson was 3-over, Jack Keefe fired a 4-over and Harold Varner finished at 7-over.

ECU will next compete in the Wolfpack Spring Intercollegiate at the Lonnie Poole Golf Course on Friday and Saturday.

Diamond Bucs win series

Adam Bunn
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

During the first half of the 2012 baseball season, the Pirates have had a knack for comeback wins. Five times this year, the Pirates have come back from deficits after the sixth inning.

When the Houston Cougars took a 4-1 lead heading into the bottom half of the seventh, it seemed like just another day at the office for the ECU bats. And while the Pirates were able to score three runs in that seventh inning to tie the score, they were unable to complete the comeback, tying the Cougars after 12 innings due to Conference USA travel rules.

With the game starting at 10 a.m. local time and the Cougars flight scheduled to leave Raleigh-Durham International Airport at 6 p.m., it appeared there would be plenty of time for a full game to be played.

But, the Cougars flight was moved up to 5:35 p.m., shortly before the first pitch, while the agreed upon "drop-dead" time, or time in which no inning can occur after, was set at 1:30 p.m.

The top of the 12th began at 1:21 p.m., and ended at exactly 1:30 p.m., at which the game was called and both teams were left with an empty feeling and an extra one on the end of their records. However, both clubs had only themselves to blame as the Pirates stranded eight men on base, all of which occurred in the first eight innings to Houston's 12.

With the tie, the Pirates (22-8-1, 6-2-1 C-USA) lost out on a chance for a second-straight weekend series sweep, and technically had a six-game win streak snapped.

"I don't know if I really have a reaction," coach Billy Godwin said. "I think this is the first time in my coaching career I've had a tie game. It's disappointing because we play to win. We don't play to tie or lose, but I'm really proud of our guys for bouncing back after being down three. We just couldn't get anything going after that."

However, the weekend as a

SERGEI TROFIMOV | THE EAST CAROLINIAN

Infielder Tim Younger (23) at the plate against the Houston Cougars on Saturday at Clark-LeClair Stadium.

whole wasn't a total loss as the Pirates outscored Houston 30-8 over the three-game series, including a 16-1 mercy rule win on Friday.

But the story will be the first tie in ECU history since a 2003 tie at Elon, which was called due to darkness at a field that had no lights.

Heading into the seventh inning and trailing 4-1, the Pirates got lead-off singles from Philip Clark and Tim Younger. They scored on consecutive errors by the Cougar defense, while Corey Thompson scored on an RBI single by Jay Cannon to knot the score at four.

Following the scoring outburst in the seventh, ECU was retired in order in the ninth, 10th, 11th and 12th, before the game was called.

"It's the first one I've ever been a part of," said Younger, who went 3-6. "It's the rule we have to go by, but we're not happy about it, that's for sure. I feel like we should've won it," Younger continued. "I feel like we should win every game. We battled. They battled. It's just the time rule, I guess."

ECU starter Jharel Cotton rebounded from his two-inning performance last Sunday to have a solid outing, tossing five innings, allowing one earned run on five hits, while walking one and striking out one.

Despite Cotton's steady performance on the mound, he wasn't the star of the day. Reliever Tanner Merritt came in and fired off a career-best six and one-third scoreless innings, allowing five hits and recording one strikeout. With his performance on Saturday, Merritt has now gone 11 and two-third straight innings without allowing a run.

"I've got a great defense behind me, and I've got a great offense," Merritt said. "So I just try to throw up zeroes and try to see if we can get another run, because it happens most of the time."

The Pirates will return to action tonight at Elon with first pitch scheduled for 6 p.m. ECU will then return to Clark-LeClair stadium on Wednesday, when it welcomes Old Dominion with first pitch also set for 6 p.m.

Softball drops series to Blazers Pirates rank sixth in conference standings

Justin Ackley
STAFF WRITER
@justin_ackley

The Pirates returned to Greenville over the weekend to play host to a Conference USA matchup with UAB.

The Pirates were looking to bounce back after a mid-week loss at in-state rival N.C. State on Wednesday. UAB (23-14, 9-3 C-USA) took the series from the Pirates (16-23, 4-8 C-USA), 2-1, which included a double-header sweep on Friday evening, with ECU taking game three on Saturday afternoon.

Game one saw a pitching duel between UAB's Lannah Campbell (9-4, 1.84 ERA) and ECU's Sarah Christian (13-13, 3.59 ERA). Both pitchers went the distance, but it was Campbell who sealed the victory with the shutout. Christian's only allowed run came on a solo home run by Erica Sisson in the third inning.

Courtney Smith (3-10, 5.32 ERA) took to the circle for ECU in game two and received a no-decision after tossing four innings in which she allowed just two earned runs. Christian picked up the loss for the second game after entering in relief, in which UAB took the game by the score of 5-3. The Pirates received some offensive support from Kristi Oshiro and Alex Fieldhouse, who put together three and two hits, respectively.

ECU picked up the win in the final game of the series, 4-2. Christian threw another complete game, which upped her weekend total to 17 innings pitched. Jill Jelnick was back to her usual ways, leading the ECU offense with two hits and two runs batted in, while also increasing her batting average to a team-leading .336. Suzanne Riggs added her seventh home run of the season on a two-run shot in the first inning.

With only 14 games remaining in the season, it is probably appropriate to start evaluating the state of the Pirates. Can, and will, this team be able to get back into the C-USA picture over the next few weeks? ECU is currently sitting in sixth place in the conference standings and is six games behind of the leader, Tulsa. This team has the necessary talent and ability to make a run, but still lacks consistency at times.

Up to this point, 13 of the team's 23 losses have come by three runs or less. Even with the amount of youth that is in the lineup, the Pirates have battled and competed to give themselves a chance to win the majority of their games. With 12 C-USA games left, ECU has a chance to play its way back into the race. However, it will take an entire team effort, since there is not one player capable of taking over a game. That is not a knock against the team; it is just how the team is made up this year. Coach Tracey Kee has used a lot of small ball to help manufacture runs and give her young pitchers leads to work with. Continued improvements in fundamentals and offensive consistency will be the key to this young team making some noise at the C-USA tournament in Birmingham.

The remainder of the schedule includes trips to Houston and Memphis, with home matchups against Southern Miss and Marshall. The games against Marshall (22-16, 10-5) and Houston (22-15, 9-3) will say a lot as to the postseason chances of the club. This weekend, ECU will travel to Houston for a three-game series and will have a chance to impress people in front of a television audience, as the first game on Saturday will be aired on Fox Sports Network.

The Cougars are led offensively by Haley Outon (.359 AVG, 11 HR, 37 RBI) and Holly Anderson (.327 AVG, 8 HR, 32 RBI). Defensively, the Cougars have put together a team ERA of 2.94, led by the pair of Diedre Outon (8-3, 2.55 ERA) and Bailey Watts (9-6, 2.75 ERA). ECU will have to put together several solid outings to get past this Houston team, which also boasts a 16-5 home record.

Kai Clark (21) looks to throw down to second base against UAB on Saturday.

BCS changes hurt ECU

Brian Holloman
OPINION COLUMNIST

The presidential committee in charge of the Bowl Championship Series is currently in the process of examining the BCS model and is likely going to change the format in order to expand the number of teams that play in the so-called national championship game.

The models being looked at are "plus-one" models, in which the regular bowl games are played, and the highest-ranked teams at the end of the bowl season will then play in a national championship game.

The second model is a seeded four-team playoff model, with the highest-seeded team playing at their home stadium, and the winners of the two games meeting in the national championship game. Irrespective of the model selected, it is believed that any change to the current BCS model would result in the removal of automatic qualification to top-tier bowl games for the champions of the Atlantic Coast Conference, Big East Conference, Big XII Conference, Big Ten Conference, Pac-12 Conference and Southeastern Conference, as well as independent Notre Dame.

While it seems like more slots would open up for teams in conferences that do not currently have automatic qualification to BCS bowl games, the likely end result is a return to the old system where bowl games selected whomever they wished, regardless of ranking and number of wins.

This means that a 13-0 conference champion ECU team could be snubbed for a top-tier bowl in favor of an 8-3 Wake Forest team, based solely on the whims of bowl executives, whose adherence to the absurd notion of "traditional powers" and "power conferences" know no limits.

Under the existing BCS system, a 13-0 ECU team would be almost guaranteed a spot in one of the top-tier BCS bowl games, and I have no doubt that the Pirate Nation would travel en masse to watch the Pirates in the spotlight.

It's not that the BCS is not aware of the passion of the ECU fan base — they just simply do not care. Passion does not buy media rights and television ads. The Atlantic Coast Conference brand has more appeal than the Conference Mountain USA West brand, or whatever the resulting amalgam of Conference USA and the Mountain West Conference wishes to name itself. Even the Big East-West Cluster Conference has higher precedence for bowl games, despite the majority of the current members being former Conference USA teams.

The bowl executives are no different than the Big East Conference's presidents. They wish to chase the magical media market fairy and the imaginary notion of potential television sets rather than hedge their bets on television sets that are actually turned on and tuned in. To them, ECU's biggest mistake was choosing to be in Greenville, rather than 20 miles down the road in the Raleigh market. Even Appalachian State and Boone are in the Charlotte market, which, according to media market acolytes, would put ASU and UNC-Charlotte ahead of ECU in terms of media potential.

That notion is frankly ridiculous, but it's how these clowns actually think.

Scott Cohen, Tulane University's president and C-USA's representative on the BCS presidential committee, is making a huge mistake if he believes that his compatriots have no ulterior motive in changing Division-I FBS football's postseason. Unfortunately, that mistake could cost ECU and the rest of C-USA and the Mountain West in terms of bowl games, television contracts and the future success of member institutions. The cure for the inadequacies of the BCS may actually be worse than the disease.
