Dorm bra bandit on the loose

Tyler Stocks
TEC STAFF

An estimated 100 bras were stolen from White Residence Hall back in September. For Corrine Frigault, a sophomore and business major, she still doesn't feel comfortable doing her laundry on campus.

"I don't want to do my laundry anymore because it sucks having to sit there the whole time worrying about whether or not someone is going to take your clothes," said Frigault.

The thefts took place on the 10th floor according to Frigault and after rumors of an arrest; the victims were never reimbursed or notified that an arrest had been made.

"I found out that the story went around and the police had been walking around White and they found a guy in White who had over 100 bras in his room he had been stealing," said Frigault. "The student was kicked out of the dorm and charged with theft."

“ Over 100 bras were stolen from White Residence Hall. ”

Currently at White, the washing machines have locks but the dryers do not. Cameras are also not installed in the area where students retrieve their clothes.

Frigault discussed how ECU has done nothing to address the thefts other than having RAs asking students to tell them if they have bras stolen.

"Our RA came up to us like a week ago and had a sign that said if our bras were taken to let them know so we could talk to a counselor, because there were multiple girls who had bras stolen," said Frigault.

The East Carolinian reached out to the White Hall Coordinator and to ECU Police for comment on the incidents. Our emails and phone calls were not returned.

Pi Kappa Alpha hosts Cycle For Life event

Ryan Clancy
TEC STAFF

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity will be hosting a Taylor Trudeau Cycle for Life event this Sunday at Fitness Connection in Greenville.

At the event, participants pledge money to bike on a stationary bike for a certain period of time and that money goes to support the Taylor Trudeau Cycle for Life foundation, according to Austin Gioseffi, Pi Kappa Alpha (PIKE) public relations chairman.

"It's a really fun charity event," said Gioseffi. "You can just go out there, get on bikes and cycle for as long as you want."

Taylor Trudeau was a brother of Pi Kappa Alpha at the University of New Hampshire who died from leukemia in 2008, according to the Taylor Trudeau Cycle for Life website. The Taylor Trudeau Cycle for Life is a national foundation that provides funding for leukemia, lymphoma, and melanoma research.

"This is a huge national [PIKE] fundraising event for one of our own brothers and we take this seriously," said Gioseffi. "Raising money for research is one of the only things we can really do."

While the event has been going on nationally for five years, this is the second year Pi Kappa Alpha at ECU has hosted their own Cycle for Life event.

"We did it last year because we heard of it through the national convention," said Scout Houston, Pi Kappa Alpha's philanthropy chair. "We had such a good turnout that we decided we wanted to

Harvard biologist to present on poison frog genetics

William Franklin
FOR THE EAST CAROLINIAN

This afternoon, ECU will host Harvard University biologist Dr. Lauren O'Connell as she presents her research on poison frogs and genetics.

The free lecture will begin at 4 p.m. in Sci-Tech room C309 and is available to students, staff and the public.

O'Connell will be presenting "Genomic Insights into Poison Frog Diversity and Behavior". She is the

DR. LAUREN O'CONNELL

Bauer Fellow at the FAS Center for Systems Biology at Harvard University.

O'Connell is a collaborator of Kyle Summers, a biology professor here at ECU. According to Summers, the research that O'Connell does focuses on poison frogs. Summers said that the reason O'Connell switched to poison frogs is because of their wide variety in parental habits, something normal frogs don't tend to have.

"She's kind of a pioneer in connecting variation in gene expression to variation in hormone presence and action to variation behavior," said Summers. "Which is kind of a long bridge between the genes and behavior, and she is someone who has really been able to span that bridge."

One doesn't have to be biology major to enjoy the lecture though. According to Summers, the lecture is meant to be enjoyed by everyone.

The lecture will consist of a presentation and time for post-lecture questions. All students are encouraged to attend.

Oktoberfest held at West End Dining Hall

Edward Boseman
FOR THE EAST CAROLINIAN

Student Activities Board (SAB) Initiatives Committee and campus dining will host Oktoberfest today from 5 to 7 p.m. at West End Dining Hall as a part of exploring different cultures.

“When you think of cultures you tend to think of minority cultures, but German culture is a European culture,” said Janice Raines, the initiative chair of SAB.

The first Oktoberfest in Germany was held in 1810 as a wedding celebration and is now a two-week event ending on the first weekend in October. It is one of the largest fairs in the world with around 6 million attending the event annually according to the Munich Tourist Office.

“This is the third time ECU has done Oktoberfest,” said Raines. “My committee was instrumental in the planning of this event.”

Other European-themed past events included an Irish celebration day and a Euro day, where Italy, France and Russia were showcased.

The German department will also be involved in the activities. Department students will be there to teach others about Germany and its culture.

“They will be talking about Germany and even teaching German phrases,” said Raines.

Other activities include making your own mug and German keychain. A German-themed photo booth will be available among other planned activities. Campus dining will also be serving German themed food as part of the celebration.

“I think there is a lot of negative connotation with Germany and its involvement with World War II. This [event] sounds good and can help people learn more about Germany. Besides, I never had German food,” said Devon Patterson, a senior in culture anthropology.

According to the German Department at ECU, Germany is the United States’ largest European trading partner and the world’s third largest economy. More than 240 German-owned companies operate in North Carolina.

“We usually have around 300 to 400 students attend,”

NICOLE AGRESTO | THE EAST CAROLINIAN

The first Oktoberfest was held in Munich, Germany in 1810 and is now a two-week event held worldwide.

said Raines. “We are already planning on next year but we have to wait for the budget to see what we can do.”

West End Dining Hall will have regular hours opening at 7 a.m. and closing at 10 p.m.

This event, along with others like the festival of lanterns, is an event held to promote diversity throughout the university.

“I think it is great bringing attention to it [German culture] because it brings attention to other cultures too,” said Chris Chau, a freshman public health major. “If you can take a look at one culture it can lead to other cultures and that I think is what it is about.”

Early voting begins for city elections

Puja Patel
FOR THE EAST CAROLINIAN

Greenville city elections will be on Nov. 5, but early voting is open now.

Students may register to vote in Greenville online. If students voted in the last national election but have moved places of residency, they must register again at their new address. Students may also vote and register in the same day at OneStop voting polls.

OneStop early voting locations are Pitt County Agricultural Center, Winterville Fire Station, Drew Steele Center, County Office Building and Keene Park. Districts 3 and 4 cover main campus and College Hill.

At OneStop early voting, students may bring their student ID and a document from the school showing their name and address.

The two candidates running for mayor are Tom Best and current Greenville Mayor Allen Thomas.

Mayor Thomas is running on improving job growth, crime, community and management. He wants to emphasize small businesses in Greenville and wishes to bring more jobs to Greenville. He recognizes that there is a lot of crime and wants to make the city safer.

He would like to advocate partnership to revitalize all parts of Greenville and promises to work with City Council to represent Greenville fairly.

Candidate Tom Best is running on fiscal accountability and ensuring the future development of Greenville's rise. He wishes to make Greenville a safe and great city to live in. He is a former engineer with a strong background in business.

When asked about whether she voted during city elections, Kenley Bunch, sophomore psychology major, said yes.

"But I do think the school should do more to inform students because nobody really cares about it," said Bunch.

Freshman community health major Kayla Ellis agrees that it is important for students to vote even if they are not educated.

"[They can] get their voice out there, because college students have opinions too," said Ellis.

Brenna Owens, a junior biochemistry major, believes that bringing outside speakers to the campus is important.

"It allows the research to grow into something bigger than it started. It allows it [research] to become more applicable too," Owens said. "It gives us perspective on new research and new information."

Owens also pointed out that collaborations and new research could stem from the presentation of new material.

"It has the potential for other academics to get new ideas or even better ones and apply it to their own research.

do it again."

Last year the fraternity raised $4,500 at the event and they have set their sights even higher this year.

"Our goal this year is $10,000 and it should be easy to reach," Houston said.

Pi Kappa Alpha is not the only Greek organization participating in the event.

"We have four sororities that are helping out and participating with us," said Houston.

The fraternity is also providing a disk jockey and selling t-shirts in order to make the event more appealing to attend. Emily Ecuyer, a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma who says she'll be attending the event, was glad to hear about the DJ.

"I think that'd be really fun, I can't exercise unless I have my ear buds in," Ecuyer said.

Along with money being raised through biking and t-shirt sales, PIKE brothers have also had to raise some money on their own.

"We make it mandatory throughout our brotherhood that everyone has to get at least $60," said Gioseffi.

Gioseffi believes the event is important not only due to the money it will raise, but to help improve the image of the Greek community.

"Not only does it look good for us but also on the whole of Greek life because a lot of people think all we do is just party," Gioseffi said. "We do community service and philanthropy events and we try and raise money and give back to the community [too]."

Ecuyer believes that the Cycle for Life is a worthwhile event to attend. "It's not too much time out of the day to chip in," said Ecuyer. "It's our opportunity to give back, to help them out and get a little exercise too. I'm really excited about it."

The event is open to non-Greeks and Greeks alike and will begin at 10 a.m.

Online app reveals true cost of college

Renee Schoof
MCT CAMPUS

WASHINGTON — A new online app called College Abacus is making it easier for students and their families to get estimates in advance of how much financial aid colleges and universities will give so that they can compare schools for costs.

It comes at an opportune time, since the shutdown of many government programs because of the political standoff over the federal budget has disabled College Navigator, a tool also designed to help families figure out college costs and operated by the Department of Education.

Until about two years ago, financial aid was a mystery until a student got a college acceptance letter and a financial aid package. Change began in 2011, when the federal government required schools to offer online net price calculators, which compute a school's full cost of attendance, minus estimated scholarships, based on family income and other information that individuals enter.

College Abacus is a free, one-stop shop. It taps the net price calculators at three schools a student selects. Then, based on personal information entered once into College Abacus, the site retrieves the estimates. More schools can be entered, three at a time.

The federal government's College Navigator website offers a rougher estimate. For each school, it will give estimated net prices for several income levels.

"Even if the government has stopped working, parents still need to find financial aid for their students to go to college," said College Abacus co-founder Abigail Seldin.

And finding out in advance which schools are likely to be affordable can bring peace to households in the spring, when most full-time students get their college decisions, Seldin said. It also can help reduce student debt.

Referring to a popular travel accommodations search engine, Seldin calls College Abacus the kayak.com of net price calculators. It takes 10 minutes or more to copy financial information from a tax return and answer other questions on many net price calculators. College Abacus lets a user log in via Facebook, Google+ or Twitter and save the data so that it only has to be done once.

The free service isn't without some glitches.

It requires the patience to wait a few minutes for some estimates. In some cases, as when schools take their calculators down for revisions, College Abacus can't get results. Seldin said her staff of 10 checks the school websites to make sure they're working and that it should take no more than one week before the estimate will be produced on another try.

Another issue with the estimates is the quality of the net price calculators.

Many schools use a simple calculator developed by the Department of Education, rather than ones developed by the College Board and others that ask more detailed financial questions. One important question the Department of Education calculators don't ask is the amount of parents' assets. The FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid), a form required of all students who hope to get financial aid, asks about assets, and schools use FAFSA information when they decide on aid amounts.

College Abacus, in the details section of the estimates report, tells users what type of net price calculator a school offers.

The National College Access Network, a nonprofit group that assists schools, mentoring groups and other organizations that help students get into college and do well once there, reviewed College Abacus when it was in a trial period last year and offered suggestions.

College Abacus also won a $100,000 grant through College Knowledge Challenge, funded by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

Carrie Warick, director of policy and partnerships at the college access network, said the tool had two big benefits.

"One is that it's a big-time saver for students because it means they don't have to go to every college website and answer the same questions over and over again," she said. "The other is that many colleges don't make the net price calculators readily available on their websites."

Renee Schoof is a contributing writer to MCT Campus Information Services. The original story ran on Oct. 22nd in the McClatchy Washington Bureau.

Thomas Langston road was closed for 2 hours on Wednesday afternoon as Greenville Police searched for armed suspects.

Greenville Police responded to 1300 Thomas Langston Road, Apt. #3 and reported of a break-in in progress. The caller told the police he could hear people in his apt.

When they arrived, officers found the victim barricaded inside an upstairs bedroom. He was armed with a shotgun for self defense. He thought there were 2 suspects.

Officers surrounded the apt and brought the victim out through an upstairs window using a fire dept ladder. Officers then secured and searched the apt and were unable to locate the suspects. This case is still under investigation.

PIRATE RANTS

The automatic toilets on campus can't be environmentally friendly when they flush with every little movement.

I want a southern gentleman and all, but can one also do me against the wall.

Look, I don't care who caused the government to crash in the past. I just want to know if anyone has any ideas about how we're going to make sure this doesn't happen.

If people hate Greek Life so much, why do they spend all of their time talking about it? Get a hobby!

I think that after graduation I am going to professionally write pirate rants.

I don't know why I have an apartment because I practically live in Brewster. What a lovely building.

Is it just me or have the Pirate Rants lately been thirstier than ever.

To my girlfriend: Will you marry me?

My spirit animal is a stripper.

God forbid someone wants to go out to a restaurant to eat, and can't pay for the tip. How dare they!

If my professor takes points off my written test for spelling errors then I should be able to pay less for the course when he can't spell right on the powerpoints!

True fact: The word "doe" has never appeared in a sentence I cared about.

Can we add thumbs to Pirate Rants? I have the urge to like or dislike every one.

Do you ever just flex your butt to the beat of a song?

When a girl replies with "awww thanks," it means she is politely telling you to return to the friend zone you just tried escaping from.

Wow... I didn't know spandex could hold that much.

Guys wearing sweat pants must be the equivalent of girls wearing yoga pants. So hot!

What's sad is that we have a porn star at ECU and she's not even the biggest slut.

Lesson learned: never try to tailgate and then go study in Joyner afterwards. You'll end up on all fours throwing up in the 3rd floor bathroom.

Girls, if you're trying to look classy, being able to see your underwear when you're standing up straight is failing.

Does hooking up with someone I met at tutoring make me a nerdy slut?

To the person who "found" the black ECU hoodie in Austin on Wednesday, I would like it back. I'll be there every Monday and Wednesday in the nearest classroom.

Montana is cheating to try to beat PeeDee in the Capital One Bowl Mascot Challenge. We're not going to take that, arrrgh we Pirates?

Who knew that not talking on the cell phone in the library would be such a difficult concept for some people?

Dear guy who complimented my singing inside the Croatan: You're super cute!

The East Carolinian does not endorse statements made in Pirate Rants. Questions regarding rants can be directed to Jamitress Bowden at opinion@theeastcarolinian.com.

Our view

Technology aids

According to the N.C. Department of Justice, there were 322, 844 property crimes in North Carolina during 2012. Greenville Chief of Police Hassan Aden introduced a new way to combat these crimes at a press conference last Thursday.

As published in Tuesday's edition of The East Carolinian, the Greenville Police Department announced CopDots, "a pen that contains thousands of tiny discs that will mark property with an adhesive." These discs, which are traceable via GPS, can be applied to anything that individuals think could be stolen. This adhesive will allow police enforcement to track the property if it is stolen.

We as an editorial staff applaud the GPD for introducing this new technology to the Greenville and ECU community. The pens will be sold at the Lowe's in Greenville and Winterville beginning in November. CopDots are available online for $29.98. We highly suggest that students take advantage of this invention and protect their property with CopDots.

A healthful state in faith

Turning back time

Alex Rodriguez
TEC COLUMNIST

Healthcare is one of the most politically volatile subjects in the United States. It's costly, complicated, and has caused turmoil as both parties fake fiscal responsibility while trying to tame it.

While people debate national healthcare, a ten-year-old Amish girl from Ohio named Sarah Hershberger is dying of cancer. But according to the Akron Beacon Journal, while receiving chemotherapy at the hospital in Akron, her parents opted to stop the treatment. They claim they'd rather use natural vitamins and herbs to try and alleviate her illness rather than use the hospital's treatments.

The Hershberger family is devout in their Amish faith, and apparently it was Sarah herself who said she no longer wanted the chemotherapy. On Oct. 9, an Ohio appeals court sided with the hospital and assigned a guardian for Sarah, only to make decisions regarding the treatment of her cancer.

The separation of church and state is often taken for granted in today's society. Over the years, it's been weeded out of governmental policy to the best of our nation's ability and willingness. Shouldn't that separation prevent the state from circumventing private religious beliefs in favor of popular governance?

The Amish are famously anti-modern communities of people who live in northern rural parts of the United States. They've made few changes to their belief structure over the years, so it's no surprise at all that the Hershberger parents would react in such a way that results in the forceful imposition of chemotherapy on their daughter. The Amish community shuns telephones, cars and often become the center of controversies centering on Child Labor laws and the rearing of their children.

According to the Amish America website, when an Amish person falls ill it is considered to be the 'Will of God' and is treated as such. That's not saying the Amish believe modern healing technologies are evil, but Elizabethtown College's Amish Studies Center reports they do assert the fact that God is the "ultimate healer." They'll use natural remedies for whatever health issue has beset one of their own, and they believe in their heart of hearts that a sickness in the human body is there by divine purpose and is not to be meddled with outside the earth's healing capabilities.

It is a difficult situation to grasp or empathize with. Having to chalk the end of your child's life up to the 'Will of God' may seem unfathomable to some, even "stupid" or "wasteful." But is that belief different than any other religious belief? When the state encroaches on personal liberties, like free speech, it is considered dictatorial, and more monstrously so if it pertains to one's spiritual beliefs. That's why the separation of church and state exists in the first place: so one religion does not hold sway over all others it must coexist with.

While the state might be relatively religion free, that doesn't exempt it from the same principle: the exerting of its beliefs on private citizens is wrong. There are laws to adhere to of course, and the healthcare of private citizens is a hotly debated issue today, but if one refuses healthcare, especially out of religious conviction, what right exists to impose that expensive, and to the Amish borderline blasphemous, procedure?

It's a state's agenda being administered to private citizens. It might seem like they're altruistic and trying to save her life, but if she doesn't want it and the parents don't want it, then why provide it? It then becomes an exercise in force. Draw what comparisons you will to any one of the centralized states that have existed throughout the years and forced their citizens to obey certain laws contradicting the pillars of freedom. I think judicial imposition of this kind is wrong. Especially at a time when some people are fighting to get much needed healthcare. Why force someone to accept something against their faith while millions more are lining up for it?

Standards for television

Take on the Nation

Houston Davis
TEC COLUMNIST

The Chinese government will start to limit the amount of American styled television shows, seen in China. According to an article in the Washington Post, the Chinese feel the shows do not focus enough on educational topics such as news, scientific research and new technology. The Chinese government may be overstepping the boundaries of one's personal freedom, but they may have a point.

In general, the most popular programming on television is not the most educational. But what values are instilled in the viewers of popular shows such as "American Idol," "Dancing with the Stars," "Buck Wild," "Jersey Shore," "Here Comes Honey Boo Boo," "Teen Mom," and "Duck Dynasty?"

If anything, these shows are making us dumber and shallow. I know these shows are meant solely for entertainment, but actions of the people on shows like this and what is considered now good, fun or valuable television, is not what we should truly hold valuable.

Seriously though, shows like "The Jersey

Shore" and "Buck Wild" are the worst things I've ever seen. "The Jersey Shore" show was a bunch of guys and girls who did nothing with their lives except excessively party. The only time they were not getting drunk or trying to hook up with somebody is when they were at the gym, tanning or doing laundry. I can't believe people get paid millions to be shallow jerks on television.

The show "Buck Wild" is just as bad. A bunch of teenagers live in middle of nowhere in West Virginia. They do nothing productive and spend all of their time partying. Teenage girls watching "Teen Mom" could get the idea that having a kid with some punk guy in high school makes you more grown up and cool.

If this is called reality television, should the viewers expect their lives to be that way? People who watch "The Jersey Shore" and "Buck Wild" may assume that the meaning of life is to consume as much alcohol as possible and sleep with a different person every night. Nobody is that silly, right?

I think people are getting too wrapped up in this ridiculous idea that the people on these television shows are people to look up to. Most teenagers could not tell you how many members of congress there are, who the secretary of state is and some may not even know the difference between "your" and "you're."

The sad thing is, many people are not even bothered by their lack of knowledge. I just feel that shows like this can cause people to lose sight of the what is most valuable and worthwhile in life and it bothers me that we are so easily captivated by them.

Fans waited an entire month for the ECU football team to return from their road trip. After their home victory against Southern Miss, fans will have to wait another two weeks before ECU returns home again.

Pirates dive into second bye week

Josh Graham
TEC STAFF

The ECU football team is enjoying its second open date of the season following its 55-14 rout of Southern Miss at Dowdy-Ficklen Stadium last Saturday.

But this bye week has a completely different feel to it. The first one came after a demoralizing, 15-10, loss to Virginia Tech at home.

This time around, ECU (5-2, 3-1 C-USA) enters the week bursting from the seams with confidence going into its last five games of the regular season.

This brings up the question, would the Pirates prefer getting back on the field this weekend in an effort to continue their momentum, rather than spending another week to prepare for their next game?

"I want the bye week," answered Head Coach Ruffin McNeill. "When I looked at the schedule, I thought the bye weeks fell perfectly for us.

"We'll be able to coach them up next week, get a little head-start on our next opponent; our coaches will take off Wednesday [or] Thursday night to get into recruiting and we'll resume on Friday to get ready for the next time."

Recruiting, huh? Due to the extra time allotted in between games, the coaching staff now has an opportunity to watch potential recruits in action. A difference that can easily be glossed over, but when it comes to recruits signing letters of intent, it can make all the difference.

"It's so hard to get out now during the year and see these guys play and get to the high schools because there is so much to do with the game," recruiting coordinator Donnie Kirkpatrick said following the Pirates' first bye week. "It's like dating. You've got to be around them if you want to have any chance for them to go out with you."

Even more than getting an edge on the recruiting trail, ECU was able to get its confidence back in the friendly confines of its home field at Dowdy-Ficklen Stadium.

Sure, it was against an inferior Southern Miss team that owns the nation's longest losing streak at 18, but a week removed from a disappointing result at Tulane, McNeill was pleased to get less-experienced players involved in the fold and enter the open date with a good vibe surrounding the program.

"It's always good to go into open weeks with a win and ... we played a lot of kids," McNeill told reporters. "To get them a chance to give them a reward by playing, they earned it, and I was really happy to get those guys [on the field]. It helps practice and it helps the continued development of team chemistry."

ECU will meet Florida International for the first time ever on Nov. 2, and even though the game is in Miami, the Pirates should be lop-sided favorites yet again.

Florida International's (1-5, 1-1 C-USA) lone win was a narrow 24-23 result at Southern Miss, whom they entered the game as 17-point underdogs against. FIU will host Louisiana Tech this Saturday before facing ECU.

Despite what appears to be another mismatch in favor of the Pirates, senior running back Vintavious Cooper said the extra week enhances the team's focus to eliminate any thoughts of looking past FIU.

"We got a great group of older guys that have actually been there, and have actually won some games and really knows what it takes for us to be successful," Cooper said. "I don't think we will be complacent at all. I think we will come back even more hungry for the next game."

Lady Pirates set sail on final road trip of the season

William Farrar
TEC STAFF

The Lady Pirates' soccer team will hit the road one more time this weekend before they finish the season off next week at home. ECU travels to Southern Mississippi on Friday and will wrap the weekend trip up on Sunday in Texas against Rice.

The Pirates are 6-8-2 this season and 3-4 within conference play. Despite mid-season struggles, the Pirates fought back in their last two games to pick up two conference victories over Florida International and Florida Atlantic. Before the last two games the Pirates were riding a three-game skid and had also lost six of its last eight.

Head Coach Rob Donnenwirth and company like their odds going into Friday's match against the Southern Miss Golden Eagles. Despite the Pirates struggles, Southern Miss has had trouble this year as well, riding a three-game losing streak, and not winning a game in over a month.

With a series of recent losses and ties, Southern Miss has accumulated a 6-7-4 record and a C-USA worst 0-5-2 record. The Golden Eagles have also not scored a goal in their last six matches, all being against conference opponents.

Southern Miss has allowed 28 goals this season, 10 more than the Pirates. ECU has struggled to limit teams to minimum shots in previous games this year, and this could also be an issue against Southern Miss, considering they have 278 shots this season. Compared to ECU's shot total of 154, this is one of the few stats Southern Miss has on the Pirates.

On Sunday, the Pirates will play their last away game of the year against the Rice Owls. Rice has had a similar season the Pirates are having, posting a 5-7-2 season record, and also having the same 3-4 conference record that ECU has. Rice has been defeated in their last two games, with the most recent lost coming against Florida international, who was the Pirates last victory.

The Rice Owls have struggled with their offense all season, as they have been shutout nine times this

Jeff Lebo talks Pirate basketball

Dan Hunt
TEC STAFF

Basketball at Minges is right around the corner and practice is well under way. There won't be many familiar faces on the court this season. ECU Head Coach Jeff Lebo sat down and talked about the progress of the 2013-2014 roster.

Q: How has practice looked?

A: It's gone well. We've got a lot of new faces obviously, so the offseason has been slow with a lot of teaching. It's good to get back on the floor with the team.

Q: A lot of guys in the frontcourt have left the program this offseason for various reasons. Do you see your offense being guard-orientated?

A: You're going to see a lot of both from us. We lost close to 80 percent of our scoring and rebounding from last year, so it's going to be a work in progress trying to figure out who will fill the void in those areas.

Q: Other than Marshall Guilmette and Michael Zangari, who do you see filling in at forward?

A: I think Brandon Stith is going to see some time as a freshman [down low]. We've been impressed with him, his motor and his ability to rebound. We'll be relying on some upperclassmen in the backcourt like Akeem [Richmond], Paris [Roberts-Campbell] and Prince Williams to lead us. We lost two all-conference players in [Maurice] Kemp and Miguel [Paul]. They were our go-to guys, along with [Ty] Armstrong when we needed an inside go-to guy.

We've got questions as to who we're going to go to when we need a basket.

Q: Other than those three upperclassmen you mentioned, who do you see stepping into a leadership role this season?

A: I mean, those three guys are going to have to do it. We really need leadership from Paris. Anybody can be a kid, but we need a leader. We need that out of him. I really think he and Akeem can do it.

Q: Caleb White is listed as a guard on the school website. Is he a guy you could see playing the three-position?

A: Yes, Caleb is going to be a small-forward for us.

Q: The core of your team is so young. What's the biggest message you want to get across to those guys?

A: It's a new year. Last year is behind us. We've got a new team, and we've got a different team. All I want to do is get better every day. That's what we talk about every day with our guys. I don't want them to worry about anything other than, "What can I do to today make myself better and make the team better?"

Q: The home atmosphere at Minges really took a step forward last season. Do you envision it improving yearly?

A: I hope so. It has been pretty good since I've been here. Home-court can provide a great advantage. We got a little taste of what it can be like on a consistent basis at the end of the year during our CIT run. We think we've got a great environment to play in here. [Visiting players] don't enjoy coming here to play. Our students are right on top of the players, the building is loud, the ceiling is low and we play well at home. That's been a positive.

Injury bug doesn't hinder ECU

Ronnie Moore
TEC STAFF

The ECU offense is putting out points at a high rate this season, even with unfavorable circumstances going against them. Injuries have plagued the Pirates, but that hasn't stopped them this season.

The wide receiver position has gone from a place of endless depth to a cause for concern, but wide receivers coach Donnie Kirkpatrick contributes it to the system and the offensive game plan.

"This is an equal-opportunity offense. It's the passing version of the wishbone [offense]," said Kirkpatrick. "A lot of different guys get the opportunity to touch the ball."

Many college football programs would be devastated losing seven receivers since fall camp has started. The recruiting game is in Kirkpatrick's wheelhouse and the ECU coaching staff, specifically, has embraced hitting the recruiting trail with all they have.

"You have to be committed to [recruiting]," said Kirkpatrick. "You have to pick yourself up, get up and go grind out there."

Even with a depleted crew of receivers, quarterback Shane Carden has risen to fourth in the nation in passing yards with 2,325 through seven games this season. Meanwhile, Justin Hardy has amazed ECU with his recent performances and miraculous catches. Hardy ranks second in catches and 10th in division I with 765 yards, not to mention his success as a punt returner, among other things.

"He is doing it all: receiving, returning and he is blocking his tail off right now," said Kirkpatrick.

Injuries have forced players into larger roles for the Pirates, and as a result players have stepped up. DaQuan Barnes is a prime example of this fact. After sitting behind veteran starters, Barnes got his opportunity on Saturday and he made the most of it, rushing for 12 yards and finishing second on the team with 47 receiving yards.

College athletics are put into tough situations when players get hurt and are forced to sit out, but coaches understand that it's a part of the college dynamic.

"You just have to roll with it," said Offensive Coordinator Lincoln Riley. "This isn't the NFL; we can't go sign any free agents. We have who we have, and we have plenty of quality guys."

Vintavious Cooper and the running game have helped enhance the passing attack and create a more efficient passing approach. Now with a plethora of running backs in the stable for the Pirate offense, it will only help diversify the offensive game plan that Riley creates each week.

"You don't want to have weaknesses because if you only throw it, the defense can just sit back and really defend that," said Riley. "We have really worked hard to develop that [balance]."

And balance is exactly what the Pirates have achieved. ECU has had 18 players catch a pass this season, while 11 players have contributed to the running game in some form or facet.

"It makes it so much easier on me," said Carden. "It starts with the offensive line, them being physical and establishing the run game."

The whole process of getting athletes to ECU starts with Head Coach Ruffin McNeill. Recruiting is a skill and the communication between coach and family is an essential part of getting the depth and playmakers into Pirate uniforms.

"[Recruits] leave here and they feel like a family," said Kirkpatrick. "Ruffin [McNeill] is just phenomenal with parents and kids. They see his love and passion for [East Carolina]."

season. Rice has still been able to accumulate about 20 more shots than the Pirates and four more goals. The Rice Owls' season has been plagued by late game goals as opponents have tallied 15 second half and overtime goals. The pirates have allowed 10 goals in second half and overtime play.

This road series will be vital for the Pirates going into the conference tournament. With ECU, Southern Miss, and Rice all fighting for higher seeds in the tournament, Head Coach Rob Donnenthorn and the Pirates have realized the opportunity to obtain a higher seed for the tournament. After this weekend, the Pirates will close the regular season next week against Middle Tennessee State on Halloween.

ECU has had multiple contributors on the offensive side this season. Stephanie Seagrave and Skylar Poole are leading the way for the Pirates with three goals apiece. Lexi Miller, Kendall Frey, and Kelsey Reeves have also recorded two goals each, and many other team members follow with one goal.

Goalkeeper Sandra Baron has competed for the Pirates in every game in her first season as a Pirate. The transfer from Coastal Carolina has a team high 64 saves. Baron has a .780 save percentage and three shutouts this season.

Dwayne Harris

(2007-2010)

The former Pirate playmaker is creating a name for himself in the NFL this season. Not as a wide receiver though, but a return specialist. Harris, the sixth-round pick by the Dallas Cowboys, has already returned a kickoff for a touchdown this season.

During the contest vs. the Washington Redskins on Oct. 13, Harris scored on an 86-yard punt return and set up another Cowboy touchdown when he returned a kickoff 90 yards.

Harris has been rewarded with NFC Special Teams Player of the Week honors twice in his career, both coming this season. In week one he was awarded for his coverage skills and he won against the Redskins for his aforementioned touchdown performance.

In his last season at ECU, Harris caught 101 passes for more than a 1,000 yards and 10 touchdowns. Overall, Harris ranks first all-time at ECU in receiving yards and finished his career with 20 TD grabs.

Seth Maness

(2008-2011)

The former Pirate pitcher is stepping up to the big stage. Not only was it a big deal when Maness received accolades for the St. Louis Cardinals minor league team, but now he is taking his game to a whole new level.

That level is the World Series, the Major League Baseball championship series.

Maness, the only four-time Conference USA First-Team selection in league history, is now making an impact when he toes the rubber on the big stage.

One week removed from his 25th birthday, Maness may receive action as a relief pitcher for the Cardinals. Maness most recently saw game action when he pitched in the National League Championship series against the Dodgers. Maness made three appearances in the series. The Cardinals beat the Dodgers four games to one to advance.

Before playing the Dodgers, the Cardinals surpassed the Pirates (Pittsburg) in the divisional series. Maness pitched in two of the five games in that series.

In his rookie campaign, Maness went 5-2 with a 2.32 earned run average (ERA).

As an ECU pitcher, Maness accumulated a record of 38 wins and 11 losses while pitching over 400 innings as a Pirates. He also struck out 334 batters in his tenure on the Diamond Bucs roster.

ECU students talk about their favorite TV shows

Brooke Rowe
FOR THE EAST CAROLINIAN

CARSON MORRIS | THE EAST CAROLINIAN

Javier Pimentel
Sophomore
Business

Q: What is your favorite TV show?

A: "I really like 'The Walking Dead'. I like it because it is about zombies and it shows you a lot of human dynamics. The world is taken over by zombies and the people left have to make their own group, but they can't trust other people because they are all trying to survive. Sometimes when they meet someone new, they let them in the group and they kill them. The problem isn't the zombies, it's the people."

Q: Who is your favorite character?

A: "I like Rick a lot. He's the main cop, the main character of the whole show. I like him because he's a leader and he is always looking out for what is best and he is good at making moral decisions."

Q: What recently shocked you in the show?

A: "One girl stabbed herself, but nothing really happened; but it was the premier."

CARSON MORRIS | THE EAST CAROLINIAN

Graham Shuford
Freshman
Biology

Q: What is your favorite TV show?

A: "I like 'NCIS'. I love crime stuff... it interests me. The local police will find crimes that have to do with the Navy. I've always liked crime novels and things like that; we always watched it as a family. I'll call up my mom and talk about it. We watch it every week."

Q: Who is your favorite character?

A: "My favorite is Gibbs, the head person in charge of the team. He has a dry sense of humor and he kind of has a mysterious aspect to him. A lot of times when they find something important, he'll know and show up right when they find it."

Q: Who do you relate to the most?

A: "Gibbs. I see myself in him because he is not good with technology, and I'm the same."

CARSON MORRIS | THE EAST CAROLINIAN

Rachel Ferrell

Elementary Education

Q: What is your favorite TV show?

A: "Probably New Girl, it is just a fun show to watch and it's a comedy. There is a season showing right, I keep up with it every week if I catch it on TV, but I usually watch it on Hulu."

Q: Who is your favorite character?

A: "Jess, she is quirky and an elementary teacher too."

Q: Who do you relate to the most?

A: "Still Jess, I relate to her personality because she is different than any other character I've seen. She is very dynamic."

CARSON MORRIS | THE EAST CAROLINIAN

Tynita Butts

Sociology

Q: What is your favorite TV show?

A: "I really like 'Supernatural' because it hits the imaginative part of me. I am a really spiritual person and it's really fun and interesting to see how far they take the stories of religion and the history of it. And not to mention, they're hot. They find out that their life is a story in a book and they keep trying to change their life and to get the author to rewrite their ending so they would stay alive."

Q: Who is your favorite character?

A: "Dean is my favorite. He's the hottest one, and he's a better actor. But Sam is more interesting because he dies a lot and has demon blood in him and super powers, but they're always keeping secrets from each other, and it bothers me."

Q: What was a really shocking event?

A: "The first episode of season nine was the most shocking. Dean and Sam found out that their family has a history of a secret society for years and their grandpa was a 'man of letters' and he came back in time by accident to find his son, but found his grandchildren instead. That's how they found the secret society that keeps the worlds separated."

Q: Who do you relate to the most?

A: "I relate to Dean because I see the way he wants to be normal. He gave up being normal to save the people he loved. I'm more empathetic towards him. I can relate to him because he tries to be a hardass, but is really a softie."

CARSON MORRIS | THE EAST CAROLINIAN

Steven Locklear
Senior
Finance

Q: What is your favorite TV show?

A: "'Sons of Anarchy' because it's just different from most traditional shows. It's a badass show. I'm not big for drama but there is a lot of excitement in the show. It's about a motorcycle gang that's different among others... they really protect the town."

Q: Who is your favorite character?

A: "I like Jax, the main guy, but his mom Gemma is basically what holds the whole gang together. She is the emotional support for them all and without her, the whole gang would fall apart, and she has been there since the beginning. I think she is what keeps the whole show together."

Q: Who do you relate to the most?

A: "I'm most like Jax. He is not the traditional gang member; he thinks outside the box and he isn't only about fighting. He thinks like a businessman and is a very futuristic person, like I am, always trying to figure out how things are going to turn out."

Q: What shocked you recently?

A: "In the second season, Gemma gets raped by a bunch of rival gangs and since she is the glue holding them together, the whole gang fell apart and relationships were destroyed."

Can't miss fall television hits

Caroline West

FOR THE EAST CAROLINIAN

Grab a blanket and curl up on your sofa, because CBS and NBC have the perfect shows to entertain you on these cool, fall nights. This fall, two new shows are receiving great ratings, proving that there is still much to love on network television.

The Blacklist

Rated as the number four most popular show on television by TV Guide Network, "The Blacklist" is drawing in audiences with its high drama and intense story line.

With over 16 million viewers through its first three weeks, "The Blacklist" is NBC's top new drama, according to Nielson online.

"The Blacklist' revives the trusted ticking bomb formula, with nail biting (almost unbelievable) action and interesting plot twists," writes The Copenhagen Post. "Indeed, it is a credit to the series creator Jon Bokenkamp that he is able to breathe new life into familiar plots and still manages to make them enjoyable."

The season begins with Raymond Reddington (actor James Spader), a fugitive and former FBI agent, mysteriously turning himself in one day. Running from the Feds for decades, he comes with the surprising agreement that he will help the FBI catch a terrorist, who was long believed to be dead, named Ranko Zamani.

"You want him. I want him. So let's say our interests are aligned," said Reddington.

He doesn't, however, come with answers easily; he has one demand for the FBI. He will only speak with newbie-agent Elizabeth Keen (actress Megan Boone).

In addition to finding Zamani, Reddington also promises to aid the agency in capturing a "blacklist" of the world's worst criminals. Reddington informs the FBI that he knows of criminal masterminds the Feds don't even have on its radar.

"Like many new series, "The Blacklist" has its mysteries to uncover," writes David Griffin for Screen Rant.

The Crazy Ones

"Nineties babies, rejoice," writes Emily Kingman for the Badger Herald. "'The Crazy Ones' has made it possible for Buffy the vampire slayer (Sarah Michelle Gellar) to call Mrs. Doubtfire (Robin Williams) her father."

Receiving high perks with its humor and great cast, "The Crazy Ones" steals the No. 1 spot in ratings for best new comedy, according to Entertainment Weekly.

"The Crazy Ones" stars Robin Williams as Simon Roberts, the owner of Robert and Roberts Advertising Agency. Roberts is an enthusiastic, eccentric and funny character who juggles between being a father and a widely known advertising executive.

Sarah Michelle Gellar plays Sydney, his business partner and daughter, a Type-A personality rarely ever approving of her father's youthful behavior.

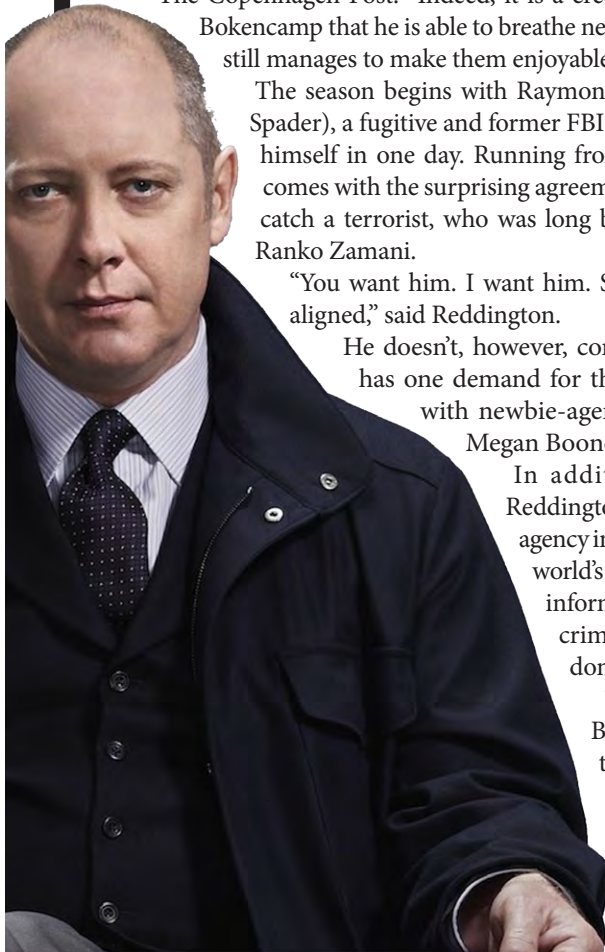

"The relationship dynamic and comedic banter between the two definitely bring the show to life," said Meaghan Ellis for the Web/Pro/News Life.

The pilot episode featured the advertising group stressing to impress their major client, McDonald. Hoping not to lose their business, Robert's promises to deliver a pop star to headline the brand's new ad campaign.

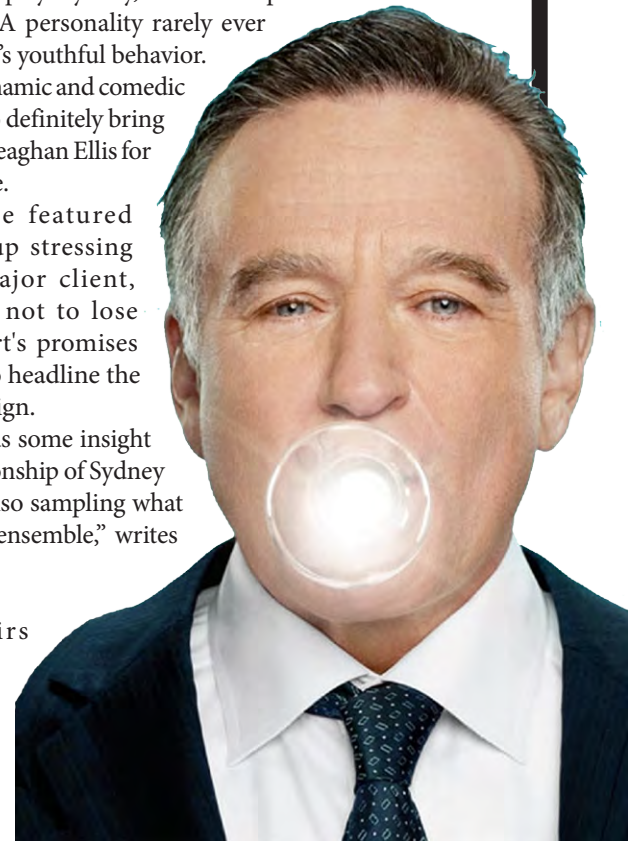

"The episode gives us some insight into the working relationship of Sydney and her father, while also sampling what could be a workplace ensemble," writes Kingman.

The Blacklist airs Mondays 10/9 c

The Crazy Ones airs Thursday 9/8 c

'The Walking Dead'

Season 4 introduced new characters and horrors

Jessica Gribbon
TEC STAFF

"The Walking Dead" returned Oct. 13, and fans everywhere couldn't be happier. The show is back for its fourth season and remains one of the most watched dramas in basic cable history.

The show is based on the comic book series written by Robert Kirkman and was such a success that they turned it into a hit TV show, which was such an incredible decision, based on its ratings.

For many teens and young adults, sci-fi TV shows are becoming increasingly popular. Sierra Buck, a sophomore criminal justice major, is a loyal viewer like many others.

"I'm glad it turned into a hit TV show," said Buck. "I've always liked zombie movies, but this has more depth and an actual storyline that connects you to the characters."

"The Walking Dead's" fan base has grown as each season unravels, making the use of zombies in both movies and TV more common.

AMC Online posted a summary of the newly anticipated season.

"We see Rick and the group of survivors fostering a thriving community in the safe haven of the prison. Sadly, in this brutal world, happiness is short-lived and walkers and outside threats are no match for danger brewing inside the fences."

Like any hit show, the actors and their roles can either make or break the story. The cast includes: Andrew Lincoln, Norman Reedus, Steven Yeun, Lauren Cohan, Chandler Riggs, Scott Wilson, Melissa McBride, David Morrissey, Emily Kinney, Danai Gurira, Chad Coleman and Sonequa Martin-Green.

The series is produced by Scott M. Gimple, Robert Kirkman, Gale Anne Hurd, David Alpert, Tom Luse and Greg Nicotero.

After its initial premiere on Oct. 13th, the Huffington Post reported,

"The Walking Dead' Season 4 premiere ratings are record-breaking. More than 16 million viewers tuned in to see the return of AMC's zombie drama."

This season will continue to draw in huge ratings since the show's enemy is no longer a worldwide epidemic or fear, but rather a sickness that kills you in less than 24 hours or leaves you craving human flesh. The season's theme will be about retaining humanity.

"I'm looking forward to seeing how else the disease is being spread besides just being bitten," said Buck. "Like whether it's becoming airborne or transmitted through the animals they're eating."

This question is one that many viewers must be asking themselves as well. Thoughts like these are popular for viewers who watch TV shows that leave people hanging; its part of the intrigue.

The Washington Post reported on the show's romantic relationships after the first episode aired: "With a group set to venture out for the raid, the show hits a softer side with three different couples contemplating the day's adventure for supplies."

The Washington Post also reported newcomers to watch and even to mourn. In the first episode, Bob causes a scene in the store that attracts the walkers' attention. He was contemplating whether or not he was going to steal alcohol when he makes his decision and sets the bottle back down, the entire shelving unit collapses. Glass shattered everywhere, trapping his foot. Although he was trapped as the walkers approached, Bob survives. Zach was not so lucky.

The next two episodes set to air will be "Isolation" on Oct. 27 and "Indifference" on Nov. 3. The Walking Dead airs Sunday nights at 9 p.m. on AMC.

THE SCOOP

Love conquers the channels

TV shows receives relationship superlatives

Jessica Richmond
TEC STAFF

Television has always been a breeding ground of love and loss. Viewers fling themselves into a relationship that exists solely in the dimensions of their television set, with such fervor it almost brings them to life.

The writers, actors and actresses bring characters to life with such exquisite detail that viewers can rally behind them, see themselves in them or hope to love as strongly as they do.

There have been the great couples that have enthralled generations, like the on-again-off-again relationship of Ross and Rachel ("Friends"), or the realistic love story of Jim and Pam ("The Office"). But love has blossomed in our current age of TV as well.

These are the couples, ranked by yours truly, that have made this past year of television worthy of our love.

The Almost Gay Couples

Dean and Castiel, "Supernatural"
Howard and Raj, "The Big Bang Theory"
Derek and Stiles, "Teen Wolf"

Viewers of "Supernatural" were first introduced to Castiel in season 4 of The CW phenomenon, and since then the palpable sexual tension between the angel and Dean has been the cornerstone of many fans' viewing. Recently in the show, the writers have called even more attention to the possibility of a romance between the two in a way that seems to be taunting the teen fanbase to find their homoerotic Easter eggs. Their brother-like relationship most likely won't turn romantic on screen, but that won't stop the fanfiction from being written.

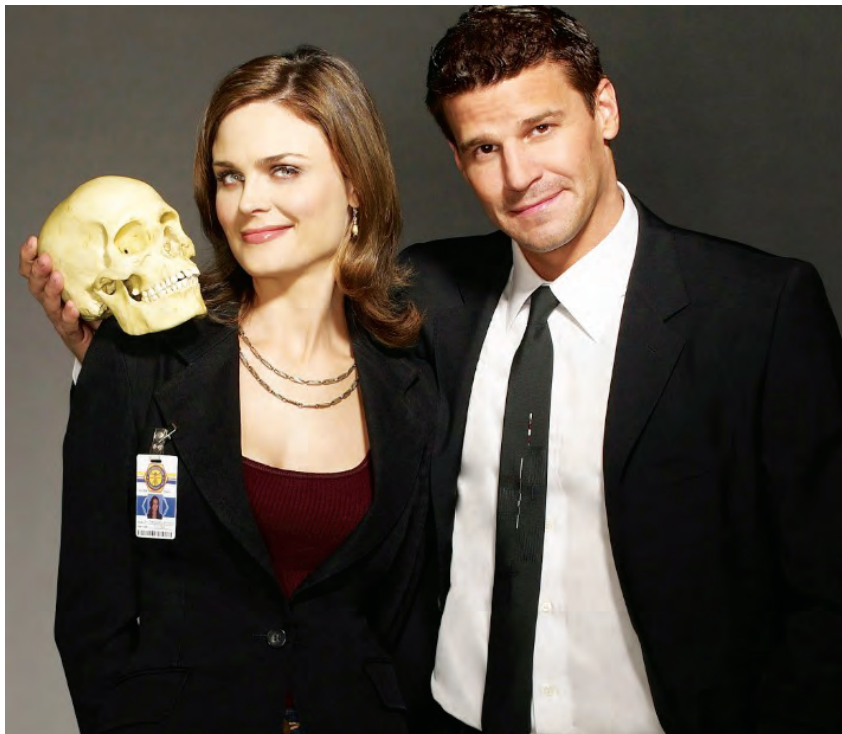

The Couple You Want To Be When You Get Married

Phil and Claire, "Modern Family"
Marshall and Lily, "How I Met Your Mother"
Hodgins and Angela, "Bones"

Marriage has been showcased on television in a hundred different ways, but the greatest couples are the ones that can go through the hard times and still manage to laugh the way they used to. No couple epitomizes being able to laugh at each other more than Phil and Claire. Their opposites-attract relationship lends itself to countless embarrassments, but in the end their love is what shines through.

Phil and Claire Dunphy make marital monotony seem like a circus of laughs in ABC's Modern Family. WEB PHOTO

Booth and Bones are introduced in season three as finally being engaged.

The Couples That Finally Got Together After All These Years

Booth and Bones, "Bones"
 Damon and Elena, "The Vampire Diaries"
 Castle and Beckett, "Castle"

The crime-fighting couple has been slated to become a couple from episode one. As season 7 began, they finally did. After eight years on the show, the man of faith and woman of silence have worked out their mutual attraction, had a baby, moved in together, became engaged and may or may not be getting married (who knows what this season will hold). The series has provided an excellent longing for fans that has finally come to fruition.

Best Couple Currently On TV

Nick and Jess, "New Girl"
 Elena and Damon, "The Vampire Diaries"
 Leslie and Ben, "Parks and Recreation"

Zoey Deschanel's quirky show "New Girl" has brought to life one of the greatest new couples on television. Nick and Jess had minor bouts of sexual tension in the first two seasons of the show that ultimately imploded and exploded simultaneously as Nick kissed his roommate he had fallen for. The relationship that has come out of this kiss has been one of the funniest and most heartwarming loves on television in a very long time.

Most Tragic Love Story

Finn and Rachel, "Glee"
 Matthew Crawley and Lady Mary, "Downton Abbey"
 Snow White and Prince Charming, "Once Upon A Time"

Finn and Rachel began as a high school romance between the quarterback and the nerdy choir girl, but eventually became a full blown dramatic circus. The tragic ending of their tale came this season when the actor who played Finn, Cory Monteith, succumbed to addiction and passed away. Finn, in turn, was also killed off of the show and in a heartbreaking episode called, "The Quarterback," we found that Rachel always believed they would end up together. Ryan Murphy recently announced that season 6 would be the last season of "Glee", and that he originally had Rachel and Finn at the center of the ending.

Couples That Need To Get Back Together

Callie and Arizona, "Grey's Anatomy"
 Zoe and Wade, "Hart of Dixie"
 Cece and Schmidt, "New Girl"

A rule of television writing is that when a couple becomes too happy, you have to destroy them. The problem with this theory, however, is that Callie and Arizona were not "too" happy. Arizona just survived a plane crash and was coping with a prosthetic limb when she decided that cheating would be the appropriate reaction. Now the separated spouses are attempting to put as little impact on their daughter as possible. With all of the strife in the lives of the doctors in "Grey's Anatomy," these women need to get their relationships, and lives, together.

Best Almost-Romantic Relationship

Jamie and Brienne, "Game of Thrones"
 Sheldon and Amy, "The Big Bang Theory"
 Garcia and Morgan, "Criminal Minds"

Nothing is out of the realm of possibility when it comes to "Game of Thrones" so a female knight and the king's uncle wandering through Westeros together is nothing out of the ordinary. Their playful banter and mutual chivalry for one another is, however, something that shone a little light on an otherwise rather dark series. Hopefully, George R.R. Martin will allow followers of his world a little more time with them before he kills them off, like he does with everyone else we hold dear to our hearts.

'American Horror Story' returns with a spell binding storyline

Jessica Gribbon
TEC STAFF

Within minutes of the premiere of the latest season of "American Horror Story: Coven," audiences everywhere were captivated.

Every season, AHS changes its plot making each season completely separate to each other. This allows new viewers to watch a season without any background knowledge of the show, which many viewers enjoy.

The main cast generally stays the same, but new actors and actresses are added.

According to FX online, "American Horror Story: Coven tells the secret history of witches and witchcraft in America. Over three hundred years have passed since the turbulent days of Salem and those who managed to escape are now facing extinction. Mysterious attacks have been escalating against their kind and young girls are being sent away to a special school in New Orleans to learn how to protect themselves."

The show, according to many online sources, is set to become one of the most watched FX television shows in the network's history.

"FX's American Horror Story: Coven launched...to the anthology franchise's biggest audience ever. The debut was seen by 5.5 million viewers, up 44 percent from last year's American Horror Story: Asylum. The episode also delivered a 3.0 rating among adults 18-49 — up roughly 90 percent from last fall," wrote Entertainment Weekly.

As the premiere opened, viewers were transported in time back to New Orleans in 1834. Kathy Bates, a new member of the cast this season, plays Madame LaLaurie. She hosts a dinner party filled with eligible bachelors for her daughters.

Later in the evening, she is informed that one of her daughters was engaging in a physical relationship with one their slaves.

Though her daughter initiated the relationship, she insists that he assaulted her. Outraged, she dragged the slave into her attic where she shackles him and places the head of a bull over his own since he had been acting like an animal.

Flash forward to present day and Zoe Benson (Taissa Farmiga) is sneaking home with her boyfriend for some alone time. As things get physical, her boyfriend begins to bleed profusely from the nose, ears, mouth, eyes etc. and eventually dies of a brain aneurism. Distraught and confused, Zoe is informed by her mother that she carries a gene that has been passed down for generations, she is a witch. Her mother sends her to a boarding school where she meets more women her age with the same powers.

Upon her arrival at Miss Robichaux's School for Exceptional Young Ladies, Zoe meets her fellow schoolmates: Madison Montgomery (Emma Roberts), a Hollywood star who is attempting to clean up her act, Queenie (Gabourey Sidibe), who can inflict pain on other people by using her own body and Nan (Jamie Brewer), a clairvoyant.

That night, the two attend a local frat party where Madison is drugged and gang raped. The perpetrators flee the scene, but not before Madison overturns the bus killing all but two of the riders.

Meanwhile, Fiona (Jessica Lange) is searching for any possible drug to keep her youth. When she is denied the drug she is in need of, she literally sucks the youth out of its creator and decides to move back to the boarding school to be with her daughter, Cordelia (Sarah Paulson) where she assists her in the teachings of the students, while still attending to her own agenda.

If you haven't seen the show that is causing young audiences to buzz with excitement, beware, "American Horror Story: Coven," which airs Wednesday nights at 10 on FX, is putting a spell on viewers nationwide.
