Local high school students will soon trade old dusty textbooks for high ropes courses, service projects and team building activities. They will spend six days at a residential camp as part of ECU's Shelton Leadership Challenge.

"The Shelton Leadership Challenge at ECU is a six-day residential experience to help students expand their knowledge of what it takes and the skills needed to be a leader," said Mande Lancaster, director of survey research and leadership initiatives at the ECU Office of Innovation and Economic Development. "Students will participate in activities that will help them have a greater understanding for personal leadership assessment and interpersonal dynamics; role of values and ethics in leadership; leadership traits and approaches; teambuilding and empowering

Memorial Day fossil festival celebrated

Not all Memorial Day observances were melancholy and bittersweet occasions; the Aurora Fossil Festival of Aurora, N.C., near Washington was one such event.

Excitement filled the streets of Little Washington as families partook in the offerings of the annual festival. Vendors and tailgaters offered fair-style foods at the festival while children vigorously dug through newly excavated earth for fossils, which could be identified by on-site scientists.

In past years, fossils have been found dating as far back as 14,000 years ago, all of which can be displayed in the Aurora Fossil Museum. The museum also features a gift shop where shark teeth found in the area are among the most popular purchases.

The Mikele Buck Band, one of the East Coast's most sought-after bands, performed Friday night. They delivered a great opening to the festival and showcased their multiple

Woman hits Hardee's wall

Local senior citizen mistakingly accelerates into building

An 84-year-old Greenville woman took the term, "drive-thru" too literally on Tuesday.

According to the Greenville Police Department Information Officer Kristen Hunter, at the Hardee's located at 1300 N. Memorial Dr. just before 9 a.m., the woman accidentally accelerated with the intent of braking and hit the side of the building head-on.

She came away uninjured, all employees were fine as well, and there were no customers inside the Hardee's at the time.

There is also minimal damage to her Lincoln Towncar, although she put a large crack in the side of the building's wall through the Hardee's star logo, but there is no structural damage.

The woman was issued a verbal warning from the police.

The Hardee's has the crack boarded over for the time being until repairs begin, but in the mean time, managers and employees will hope for less eventful days at the office.

AMERICAN RED CROSS EASTERN NC REGION

Last April, parts of eastern North Carolina were left ravaged by violent tornados. The East Carolina chapter of the American Red Cross did its part to make the relief effort as smooth as possible.

Local chapter writes $10,000 check for NC tornado relief

The Red Cross Club at East Carolina University has presented the local chapter of the American Red Cross with a check worth $10,000 following the tornadoes that struck eastern North Carolina in late April.

“We saw how completely lost they were and how much help was needed,” said club president Taylor Waters. “And as we were volunteering time, we realized how much help was needed.”

The check was presented to Summer Woodard, the Regional Chief Development Officer for the Pitt County chapter of the Red Cross on May 1. Waters says that these funds were not just those that the club had in the bank, but that they also came from people in the community.

“We had some money that was in the account from fundraisers and events,” she said, adding that the members of the club also stepped up, receiving funds from their personal fundraisers, family and friends.

Woodard says the funds will be used to support the families who were impacted by the storms.

“The Red Cross will need to step up and give additional funding to the families directly and also to the community partners that will help rebuild,” says Woodard. “We don’t just treat them in the interim; we make sure that over the next year or two that everything will be taken care of.”

Woodard says that the Red Cross has already given out assistance to the families with items that they immediately needed. Some of this immediate assistance includes food, clothing and rent for those who are trying new place to live or are waiting for their homes to be repaired.

The ECU Red Cross Club is not the only organization that has stepped up and contributed to the relief efforts.

“The entire community has stepped up to support these efforts,” said Woodard, who added that the Red Cross has received donations from corporations that have made large contributions and also individuals who have given much smaller amounts.

While donations help, Woodard also says that there are other ways you can contribute to the relief efforts.

“We will be soliciting volunteers in the next three to six months for the long term recovery efforts,” she said. “We are going to need people out there driving nails and roofs and putting up sheet rock and helping these families recover.”

Volunteering is something that Waters recommends for ECU’s students and organizations.

“The support of the students of ECU and the Red Cross club is so inspiring to those that are out doing the work every day,” she said. “To have youth step up and think of others and support the efforts of the Red Cross and the community shows our volunteers that are out there doing the work that there is a future for the Red Cross.”

To volunteer, visit the Red Cross at redcross.org/pitt and click on the “Get Involved” button. Then fill out the volunteer application so that the volunteer information is in the system.

Donations can be mailed to 312 E. 10th St. or delivered in person. Donations can also be made online at redcross.org or by calling the Pitt County chapter at 252-355-3800.

others; civic and social responsibility; and goal setting,” said Lancaster.

Lancaster has been leading the challenge for four years now.

“What I love about this program is that all involved in the program, including students, staff and administrative staff, grow each time they participate. The staff shares real world experiences with the students but are challenged in their interactions throughout the week. All involved push past their individual comfort zones and grow as a result. The transformation is amazing.”

Lancaster said the Shelton Leadership Challenge originally came to N.C. State more than a decade ago and has since expanded to other campuses including East Carolina. The General Hugh Shelton Leadership Center is headquartered at N.C. State and was founded in 2002. Michael Carter, the assistant director of the Shelton Leadership Challenge at ECU, lauded the program and recalled his experience as a former participant.

“I have been a part of this program for six years,” said Carter. “To me, this program is a great way for the students that participate to develop themselves as everyday leaders. Some students have leadership positions or take advantage of leadership opportunities throughout high school, and some do not.

“What is great about this program is that either of these types of students can succeed in this program, and gain a lot from this program.” Carter continued, “Whether they gain self-awareness of their leadership skills, develop new leadership skills, learn to network, or just gain a new perspective students who participate will take a lot from this program.”

This year’s program will be held June 22-27. Students can register for this program until June 2. The Shelton Leadership Challenge at ECU seeks youth in grades 9-12 who have a 3.0 grade point average or higher. The cost to attend the program is $600 for the week.

PIRATE RANTS

Wasn't it just winter two weeks ago?

Just because it's hot outside doesn't mean you should walk around shirtless.

The Internet works so much better without thousands of students here.

So downtown Greenville is actually uptown... Why did I take so long for me to realize this?

Taking photos of flowers does not make you a professional photographer.

How about "tree-fitty"?

They go around chopping down trees for tables when they have perfectly good tummies to eat on.

What did the five fingers say to the face?

Happy Belated Birthday Biggie Smalls.

I consult Urban Dictionary on far too regular a basis to ever be a cool kid.

What am I supposed to watch now all my shows have ended? I can't be expected to actually interact with humans... right?

Anyone else still utterly depressed after that OUAT finale? Guess it's just me and my Häagen-Dazs.

So I accidentally napped at the pool and my towel moved while I was asleep. I'm half lobster, half Casper. #sothathappened Excuse me, but can you just not huff about my maxing out my caloric intake behind me in line at Starbucks?

Nothing better than opening your window to enjoy the summer smells and then hear gun shots in the distance. #rollemup

I'm not one to brag, but yeah, I finished all of Breaking Bad in one insane weekend. Bow down b**.

I didn't know that men's hoops recently won their first C-USA game but that's what TEC said on their front page on 5/21/14. LOL!

So, someone on Facebook posts that they broke their foot and 8 of their friends like it. That person might want to question their friendship with those 8 people.

If you spent $11K on an engagement ring, you have more money than you have common sense.

11K for an engagement ring... Bro the ring is only a symbol.

I love professors who bring you breakfast before class. It's like a thank you for the students who actually care about class.

The fact that my rants about my rants not being published is really annoying. :)

Holy crap! I just saw a skater land a trick on ecu's campus!! This...is a historical moment everyone.

Our view

Understanding Memorial Day

The perception of how Memorial Day should be celebrated seems to have changed over the last decade or so.

To be clear, this is not another article telling you to not enjoy a day off from work by enjoying cookouts and relaxing, but we do encourage allotting some time for the holiday's true purpose: keeping our fallen soldiers and active military in our thoughts.

Whether you physically left your home and attended a memorial service or stayed on your coach and simply watched a portion of the annual service at Arlington National Cemetery on TV is not important. Just as long as, for at least a moment, you recognize those that protect many of the freedoms we may take for granted each day. If you do this then the holiday has served its purpose.

We, as an editorial staff, believe that it's okay to enjoy Memorial Day with your friends and families, just as long as the true meaning of having that day off isn't lost. So from all of us here at The East Carolinian, thank you to all of those who have served or plan to contribute in the military in the future.

Republicans fail at teacher pay

Kathleen Daniels
TEC STAFF

I am a product of public education, attending public schools my entire education from preschool to today. I would not be here without the dedication and instruction of my teachers beyond the classroom; teachers have always been an important part of my life, running extra-curricular activities like tennis and Model UN. I will never forget the long nights I spent in Mrs. McClung's classroom building robots. I assume many of you have experienced our passionate educators in public schools.

If our governor shared any of the same experiences in public schools, he and his Republican colleagues show their appreciation in a very odd way. During the 2013 legislative session of the NCGA, the Republican Party's supermajority passed a budget that hurt teachers. It failed to give a much needed raise to our state's hardworking and dedicated teachers, while giving a $300 million dollar tax to the wealthy and corporations. North Carolina's teachers have seen only one 1.2 percent rise since 2009, while inflation has increased by 10.5 percent in the same time period.

The average salary for teachers in North Carolina is $45,947 according to the National Center for Education Statistics. This puts our state at 46th in the nation, ahead of only Oklahoma, Mississippi and South Dakota. North Carolina teachers can leave our state, move north, south, east or west, and find a better salary. And that's exactly what they did. Wake County Schools alone has reported that over 600 teachers resigned between July 2013 and April 2014. Almost all cited financial reasons. North Carolina has become a laughing stock in the country, as a state that claims to support education, but fails to support their teachers.

So how have Governor Pat McCrory and Republicans chosen to fix our dismal teacher pay? By renegeing on their budget. The 2014 legislative session should be a time to make small adjustments to the budget, but nothing near what Republicans have proposed. McCrory has proposed a $265 million addition to our already strained state budget to give a 2 percent raise to teachers. They also proposed a 7 percent raise to teachers in their first seven years and a new system of pay based on experience, credentials, and performance. Educators and Democrats argue that this is too little, too late.

And I have to agree. McCrory and his Republican colleagues cannot fix the education system in our state with a small raise for teachers and the hope of more to come. They also cannot win elections this way. They did devastating damage to our teachers in 2013 and now faced with tough elections in 2014, they are attempting to erase it all. However, the public will not forget. We will not forget the long nights in a teacher's classroom and the pizza they fed you on late nights studying. And we will not forget the damage Republicans did to our state. They have made us a laughing stock and their sudden change in rhetoric can only further humiliate us.

The importance of liberal arts

William Franklin
TEC STAFF

I often come across articles that are dismissive of a liberal arts education—they say that there is no money to be made in it, the jobs just aren't there like they were, and practically what do they accomplish? But I can't help but think every time that I read one of these articles how one sided they are—and how they look at education from just one perspective. I can't help but think when they make their arguments how much they could benefit from a liberal arts education and the additional perspective that it adds.

The argument of a college education is often gaining skills that are necessary to contribute to the job market. But that is such a simplistic view of what college is and I can't help but feel sorry for those who believe that. I have often found, myself included, that those who pursue liberal arts in any capacity, are better at being able to see the whole of things rather than the minor bits and pieces.

David Foster Wallace, one the most important writers of the last twenty years and author of Infinite Jest, said that the value of a liberal arts education, "it isn't really about the capacity to think, but rather about the choice of what to think about." And this holds true—the liberal arts provides its students with a way of being able to view and think about things that doesn't always occur in other fields.

I wish that universities including ECU would emphasize liberal arts more than they do. It provides students with a way of being more human and allows them to connect with other people. It has benefits to everyone—with doctors it could result in better bedside manner, engineers may have a better understanding of who their projects affect and why, or bankers may better understand

"It isn't really about the capacity to think, but rather about the choice of what to think about."

-David Foster Wallace

the circumstances that they loan money to.

I have found that in my own education often times I benefit most from the classes that let me explore what it is to be human—classes that let me understand people better and the circumstance that surround me. That isn't to say that liberal arts classes are more important than other classes, but they have been downgraded and less emphasized. I just want to see them emphasized as part of a well-rounded education not as a series of classes one has to pass to get their own major.

Residents of the Greenville area are invited to come together this Sunday for an evening full of music, family, and community.

The band TrainWreck prepares to jam out at the 41st annual Sunday In The Park, a classic

"TrainWreck actually started out as a three-piece acoustic act and slowly evolved more and more into a bigger, more full-time band," said Adrian Watts, lead guitarist in TrainWreck. "We started in Greenville as my roommate at the time and I were just looking for another gig to do."

Band members of TrainWreck include Adrian Watts who plays the acoustic guitar, ECU graduate Thomas Sisson who plays the saxophone and keyboards, Barney Branch who

Poolside films presented

Destiny Edwards
TEC STAFF

For many people, summer is the time to relax, hang out with friends and spend days lying by the pool. Starting next week, the Student Activities Board will bring back Aqua Theatre, which will give students the chance to do all those things on campus while watching a movie.

"We get the opportunity to show a film poolside for students," said SAB Films Chair Jasmine Smith. "Students get to enjoy a film on a cool summer evening while lounging in the outside pool at the Student Rec Center, weather permitting, of course." Smith said the films committee wanted movies that people would find entertaining.

"For summer, we chose to bring back films that we thought students would enjoy and that we thought were fun," said Smith.

This year's films will be "Grown Ups 2," "Monsters University," "We're the Millers" and "Easy A."

"Grown Ups 2" will be shown on June 5. The 2013 comedy follows a group of childhood friends and their various familial conflicts—one character's wife wants to have a baby, another disagrees on how to raise kids, another character feels unappreciated by his wife and the final protagonist finds out he has a 17-year-old son. Adam Sandler, Kevin James, Chris Rock and David Spade are some of the stars in the movie.

June 18 brings "Monsters University," the prequel to Pixar's "Monsters, Inc." It centers on Mike and Sulley in college. Throughout the film, they behave like typical students: Mike studies hard while Sulley coasts through classes. They also join a fraternity and start their path to becoming the friends they are in the first movie.

The film series continues with "We're the Millers" on July 1. The movie stars Jason Sudeikis, Jennifer Aniston, Emma Roberts and Will

Metalsmithing classes taught

Amanda Adkins
TEC STAFF

Creating unique jewelry is what participants will accomplish when they take the Metalsmithing Basics class. Metalsmithing is works of art made out of various metals.

"New students will learn the basics such as sawing, filing, soldering and riveting. Many students continue to take this same class over and over again," said Cathy Hardison, supervisor for the Pitt County Arts Council at Emerge.

Joanne Lang, who has attended many workshops in the United States and Italy, will teach the summer classes.

"Joanne will work one-on-one with students in a class setting and teaching additional skills such as enameling, etching, alternative materials and stone setting," said Hardison.

First time students will make a bracelet that involves all the basic methods they will learn. Participants who continue to take the class will refine their basic skills and learn more advanced techniques. Those enrolled in any metals classes are allowed to get extra practice in the metals studio on Wednesday from 6-8:30 p.m.

"Though basic techniques are learned, it is a project that allows them to bring their own style and creativity so there is not one project that looks the same," said Hardison.

"After the initial project, most students have an idea of what they would like to learn, so they then learn the new techniques to help them achieve their project goals."

According to Hardison, she has recently seen one of the students building a small airplane out of soda cans. Some students are also using resin and incorporating it into jewelry.

Projects can be brought home so that students can continue to get filing done and do any work that can be done without the tools from the classroom.

"There are many techniques within techniques that students will learn," said Hardison. "Together these students have developed a community that fosters friendship and personal growth in the subject of metals."

The class typically meets on Tuesdays or Thursdays at 6-8:30 p.m. It is a six-week course that will continue to be offered at the end of each six-week session. There are limited spots available for each class, but if the classes fill up quickly, then another class will be created. The next class is on June 3rd.

The cost is $115 for members and $155 for non-members, but ECU students get discounts on the memberships for metals classes.

"We played for about 5,000 people for the Fourth of July celebration last year at Town Commons. We headlined the Seafood Festival in Morehead City and that was about 8,000 people," said Watts.

Ron Harris, Sunday In The Park Coordinator, brought in TrainWreck to perform at this year's inaugural Sunday In The Park event. Steward Anderson retired after 40 years of coordinating Sunday In The Park, making this year Harris' first.

"We start our planning for Sunday In The Park the week after it is done in August," said Harris. "We start looking for either bands to bring back or either new bands and new talent out there."

Harris is confident that this year's Sunday In The Park will be bigger and better than ever.

Some of the bands musical influences include Earth, Wind and Fire, Led Zeppelin, John Coltrane, Run DMC, Tupac, Tower of Power, Michael McDonald and Will Smith.

"We're going to take a little bit of K.C. and the Sunshine Band and mix it with some Bruno Mars, Temptations and mix it with a little bit of rock and country and see how it pops out," said Watts.

Last Saturday was lead singer, Eric Monterio's, first time performing following the recent passing of his mother. This Sunday's event will be his second time performing and a great performance from him can still be expected.

"TrainWreck is a combination of some of the most talented musicians coming together to make the best party band around," said Watts. "We take you on a musical journey from the beginning to the end. It is always an adventure."

The journey is worthwhile, especially if it is your birthday. This year, Watts' falls on the same day as the band's Sunday In The Park performance. The fun does not stop there because after their performance, TrainWreck has plans to make sure the night ends perfectly.

"We are going to go to Tiebreakers and have a good time," said Watts.

Other artists who will rock the Greenville Amphitheatre during this year's Sunday In The Park summer concert series include the Tar River Community Band, Pitt Community College Symphony Orchestra, the steel band Panyelo, Jupiter Jones, Nu-Blu who had a high rating on the Billboard bluegrass charts this year and a local favorite, Rebekah Todd and the Odyssey.

The Sunday In The Park summer concert series is a free community event held every Sunday this summer from June 1 to Aug. 17 lasting from 7-8:30 p.m.

Playhouse schedule released

Destiny Edwards
TEC STAFF

The School of Theatre and Dance recently announced the ECU/Loessin Playhouse schedule for next season. Students will perform in a variety of works ranging from Shakespeare and classic Broadway musicals to contemporary plays and dance recitals.

Playhouse Managing Director, Jeffery Woodruff, said that the upcoming season was finalized by January and that this was a typical year.

"There is input from a variety of sources, but the school's director makes the final decision," said Woodruff.

The 2014-2015 season starts in October with Tennessee Williams's iconic "A Streetcar Named Desire." The Pulitzer Prize-winning play follows Blanche DuBois, her sister Stella and her brother-in-law Stanley. Blanche shows up at her sister's New Orleans apartment after losing the family plantation in Mississippi. While in New Orleans, Blanche's past catches up with her and upsets the lives of Stella and Stanley. Gregory Funaro will direct the production.

"Kiss Me Kate," winner of the first Tony Award for Best Musical, will be performed in November. It is an example of a play-within-a-play, centering on the conflict between a former couple that are portraying a husband and wife onstage during a performance of Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew." John Shearin, director of the School of Theatre Dance, will be at the helm.

The School of Theatre and Dance's annual dance concert "Dance 2015" opens at the end of January. A wide range of works will be performed, some of which are original pieces. According to the school, ballet, jazz, tap and contemporary styles of dance will be incorporated into the show.

In February, the Playhouse will stage Tom Stoppard's 1993 comedy "Arcadia." Set in England, the story is about the inhabitants of a country house. Both houses are in the 1800s and the modern day. The two sets of characters' lives intertwine with the contemporary characters researching and making discoveries about the past. Robert Caprio will direct it.

"The Tragedy of Coriolanus" will cap off the season. The play premieres in April and will also be directed by Shearin. A political piece, the protagonist rarely uses extended

X-Men movie tops billboard

Amanda Adkins
TEC STAFF

"X-Men Days of Future Past" starring Hugh Jackman, Jennifer Lawrence, Halle Berry and other well known actors hit theaters on May 23.

The movie begins by showing all of the bodies of mutants that have been killed by the government. Not only were the mutants murdered, but also the humans who had the gene in them to produce mutants one day.

Mutants once lived peacefully among the humans, but were soon destroyed by robots whose sole purpose was to seek and destroy mutants.

All of this destruction began when Mystique, played by Jennifer Lawrence, killed Dr. Bolivar Trask, played by Peter Dinklage. Mystique killed Dr. Trask because he was in the process of creating the robots that would murder mutants.

Mystique believed that killing the creator would stop the production of the robots, but she did not think that killing Dr. Trask would cause humans to see how dangerous mutants can be.

The robots were finished, even with the death of Dr. Trask because humans were now afraid of what the mutants would do to them. The robots were able to copy the power of the mutant they were killing because they were made to be like Mystique who could copy the form of any one she saw.

Once these robots were created, most mutants were slaughtered and only a few remained. A group of mutants travelled to hidden locations and were sought out by the X-Men. They were able to safely travel because Kitty Pryde, played by Ellen Page, was among their group and could transport someone back in the past to warn them if someone was coming to attack.

Kitty Pryde sends Wolverine, played by Hugh Jackman, back to the 1970's. Most comic-book readers know that Kitty Pryde was supposed to send herself back to stop Mystique, but Wolverine was sent instead because he is one of the most popular mutants and director, Bryan Singer, knew that Wolverine needed to be the main character.

Wolverine's main mission is to stop Mystique from killing Dr. Trask and recruit the younger Professor X and Magneto along the way.

Wolverine must persuade Mystique and Magneto to stop attempting to attack the government and persuade Professor X to find his courage again.

Throughout his mission, Wolverine encounters many obstacles, including dealing with Magneto's need for power and trying to maintain calm so that he does not disrupt Kitty Pryde.

"X-Men Days of Future Past" is an action packed movie from the start to the finish. The dialogue is rich and the special effects are superb. This movie ties together all previous "X-Men" movies and includes a surprise at the end of the movie that makes it even more of a must see.

Marvel also includes a sneak peak look at one of their new movies at the end of the credits.

Pirates strike out in tourney

Brian Wudkwyh
TEC STAFF

Survive and advance is the name of the game, but with the last Friday's loss at the hands of the Southern Miss Golden Eagles, the Pirates will be doing neither of those things.

ECU dropped its Conference USA Tournament elimination game 3-1, effectively ending their hopes for an NCAA regional bid and ending their final season in the conference.

ECU's (33-26, 16-14 C-USA) offense could only muster five hits and one extra-base hit as Southern Miss starter Cameron Giannini picked up a complete-game victory.

Giannini's 112-pitch, five-strikeout performance prevailed the Golden Eagles until they fell to UTSA in a must-win matchup Saturday.

Redshirt sophomore David Lucroy got the start on the mound for the Pirates and pitched just three and one-third innings before being replaced by senior Ryan Williams.

Southern Miss did its damage in the fourth inning after Lucroy allowed a leadoff walk, coupled with a wild pitch. Later in the inning, Michael Gilbert plated two runners on a single up the middle.

Williams entered the game following Gilbert's RBI and allowed him to score after Nick Dawson's RBI hit, but got out of the inning just four pitches later when he got Connor Barron to ground into a double play.

ECU cut into the deficit in the bottom of the fifth inning after Ian Townsend tripled to start the inning. Garret Brooks picked up the team's only RBI when he grounded out to short.

For the Pirates, however, that was as much offense as they would find as they could muster only one more hit for the rest of the game.

Only four ECU batters recorded hits in the game: Drew Reynolds, Zach Houchins, Hunter Allen, and Townsend. Allen was the ECU outfielder Dylan Brown recorded 14 doubles, three home runs and 22 RBI in 2014, but he and the Pirates fell short in the C-USA Tournament.

only Pirate with a multi-hit game.

ECU suffered their season-ending defeat only two days removed from a 9-8 win over Southern Miss in the tournament's opener.

In the extra-inning loss, the Golden Eagles committed six errors, a season high. They followed their sloppy performance with two victories, including the recent win over ECU, and committing no errors in either of those games.

The Pirates will say goodbye to C-USA as they are moving the American Athletic Conference next season.

During their time in the conference the Pirates have been crowned conference champions in 2004 and 2009. They also won the conference tournament in 2002 during their first season as a member of C-USA.

The change in conference will not be the only change coming to the team. ECU will be losing seven seniors, including Drew Reynolds, Zach Houchins and Ryan Williams.

ECU will likely be losing Jeff Hoffman, as well, who many speculate is an early first round draft choice despite his recent Tommy Johns surgery.

ECU aims for NCAA success

Wayne Hall
TEC STAFF

Just seven days removed from the Lady Pirates' first ever C-USA title, and both the men and women's squads are back at it again.

With the NCAA Division 1 Outdoor East Preliminaries being held in Jacksonville, Fla., this week, the Pirates are looking at the three-day event as not just a chance to pit themselves against some of the best competition in the country, but also as an opportunity to expand off of what has already been an incredible season for both Pirate teams thus far.

With the action getting underway Tuesday morning, both teams feel as though they have something to prove.

For the men they have to show that they're better than just a third place finish. Though finishing third isn't the worst position a team can find itself in, it may have provided them a chip on their shoulder that could help elevate their game to the next level in both the Conference-USA Indoor and Outdoor Championships.

Going into preliminaries, sophomores Avion Jones and Cameron Hudson are sure to provide a major boost for the men. Jones comes into the men's high jump with 10 victories on the season, which is good enough to have him ranked ninth with a career-best jump of 2.21 meters, while Hudson also comes into the meet with six first-place victories in the men's long jump - his long jump mark of 7.82 meters was good enough to rank him 14 out of 96 competitors.

Seniors Montrell Morrow and Matthew McConaughey are also both prime candidates to produce points on the field, as Morrow comes into competition ranked 38th with four wins on the season and McConaughey ranks 36th overall in javelin.

In the men's 4x100 meter relay, Hudson will unite forces with seniors Austin Lewis and Hunter Furr and junior Michael Neal as the team makes up the 26 best relay team out of 92 teams.

On the ladies' side, their focus is to show that winning both the Indoor & Outdoor C-USA Championship titles were not a fluke. And leading that charge is senior Tania Minkins and junior Tyshonda Hawkins. After successfully leading the ladies to their first ever outdoor title, the electrifying duo looks to continue their trend of success as both compete in women's 100 and 200 meter sprint before later teaming up with senior Erin Tucker, freshman Jasmine Dawson, sophomore Janieyah Collins, and junior Aiesha Goggins to help form the women's 4x100 and 4x400-meter relay teams.

On the field, junior Kayla Padgett aims to follow her stellar outing as the Conference Championship's Women's Field Performer of the Meet looks to take first in both the women's shot put, discus, and hammer throws.

Sophomore Avion Jones looks to make an impact in the men's high jump.

While Padgett is busy at work, senior Tynita Butts comes into the women's high jump ranked second out of 88 competitors.

With nearly 100 teams in attendance, both the men and the women's teams will have as good a chance as ever to complete what has already been an outstanding season.

Bucs prepare for offseason turnover

Corey Keenan
TEC STAFF

After managing just one win in the C-USA Tournament last week, the next few months for ECU baseball should see some big changes.

Changes are likely to come everywhere, including inside the Pirates' dugout. With Head Coach Billy Godwin's contract up and just finishing back-to-back relatively unsuccessful seasons, it would seem that there is no renewal on the horizon.

After finishing his ninth season as the skipper for the Pirates, it may be time to go a new direction.

This year's Diamond Bucs had a lot of promise coming into the season. With returning upperclassmen in Zach Houchins, Drew Reynolds, Ben Fultz and Ryan Williams combined with key incoming freshmen in Kirk Morgan

Stanley sidelined for 2014 season

ECU defensive lineman Terrell Stanley was ruled out for the year as he recovers from injuries sustained in car wreck

Jesse Deal
TEC STAFF

ECU junior defensive end Terrell Stanley will miss the upcoming football season, due to injuries stemming from a car accident in February. On Thursday, head coach Ruffin McNeill released an official statement regarding the availability of Stanley this fall.

"Terrell has come a long way and we admire his determination to return to battle, but he's not ready to be in a position to fairly compete at the level he needs to be," said McNeill.

"His full recovery and health are our first priority, as it would be with any of our players. We're looking forward to him getting back to full strength and joining us in the spring."

McNeill mentioned the possible extension of Stanley's playing eligibility to the 2016 season. Since Stanley was red-shirted during his freshman season, a medical waiver would be required to ensure him a sixth year with the Pirates.

At around 6 a.m. on the morning of Feb. 12, Stanley was driving to his strength and conditioning workout with junior offensive tackle Ike Harris. His vehicle lost control near the W. Arthur Tripp Bridge on Greenville Boulevard and swerved into an embankment.

Both Stanley and Harris were rushed to Vidant Medical Center in Greenville with injuries. Harris was released from the hospital on the day of the accident but his teammate was left in critical condition for nearly a week.

Stanley's injuries included fractured and broken bones along with a collapsed lung. Police charged him with a seat belt violation and failure to maintain lane control.

Since the accident, the 6-foot-2, 266-pound junior from Southport, N.C., has made significant health improvements but he will need additional time to recover from his setbacks.

The talents of Stanley, who was honored as the Pirates' Most Valuable Defensive Lineman last season, will certainly be missed. His 45 tackles, including 10 for lost yardage, bolstered an effective defensive line.

Stanley also had seven sacks, including 1.5 sacks in ECU's bowl victory over Ohio. His hard work translated into an All-Conference USA honorable mention.

ECU is forced to feature two new starters at the defensive end position when the Pirates kick off the season against North Carolina Central on Aug. 30. The 2013 All-Conference USA second team member Lee Pegues recently graduated and signed a free agent contract with the Chicago Bears.

Senior Chrisson Rose is likely to make the transition from nose tackle to defensive end in order to reshape ECU's defense. He recorded 31 tackles and 2.5 sacks in 2013. The return of senior nose tackle Terry Williams should add some experience to the Pirates defensive line.

Junior Johnathon White, N.C. State-transfer K'Hadree Hooker and sophomore Fred Presley will battle for the other starting role at defensive end. White picked up 23 tackles as well as three sacks last year.

There's no doubt that the absence of Stanley is a detriment to the Pirates' depth. However, it also provides other players the opportunity to let their skills shine when ECU aspires to improve upon its stellar 10-3 season.

BUCS continued from A7

and Bryce Harman, the Pirates were preseason ranked as the preseason 34th ranked team in the nation.

The Pirates owned a 3-5 record through the first eight games and matters were made worse when Godwin announced that sophomore catcher and Johnny Bench Award watch list member, Travis Watkins, was shut down for the season.

The injury to Watkins moved the Pirate defense around and caused Godwin to get more creative with the lineup.

Problems came behind the plate as freshman walk-on Eric Tyler took over the catching duties while Luke Lowery developed behind the plate. It took some time for Lowery to get comfortable as the backstop. Watkins' injury set the Pirates back weeks in team development, but allowed for the emergence of two young players.

At the time of Watkins' injury, Godwin moved Reynolds to designated hitter and gave freshman Charlie Yorgen a chance to start at second base. With Lowery starting his development behind the plate, there was an opening at first base and Harman took the job. Yorgen and Harman garnered C-USA All-Freshman Team honors and will likely hold down the right side of the infield into next season.

As the season progressed, it was clear that the pitching staff would anchor the team with Hoffman, Williams, David Lucroy, Reid Love, Brett Mabry and Tyler Bolton in the rotation. In college baseball and double elimination tournaments, having deep pitching is critical.

However, after a 16-strikeout performance against Middle Tennessee, Hoffman was shut down for two weeks before it was announced that he would need Tommy John surgery to repair his right elbow.

With Hoffman down in the conference tournament, the Pirates had to lean on Love, Bolton and Lucroy for quality starts. Ultimately, despite an offensive outpouring in game one, the bats could not make enough noise as they scored just four runs in their next two games, while allowing 11.

After a season starting with so much promise and seemingly fading out until the end of the season, changes will come quickly for the Diamond Bucs. Immediately, the Pirates will start to prepare for their change in conference as they move from C-USA to The American Conference. All signs point to Godwin being out of the fold and a team with great senior leadership will start looking at the underclassmen to take over.

Sure, some of the Pirates' lack of success can be credited to poor luck with the injuries to Watkins and Hoffman. Also, Ben Fultz had a rocky start to his senior campaign and started to turn things around before he suffered an injury that cost him all fielding and only labored at bats.

But with a long offseason upcoming, ECU baseball will have to make important decisions with the coaching staff and prepare the younger players to embrace leadership and change in schedule and personnel.
