We've Come A Long Way

By Deacon James Vines

Editor's Note: This is a continuing series of true accounts.

We are going to teach this nigger a lesson how to talk to white folks. They continued to beat him until he fell to his knees. His mother stood by pleading for them to stop and the more she begged the more they would beat him.

Then she told them to please stop because he was a good boy and if they would stop she would make him go with them. The police then said he was a sassy nigger and they had to take him in so the chief could talk to him.

It was a sad sight to watch a very young man getting beat and nothing you could do about it. There were about 25 or 30 people standing doing nothing but looking. In those days, if you said anything you could get shot and nothing would be done about it. So they picked him up from where they had handcuffed him around the utility pole and pushed him in the car. One of the neighbors brought him a large rag that had been torn from a sheet and gave it to him to wipe the blood from his face. After they got him to the car they came up to the crowd and made them disperse and go to their homes. The next day the chief of police made a statement that he was arrested for resisting arrest but he was soon to learn that his father was an employee of the city and was one of the hardest workers that worked for the city. So the chief dismissed the charges and they let him go because the chief said his father was a good nigger.

After I got back to the drug store I sat down trying to get that horrible scene that I had just witnessed out of my mind. I had been there for about ten minutes when I got an order to go to another part of the city. I picked up the order and read the address on it that sent me to the other side of town and in almost the same kind of segregated section that I had just left. I arrived at the place where I was to deliver the package, got off my bike and went to the door and knocked. An elderly lady came to the door, almost out of breath and told me to come in and have a seat until she got the money. She came back into the room and sat down and said she was almost because she suffered from asthma, and the medicine that I brought was what she needed for relief. So she paid me and I told her that I hoped that she would get better. So I left and went back to the bike that was lying in the yard. I picked up the bike and started to leave when I heard someone call for me to come back for a few minutes.

It was the lady next door who was the cook for the lady that was giving me trouble. I went across the yard to the next house where the lady was that called me. I went up on the porch and she told me to have a seat there in the living room while she did something in the kitchen.

She came back in the living room and sat down and asked me how did I like my job, and I told her that I liked it fine. Then she said that I was a very nice boy and that I would be something one day. She asked me how old I was and I told her 17 and she said "You sure are young, I thought you were about 22 or 23. And I said no, I will be 18 September 20. Then she told me that she was 37 and that made her 20 years older than me. But she said that wouldn't make any difference if two people loved each other.

Then she got up from her chair and walked over to the place where I was sitting and sat down on the arm of the chair and put her arm around my shoulder and asked me if I liked her. She was a good looking woman, filled out in all the places. She didn't look a day over 25 and she knew it. But I didn't know what she was getting at until one day she came by the drug store and told me when I got off that she had something to ask me. I could hardly wait to get to her house that night. When the time came for us to get off I hurried to empty the trash cans and mop the floor. It was about 5 minutes before quitting time so I locked all the doors and by this time it was time to go. I wasn't long getting there because I ran all the way. I was out of breath when I got there so I stood on the porch for a few minutes to catch my breath. After catching my breath I knocked on the door and she said "Just a minute."

After a minute or two she came and opened the door. I walked in and she told me to sit down because she knew I was tired from riding that bike all day. I walked across the room and sat down where she had laid the

Warren, Eakin, and others help ECU network link

A powerful new education and research tool was activated at 4:00 p.m. on April 4th, when East Carolina University joined the microwave communications network operated by the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina.

In a vivid demonstration of the capabilities of the network, ECU officials hit the switch to initiate a tree-way teleconference linking the local transmission site at the ECU School of Medicine with the Microelectronics Center in Research Triangle Park and the Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem.

Funded by a $3.9 million appropriation from the North Carolina General Assembly, the extension of the network of ECU was witnessed by members of the local legislative delegation, which included Rep. Ed Warren, (D-Pitt) along with others. Chancellor Richard R. Eakin lead ECU's participation in the teleconference.

The microwave communications link will all but obliterate the distance between ECU and other institutions in the system, which include most of the state's major public and private universities, the four medical schools and several sites in the Research Triangle Park.

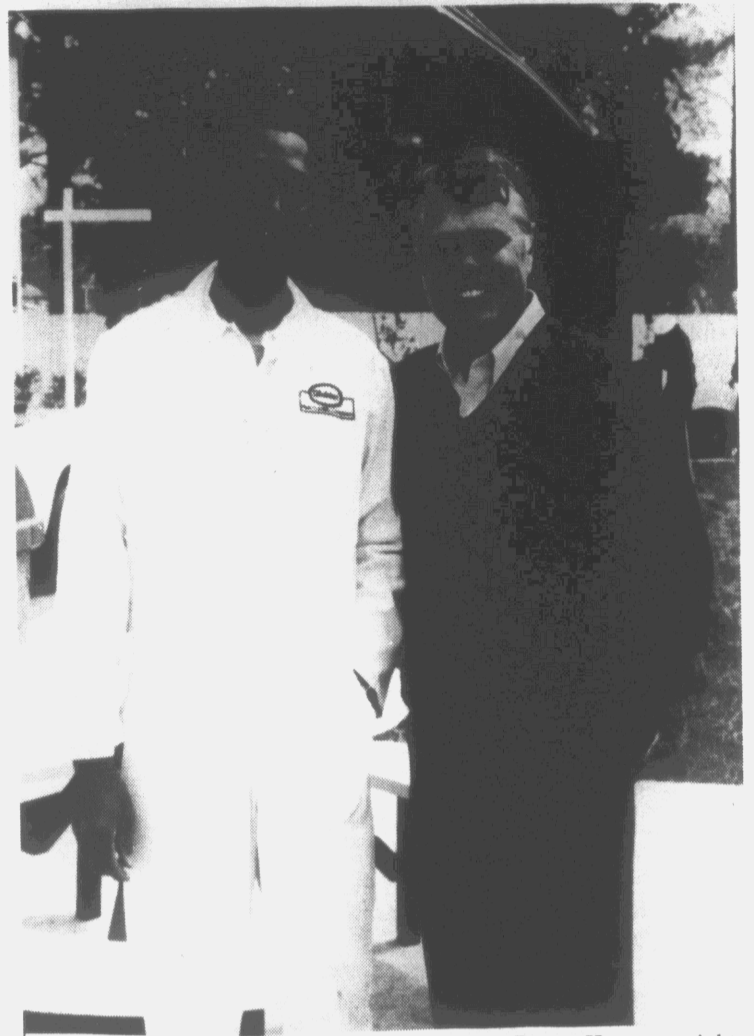

The television system will permit interactive teleclasses, video seminars and teleconferences between two or more distant locations. For example, graduate nursing students on another campus can "attend" a class orienting at ECU. At both sites, the students will not only see and hear the instructor, the instructor will see and hear the students via two-way color television.

Dr. James A. Hallock, medical school dean, said he is excited about the opportunities that associate with the network presents.

"This technology allows for transmission of information and ideas in a highly efficient and effective manner," said Hallock. "I can see tremendous potential for exchange among the universities and medical schools on the network, and we are delighted to be active participants."

Additional receiving sites are also contemplated for locations elsewhere on the ECU campus to enhance convenience for users

RALLYING TO SOMETHING NEW . . . Mr. Roger Kramer, right, and Brother Abdul Namaz paused for our camera and enjoyed 99 cent, 1/4 hamburgers after the new "Rally's" was completed and opened. Brother Namaz is an independent contractor (commercial and residential) and Mr. Kramer is the proud owner of "Rally's" in Greenville.

Rally's Comes To Greenville

Greenville now has a new concept in fast food dining at greatly affordable prices. "Rally's," a national hamburger chain, opened its doors for the first time this week to offer Greenville and area residents an opportunity to enjoy great quarter pound hamburgers for only 99 cents.

Store owner and retired airman, Roger Kramer says "Rally's" will offer its delicious and juicy quarter pound burger at its regular low price of only 99 cents. The innovative design of the drive-thru diner, which offers two windows to drive up to, as well as a walk-up window with plenty of parking and outdoor dining, will further feature its fast, efficient and friendly service. Located near the Memorial Drive and Farmville Blvd. intersection, "Rally's" moves into an area already saturated with fast-food chains.

However, Kramer insists "Rally's" brings a totally new concept to Eastern North Carolina that should become greatly appreciated.

The company is also seeking career oriented people to join their firm that already anticipates new stores to open in the Greenville area very soon. The 'm' Voice welcomes "Rally's" to the Greenville Business Community.

ECU Speaker to Lecture On Civil Rights Groups

One of the country's leading experts on civil rights and the experiences of blacks in American politics will speak at East Carolina University April 13.

Dr. Charles V. Hamilton, a professor of government at Columbia University will present the lecture "Dual Agenda: Social Policies of Civil Rights Organizations, New Deal to the Present" at 7:30 p.m. in Room 1031 of the General Classroom Building. The program, sponsored by the ECU Minority Presence Initiative Program and Department of Political Science, is free and open to the public.

Hamilton, currently on leave from Columbia to teach at Smith College, is the author of five books, the best known of which is

"Black Power," co-authored with Stokely Carmichael. His other works include "The Black Experience in American Politics," "The Bench and the Ballot," "Southern Federal Judges and the Right to Vote," "The Black Preacher in America," and "American Government."

Considered one of America's most distinguished black political scientists, Hamilton has received numerous academic honors including two awards for teaching excellence. He has taught at Roosevelt University, Albany State and Miles College.

He received his BA degree from Roosevelt University, his law degree from Loyola University and his MA and PhD from the University of Chicago.

Fundraiser in support of Shaw University

The Shaw Players and Company will be performing, "THE AFRICAN-AMERICAN EXPERIENCE: AND YOU SAY TO FORGET?," conceived by H. Bruce Caple, on Saturday, April 15, 1989, at 6:00 p.m. in the Ayden Auditorium, South Lee Street, Ayden, North Carolina.

Proceeds from this production will assist Shaw University in obtaining an Educational Grant from the U.S. Department of Education Grant for 2 million dollars. In order to receive this grant, Shaw University must raise 1 million dollars as a matching requirement. We are depending on you to help us reach this goal and to maintain educational opportunities for our youth.

Director of Italian Opera Group Returns to ECU

Talmadge Fauntleroy, a graduate of East Carolina University, who is now director of the Studio Lirico opera workshop in Stia, Italy, will return to his alma mater next week to work with advanced student singers in the ECU School of Music.

Fauntleroy's visit is part of ECU's Minority Presence Initiative, a program sponsored by the Offices of the Chancellor, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Equal Opportunities Programs. Fauntleroy is one of a number of noted scholars who are members of a minority race scheduled to visit ECU this year.

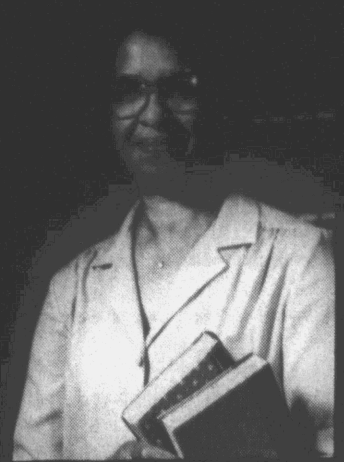

During his weeklong sojourn at ECU, Fauntleroy will lead a "Characterization Workshop" for ECU opera students, culminating in a public presentation of opera scenes on Friday, April 7, at 4:00 p.m. in the Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall.

MARRIAGES: Some Comments: How does your marriage fit in?

'My husband is emotionally remote and there's no cuddling, no hand holding, no hugging. I often feel like I am living with a brother, not a husband. Repeated efforts to discuss this have fallen on deaf ears.'

'Feeling unloved, untouched, and unnoticed is murderous to a marriage.'

'A show of affection and lovemaking have to be frequent for the marriage to be successful, to endure.'

'He never wants to do anything with me—he watches TV, eats, sleeps, or is out with his friends drinking beer. Once in a great while we do something together, but when we do he makes me feel like he's doing me a favor. He makes me feel so unwanted and unworthy.'

'We never let anything become more important than our relationship. We see to it that the other one is happy.'

'We always talk things over. We talk them out. We talk, laugh, and play together, we set time to be alone.'

'Each day is lovelier than the one before. If only I could have some closeness with him. I've begged my husband to just talk with me, all to no avail.'

'He is lazy, he's a grouch. Every second sentence he speaks is a putdown. I've just stopped trying to talk to him because trying and failing all the time just depresses me. I just take refuge in the kids as much as I can.'

'Our secret is that my husband is my friend with the bonus of sex and cuddling thrown in—a terrific friend and lover.'

'I am starved for affection and attention. He rarely compliments my appearance though I am fairly attractive.'

'Public affection makes an important statement to wives, and its absence may be a warning that marriage is in trouble.'

'We share a love of the same cultural affairs or sports/exercise.'

'I always tell him my thoughts and feelings before I tell friends or others.'

'My husband and I share housework equally. We share in making decisions. We are equal financial partners with one joint bank account.'

Bad situations don't just go away and the longer one waits to initiate change, the more difficult it becomes, until one day you and your husband both only make feeble attempts to make things better. At this point, more than ever, closeness, hugging, listening, caring—but it's not there.

LIFE
Examine your life. If it is out of focus, make up your mind to get it into focus. And start today.

THINK
Think for yourself. Take control of your life.

FATHER
It is the duty of the father to protect his home.

Life's piano can only produce the melodies of brotherhood when it is recognized that the black keys are as necessary and beautiful as the white keys.

EATING DISORDERS
Eating disorders aren't sudden. They begin with depression, anxiety, and loss of control. It's not what you're eating, it's what's eating you.

TELEVISION
It's rude to keep the television on with your eyes glued to it if your guest was invited.

The important thing about your lot in life is whether you use it for building or parking.

A worker's batteries need weekend recharging to prevent burnout.

Avoid passive activities. Many kinds of television programs, for example, keep family members from talking to one another. This can create a 'nonverbal' household in which feelings and emotions are seldom expressed.

WEEKENDS: Plan for personal time, family time and couple time. The roots of the entire family's well being are in a secure husband-wife relationship.

An essential part of every weekend schedule for many families is time spent at religious services. Our faith is a basic part of our life.

from other graduate-level programs.

Preparations for joining the network, which began in 1986, have included the construction of two signal ready towers in Bailey and Falkland. At the School of Medicine, workers have been busy adapting a 100-seat classroom, a conference room and a control room as the ECU transmission and receiving station.

The classroom on the second floor of the Brody Medical Sciences Building has been equipped with four automated TV cameras, two 46-inch TV monitors and 24 voice-activated microphones to facilitate audience participation.

Other members of the network include UNC campuses at Chapel Hill, Winston-Salem State, N.C. A & T in Greensboro, Duke, and Research Triangle Institute.

newspaper. I picked up the paper and while going through it I heard her yell and ask me if I was hungry and I said that I was. Then she asked me if I drank and I said no and she said that we were going to get along just fine. I stayed there about an hour and then I decided to go home but she insisted that I stay a little longer. So I sat down again and before I knew what was happening she was sitting down beside me with her head on my chest as if she were going to kiss me.

DEAN'S LIST

Several area students have been named to the dean's list at N.C. A & T State University.

Named were Marion Barnes, Adrian Brewington, Kethesha Clemons, Sterling Emil Daniels, Kimberly Dillahunt, Karen Suvonne Dixon, Howard Gather, Shonda Johnson, Burdette Joyner, Kabromlyn Lang, Eimer Leary, Brian Moye, Tammy Parker and Reginald Worthington. Ms. Klarissa Williams is the daughter of Pitt County School Board member, Ms. Mary P. Williams. Congratulations to our area students.

The Greenville Public Works Department should recover soon from collecting tree limbs and other debris that occurred during two ice storms and a snow storm.

Our crews have hauled more than 2,700 truckloads of debris to the old City landfill to be burned at a later date.

From all indications, trash trucks and all garbage trucks should be back on their regular schedules and operating under normal conditions on Monday, April 10.

City residents should be reminded that larger trees are to be cut 5-6 feet in length and stacked next to the curb, separate from trash that is to be picked up. Bundles should not weigh more than 50 lbs. All leaves and yard rakings are to be bagged or boxed for the months of April through October.

Public Health Week April 9-15

Public health services have on their lives, to raise the level of citizen involvement in efforts to improve health, and to highlight achievements in public health.

"The Public Health Week Committee will be giving awards to two local health departments and a local board of health for outstanding contributions to healthy living," said Levine.

He noted that nominations for the three awards may be submitted until June 20, 1989. The winners will be selected by a panel of judges representing the various groups sponsoring Public Health Week. The award winners will be announced in September at the annual meeting of the Association of North Carolina Local Boards of Health.

Local health departments and other public health agencies in North Carolina have scheduled a variety of activities during Public Health Week such as health department tours, open houses, health carnivals, exhibits, health fairs, runs, and bike-a-thons.

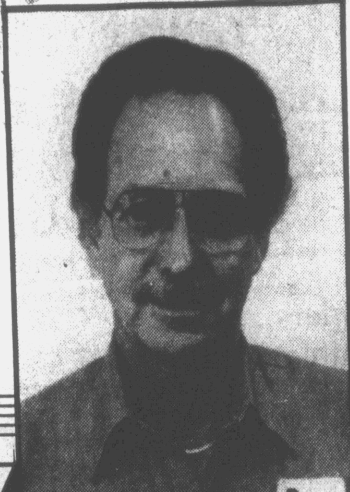

Enormous backlog of tree limbs slows City pick-ups

Due to the February ice storm, the city has amassed an enormous amount of fallen tree limbs to be collected by the City's Public Works Department.

Because this is an emergency situation, Greenville residents are asked to help collection crews by separating limbs from other bulky trash such as boxes, furniture and other items. The tree limbs are being collected by a separate truck and unloaded at a different location from other refuse.

Large limbs are being collected with the aid of machinery and should not be stacked against brick walls, telephone boxes or electrical boxes because it could result in property damage and may delay the limb pick-up.

The City would appreciate the public's assistance and patience as it continues to clean up after the ice and snow storms of the previous month.
