Coordinator of AIDS awareness program is out to save lives

Patricia Oxendine-Hunter is out to save lives.

As the coordinator of a new AIDS awareness and prevention program for OIC, Hunter has her work cut out for her.

The program, which began several weeks ago, targets Rocky Mount's black community. OIC, Opportunities Industrialization Center, is in the heart of the city's black community.

Another reason for focusing on the black community is higher cases of AIDS, Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, in the nation among blacks, Hunter said.

The black population constitutes 12 percent of the nation's population, but 25 percent of the AIDS population in the U.S., she said. One in four who has AIDS is black, she said, adding that AIDS infection may have something to do with a socio-economic factor.

AIDS is not exclusive to homosexuals and drug users, she added. Statistics indicate that by 1991, if the rapid spread of the disease is not curbed, "we are going to see 67,000 black people with AIDS," she said.

"Now cases of AIDS are showing up in heterosexual males, school-age children and in U.S. senior citizens. No one is exclusive," she said. "This is not just a threat. It is a disease that kills."

Hunter pointed out that the disease can remain dormant for as many as 15 years before it is detected.

People can carry the disease and not even know they are a carrier. "All of these facts make it scary," she said.

Hunter said at a recent question and answer program one of the participants told about her brother dying from AIDS. The girl said she knew of 17 other people her brother had shared a needle with, Hunter recalled. All are dead.

"The number of contact can become astronomical," she said.

As people become aware of the deadly impact of the disease, Hunter said she anticipates seeing some behavior changes.

Keys are understanding and openness, she said.

"We want people to feel open about talking about sex, HIV and AIDS," Hunter said. The program at OIC will attempt to do that, she added.

OIC is a place where the black community feels comfortable, Hunter said. "We try to break down that barrier. We show confidence and comfort in talking about AIDS," she said. "Many times it is not an easy topic to discuss."

Hunter said she may not be able to answer many of the questions

Telegram/David Chicelli

Patricia Hunter coordinates AIDS awareness at OIC

she receives, but with the help of area health professionals she will get them answered.

The project will provide technical assistance and networking with other area groups, including presentations, Hunter said.

Hunter said she is also interested in working with area youth, school systems and perhaps the Boys Club.

"Be abstinent," Hunter advised. "We have to say that loudly and clearly. That is what we advocate."

She is also busy working on a door-to-door component of the project designed to contact especially hard to reach groups.

"The only way the project will work is with community support," she said. "I'm real, real excited about the project."

Miss America is brainy and classy

Photographers, reporters and television camera crews were swarming around Miss America like bees around honey. And Miss America 1990 is a real honey.

Miss Missouri, Debby Turner, who was the winner of the 64th Miss America Pageant 1990 finals in Atlantic City Saturday night, is a poised, talented, self-confident, beautiful young lady.

Appropriately, this 23-year-old honey from Mexico, Mo., did a Lionel Hampton on the marimba with a whirlwind rendition of the exciting "Flight of the Bumblebee."

Like her two predecessors, Vanessa Williams and Suzette Charles in 1984 she relied on her musical training when she performed in the talent category.

However while Vanessa and her successor, Suzette, have made their mark in show business as singers, Debby dazzled the judges and audience with her performance as an instrumentalist.

A Salute To The Brotherhood Club

By Clarence Baker

As communities grow, so do organizations within them that is the example being set by the brotherhood social club. The club has not only grown in membership, it has expanded its role and its purpose in the Afro-American community. The brotherhood social club has established its hued and waters at the brotherhood community building located on Pennsylvania Avenue in Greenville. For several years the club has supported many civic projects that benefit the total community. It now offers its facilities for all types of occasions sponsored by individuals and other organizations including churches, fraternities and families. For example, during

We've Come A Long Way

Friends: How Many Of Us Have Them??

By: Sandra Dupree Boyd

A lot of us have learned the hard way that God is the only truthful and trustworthy friend that you can really count on.

There's a saying that you should be slow in choosing a friend, and even slower in changing. You may have learned so far in life that friends will let you down, and they will also stop coming around. Friends are hard to find, friend like yours and mine.

About a year ago I thought that I had some new friends. Friends that would stand by me and be supportive of me. Then one day I realized that the door bell had stopped ringing and the telephone had stopped ringing.

These so-called friends were people that I had not sent for, and I didn't even know that they existed. They found me. And now I know that they really only wanted to get close to me because there was something going on at the time that they could probably benefit from.

My experience got me thinking back to Jesus and His disciples. Jesus had a huge crowd behind Him all the time as long as they were benefiting and Jesus was giving out blessings. But when Jesus needed them, you could hardly find one.

Well, in a way it kind of happened to me. I started out with a small crowd of about 30. Now there's only a few: God, me, my family, and two others. But know what? That's all it takes.

So I'm glad that the crowd has dwindled since their intention were not good to begin with. Because had their intentions been good, I would still hear from them, and they would still be coming around or calling from time to time.

But I want these so-called friends to remember that what goes around comes around.

You've probably noticed that when one white person or family needs help, they all join together to help this person or family. For example, think about how all the whites got together and had bake sales and everything else you can think of to help the Ron Chance Family. Would we as a black race had taken time out to do this if the Chance Family had been black?

Jesus chose no special person or family to help while He walked around here on earth. You don't have to be a star to be in God's show. Because God uses ordinary people. He used ordinary people in biblical days and uses them today. But we as a black race, we have our picks as to whom we help. How would you feel if you asked God for help and He told you that He wasn't going to help you. That He had chosen someone else instead? I doubt very seriously if it would make you feel good.

We as a black race had better start thinking about pulling together while we're sitting across that table eating lunch with our white fellow co-workers everyday. Because when you get up from that table you are still just as black as you were when you first sat down. You didn't change one iota to that white man or white woman. They don't love us; they just put up with us, because one man dared to make a change when some of us were still in diapers.

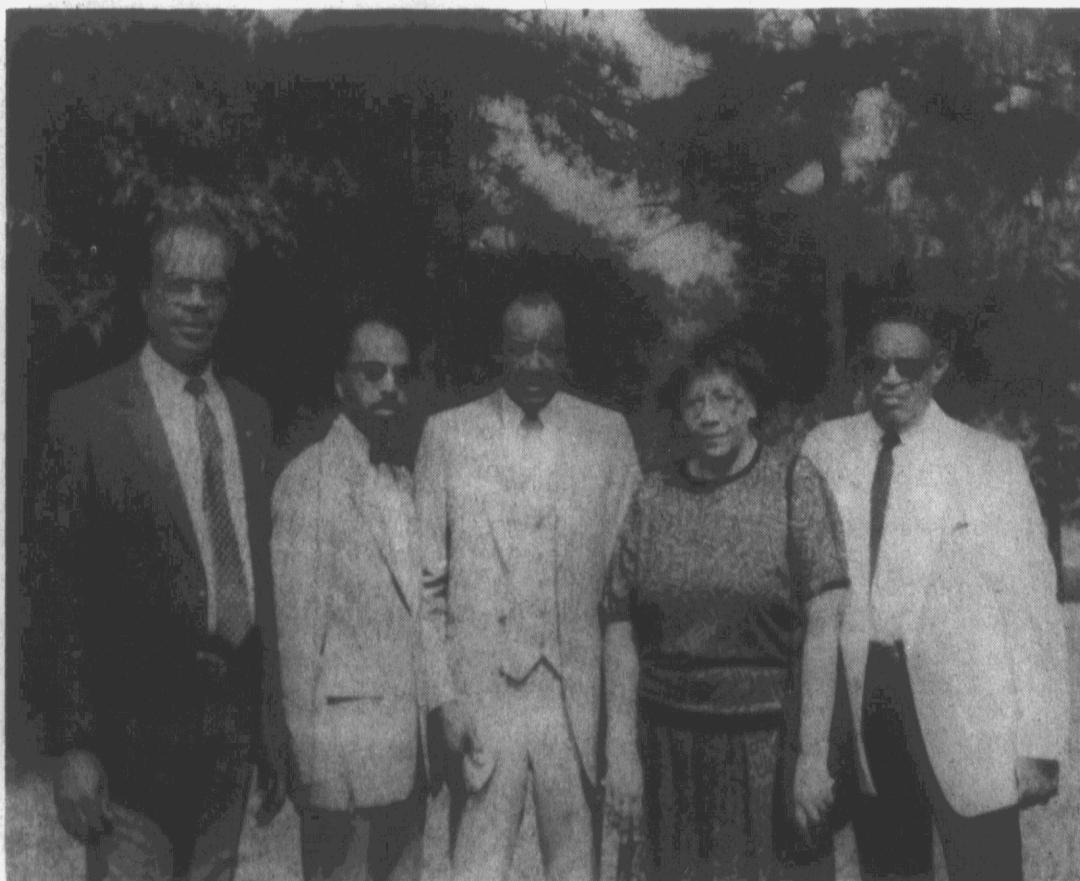

Your so-called friends will tell you so faithfully what they are going to do or what they are going to say until it really comes down to the main event. Then you start to get answers such as "maybe", "I don't know", "check with me later", "we'll see", and finally, "I don't want to make it hard for myself".

Then you start to wonder why did they lead you on. Our so-called black friends are so envious. They're so afraid that you're going to get ahead of them. But they need to remember that ENVY shoots at others and wounds herself in the process.

I was told a story not too long ago about a group of girls who were attending a class together. Everyone was car pooling

WHY GOOD PARENTS HAVE BAD KIDS

by E. Kent Hayes

Over the past ten years the number of middle and upper class children turning to delinquents—even criminal behavior has risen dramatically. Children who seem to have every advantage are ending up in court, and their parents are often at a loss to explain how this come about.

Too often parents neglect is the root of the trouble. The same parents who coach the Little League teams, preside at the PTA may be neglecting some of their children's needs, without even being aware of it. Neglect can take the many form, from overindulgence to lack of communication.

Good parenting is not a natural process but a learned process. Good parents know how to instill the value of delayed gratification, provide structure, get to know their child by becoming actively involved in his or her interests, work hard to communicate with their children, learn the dynamics of discipline, focus on negative behavior and ignore positive create within their child a poor self-image, like themselves and know how to laugh, successful kids come first from nurturing homes, a child's first and most important teachers are his parents, teach their children that there is joy in being part of a larger community, who learn the facts about alcohol and drug addiction are their child's greatest allies against the danger of substance abuse, and husbands and wives who do not love each other produce disturbed kids.

Criminals are formed by their environment. Most of us neglect our children. Today's prison population is a cross section of every religion, creed, race, and social class. Children need parenting, not barbed fences, locked steel doors, or shaved heads.

Care for delinquent, neglected children is needed. The best environment in which to raise a child is the home of the biological parent. Good people can be bad parents. Being a good parent requires as much time, talent, energy, and thought as a full-time job.

When we have problems at work, we call everyone together, sit down around a table, and discuss the issue. We do not do this with our families. The problem simply fester. Being a parent requires as much active management, thought, and consideration as his job. We give our job more time and thought than our families. What were you like when you were seventeen? If a mother is tired and stressed (after a career job), the entire family is affected. Many of us are muddling along wondering why our house doesn't feel like a home. As parents, we tell our children how we want them to behave by what we say and don't say. Bill and Pam had a two-career marriage with no energy left over for parenting. April described her mother coming home from school tired and angry. Her father would come in, pick up the paper, and wait for April to call him to dinner. No one talked and when the kids tried to tell their concerns the parents said they were tired. When April became pregnant at 13 years old, Pam and Bill were totally unprepared to deal with it. Set aside time for families to talk, family talk. Parents must interact with school. Know that your family is important enough before they've gone. You have to be as skilled at organizing your household as you do your area of responsibility in the work place. You need to be as flexible and imaginative when solving family problems as you are when solving problems on the job.

Our problems of behavior are established while we're young. The child and the problem came from us. We rob our children of a needed relationship and send them off into a competitive, complicated world believing that love is wrapped in packages or carried in a billfold. Assume your role as parents, not nannies, baby sitters. By giving you child everything she wants, when she wants it, you deskill your daughter and son.

Our care of the child from birth to six provides the emotional foundation that will affect his behavior throughout his life. If we turn up our noses and call his body waste dirty while we are potty training, the chances are pretty good the child will feel he is dirty.

It is during this period that children can learn to appreciate books and perceive learning as an adventure. They do not need to be pushed into reading, or counting, but if we read to them with enthusiasm, and talk to them with a healthy respect for their intellect, they will live up to their intellectual capacity.

Teach affection by being affectionate with our spouses, the child's siblings, and the child. Affection and nurturance are taught by exemplary examples, but it is an essential part of the learning process. Anger and hate can be taught just as effectively if we are not careful.

The day they walk into kindergarten class they will know how to hold grudges, hate and fear, if that was what they were exposed to at home. Children learn about sex and their bodies from us. If we turn our noses up and look disgusted at the question about the penis or vagina, they understand immediately how we feel. By then whatever words we choose are virtually meaningless. They will ask questions and be curious. For the better part of two years we cover their bodies with diapers, and when finally they have a chance to explore and discover these strange organs, they will be fascinated and excited.

Ask yourself—What do I want my children to know before they leave home? Educational needs and physical/medical/dental needs, surely. Children must be taught through social interaction that they are a part of a larger community is their responsibility. They learn how to be sociable by watching their parents socialize. Our children are imitators. The chances are good that they will associate with the same type of people we associate with. Become an active part of the community in which you live. Children learn from what they see, not what they hear. If they see a parent who can only relax with a drink in his or her hand, what does it say? Parents need to analyze their own consumption habits. As a society, we need to think about the example we set, and the images we create.

Parents need to assume the responsibility of being their child's drug educator. In 1985, the National Council on Alcoholism stated that 100,000 ten and eleven-year-olds reported getting drunk at least once a week. Even six-year-olds need to be talked to. But how do you talk to a six-year-old about addiction? When he's two years old and reaches under the sink and pulls out the drain cleaner, we don't hesitate to tell him that the liquid in the bottle is a poison and could make him very sick. Tell him addictive drugs can also make him very sick, that they are poison to the system. Walking across the street without looking both ways is dangerous. If you get hit by a car, it could kill you. Don't be afraid to discuss harmful effects of illegal drugs with your children. If you see an article in the paper related to addiction that can be explained, bring it to the dinner table and talk about it.

Parents who provide a nurturing, structured environment and communicate with their child have the best chance of dealing with substance abuse. Husbands and wives who do not love each other produce disturbed kids. When affection, respect and love are present in a marriage, the children are secure and happy with each other. Children who feel secure seldom commit crimes or need to abuse others to meet their needs. We all need a time and place to vent our wrath, but the best place is not in front of the kids. There's a big difference between an argument and a fight. Your compatibility is their security.

TODAY AND TIME

by Gerald B. Klein

Today is here. I will start with a smile and resolve to be agreeable. I will not criticize. I refuse to waste my valuable time. Today in one thing I know I am equal with all others—time. All of us draw the same salary in seconds, minutes, and hours. Today I will not waste my time because the minutes I wasted yesterday are as lost as a vanished thought. Today I refuse to spend time worrying about what might happen—it usually doesn't. I am going to spend time making things happen. Today I am determined to study to improve myself, for tomorrow I may be

LORRAINE SHINN
CITY COUNCIL AT LARGE

Dear Citizens of Greenville,

Greenville is a city that has undergone rapid growth and change. As a result of this, local government faces a variety of challenges. The challenge of combining long range plans while dealing with short term needs is no small undertaking. Expanding city services without an extreme acceleration in the tax rate may well prove to be the greatest challenge of all. At best it is a difficult balancing act and calls for tough decision making that is not always popular.

Anyone elected to make these decisions must be willing to take a stand, no matter how difficult. There is no room in local government for those unwilling or unable to do so.

On occasion I have spoken out and opposed council decisions particularly when I felt they were wasteful, had not been well thought out or did not address the majority of needs in the community. I have always tried to look at the whole picture not just the component parts. I am experienced, plain spoken, honest, and able. Please consider supporting me in my bid for re-election on November 7th.

Thank you for voting,

Miss America is brainy

Cure for Boredom

A narrator on Current Affairs, the Channel 5 program, admitted that he was almost becoming bored with the Miss America extravaganza, when along came Miss Missouri to change his opinion.

What's different about the 5'7 1/2", 118 lbs., new title-holder?

She kind of worried Black reporters attending the press conference Monday at the Inter-Continental Hotel by shrugging off the fact that she is the third Black Woman to be named Miss America in the history of the pageant. She told her interviewers that this was no big deal.

"Being Black is the least of what I am," Debbye said, "I had nothing to do with it. I just came that way."

A photographer wearing a red T-shirt whispered to the reporter with him, "Gee, I really made a mistake. When I asked the direction to the press conference, I asked where was Miss Black America?"

Great role model

A Black woman writer covering the event quietly took her aside and tried to impress upon her the importance of her being Black. "You make such a great role model."

But Debbye had said earlier, "I'm not here to be the perfect person, or the ideal Miss America, because that person does not exist."

Despite her protestations, Debbye Turner does make a great spokesperson for the Miss America Pageant.

In her clear, alto voice, Debbye, who is in the honor society at the University of Missouri, says she wants to motivate teenagers to excellence. She also said she believed in "Made in America" because it means more jobs for Americans.

"I am living proof that anybody can be anything they want to be. Dreams can come true."

Keep trying

She further added, the "It took me seven years and four State tries before I got here." So even when you are beautiful and have determination, success doesn't come easy.

The first Black Miss America, Vanessa Williams, who came from Millwood, a small town upstate, was toppled from her throne when Penthouse Magazine ran a nude picture layout of her and another girl. The photos were sold to them by a freelance photographer who realized that he could capitalize on Vanessa's fame.

The Missouri student, like all of us, says, Debbye's not flawless," but she had fellow contestants clapping their hands for her even before they went onstage at Atlantic City's Convention Hall with a "rap for Jesus."

A born-again Christian since she was only seven years old, Debbye was persuaded by reporters at the Miss America press conference after she was voted Miss America to repeat the rap.

To the rhythmic clapping of the press corps, Debbye obliged with: "Well, I love the Lord, with all I know, Gonna sing his song, everywhere I go..."

The new beauty queen said "There is a God and he is important in my life."

Boyfriend?

Earlier questioners had quizzed her about any romantic interests. The diplomatic young lady said she has a friend who is a boy but not a "boyfriend."

However, we thought of a rich, eligible young man whom she might consider. When the University of Missouri student revealed that she loves animals, it was certainly something they have in common.

Her hobby is collecting "surgery souvenirs." From Anatomy class or operations, Debbye says she keeps bones from animals that died during surgery. She even has two dog-fetus paperweights and says, "I guess it is a bit gross."

Retired Lieutenant Colonel Frederick C. Turner Jr., a veteran placement representative, and his wife, Gussie, who is a counselor and an evangelist, agree that their daughter's hobby is a little unusual.

Debbye's mother said, "One day she just came home with these dog fetuses in formaldehyde. A teddy bear would have been nicer."

Collects bones

But Debbye, the eligible fellow we were talking about also loves animals. He has his own personal zoo and once was reported trying to bid for the bones of England's celebrated "Elephant Man." Music? He sings, Too, and is a top recording star.

wanted, and I must not be found lacking. Today I am determined to do the things that I should do. I firmly determine to stop doing the things I should not do. Today I will not imagine what I would do if things were different. I will make success with what material I have. Today I will stop saying: "If I had time..." I know I never will "find time" for anything. If I want time, I must make it. Today I will act toward other people as though this might be my last day on earth. I will not wait for tomorrow. Tomorrow never comes.

A TRIBUTE

Youth, with its precociousness, ecstasism, and effectuateness, express itself in diverse ways. I refer to CALVIN JONES, WOOW (JOY) Radio Station's program director, who is so very articulate and dynamically expressive, whose effective, singularly, mannerly style and decorum attract me inordinately. He's an eminently good role model who is worthy of praise. Calvin, I salute you!

together and trying to better themselves. Then one day, one of these girls got lucky and was offered a very good job. She accepted the job and was even able to buy herself a new car. But after this happened, she forgot all about the other girls and stopped having anything to do with any of them because she felt she was better than them with her new job and new car. Well, one day she had an accident and her car was a total loss. She lost her job because she couldn't get to work and they needed someone in her absence.

This story lets you know that when you forget where you came from, God has a way of reminding you that it takes a lot less time to fall than it does to rise. And then sometimes we wonder why we can't get up. Maybe it's because God knows that if we get up, we're not going to remember where we came from.

These girls had been friends for years. They had talked, laughed, and cried together. This is just one of the many examples of what a FRIEND can do for you. You bend over backwards for them, and while you're bending, they're stabbing.

Someone once said that the best way to stay friends is to stay away from each other. They also said that long visits make short friends; and short visits make long friends.

If some of us have one true friend, then we have more than our share. When we make promises to others as to what we're going to do we should do it and remember that PROMISES MAY GET FRIENDS; BUT IT IS YOUR PERFORMANCE THAT KEEPS A FRIEND.

Salute To A Lady

"Sister Willie Mae Carney"

"She Touched All Of Us"

Brainy Miss America

It would be a "Thriller," too, if Mr. Right (?) would take his credit card and send her a congratulatory gift - this week, Sept. 19th - she also celebrates her 24th birthday.

Part of her visit to New York was also to be introduced to her duties as official spokesperson for "Made in U.S.A." Her brown eyes gleamed as she moved among the different gowns and outfits displayed in the "selected by Miss America Boutique" at the Inter-Continental Hotel. "I like colorful clothes," she said.

The size 4, lovely young lady said, "This is going to be probably one of the most fantastic years of my life, and I'll milk it for all it's worth."

She said the scholarship which is part of the Miss America prize, would help her finish her studies in veterinary medicine.

Future is unknown

"I'm not a fortune teller. I don't know what will come of this year and what opportunities lie ahead of me. I'm willing to accept anything that life wants to hand to me right now."

Realizing that the Miss America Pageant is "more than just an evening-gown or swimsuit contest," Debbye Turner will soon learn that "life ain't no crystal stair" for a Black Miss America.

Roy Innis, who was scornful when the auburn-haired, green-eyed, fair-skinned Vanessa Williams captured the headlines as the first Black Miss America, has initially cheered the new Miss America.

Core congratulates

The National Chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality says, "It was with great pleasure that I witnessed the crowning of the first real Black woman as Miss America."

"We do not view this as a gimmick as were the affirmative action gimmicks of previous crownings. We believe that this young lady is a legitimate representative of the best in Black America and America in general. She is not a token and her essence does not negate the majority of Black women."

One disgruntled contestant thought there was politics involved. She pointed out that among these finalists were a Black, a Korean, one with a transplanted heart and one hearing impaired.

Christmas and Thanksgiving, the brotherhood is mostly known for providing a place for people to enjoy each other. Although it is not just a night club, people do come out to mingle, talk and even dance. The club has ABC permits which is a clear sign of its growth as a legal and responsible community organization. Members and guests may now enjoy their favorite beverage without fear of problems with law enforcement authorities.

Now is a perfect time for Afro-Americans to support the brotherhood social club and community building. For years complaints have been heard about there not being any place to go. This club is filling that need. People who don't feel at home in the RIO' or other establishments that are predominately white oriented can look to the brotherhood club as a place of their own. It

The beginning of the great crackdown

by C. Antonio

October 14th, 1989...12:30 p.m. was the beginning of a movement that won't stop according to S.C.L.C. leaders. Small in number but large on commitment they marched from Albemarle Avenue, down Fleming, to 14th and 5th street to the Greenville Town Common.

There the speakers were large in number with basically the same message.

One ex-junkie/alcoholic approached the podium and his speech stirred the crowd dramatically. In summing up his speech, he told the crowd you can't talk about a junkie unless you've been a junkie, and the answer is not jail because you can buy as much dope in jail, (even from the guards) as out of jail. This man's last words were, the best help for a junkie is to show that junkie love.

In my assertion this was all for naught unless it is followed up. One big march won't make it. And we must stop looking to jails as the answer.

As Jim Rouse said in his speech, you have to give a young person a job (a chance to make legal money) or they will try to make the illegal money.

A Salute to the Brotherhood Club

features entertainment such as a game room. Wide screen cable TV and even a friendly card game.

The club's president is Clarence Baker who along with other club leaders has worked hard to raised the image and the standards of the brotherhood social club. According to Baker, "it's time for Black folks to come back home". He realizes that some people still reflect on the past but he is determined to see the brotherhood club gain the respect and appreciation that it deserves. The most important thing that the organization can provide according to Baker is a wholesome environment for young people. "They need a place in our community instead of hanging out on the corner" says president Baker. He also reflects on his own life and says that he knows about the rough life on the streets because he has seen tough times early as a teenager in Williamston, NC and later after he moved to New York. "I know the hard life and the good life" says Baker.

As Clarence Baker and all of the brotherhood members try to share some of the good life with others, Afro-American in Greenville and surrounding areas are invited to do their part by supporting the brotherhood social club. Persons interested in becoming more involved with the club or using its facilities can contact the organization by contacting Clarence Baker at 758-5695 or 757-3226. Brotherhood is a perfect strategy on which to build a better community. We can sit on the sidelines and complain or we can get involved-the choice is ours...The brotherhood social club is offering us that choice.

The Iron Maiden A Tribute To Willie Mae Carney

by Carlos Dawson

She could look a storm right straight in the eye. She could calm the winds until it blowed by. She'd go into any situation if things were not right. And if things were not changed, they would surely get a fight.

She spoke her mind in a very calm way. She could mesmerize you with things she would say.

Whoever you were, to her you were a friend and she'd help fight your battles until the end.

Wherever she'd go, she'd show her tough love and she got her strength from the man above.

We'll hold your hand while you're on your way and we'll never forget the IRON MAIDEN Willie Mae.

I love you ... And will never forget you.

Dear Dan:

I would like to commend you for the excellent way the funeral was carried out for Ms. Willie Mae Carney. I know her family must have been pleased, because it was planned and organized to perfection. In fact it was one of the nicest funerals I ever attended. It was indeed a pleasure for me to have had a part in recognizing some of the fine work Ms. Carney did while she lived.

Dan, your background and expertise is indicative of your dedication to your profession. The citizens of our area are very fortunate to have you serving in such an important role. I, for one, appreciate your dedication to one of the most important professions there is. My warmest personal regards

COMMUNICATING WITH YOUR PARENTS

by Cynthia L. Doctor

This week's column is a message to children in the many families in our community. Although this column has been primarily an aid and an appeal to parents, it's the children's turn this week.

Have you ever had a problem that you were afraid to discuss with your parents? Perhaps this feeling was based on fear of punishment, loss of affection, or loss of respect from your parents. Some of the roles of childhood and of being in a family are to learn to accept discipline, to obey, and to make the necessary changes in your behavior. Therefore the fear of punishment from your parents is a legitimate one. It is a parent's responsibility to punish for improper behavior. Punishment is generally much more severe if parents learn from outsiders (teacher, neighbor, police, etc.) things that you should have trusted them enough to tell them.

Consider for the moment the types of punishments that exist today. Compare these punishments to those of your parents. Police or legal punishment may be harsh. Schoolteachers and principals' punishments, may be impersonal. Such impersonal discipline can lower self esteem. Outside authorities usually are much more severe and restrictive in their punishment and discipline than are parents. Parents discipline and counsel with love and understanding. Regardless of your feelings today, as an adult, you'll look back at some of your life experiences and give your parents the praise!

A Word of Thanks to the Students of East Carolina University

By now, you've heard just how dangerous Greenville's annual Halloween celebration can be. You've heard about the large numbers of students injured and assaulted last year, about the tremendous property damage -- and you've thought about the potential threats posed by the outsiders who flock to the downtown area looking for excitement.

By now, you probably know that a committee composed of students, business and government leaders reached unanimous agreement and reported the following:

- Reacting to the riots of 1974 and 1975, the City Council halted the Halloween celebrations from 1976 to 1979. During that period, the downtown bars closed their doors.
- In 1979, the City Council reversed its position and allowed the celebrants to party in the streets once again.
- In 1987, the number of Halloween partygoers swelled to more than 20,000 and more streets were closed off for the celebration. Five persons were injured, seven were arrested and the City spent 800 manhours in employee overtime, costing taxpayers between $10,000 and $15,000.
- In 1988, although the crowd was much smaller than the year before, with between 8,000 and 10,000 persons present, the number of arrests jumped to 56 and an unknown number of persons were injured.
- Small gangs of youths from outside the city assaulted numerous people at the 1988 celebration, intentionally striking men and women alike and running away into the large crowd before police officers could catch them.

East Carolina students have responded by asking friends to stay at home this Halloween. Residence halls won't allow nonresidents to spend the night on campus. Sororities and fraternities are closing their doors to out-of-towners, too. And everywhere, students are making plans for a safe Halloween without the use of alcohol. We thank you. The Greenville community is grateful for your support.

DOCTOR'S CORNER

For example, suppose you are pressured by your peers to use drugs, join a gang, or to engage in sexual activities. You do not feel that you are ready or want to be involved in these types of activity. You also are afraid to discuss the issue with your parents. Given the opportunity to discuss it, your parents can give you very effective ways to handle the situation. More than likely they have experienced the same pressures. Their experiences put them in a far better position to view situations objectively and maturely. They love you and have your best interest at heart. TALK to your parents. Parental love withstands the tests of time. Your parents will be there when all others turn their backs.

Let's suppose that you have succumbed to the pressures previously described. You know that what you are doing is wrong. Or worse, you've committed dangerous acts in a gang, became addicted to drugs, gotten pregnant or fathered a child. Who, more than likely, will you see through police and court action; drug rehabilitation; and the consequences of early parenting? YOUR PARENTS.

Remember, children have roles in the family, just as do parents. One of the roles of children in families is to accept the protection efforts of their parents. Parental protection efforts include meeting your physical, emotional, and educational needs. DON'T BE AFRAID TO GO TO YOUR PARENTS FOR HELP.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Editor:

I greet you with love, truth, peace, freedom and justice. This appeal plea is written from a man in suffering, anguish, and full of sorrow due to the burdensome agony of aloneness, which being imprisoned creates when ones family and friends have turned their backs on them. As I sit here in my hot dreary dorm, I think and pray about life. As I go through the harsh regulations, the degradation, anger and frustration; I constantly try to find ways and solutions to make my plight lighter.

For it is to the national interest of this society, and ourselves to try and bridge the gap that has separated the male and female principle. So, I appeal to your reasoning. I would like for you to put my plight on your bulletin board. I'm a man on the path of raising my consciousness to stand perpendicular on the Square of Life; and I need your help. I seek unconditional friends and their spiritual natures. My want and need of them has evolved from my struggle to free myself from the fraps of exploitation; and negative criticism about men knowing how to build strong relationships or friendships with people in general. Some people get a sense of themselves in prison, and some get a false sense when one has ill-defined goals and false perceptions of one's capabilities. I've positives to offer!

I write you out of desperation with sincere hope you will acknowledge my financial status (indigent) and unable to provide you with the necessary correspondence. My name is Robert Williams Jr., but all my friends call me (Spud) the people who chose to write, may call me that also if they choose to become a frined. I'm (Pisces), but a strong willed Pisces. I'm 5 feet 9 inches tall, I weigh 170 pounds solid and feel real friendships or relationships must begin with common interests, aspirations; and a quality commitment to a continuous renewal to help each other through all lonely times. I will make no promises, just attempts. I want to plant positive attempts of becoming their unconditional friend, softly in the fertile grounds of their being. My actions will speak louder than my words. I trust all the people in your area are moved by actions?

For I'm that person whop can stimulate them to new heights of understanding of themselves. I'm p resently living in a dismal crypt call prison, and I'm a lonely man that is in need of correspondence.

RESOLUTION

Clergy And Church Leadership Registration And Get-Out-The-Vote Oath

WHEREAS, The role of the Black Minister the church meetings during the Civil War period cannot be overemphasized. It was at the church services that the word of approaching freedom was often given.

WHEREAS, Often plans for and entire escape operation were formed by ministers and his congregation during a seemingly ordinary religious service.

WHEREAS, The Churches organized and united for the emancipation and liberation of the enslaved population.

WHEREAS, The Black Church was the cornerstones for Black progress.

WHEREAS, The Black Church was the drum major for Black politics.

WHEREAS, That we will continue to allow the voice of the Black Church to cry for justice from the mountain top and demand righteousness at the ballot box.

RESOLVED, The voice of the church will say, "God has made you free." Although you have been deprived of your God-given rights by your so-called masters, you are now as free as I am, and if those that claim to be your superiors do not know that you are free, then rise up with righteous indignation and take the vote and the ballot and teach them that you are.

RESOLVED, That in honor of the legendary Black church movement, we will establish a Citizenship Sunday. Register every child of God and fit them for the battle of the ballot box that the walls of oppression and racism might come tumbling down.

RESOLVED, God wills us free; Man wills us slaves; I will as God wills, God's will be done.

If you pledge your support to the Clergy and Church Leadership Registration and Registration and GET-OUT-THE-VOTE OATH, please acknowledge by saying, "I do."

ISLAM IN FOCUS

IN THE NAME OF ALLAH THE BENEFICENT THE MERCIFUL

by Notia Hallmah Namaz

As Salaam Alaikum, Greetings of Peace from Masjid Al Nur. "I bear witness that there is no god but Got and Muhammad is His Messenger".

The second part of "Shahada" says that Muhammad is a prophet of God. When you accept Muhammad as God's prophet you also accept all the prophets that came before him and you accept that all the prophets taught the Unity of God. In addition you also accept the living guidance Muhammad left for us to follow.

In the life of prophet Muhammad you have clear examples on how to conduct yourselves and your affairs. Islam encompasses all aspects of life including government, private and personal affairs such as education, marriage, finance and dress. Muhammad shows you that God's words is compatible with everyday life. As each verse was revealed, it was immediately expanded in his lifestyle. The state he established and the laws that were enforced came from Quran. By following Quran he proved that there's no poverty, hunger, prejudice, or ignorance, in a God fearing state.

Society should strive to live in accordance to God's laws and not outside of them. As a human being you prefer your way of doing things. You may not like being told how to live your life. The Quran teaches that God did not create anything in vain, nor did He create for sport and play. Everything you do on earth will either bring you closer to God or take you further away.

Muhammad instructs you to think about structuring your life in a way that is pleasing to God. This doesn't mean living in poverty or denying yourself the benefits of the world. On the contrary, it means building a society that considers not just your physical needs, but also your spiritual ones. In our society we have a democracy based on separation of church and state. We are free to worship as we please, but when it comes to corruption we have no spiritual leg to stand on. Our laws are not God conscious. It is difficult to change unjust laws, or enforce laws that protect the environment and the innocent from the greedy. Sometimes our laws take away from us something basic and Godlike, for example, congregational prayers in our public schools. So far removed are we from doing what is Godlike in our laws that a question like abortion becomes a painful ordeal. A god-fearing government is nothing to fear, if you have a clear guidance and a clear example to follow. Islam gives you both. The Quran, which gives you God's eternal guidance, and prophet Muhammad, who shows you how to structure your life with it.

You didn't have a clear guidance to follow before Islam. No prophet before Muhammad brought a strong enough foundation for you to build your entire life on. In fact, prophet Moses comes the closest of any prophet to Muhammad. Can you ignore Moses' prophecy of a prophet like him? Even Jesus did not establish a state, he simply came as a forerunner to the one who would. Jesus, actually passed Muhammad the baton. He did not meet the criteria Moses described. That was not his mission. Jesus did not intend to stay around long enough to show us how to establish a God-fearing

What are Black studies

by Salam Alakum

It is the Universal study of the multidimensional aspects of Black thought and practice in our current and historical unfolding.

Black Studies is a social science and as all social sciences, it has its own particular focus on human relations and behavior. Through the studying of Black History, you will come to understand the Law for it's the Universal laws that govern this plane of thought. The law of the universe is the orderly working out of the principles of being, or the Divine ideals into expression and manifestation throughout creation.

Only Spiritual things are eternal and real. Blacks are real in essence, we represent what is known as the positive life force. We are the Images of the Creator of all things put here to reflect the attributes of He, who we are to reflect. If we are to be perfect reflections of that which we are to reflect then it stands to reason that we must know all that the Creator knows. Our mind is the priest of the temple of being in material plane of effect is designed to reveal (360) degrees of knowledge, 360 degrees being that which is required to make a circle, and a circle is nothing more than a circle and all life travels in a circle.

Everything in the Universe revolves in a circle. The galaxy, the stars, the earth, the sun, the seasons, Civilizations, and the Atoms, travel in a perfect circle, so, we are where we are by necessity, experiencing the dual nature of life for conformation purposes. One always ask the question. Why does the Black man, woman, and child go through so much hell? I, say get into Black Studies. You will come to understand that we as a people are only products of the elements of the universe and we are not above the law. We are born, live, and die, we exist to become as perfect as the source from which we came. That source, that infinite Mind is what is called the Alpha and Omega; the beginning and the end; truth and falsehood; the Black man and woman. In order to be re-united with the infinite force, we must have qualities that reflect such Afrocentric Awareness of all that is, comes from experience.

In order to obtain that which I speak, one needs knowledge of self. To know! To know everything, one must experience everything within one's lifetime. During our journey through this experience we must become masters and slaves, murders and victims, etc...etc... Only when one does not learn from ones experience, have they sinned. To come away from any experience ignorant of the lessons to be learnt is evil, or negative, is life hindering. Black Studies, then, is both a particular and general social science and shares with the other social sciences similar focus of inquiry and analysis. It shares with political science the concern with the problems of gaining, maintaining and using power, especially as it relates to Blacks, and with economics, the concern of the relationship of race and class to economic opportunities and distributive inequalities. The studying of Black Studies and other Afrocentric studies we as a people won't be able to repeat our past negative experiences.

Black Studies is based on the number (7). The number (7) represents positive moon, fertility, wisdom and vision. It expresses itself in seven areas, Black History, Black Religion, Black Social Organization, Black Politics, Black Economics, Black Creative Production, Black Art, Black Music and Black Literature, and Black Psychology. In the image of the Creator are all of the secrets and mysteries of the universe; every outer manifestation is being reflected in our make-up. So, we must study from the center of ourselves to get a complete understanding of what to be done and what's not to be.

The first relevance of Black Studies is that it is a definitive contribution to humanity's understanding itself. There is only one possible science, Universal Law the science of human society, of humans in the process of self, social and world construction. But as we view humanity today, it's in its abstract form, a mere construction for the convenience of conformation. The positive force of life had to experience the negative. We had to see the world in its diversity as well as its unity and universality. As living organisms on this plane of thought we all experience the lessons of one another in some way or another. We all will experience the heights of power, prestige and glory. We all will experience the depths of despair, desperation and wretched hopelessness. The only way to gain 360 degrees of experience is through trial and error. With that thought in mind, Black Studies, then, becomes important because it is a study of a particular people which aids in the study of humanity as a whole.

Black Studies is an important contribution to humanity's self-understanding, because Blacks, African people, are the fathers and mothers of both humanity and human civilization. Thus, to omit a study of the parent people of humanity is to deprive oneself and humanity of a holistic and effective understanding of itself. The only way one generation can succeed another is through the bloodline. The same blood that runs through our veins is the same blood that runs through our ancestors; at least the genetic messages are the same. The effect of the experiences that our ancestors underwent is stamped into our genetics, signature-messages, chemical formulas that have been passed on to us through the bloodline, the seed. This, then, is our nature. Our ancestors were exposed to humane experiences, vast knowledge, understanding of the laws of the universe and knew nothing but, truth.

Our minds is like a garden, in which we may intelligently cultivate or allow our minds to run wild; but whether cultivated or neglected, it must, and will bring forth. If we put no useful seed into it, then an abundance of useless weed-seeds will fall therein, and will continue to produce their kind. Through the study of Black Studies we will be able to rebuild our character. Thought and character are one and as character can only manifest and discover itself through environment the aphorism, as a person thinketh in his heart so is he, not only embraces the whole of a person's being, but is comprehensive as to reach out to every condition and circumstance of his life. A person is literally what he thinks, his character being the complete sum of all his thoughts. So, we must start thinking Afrocentricity about all things. For Afrocentricity is the most logical outgrowth of the collective consciousness of the Black Race as a whole.

Who am I, to say all this? I'm that I'm a child from the Infinite Universe, from the House of the Prophets, a member of the Grand Lodge; Al-Ke-bulan.

state on earth. Muhammad did. Just as Jesus and Moses said he would. Muhammad came with a clear life pattern which shows you how to take Scripture and make it the standard of your life. Scripture makes it clear that to follow the example it lays for you is a sure way to success.

So Shahada means that, you accept God for Who He is, without additions or subtractions, and you will make His laws the foundation of your life no matter how difficult it may be.
