Your Best Suit

Is here, ready for you to step into. But before you do so just examine the touch of "tony" tailoring it bears inside and out. The grace of correctness everywhere apparent—the fabrics new and elegant. You'll find nothing like it in Ready-made Clothing elsewhere. It is exclusively the Frank Wilson idea and that means: Every detail looked after with all the care that a first-class artist bestows upon his work.

FRANK WILSON, The Leader in Clothing.

THE YOUNG AND THE OLD.

BEVERLY R. DUDLEY.

The young grow old as the days grow dim,
 The aged lose their sight;
 The young may live to see a morn,
 But old age dies with night.

We think as we rise with the morning sun,
 Of the beautiful eventide,
 Of the morning of youth and maiden fair,
 As they glide on side by side.

We think of the glorious noonday glare,
 As the noontide merges in,
 And we always think as daylight dies,
 Of what we might have been.

And oftimes when the shades of night,
 Have clothed old age so dear,
 We think of the morning, noon and eve
 And see the darkness near.

We sigh for the morn that's vanished away.
 The first sweet-perfumed bloom;
 But the aged and withered and gray
 must leave
 For Heaven or Eternity's doom.
 —Richmond Dispatch.

Words Unnecessary.

Woman does all she can to render herself irresistible, and then orders man to keep his distance.
 —Galveston News.

No orders in that particular are now needed, her sleeves giving sufficient warning that he must not approach too near.

Ex Cashier Holland is now in jail in Charlotte. He surrendered himself to his brother-in-law, Mr. Shaw. He says he has never left Charlotte, but on the other hand has always intended to surrender himself. It is said that he looks careworn and his family seems to trouble him very much. An effort will be made to give bail for him.

There is no failure of the bank at Roxboro. Its doors are now open and the business is proceeding as usual. Cashier Jones has given bail and is out of jail. He is helping to straighten things in the bank. It is reported that his friends will make good his shortage. Public opinion is about equally divided as to his being guilty of robbing the Bank. His trial has been set for August.

LOCAL NOTES AND TOBACCO JOINTINGS.

BY O. L. JOYNER.

The recent rains are ruinous to young tobacco plants.

There has already been 32 inches of rain fall this year says Col. Sugg.

Mr. Boyd, of Winston, spent a portion of last week in town. He is prospecting around with an eye to locating on some of the eastern markets.

It is reported that six hundred new tobacco barns are being built in Edgecombe county, N. C. The market in Tarboro will be probably reopened next fall.

There are now in the State 160 warehouses and the state produces about 40,000,000 pounds a little over 200,000 pounds to each house. Somebody is bound to suffer.

The subscribers to stock in a tobacco warehouse for Kinston are requested to meet at Mr. J. W. Granger's office to-morrow—day—afternoon at four o'clock for the purpose of electing directors and taking steps to let out the contract. It is important that all should attend this meeting and that steps should be taken to insure a good warehouse for our town. Movements are on foot to secure warehouses in Snow Hill and Grifton.—Kinston Free Press.

And so Tarboro, Kinston, Snow Hill, Grifton and Ayden are all talking tobacco warehouses. Of all these Tarboro has the best chance. There are in Tarboro now two well built and commodious warehouses and several prize houses so in this line it will not cost a dollar to start the ball again to rolling. It is backed up by a pretty fair territory and if they can get the right man to take hold it will not be such uphill business to run but from a market where all the houses must be built from the start and more induced to take hold and push for success deliver us off deliver us. We have been there. It will take thousands of dollars, patience, grit and plenty of it to start a new market, and get it safely beyond the breakers.

CONSULTING THE SIGNS

In This Particular Instance They Did Not Fail.

They Encouraged a Mountain Farmer to Ask the Girl of His Choice to Share His New Home—An Easy Bet.

I was sitting on a log in the shade of the Cumberland company's sawmill one June afternoon, when Jack Frazee, a mountain farmer, pretty well to do and a bachelor, came by,
 and observing my very evident comfort, invited himself to sit down on a part of the log not occupied. I was glad enough to have somebody help me loaf for the hour or so I had to spare, and greeted his proposition with applause. We talked awhile about politics and hard times, and then Jack became scattering in his ideas, and I was pretty certain wanted to talk to me on something more important to him than the general affairs of the country at large. I let him get around to the subject himself so as not to confuse him, and it wasn't long before he was ready to present his case.

"Colonel," he hesitated, "do you believe in signs?"

"Well, Jack," I replied, "it depends on what kind of signs. For instance, if I see a sign over a building—'Sawmill'—I don't go in there to buy dry goods."

"I don't mean that kind," he said, with a nervous laugh.

"No?" and I looked at him just a bit curiously.

"No. I mean the other kind.
 Those that are signs as is signs.
 You know what signs is, don't you?"
 he explained, lucidly.

"Superstitions, you mean?" I ventured.

"Yes," he answered, with a gleam in his face. "Them's them.
 Do you believe in them?"

"That depends, too. Have you been seeing any?"

He blushed sheepishly, and changed his seat on the log.

"Well, that's what I wanted to ask you about," he said. "You know Mandy Milser, don't you?"

I nodded, for I had seen Mandy, and she was the best specimen of young womanhood in that neck of woods.

"Well," he went on, "I've been kinder sparkin' Mandy for better'n a year now, and she ain't very in-couridgin'. In course, I hain't ever mentioned the subject right to her, but I've been beatin' the devil around the stump mighty close for some time, and I don't know whether I've got much hopes er not. When I got my new house about done, I ast her one day if she thought thar ort to be a porch in front uv it, and she said she thought they ort. So I put one thar. Next time I seen her I ast if thar ort to be a palin' fence er a post an' rail across the yard, and she said they ort. So I put one thar. Then, after that, I ast her if the house ort to be painted white or pink, and she said she thought it ort to be white. So I painted it white.

 One day I was at her house talkin', and I ast her if the well ort to have a windlass er a sweep, and she said a sweep, fer the sweep was so picturesque — what's picturesque,
 colonel?" and he stopped a moment.

I explained what it was to be picturesque, and he went on.

"Well, I didn't know," he said,
 "but I put up the sweep. Then I ast her if I ort to set out peach trees or apple trees in the yard, and she said ther ort to be both, 'cause they would come handy for family use.
 So I set out both kinds. Last week I moved into the one room I've got fixed up, and I've been kinder lonesome and thinkin' like. Yistiddy Mandy came by, and I was settin' on the porch, and she stopped at the gate a minute and said she was mighty glad to see what a nice house
 I had, and she hoped I'd be powerful comfortable in it, and I ast her if she didn't think I ort to have a wife to take keer uv it, and she said she thought I ort."

Jack stopped his story to mop his brow, for the exertion or interest was making him warm.

"What did you do then?" I inquired, with a smile.

"Not a darn thing, colonel," he said, in a tone of disapproval of himself, "and that's what I want to ast you about. If thar's any truth in signs, don't you believe I could come nigh gittin' Mandy ef I was to ast her, say this very evening?"

Jack's whole heart and soul were in his question, and I promptly slapped him on the back and offered to bet him four dollars that he could.

And I didn't lose my bet. —Detroit

"Let Us Pray," He Said.

A minister wished to ascertain what influence the hard times had upon his congregation, and said, at the close of his sermon: "I would ask every one who is still able to pay his debts to rise from his seat." The whole congregation arose with the exception of one man. The parson then asked that all who were unable to meet their bills should rise. Thereupon the afore-mentioned solitary individual got up, a hungry-looking, poorly clad man whose features revealed the terrible struggle of one fighting hopelessly against the vicissitudes of this world. The minister regarded him attentively, yet kindly "How is it, my friend," he said, "that you are the only one among all these people who cannot pay his debts?" "Sir," answered the man hesitatingly, "Sir, I publish a newspaper, and these my brothers who rose just now are all my subscribers, and—." But the minister interrupted him hastily. "Let us pray," he said.

The latest about Madeline Pollard is that she is to go abroad for four years as the travelling companion of a wealthy lady who has taken an interest in her. The latest from her friend, W. C. P. Breckinridge, was that he is trying to climb over Joe Blackburn into the United States Senate—Wilmington Star.

Don't Let

Every merchant who beats a tattoo through the columns of the news papers make you dance to his music. If you do you'll soon be taking steps that would set Carmencita to shame. Everything in my Spring Clothes, Hat and Furnishing Goods, Dry Goods, Shoes, Notions, and Dress Goods stock is good. We shun the dangerous association with the very cheap and court the favor of honest quality and the lovers of it. The fineness of the fabrics, the selectness of the patterns and the honesty of the qualities are far more eloquent than the loftiest words.
