What is Happening Over the State.

Statesville is to have a telephone exchange.

A letter bearing the following address passed through the Statesville postoffice Tuesday: "Brother president Cleveland Washington City." The letter was mailed at Evalin, this county.—Statesville Landmark.

Miss Susie Saunders, daughter of Col. Saunders, who resides near Grimesland, N. C., had the misfortune to fall down stairs yesterday, bruising herself very badly and breaking her nose. Dr. D. T. Tayloe was called and we hear had to extract several pieces of bone. We hope she will soon recover.—Washington Messenger.

A Rowing Party.

Yesterday evening at 6 o'clock a party of young ladies, through invitation of Mr. J. J. Cherry, went on a row up the Tar. They went as far as Goff Landing and then disembarked and partook of a sumptuous spread furnished by the young ladies. On the return trip, while floating down stream, the gay voices could be heard on that sweet old song "Mandeline." The following composed the party: Misses Delia Marshall, Bessie White, Lillie Wilson, Blanche Barden, Lizzie Blow and Myrtle Wilson. Uncle John Cherry was chaperon.

Cards are out for the marriage of Miss Caroline Virginia Harding to Mr. Charles Edward Perkins, at Kinston, Wednesday morning, June 12th. Miss Harding is a daughter of the late Rev. Israel Harding. Mr. Parker is of Springfield, Ill.

Kinder Mixed.

Yesterday evening while Mr. Walter Pender was coming in from the country on his wheel, he was attacked by two very vicious dogs and as his attention was directed in keeping off the dogs he lost control of his wheel and he ran head-on into a fence, and there was a conglomeration of wheel, dog, fence and Pender. Walter says what saved him from getting bit by the dogs was that he rode a Columbia.

Personal.

Mr. Bryant Gardner, of Grifton, N. C., who has been visiting the family of Mr. Joel Thomas, to whom he is related, returned home Tuesday. Mr. Gardner is about 45 years old and is only four feet four inches high. He is physically well developed with the exception of his arms and legs being short for the size and length of his body, and weighs 135 pounds. Mr. Gardner is intelligent, companionable and interesting in manner and made quite a number of friends among our people. This was his first visit to Henderson but he says he does not expect it to be his last.—Henderson Gold Leaf.

The Durham Recorder got caught out in a shower and this was the result:

The rain descended upon the plants,
And made them grow taller,
But when it struck our summer pants
It made them grow smaller.

A. W. Wright, a broker of St. Louis, has disappeared and $200,000 belonging to his firm are missing with him.

FRANK WILSON THE KING CLOTHIER.

"Happy on the Way."

A colored woman professing conversion was imparting the glad news to several sisters as they passed along to their respective places of work early this morning. As they came near the Methodist church quite a number of them had congregated and they indulged in a season of rejoicing together.

Have Your Eyes Examined.

Prof. P. D. Mahoney, specialist in lenses for the eye, is at the Ricks House for one week, where examinations for all forms of defective sight will be thoroughly and scientifically made.

If your sight, either distant or near, is imperfect; if your eyes water or burn after reading, sewing or any other kind of work, if your vision is blurred when looking at an object fifteen feet or more away; if after prolonged use of your eyes they feel strained and your head aches, you certainly require glasses, and should not for a day neglect their use.

If your defective sight can be improved by glasses, the proper one will be selected for you; if on the other hand the defect depends upon disease or such abnormal condition of the eye that glasses will not help, you will be frankly so informed and so saved a useless expense.

I guarantee every pair of glasses ordered to be satisfactory, and expect to win your confidence by the skillful and accurate manner in which they give you improved and comfortable vision. All examinations free.

EVERY AFTERNOON (EXCEPT SUNDAY)

There was a dedication of a monument to the Confederate dead in Chicago on the 30th of May. Gen. Wade Hampton delivered the address. It was a grand and eloquent appeal to bury all sectional animosities and jealousies. There were many distinguished soldiers present, both from the Northern and Southern army.

If any one will read Justice Avery's opinion on the case of Carr vs. Coke in reference to the mortgage law he will be convinced that there is still power in the courts to investigate fraud and that the people can and ought to get relief through the courts. Justice Avery says the decision of the majority of the court gives immunity to wrong doers and encouragement to others to attempt like frauds in the future.

The following thoughts from the address of Dr. C. E. Taylor at the commencement at Littleton Business College this week are worthy of the earnest consideration of our boys and young men:

A boy makes of himself what he wills, not forgetting inheritance and environment. The end of education is the development of character. In man there is a spirit; in animals there is instinct. The bees which built their hive in the lion's carcass, construct their hives to-day on the same plan, but the possibilities of intellect are unbounded. Fossil ideas are discarded. Prof. Drummond's instructions to the librarian of the Medical Department of Edinburgh University to store away every volume ten years old, was a requirement of the age.

The young sow seed of bad character. They come to life amid storms and temptations. Acts form habit, habit shapes destiny. Don't be unmindful of a sound body. The country youth is to be congratulated for this training between the plow handles, college athletics with moderations are to be encouraged.

Choose your own professions for what the Gods make us do, they make us what to do.

"Familiarize yourselves with what has been done and what is to be done in the world of thought and invention. Ability should not be overestimated. We are wise in proportion as we know our selves. We are amidst a magnificent revival of learning in North Carolina. Education is accessible to every youth of the State. Heed the opportunity."

A Stammerer's Wit.

On one of the old stage routes of eastern Maine was a jolly driver whose habit of stammering was the occasion of some innocent amusement on the part of his friends.

One day his lumbering coach was stopped by a foot-passenger who inquired the way to the next town. The driver attempted to tell him, but no words came. At last, waving his hand desperately toward a fork in the road, he said:

"T-t-try both roads, and y-you'll get there fore I can't tell you."

On another occasion he was helping an uncomfortably stout man into the coach. The man was so large that there was more or less delay in finding him sufficient room. Irritated by the attention he had attracted the passenger exclaimed, in imitation of the driver:

"There! s-start up, your old b-b-bean pot of t-team."

"All r-ready, n-now sir,—we've got the pork in!" was the laughing reply.

RILEY'S REVENGE.

The Red Record Shows to One Night Nine Victims.

Newton, Kan., in 1871—The Cowboys Celebrate—Result Was Thirteen Dead Men, No One Knows How Many Wounded.

"In the way of prompt and deadly shooting nothing in all the red calendar of homicide in the far west beats the record of the gambler Riley, at Newton, Kan., made one night in 1871," said C. B. Durers, of Topeka. "The Atchison railroad had been built to that point during the year and a flourishing town had grown up round the terminus to which the Texas cattle drives that had been going to Abilene now came. With the gamblers, cowboys and railroad men that thronged the streets it was a very lively sort of town, where dance halls and gambling places were in full blast, and pistol shooting was often heard by day and night."

"On the night in question the Texas cattle drives were in for shipment, and the cowboys were celebrating. Some of the Texans had a grudge against the officers of the town, and so they came in that night prepared for trouble, and set about making it straight way. They killed the city marshal, the deputy marshal, and another man early in the evening. Later they poured into Piukham's dance hall to the number of twenty-five or thirty. The three men already killed were not enough to satisfy them and they wanted more. Upon a bench at the side of the room a man was sitting with a girl on his knee. One of the cowboys walked up to him, slapped him on the shoulder and said:

"I'll teach you to hold my girl in your lap!" and shot him dead.

"Riley was in the dance hall and the man just killed was a particular friend of his. Without a word Riley stepped back in the big double doors in the front of the saloon and closed them. Placing his back against the doors he drew a pair of revolvers and fell to shooting, one man against the crowd. Men tumbled left and right and shots rang out all over the room in response to the drum-roll cracking of Riley's pistols. Shots perforated and splintered the door all about him, but he stood there firing until his pistols were emptied. Behind the bar which ran along one side of the room he knew where the armory was kept ready for instant use. Leaping over a counter he caught up a revolver that lay on a shelf beneath and kept on with his firing. Before he had emptied the pistol that he had found behind the bar, the men inside had forced the front doors open, those that could rushed out, and Riley shot his last man in the middle of the street. When he came counting up losses it was discovered there were thirteen dead men in the town due to that night's shooting, of whom nine cowboys had fallen to Riley's hand. How many wounded ones rode or were carried away by their comrades to the cattle could only be guessed at.

"There was one curious incident of this fight not generally known. Riley it was supposed was unhurt in the shooting. A doctor hastily summoned to the scene came to the side of a cowboy who was dying.

"How is it, doc?" asked the wounded man. "Am I going to pull through?"

"The doctor shook his head. 'I'm sorry, my poor fellow, but I cannot give you any hope.'

"How about the man who shot me," said the cowboy. "Is he dead?"

"No," answered the doctor. "He was not even wounded."

"I know better than that," said the cowboy. "I know he was hit. I was right by the side of him when he shot me, and before I fell I fired and hit him under the arm. You examine and you'll find that he's wounded there."

"When the doctor got round to Riley he examined him, and sure enough, found that he had received a flesh wound under his arm which in the excitement of fighting he had not noticed. Riley left the town after the inquest and did not appear there again. No effort seems to have been made to arrest or bring him to trial for an act that was generally held to be justifiable and praiseworthy.

"I got a message sometime afterward from Kansas City saying that Riley was there and asking if I wanted him," said Maj. R. H. Spivey, of the land department of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, who was mayor of Newton at the time of the killing. "I sent back word that they were perfectly welcome to keep him there. We had begun to build up a population in Newton and we didn't need him."

Not to Be Caught That Way.

"If I should ask you to marry me," he said, smiling softly and sweetly, "would you say 'yes'?"

"My dear fellow," she responded in a tone of gentle reproof, "you talk to me as if I were receiving my first proposal!"—Detroit Free Press.

SELF-RELIANCE.

Why Parents Should Teach It to Their Children.

It May Sometime Be the Means of Saving Not Only Their Own But Other Lives—Should Be Among the First Lessons.

It is a task demanding time, patience, perseverance, steadiness and gentleness to teach a baby to walk, but the necessity for such knowledge is apparent to every individual.
 It is also necessary to teach it the use of its hands, and how to help itself to food and the other needs of its physical existence.

The majority of parents think it obligatory upon them to teach it ways in which to provide for its everyday wants; but it is rare, indeed, to find those who make a study of instructing the little ones in things that pertain to accidents and the unusual affairs of everyday life.
 There are persons of whom it may truthfully be said that they are never at a loss in emergencies. They have self-reliance, executive ability, and that quickness of comprehension that makes them invaluable in sudden need, or when disaster or calamity overtake a community.

We are wont to look upon this faculty as inherent, or, as we express it, a natural gift. It might be interesting to note the result of careful training on these lines, and see whether mental alertness, the ability to weigh, and judge and decide with precision and dispatch, is not as acquirable as the power to stand on one's feet, use the bean shooter with unerring aim, bring down the small bird from the bough with a pebble, or impale an unoffending bull-frog with a stick whittled to a point.

The great trouble in matters of this sort is that children are not developed in this direction. Once in awhile a parent thinks it of sufficient importance to teach his child a course of conduct proper in times of danger or when there is an imperative demand for action and no time to work out the problem.

When public and private schools began the fire drill, the training that enabled the teachers to clear a schoolroom in an incredibly short time without a panic, the idea was ridiculed by a great many persons, but there are numbers of instances when this sort of drill has unquestionably saved life and prevented those horrible casualties that shock communities and leave heart-breaking vacancies in families.

Some years ago a man who lived on the shore of a large body of water made up his mind that there should be no deaths by drowning in his family. So gradually he accustomed the children to the water, and, after some practice, was able to throw the little ones over his head into the surf. He taught them to change position in somewhat the same way as does the cat, in order that they might fall in such shape as to receive no injury. Timid at first, yet confident of the rescuing power of their father's hand, they gained courage, until their feats of somersaulting from his shoulders were the wonder of the community. Before the children were ten years old there was scarcely an accident or emergency along the coast that they were not able to understand and meet with the quickness and comprehensiveness of veterans. On more than one occasion they were the means of saving life, and once, in a driving storm, a twelve-year-old boy in a cork jacket organized a life-saving brigade that brought a disabled yacht into a safe harbor, which otherwise would have broken to pieces on a projecting ledge of rocks. It is claimed by many that it is entirely possible to teach children to meet all emergencies; indeed, that they are much more easily taught than when they have grown up and formed the habit of inactivity and the dumb terror that strikes unreasoning human beings and many animals. To stand paralyzed with fear is the least desirable of the many dreadful situations in life. It often means personal peril and the destruction of all that is near and dear.

It is a wise parent who teaches mental alertness along with the first lessons in setting the little feet in safe places.—N. Y. Ledger.
