Out in Beaver Dam.

A gentleman who does not get out in the country often tells the REFLECTOR that the other day he took a trip out in the Beaver Dam section. The splendid growing crops were a revelation to him, especially tobacco. A great many new barns were noticed going up and old ones being repaired. He stopped at Mr. William McArthur's and went over his farm. Mr. McArthur is a model young farmer and has his place fully up to date. He also visited Mr. T. A. Nichols and was very much impressed with the crop of pretty young ladies he found gathered there, Pitt, Greene and Wayne counties being represented. It looked like a good opportunity for the right young men to reap their golden harvest. The gentleman in question was very much impressed with his trip and says he is going again.

Who Got That Melon?

Mr. B. M. Starkey has a nice melon patch in his front yard. This morning he went out early, pulled two fine melons, placed them on the front porch and took a walk down town. Upon his return one of the melons had disappeared. He thinks the cause of this disappearance lay between four, but which of the four is the question. At any rate he is minus a melon, and says he would be glad if whoever has it would return it, as his better half will be home Saturday and he wants a melon for her.

IN THE STATE.

Record of Matters of General Interest.

From present outlook, a tobacco warehouse for Goldsboro is an assured fact. The amount sufficient to build has already been raised and the committee have now the selection of a suitable site under consideration.—Goldsboro Headlight.

On Wednesday as Mrs. Harvey, a sister of Mrs. Smedes, was entering the main gate at St. Mary's school, a negro boy approached her and snatched from her hand a purse containing $22. The boy was chased for some distance by a young man from that neighborhood who got stuck in the mud and thus it was that the thief escaped.—Raleigh News and Observer.

A man living near the Johnston and Wilson line, in Wilson county, made his wife eat fourteen biscuits at one sitting because she had burned them in cooking. He made her do this by threats. The next night a mob went to his house, and the man began to cry out for his friends. He was told that all the neighborhood was there. He was whipped and the crowd left him.

Dr. W. T. Spruill, a prominent citizen and practicing physician of Hilliardston, in Nash county, committed suicide Wednesday at his home with a pistol shot in the brains. It is alleged that on Sunday, Spruill attempted a criminal assault on a respectable married lady in the neighborhood, and yesterday papers for his arrest were placed in the hands of the county sheriff for service.

The State printers in publishing the lists of magistrates changed the names in 269 cases and added 85 names not shown on the certified list. The terms of office of magistrates have been changed in 89 cases. Six names on the certified list have been dropped by the State printers. If all these 449 changes were errors the State printers are very incompetent; if the changes were intentional the State printers acted unlawfully. How is it?

My loss, Your Gain.

Bill Nye's Advice.

Bill Nye in his advice to a young lady, "says it is quite proper to take a young man's arm after dark, but you should return it to him afterwards. Never let a young man take your arm however. He might criticize your muscles afterward, and it is one way to live. Should he attempt it, do not brain him on the spot, for the odor of escaping gas would be disagreeable, but tell him to try and be self-supporting, rather than to lean upon the arm of a timid girl. Should he be afraid of the dark, and again clutch wildly at your arm, call a cab and send him home. The cost will be slight, and you will never regret it."

Lumber is being hauled preparatory to building a large prize house for Forbes & Moye, adjoining the Planters Warehouse.

Capt. J. T. Smith tells us the Pitt Rifles cannot join the encampment at Ocracoke next month. The tobacco season is keeping many of the boys so busy they cannot get off.

The directors of the Thomasville Orphanage elected Rev. J. B. Boon Superintendent of that Institution at their annual meeting this week. We don't know what causes led to his election instead of J. H. Mills who is the founder of the Institution and who has been the Superintendent since its organization, and until we do—we will not criticize the action of the directors. We know this, that Mr. Mills has to all appearances been the right man in the right place, that no man in the State has done what he has for the orphans within its borders, that the history of all the orphan institutions in the State rests upon the unselfish work of this bighearted christian man, that the State owes him a debt of gratitude it can never repay, and that the people of North Carolina so feel towards him. These things being true we can say that the causes which led to his removal ought to be all sufficient, and unless they are the friends of Thomasville Orphanage will not be slow to openly disapprove the action of the Board in displacing Mr. Mills from the place which he seems to have filled so admirably from the beginning of the Institution.

Some mouths look like peaches and cream and some like a hole chopped into a brick wall to admit a new door or window. The mouth is a hotbed of toothaches, the bung-hole of oratory and a baby's crowning glory. It is the patriotism's fountain head and the tool chest for pie. Without it the politician would be a wanderer on the face of the earth and the orator would go down to an un-honored grave. It is the grocer's friend, the orator's pride, and the dentist's hope.

Whenever you see good roads in a county you can rest assured that county is a prosperous one. Good roads are an index to the prosperity of any section.—Le-noir Topic.

Hop Culture in North Carolina.

Mr. A. L. Jones of Hamilton, N. Y., an experienced hop grower, visited the Department of Agriculture yesterday. He informed the department that he had settled in North Carolina, near Warrenton. He comes for the purpose of growing hops in this State. He has two five acre fields now growing in hops near Rockingham, where he went on the 3:40 train to look after his interests. Mr. Jones is of the opinion that there are sections in this State as well adapted to the hop industry as in any part of New York State. He says if the hop ripens here in August (which they do) that an acre here is worth three or more in his native State. So if the hop is profitable (as it is) in New York, it should be more so here.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Mr. George F. Thomason has a new ground, in corn, 2 acres of which are cultivated, the remaining 6 acres being sowed. The two acres cultivated are in the richest part of the field, while the other is in the poorest, and yet the sowed corn is much the best, being a great deal larger. Why is this? Can some one explain?—Lenoir Topic.

It is Mr. Gladstone's latest statement that the older a man in good health becomes the greater his mental activity ought to be. He declares that the mind grows stronger and clearer as the body's vitality dwindles, and he does not see how anything except disease of the latter can prevent intellectual progress from continuing almost to the end of a man's life.

A WHITE POODLE.

How the "Second Midnight Run" Found a Mascot.

The "second midnight run" train on the Third avenue elevated road, while whirling down Forty-second street to the South ferry station at four-fifteen o'clock one morning came to a sudden stop at Thirty-eighth street.

The butchers, green grocers and other early birds who sleep on the train most of the way from Harlem to the markets, woke up with a start and craned their necks anxiously from the car windows to see what the trouble was.

Ahead a gasoline torch bobbed up and down in the darkness like a jack-o'-lantern on the track. The locomotives breathed and chafed impatiently, awaiting the return of the fireman.

A little way further he was seen in the light of his torch to bend over and take a bundle of something white up in his arms. He turned and came back with it.

A hundred heads protruding from windows watched him come.

"It is a baby," burst from them in one breath, and the entire lot scrambled for the engine, on the track and through the train.

Fireman Buck met them with his white bundle hugged close. They fell upon him, a perfect mob, with: "Chirp! Chirp! The little darling, how did the poor —"

"Wow," said the dear thing, and snapped at the nose poked nearest.

It was not a baby, but a puppy, a little white poodle dog trotting all alone down the elevated track from heaven knows where, in the small hours of the morning, when the engineer saw him and stopped the train just in time.

They took him into the cab, while the excited passengers went back to sleep, feeling that they had been imposed upon. Fireman Buck and the engineer didn't feel that way. They got the pup some milk down at South ferry and took him back with them on the home run.

The "second midnight run" has a mascot now, the only elevated dog in town.

But how he got on the track where he was, and where he was going at that hour are mysteries that may never be explained.—N. Y. Sun.

AT THE BATTLE OF COPENHAGEN
Sensations of One on Ship During an Awful Scene of Death.

Toward the close of the action, Col. Hutchinson reported to me that the guns wanted quill or tin tubes (which are used as more safe and expeditious than loose priming) and wanted me to send some one, adding: "His own men were too ignorant of the ship, or he would have sent one before my return," says a writer in Macmillan's magazine. I told him: "I knew no one who could so well be spared as myself." He, however, objected to my going, and as I was aware of the dreadful slaughter which had taken place in the center of the ship I was not very fond of the jaunt, but my conscience would not let me send another on an errand I was afraid to undertake myself, and away I posted toward the fore magazine.

When I arrived on the main deck, along which I had to pass, there was not a single man standing the whole way from the mainmast forward, a distance containing eight guns on a side, some of which were run out ready for firing; others lay dismounted, and others remained as they were after recoiling. In this dreary scene, I shall be excused for shuddering as I walked across the body of a dead soldier. I hastened down the fore ladder to the lower deck and felt really relieved to find somebody alive; from thence I reached the fore cockpit, where I was obliged to wait a few minutes for my cargo, and after this pause I felt something like regret, if not fear, as I remounted the ladder on my return. This, however, entirely subsided when I saw the sun shining and the old blue ensign flying as lofty as ever.

I never felt the genuine sense of glory so completely as at that moment, and if I had seen anyone attempt to haul that ensign down I could have run aft and shot him dead in as determined a manner as the celebrated Paul Jones. I took off my hat by an involuntary motion and gave three cheers as I jumped on to the quarterdeck. Col. Hutchinson welcomed me at my quarters as if I had been on a hazardous enterprise and had returned in triumph. Mr. Yelland also expressed great satisfaction at seeing me in such high spirits and so active.

NEW SECRET ORDER.

Oklahoma Commercial Men Organize for Mutual Protection.

The traveling men who journey through Oklahoma and Indian territory selling goods and making friends for their employers have a hard enough time without any extras, says the Kansas City Star. Trips off the line to small interior towns, living on the lean of the land in a country where there are few hotels and no baths, is not any fun to speak of. But when straggling members of the Cook and Dalton gangs and all sorts of Dick Turpins got into the habit of stopping them on the road at the point of their pistols, and drinking up all their samples and dividing their expense money, they thought it time to do something or other. So they formed a society called the Oklahoma Commercial Men's Mutual Anti-Robber-Drink-All-the-Samples-Ourselfs association, with a secret ritual and signs and passwords.

No one outside the organization knows the ritual or the passwords, but the signs are frequently seen by persons who are closely observant. The hailing sign is given whenever a traveling man meets a customer. It is given by raising the hands opposite the shoulders and extending the hands in a horizontal position; the hands are then waved back and forth. The signal of distress is also known and frequently seen on the road in that country. It is very simple. The arms are suddenly raised at full length above the head with palms empty and to the front. The ritual not being known, it would be difficult to say in what manner they propose to stop the division of the samples.

THE CLAY WAS SOAKED.

A University Extension Lecturer's Witty Retort.

"The other day," said Byron King, "I was called to a town down south to address a meeting of mill-workers in a course of lectures on university extension. There was quite a large audience present and they all listened attentively. During the course of my remarks I had occasion to refer to our lowly origin, saying our Creator made us out of clay. At this a man, who was sitting away back in the audience, who was well known in the community for his capacity for absorbing liquor, and who, from his fondness for drink, had made a rank failure in life, while his fellows had succeeded, got up and said: 'I disagree with you; from my experience I would say that I was made out of mud.' It was a pretty good remark, knowing the man to be what he was, and I was stumped for an answer. Finally I said: 'You are mistaken, my friend. You were originally made out of clay, but the trouble was you went out and got soaked.'"—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Greased the Wrong End.

An old gentleman, before getting into an express at Euston, tipped the guard and said: "I wish you would make sure of catching the 11:45 at Crewe."

The guard goes to the engine driver, who has been a witness of the tipping business, and says: "Here, Billy; this gentleman wants to catch the 11:45 at Crewe."

They arrive at Crewe just in time to see the 11:45 leaving the station:

Old Gentleman (in a rage, to the driver)—Weren't you told to catch the 11:45?

Impassive Driver (with a solemn wink)—Yes, sir; but you greased the wrong end of the train.

Our old friend will tip the driver next time he wants to travel unusually fast.—London Answers.

declares that wide-awake adver-dull times. Bradstreet's says that nearly 80 per cent. of the concerns that failed in business were those that didn't advertise. May be there isn't a big-sized moral in that authoritative statement.

Houses Broken Into.

Thursday night some one got into Joe Forbes' restaurant by breaking a glass from a window and removing a bolt, and then tried to break through the partition door leading to Mr. O. Hooker's bar room. Failing to get in another effort was made at the back door of the bar room which was cut considerably, but without an entrance being effected. The thief then went to Steve Gorham's place near by and broke through a panel of the door. Nothing was missed from Steve's but some cakes. From the places he was trying to get in, we judge the thief was both dry and hungry and wanted to feast at the expense of others.
