THE N. C. CONFERENCE

In Session at Elizabeth City.

FIFTH DAY.

Minutes of Saturday and Sunday afternoon sessions were read and approved.

Revs. T. Page Ricard and J. C. McCall were placed on the superannuated list.

The hour of 10 o'clock having arrived the special order relating to the conference organ, the North Carolina Advocate, came up, Rev. W. L. Grisom, half owner of the paper, offered through Rev. F. D. Swindell to sell his stock at one thousand dollars less than cost. Referred to committee on Books and Periodicals.

The statistical secretaries made their reports which showed considerable increase in church membership and erection of new churches.

The total white membership is 63,299; colored 22, total 63,321. Infants baptized 1,050, adults 1,896, Sunday-schools 659, teachers 4,789, scholars 38,303. Amount paid conference claimants $5,499.76, members of societies 656, church edifices 644, value of church property $778,209.

The committee on Books and Periodicals brought in their report, rejecting the offer of Rev. L. W. Grisom to sell his interest in the Advocate to the conference. A lively discussion took place, participated in by Revs. F. D. Swindell and R. B. John. Rev. J. T. Gibbs moved the previous question, and the substitute offered by Rev. R. B. John to not adopt the North Carolina Advocate as the organ of the conference, was adopted by a vote of 89 to 52. A committee consisting W. S. Black, R. A. Willis, R. B. John, T. J. Jarvis, T. H. Gatling and Q. H. Nimrock were appointed to confer with the Western Conference to take charge of the paper question.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Dispatches received from Havana say that the insurgents continue to burn buildings and the crops of sugar plantations, and to destroy other property.

Little Bertha Jordan, the 2-year-old daughter of Mr. Otway Jordan, of Richmond, Va., was instantly killed Sunday morning shortly after 7 o'clock by the accidental discharge of a gun.

Mrs. McClelland Richardson, sister-in-law of General Cassius M. Clay, was burned to death at her home, near Valley View, Ky. She was standing in front of a heating-stove, when her dress caught fire.

Thirty-five leading colored citizens of Atlanta met by invitation with the Board of Directors of the exposition and the matter of setting aside December 26th as Negro Day was thoroughly discussed and agreed upon.

Five men were instantly killed in a stone quarry at Big Stone Gap, Va., while eating lunch. The men were sitting under a large rock, which seemed to be very firm in place. It fell without any apparent cause, and crushed them instantly. One other man was wounded, but will probably recover.

IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Matters of Interest Over the State.

The Plymouth military company has been added to the State Guards.

T. J. Wilson, Jr., one of Winston's tobacco manufacturers, has brought suit for $10,000 against the Winston-Salem Street Railway Company for killing his little son on September 10th.

We learn that a strange disease is prevalent among the hogs in Pocket township. Some of the farmers have lost about all their fattening hogs. They are attacked with fits and in a short time they lie down and die.—Sanford Express.

Mrs. J. H. Shumate, of Wilks county, is peculiarly afflicted. It is stated that blood will suddenly break through the pores of the skin just like perspiration, and stand in great beads on the face. She is able to be up most of the time and tend to her domestic affairs. This sweating of blood comes on once or twice a day and lasts only a short time, when she will bathe her face and no sign is left, until it suddenly breaks out again.

This is About Pencils.

When a business man uses a lead pencil he wants a good one. The Reflector Book Store offers the largest variety in town to select from, all the way from 5 cents a dozen to 10 cents each. Try a "Triangular" or "Diagraph" and you have something good.

Haydn-Boyd.

At 6 o'clock this morning at the home of Mr. John F. Boyd, father of the bride, near Greenville, Mr. W. T. Haydn, of Washington City, and Miss Elizabeth Boyd were married by Rev. A. Greaves. The couple took the morning train for a few days at Norfolk and Old Point, and will reach their home in Washington Saturday. Mr. Haydn is a very popular drummer and well known in mercantile circles. The bride is one of Pitt's handsomest young women.

Don't You Do It.

Don't leave the Christmas shopping until the day before Christmas.

Don't worry and fret when you find such a crowd about the Christmas counters, that it is almost impossible to make the desired purchases.

Don't neglect the little tots in the home, nor any of the home duties in your anxiety to finish some elaborate Christmas finery.

Don't plan some gorgeous Christmas entertainment with extravagant refreshments, at the expense of the comfort of the home loved ones.

Don't forget that it is an insult to an acquaintance to send him a gift which is not accompanied by friendly affection.

Don't let your Christmas be spoiled through selfishness, envy, resentment or any bitter feelings; but hold fast to the love and simple sacredness belonging to the day.

Don't belong to that class who are trying to make it a day for the exchange of gifts by which the giver's social standing is to be determined.

Don't forget that it is wrong to give more than one can well afford simply for the sake of making a costly present, or to give to anyone simply because it is customary to give gifts on that day.

Don't discard the dainty white table linen for more elaborate dining table display. However fashionable unwashable materials may be for table use they certainly are not in good taste.

Don't fail to leave the plush and satin and ribbons to their proper places—keep them off of the dining table, and use instead, dainty floral decorations and fresh green ferns.

Don't forget that in striving to make the Christmas season beautiful to others we will find that unconsciously we have made it perfect to ourselves.

A collection of over 100 Saxon and Merovingian coins found at Crossdale, in Hampshire, in 1828, was recently sold in London in one block for $2,450.

Finding Fault.

The winds refused to blow; "No use," said they, "to try. "From north, or south, or east, or west, These folks to satisfy. The north wind, 'is too cold! The west wind, 'bold and rough.' The east is chilly, they complain; The south, 'not cool enough!'"

—Youth's Companion.

OUT OF THE ORDINARY.

The letter "O" sounds odd for a name, but there is a distinguished family in Belgium whose name is O, no more and no less.

Sarah Bernhardt's last gown cost $7,500. It is decorated with diamonds and turquoises and the skins of 200 ermines were required to line the train.

Tramps in Holland are put in a cistern which has a pump in the bottom. Water is turned on in sufficient volume to keep them pumping briskly to keep from drowning. One dose is generally sufficient.

The length of the day varies in different places. In London the longest day has sixteen and a half hours; at St Petersburg, nineteen, and in Spitzbergen, the longest day lasts three months and a half.

A new lead for deep-sea sounding carries a cartridge which explodes on touching the bottom. A submerged microphone receives the sound and the depth is estimated from the time occupied by the lead in sinking to the bottom.

The Great Hatteras Light.

Though the endeavor to construct a light-house at Diamond shoals, seven miles beyond Hatteras, has been a failure thus far, it is believed the new plan reported by the engineers will be a success. An account of it says that the plan contemplates a skeleton structure resting on eight great iron tubes, which are to be driven to a depth of thirty feet. They are to form a circle sixty feet in diameter, and to be of such a length that the floor resting upon them will be about fifty feet above high water. On this floor a structure of cast steel will be raised to provide quarters for the three keepers, and above will be the light and the steam siren. The lens is to be the most powerful in existence, throwing the light, which is to be electric, to a distance of twenty-three miles.

The engineers believe that the plan of having the light rest on pillars, between which the winds and waves can play, promises better success than one for a solid structure that would offer more resistance to the elements. The cost of the light house is to be a million of dollars.

Ode to the Calamity Howler.

Bury the calamity howler out in the woods, in a beautiful hole in the ground, where the wood-pecker pecks and the straddle bug straddles around. He is no good in the city of push; too impractical, stingy and dead; but he wants the whole earth and the crust, and the stars that shine overhead. Then hustle him off to the bumble bee's roost, and bury him deep in the ground; he's no use to us here; get him out of the way, and make room for a man that is sound.—Louisville Times.

If you want to succeed in this world you must make your own opportunities as you go on. The man who waits for some seventh wave to toss him on the day land will find that the seventh wave is a long time coming. You can commit no greater folly than to sit by the roadside until some one comes along and invites you to ride with him to wealth or influence.—Durham Sun.

LITERARY STYLE.

It is Born in a Man and Can Neither Be Taught Nor Imitated.

The author of "How to Write Fiction" appears to be one of those innocents who believe in a new discovered "science of human nature" and in the theories of M. Zola. You go about with notebooks, you become yourself with "heredity," and then if you succeed it is partly by dint of your native qualities, partly by aid of griminess not fit to be named among Christians. It is the same affair in poetry. Wordsworth was a poet by virtue of his genius. He was born so. His theories hampered him, when he was true to his theories. Even our author perceives that Shakespeare and Homer did not need theories and popular science falsely so called, and this is just as true of Miss Austen at 20 and of Mr. Du Maurier at an age which we shall not conjecture.

Mr. Du Maurier was born a writer and a story teller. Thirty-five years ago he proved this in a little sketch in Once a Week and rather later in his poem of "Braungrindas" in Punch. Only a very skilled writer could have rendered, as Mr. Du Maurier has done, the immortal little Belgian poem translated in "Trilby." Yet Mr. Du Maurier has been drawing all his life, not sedulously practicing another art, under private tutors and with an eye on Professor Huxley's lectures. Improvement is not of course impossible or a matter of chance. Some men, like Balzac, have to crush their gold out of a mountain of quartz. All or nearly all who possess "style" gain it in part by cultivating a natural ear for the harmonies of prose as observed by them in the great writers. A few perhaps, but very few, have toiled like Mr. Stevenson by the way of "the sedulous ape."

Thackeray, from his Charterhouse days, was always Thackeray and could not answer an invitation to dinner without writing in the Thackeray manner. Mr. Stevenson, on the other hand, kept his dress suit of style for great literary occasions and did not wear sword, diamonds or perruque in his familiar correspondence. Yet Thackeray, to the very last, took trouble and corrected, as his manuscripts prove, while his manner was more or less conspicuously based on that of Fielding. He was a literary writer, like Tennyson, in verse, whereas we conceive that Mr. Barrie's admirable style owes nothing to literary reminiscence or the labor of the file, but is a happy, spontaneous appropriateness of utterance.

As a rule, we take it, setting aside such rare cases as those of Thackeray, Virgil, Keats and Tennyson, the people who write best do so without taking thought. Mr. Froude, whose taking manner has some strange occasional blemishes, answered very impatiently when some busybody asked him questions about his "style." He only said what he meant to say in expressions which came to him naturally and without research. On the other hand, we have now many writers of no eminence whose dull, labored manner is praised for its preciosity. In Mr. Pater we had a writer of singular natural gifts who decidedly ended by broiling and tormenting his style. And this is still more likely to be the end of men who, if they have a plain tale to tell, should tell it plainly.—London News.

GOLF.

The Philadelphia Record is impressed with the weird nomenclature of golf. "The brassy niblick," it says, "the cleek, the iron mashy, bulger driver, the putter, the lofter and all the other varieties of sticks are in themselves enough to drive the novice to despair, but it remains for the Country club to frame a set of rules governing the etiquette of golf. The first rule reads as follows: 'Any player losing a ball and incurring delay thereby may be passed by any other player coming up. A twosome may pass a threesome or foursome and a foursome a threesome. A twosome may pass another twosome after giving the earlier game at the first tee a clear tee and one stroke, provided that is sufficient to put the earlier game out of range, except on the putting green, where under no circumstances shall more than one set of players be at the same time.'"

Character.

Each man in his sphere, however narrow or extended, will find that his fellow men weigh his character and his abilities often and unconsciously stamp him with their estimate, and that the average resultant of these frequent averages is just.—E. Pierrepont.

HIS MONKEY ADMIRER.

The First Love of a Specimen From Borneo Remembered.

After a somewhat learned and very interesting discussion on the "Nearness of Animals to Man" and Mr. Garner's efforts toward developing a monkey language, etc., some one told the following story:

"A young lad in a southern family I know had a half grown black monkey sent to him from Borneo. The creature, shy and strange at first, soon showed himself responsive to kindness, quick and intelligent in learning the usual accomplishments thought necessary in a monkey's education. He became warmly attached to his youthful owner, and the two friends might be seen anywhere together, the Borneo perched on the shoulders of young America, occasionally giving him an affectionate tap on the cheek or chattering in his ear in the most human way possible. After awhile it was decreed that Yokko's master must be sent north to school, and the desolate condition of that monkey in consequence was really pitiable. He grieved and refused to be comforted for a long time and then he suddenly became mischievous. He played such tricks and pranks that at last everybody's patience gave out, and Yokko was disposed of and disappeared.

"Years went by, and the young southerner went from school to college. Soon after his graduation he was visiting in some western city—Chicago, I think—and passing along the street one day he observed a knot of people gathered on a corner. He approached to see what it meant. Suddenly a great black thing lighted on his shoulders, his neck was closely clasped, and a little, cold, black paw was patting and stroking his face with such an abandon of affection, such an excited chattering and murmuring as completely bewildered the young man for a moment.

"Of course it was Master Yokko, descended to the role of an organ monkey, and after all the years, all the travel and toil and change he had recognized his old young master. The delight was mutual, and arrangements were soon completed for the repurchase of Yokko. Certainly if prompt, swift, decisive action is indicative of something beyond mere instinct—of intellect, in fact—that monkey had it. And there wasn't any question as to his 'nearness to man,' was there?"

Then a native man who was present told the following:

"You know sailors are always fond of pets, and on board a man-of-war they are especially so; so there are always two or three, sometimes more, on board, and a ship in southern waters always has a 'monkey and a parrot.' So at Madagascar they brought a big black ape whom the men named 'Majunga' from the name of the port. She was tame, had had some teaching and altogether was very well behaved. When she first came aboard, it was necessary to shut her up while we were getting off, so a banana was put into an empty chicken coop, and Majunga went in. While she was apparently absorbed in peeling and eating the banana the door of the coop was closed upon her and fastened by means of a big hasp over an eye and a big nail slipped through. So you see, the monkey was safe. Now, a monkey is always on the watch exactly at the moment when it seems least so. It will look in every direction but the one it needs to apparently. Consequently Majunga had her back to the door all the time. When she had finished the banana, she turned around, and without one instant's hesitation she put her paw through the bars of the coop, lifted out the nail, pushed open the door and mounted on top of the coop, laid the nail beside her and with evident interest watched what was going on."—Boston Globe.

A Difficult Requirement.

The curious effect that may be produced by a very small transposition of words and ideas is illustrated by this slightly "mixed" instruction, recently given by an officer at drill to a company of men:

"When I give the command, 'Halt' you will bring the foot which is on the ground to the side of the one which is in the air and remain motionless!"—Youth's Companion.

The Jackal.
In hunter's lore there is an idea that the jackal is the lion's provider; that he locates the game and takes the lion to it. This superstition has no more foundation than is found in the fact that after a lion has slain his quarry the jackals always attend and await the conclusion of the repast in order to pick up the leavings.

This is no catch penny device but a bonafide offer, and if only one subscriber should be brought during the time specified the boy who brings it will get the scholarship. Of course we expect more than one subscriber to be brought in, for this is a prize worth winning and many boys will work for it.

In order that there may be an incentive for every boy who wishes to enter this contest, we offer a cash commission of 10 per cent on all subscribers, so that those who fail to get the scholarship will be paid for their work, but the one who wins the scholarship will not get the commission. Now boys get to work with the determination to win this prize. You can get as many sample copies of the REFLECTOR as you need by applying to the office. If you decide to enter this contest send us your name as we wish to know how many boys are working for the prize.
