TOBACCO JOTTINGS.

BY O. L. JOYNER.

I have seen quite a number of plant beds during the last few days and they show up very conspicuously in the absence of plants, though it is to be hoped that a few warm days will bring them up.

Farmers who expect to plant tobacco could do nothing more beneficial to the crop than to thoroughly prepare the land before the tobacco is transplanted. Land that is thoroughly pulverized will make a much better yield and it is not half the trouble to cultivate.

There is no class of men that receive mere benefit from manufactories of various kinds than farmers, and yet, as a general thing they take but little interest in improvements of this kind because they feel no direct interest in them, when if they will reflect for a moment they are probably benefitted more than other class of men. The following clipping from the Wilmington Star is timely and contains facts that are worth considering. Every farmer should feel deeply interested in the establishment of manufactories and they have as much right and should show an interest in such things as much so as men of other professions. It is on account of this neglect of such important things that has dragged down the agricultural profession and causes everyone that can get anything else to do to show it, when in point of fact it should be the most desirable and one of the most lucrative professions.

"As a general thing farmers take but little interest in the establishment of manufactories and yet there is no class of people who derive more benefit from manufactories than the farmers. If the manufactories be numerous enough to give employment to a large number of people the farmers in the vicinity are more benefitted by them than are the people to whom the manufactories give employment or the shareholders who draw their annual or semi-annual dividends. This may seem to some thoughtless or extravagant assertion, but it can be easily shown and is being practically shown wherever manufactories in any considerable number exist.

"Manufactories increase population, consumers of what is produced upon the farm. The greater the number of manufactories the greater the increase of population. Wherever manufactories center there cities spring up and grow. Why is it that farming lands near a city are worth so much more than lands at a greater distance? In point of fertility and capacity to produce a variety of crops there may be no difference between them, but the land within a mile or two of the city may command a hundred dollars an acre or more while the same character of land twenty miles distant, unless on a railroad line, might not bring ten dollars an acre. The reason is of course apparent to every one. The farmer near the city has a market at his door which he can reach in an hour or so, and every day find sale for something, for anything that is worth cultivating or raising. There are gardeners within a few miles of New York city who on few acres of land make from eight to ten thousand dollars a year. And there are others near other large cities who may do as well.

"Of course much depends on the intelligence, methods, industry and thrift of the man. For some men wouldn't make money if they had charge of a mint, but the majority of the gardeners or farmers near cities do. If they be unthrifty and slipshod in their management and fail to make money by farming or gardening they make it on the enhanced value of their property.

"What the city is to the surrounding country in the way of affording a convenient and constant market for a multiplicity of products the manufactory is in a less extensive way, every one added to the number increasing the number of consumers, the capacity to consume and the demand for what the farm produces. If these manufactories work the raw materials that are produced upon the farms as staple crops, such as cotton, wool, hemp, tobacco, &c., then the farmer always has a home market, for them where he is sure of getting the highest market price and where he can deliver with the least loss of time and the least expense.

"As an illustration of this we know of lands near tobacco manufacturing towns in this State which ten years ago could have been bought for $5 an acre which couldn't be bought for $25 an acre now, because now the tobacco crop can be marketed to advantage and with profit when it could not be then, and the owners can find profitable sale for many things now that then they couldn't find sale for at all. There are hundreds of places where something like this might be said as the result of the establishment of some kind or kinds of manufacturing industries."

Miss Blinn's Lecture.

The first lecture to ladies on Health and the care of the body, will be given to-morrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Court House. The subject will be "Health in its relation to Beauty," and the charts bearing upon this phase of the subject will be fully explained. No admission is charged, and all ladies, both mothers and daughters beyond the age of 12 years, are cordially invited to attend.

A large audience of ladies was present at Bogart Opera House yesterday afternoon to listen to the lecture of Miss Cora Blinn, of Charlotte. Miss Blinn's subject was "Health and Beauty in Women." No reporter of The Record was present, the lecture being for ladies only, but we learn from those present that Miss Blinn handled her subject with grace and ease, and the discourse is said to be the finest ever heard in Greensboro.—Greensboro Record.

Miss Blinn had a very good audience of ladies out to hear her lecture on "Health" yesterday afternoon. They were very much pleased with her, as she gave them an interesting and entertaining discourse upon the subject. She is a pleasing speaker and they will have the pleasure of hearing her again on Monday afternoon.—Durham Sun.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25TH, 1896.

Some years ago a young man left Union county for Arkansas, but on reaching there became dissatisfied and wanted to come back, but had no money. He became deranged and was carried to the insane asylum of that State. Last month word was received at Monroe that he was cured and his people sent the money for him to come home on. He was put on the train and his baggage checked for Monroe on the 21st of last month. He has not been heard of since that time at either end of the journey, and his people are very anxious about him.

The Kind Who Build.

If there is anything on the face of the earth that makes us long for eternal rest and deep, damp solitude, it is a man who comes to a town or county, builds up a big paying business, grows rich, and then squats down on his gold like a hen on a door knob, and is too stingy even to let the gravel grind in his own gizzard.

A real, genuine, 18-karat, stingy, selfish man cannot be honest, and if he ever gets to heaven and has wings, he will fold them up and walk for fear that he might ruffle a plume or lose a tail feather.

The kind of men who build up a town or a county, and enjoy life and make the best citizens are energetic, enterprising and liberal men; who believe in living and letting others live, and who, when they get a dollar, don't squeeze it until the goddess of liberty feels as though she had on a corset. Such squeezing is what causes the hard times and stops the circulation of the American eagle.

If it were not for the broad-gauged, enterprising men, it would be impossible to build up a prosperous city. Life would be one big game of grab, and the devil take the hindmost; would be the order of the day.—Durham Sun.

Grain and Chaff.

The most pitiful sight in the human category is the woman who will not submit gracefully to her years.

Pockets, the duplicate of those in the masculine trousers, are seen in the new tailor-made skirts.

Tea cloths of white with solid colored centers, are among the special Easter linens in art embroideries.

Don't quarrel with your husband on the street. The world enjoys the fun, but it doesn't raise you in its estimation one bit.

All color balls in England are popular. The women present appear in varying shades of a single tint that has been chosen by the hostess.

Engagement gifts are now quite as important as wedding, Christmas, birthday or Easter offerings.

Large French veils of wash nets are used for smart babies in place of the worsted conceals of former years.

The summer girl is already planning her bathing suit. Puffed sleeves will not be one of its beauties, as formerly.

THE LITTLE COUNTRY PAPER.

It's not the biggest paper
 That I pounce upon the first;
 Nor the one that has most in it
 That I want to see the worst,
 But the little country paper
 From the place I used to live,
 Is the most delightful reading
 That a fellow can conceive.

You read the locals over
 With an eagerness and zest;
 It's like shaking hands with people
 That you like the heartiest;
 And though there's little in them
 Still each name is like a face,
 And the past beams down upon you
 As the sprawling lines you trace.

You see the home of childhood,
 And the little country store,
 And the face of your old sweetheart
 In the vine-embowered door;
 And the old school and your play-mates

Mingle with the local read,
 Notwithstanding some are married,
 Notwithstanding some are dead.

There's the forest long departed,
 And the little swimming hole,
 And the past crowds in upon you,
 Filling mind and eyes and soul;
 And the little country paper
 From the crude and distant press,
 With its freight of homely items,
 Softens life like a caress.

C. L. Phifer, in Hazen, Ark., Star.

The Country Editor.

The country editor is a combination of the entire staff of a city newspaper. His sphere of usefulness, although not so ubiquitous, is quite as important as that of the great contemporaries. His single weekly paper is in miniature the seven issues per week of the great dailies. His constituency is often the most moral and high-minded to be found in the domain of history. He reaches the homes of brain and brawn that send to the colleges and cities the great, well-balanced men of the age. He may not uproot scandal, expose corruption, tear down religious and political parties, create empires or crush dynasties, but he reaches and influences the majority of the army of boys who, in after years, fight the great battles of life in the pulpit, at the bar, in the hospital, and even become his most distinguished co-workers in journalism.

The country editor may take wood and potatoes for his subscription price, but he never lies about his circulation. He may mention in detail the process of construction of country barns and the intervisitation of unimportant bumkins, but he makes no attempt to build his fortunes on scandals, broken homes, nasty twaddle, and undue prying into private life. He may write wretched English and deplorable grammar, but he never talks about "innocuous desuetude" and "masterful" effort. He may publish three pages of patent insides to one of original matter, but he never steals the news and brains of others because a geographical difference of time favors his location. He may set his own type and turn the crank of his own press, but he never scales down the wages of his employees, nor treats printers like cattle nor pays starvation wages to reporters. He may deplore certain local usages and want of appreciation of his columns by business men, but he never pursues people who have no means for reply with vindictive hate, with vile cartoons and outrageous persecution to the grave. He is not a life wrecker, nor a family wrecker, nor a scandal monger, nor a party political politician, nor a bribe taker, nor a washer of dirty linen. Whatever his mistakes, troubles and ludicrous exhibitions at times, the country editor is an honest, painstaking citizen, one of the most potent factors in the higher civilization of the age.—New York Dispatch.

Mr. Lincoln was once asked as to the proper length of a man's legs, and after some discussion of the subject concluded by saying: "They should always be long enough to reach from his body to the ground."

For all practical purposes that strikes us as being about the proper length, certainly the necessary length, and settles a very philosophical question.

A Word to The Scornful.

Scorn not, O proud of earth, the lowly born,
 Because thy lot is cast among the great.
 If God should exercise that self-same scorn,
 What thinkest thou indeed would be thy fate?

A Woman's Devotion.

A man named Schafer, up north somewhere, undertook to settle a little difference with his wife by shooting her three times. He was arrested, but the obstinate woman persisted in living, and much to the surprise of the doctors got well, and then as much to the surprise of the guardians of the law she not only refused to testify against her would be slayer, but testified in his behalf to get him out of jail.

A Pennsylvania man recently presented his wife with a piano lamp which she said she would call after him. On asking her reason, she replied: "Well dear, it has a good deal of brass about it, it is handsome to look at, it is not remarkably brilliant, requires a good deal of attention, is liable to explode, flares up occasionally, is always out at bedtime and is bound to smoke."

Editor Sweat, of Georgia, says never judge a man by his outside appearance. A shabby coat may enwrap a newspaper publisher, while a man wearing a high-toned plug hat and sporting a gold cane may be a delinquent subscriber.

A modern young woman wondered why the clerks laughed when she inquired if the green candles gave a green light.

SOME PET NAMES.

Wives Inaptly Bestow Them Upon Their Husbands.

The little god of love betrays even dignified people into the most ingeniously incongruous terms of endearment sometimes. And this in defiance of the fact that the real love words of every language are the most musically beautiful combinations of sounds possible.

So sweetly melodious are our own "darling," "dearest," "sweetheart," that one is fain to pity him or her who has never heard them tenderly uttered with a special application. While the French "mon ami," "cherie," "ma mignonne," etc., are spoken music, and even the German "meine geliebte" might glorify that strong language. "Honey," "dearie," "sweet," are still on the right side of the ridiculous. Even "pet" is admissible, though it once occurred to me that to address a swarthy, six-foot, 250-pound Cuban at a public dinner as "petite" might be just on the borderland.

But where the divine passion is really dominant, all these expressions are quite too commonplace.

I know a well-built, well-groomed man of the world, with a strong, masculine face, a splendid, athletic figure, standing six feet three inches in his stockings, and stately and dignified in his bearing. His enraptured wife finds no word so expressive of her appreciation of his charms as "Kitten." She, by the way, is Juno, and he, not to be outdone in matters of the heart, also calls her "Kitten." So it is Kitten and Kitten, until I am sure they have forgotten that the English language possesses proper nouns, in general usage in polite society.

Then there is a fat man with pudgy face and protruding figure. Nothing seems to satisfy the soul of his dotting wife but Birdie. Birdie he is, Birdie he must be though all the world would blush for it.

Then I cannot forget one of my dear friends whose husband, 20 years her senior, is a hard-headed business man, who is said sometimes to wander into "ways that are dark, and tricks that are vain." Happily, I do not know just what she calls him during these periods. But I do know that during his temporary lapses into virtue she is a most devoted, loving wife, and that when her passion for him is at moderate height she contents herself with "mall tweetness," and "cunning single," but when it rises to flood tide, she casts upon him the most loving and languishing glances and calls him "Crow."

Another tall, gaunt, raw-boned, ill-favored friend is also worthy of passing mention. His hair is carrot-colored and scraggly, his neck so thin that it resembles nothing so much as a snarl of strings, while his hands, feet and anatomy generally call up visions of Ichabod Crane. His affectionate spouse could find no name for him that so pleased her fancy as "Puddin." She scolded him as "Puddin" and loved him as "Puddin." As "Puddin" he was cowed, driven and bullied, and as "Puddin" he was coaxed, wheedled and caressed.

There is a well-known editor of one of this country's great papers, a man of stalwart frame, keen countenance, brilliant intellect. To his wife he is "Itty one," and she to him is "Preshy" (precious).

It is surprising that a delicate, refined, high-bred woman could best express her ardor for her husband in the words "Snooks" and "Shopy," yet I have known such to be the case; and it would seem as though a dignified professor might object to being called "Habby," but I have seen him respond to it with a smile so wide that the Cheshire cat wasn't in it.

One prominent literary man rarely addresses his tiny young wife as anything but "Kid," which is not inappropriate if somewhat unmusical. But it is usually the very little man with the enormous wife whose ebullient sentimental tenderness can only find expression in calling her "Baby."

These are by no means the vagaries of youth and inexperience. I was once traveling in one of the western states, when a groom of about 70 came aboard with a blushing bride of perhaps 63. They soon became oblivious, and this conversation was heard:

He—Whose little Lammie?
She—Bof of us.
And perhaps all are familiar with the overheard conversation between the Concord school of philosophy professor and the Vassar graduate:
V. G.—Darling?
Ph. D.—Yes, darling.
V. G.—Nothing—only darling.
Truly is not the god of love the god of humor as well?—Detroit Free Press.

FIRESIDE FRAGMENTS.

—A dish of water placed in a hot oven where pies, cakes or puddings are being baked will prevent them from scorching.

—An excellent and simple remedy for a sprain is made by mixing the well-beaten whites of six eggs and a half cupful of table salt together. Apply between thin muslin cloths.

—Rice Pudding.—To be eaten cold. One large spoonful of rice, one quart of milk, a pinch of salt, four table-spoonfuls of sugar. Bake very slowly four hours, and flavor with vanilla.—Home and Farm.

—A French method of cleaning kid gloves is to put on the gloves and wash them well in spirits of turpentine, exactly as if washing the hands. The fingers and coiled parts must be well rubbed, and when the gloves are taken off they must be stretched and allowed to dry hanging in a strong current of air.

—Beaten Biscuit.—Sift a quart of flour, add a teaspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of lard; mix well, and add sweet milk to make a stiff dough. Knead well, and beat for half an hour until light and elastic. Roll thin, cut out with a biscuit-cutter, put in a pan, and set in a moderate oven to bake until brown.—Ladies' Companion.

—Croquettes.—Two cupfuls of warm mashed potatoes, one-quarter cupful of hot milk, beaten together until light. Add one tablespoonful of melted butter, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a pinch of mace or nutmeg, and enough beaten egg to handle easily. Shape, dip into beaten egg and roll in sifted cracker crumbs. Fry in hot lard until nicely browned. Garnish with parsley.—Good Housekeeping.

—Sunshine Cake.—Whites of ten eggs and the yolks of seven, 1½ cups of granulated sugar, measured after sifting, one cupful of flour, after sifting four times, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar and one of orange extract. Beat the whites to a froth and add the sugar. Beat the yolks thoroughly, and add to them the whites, the sugar and the flavoring. Last of all, stir in the flour. Mix quickly and well. Bake in a slow oven.—N. Y. Ledger.

GET A GOOD SAFE.

GREENVILLE, N. C., Feb. 26th, 1896.
J. L. SUGG, Agent Victor Safe Co.,
Greenville, N. C.

DEAR SIR:—I am pleased to say that the Victor Safe you sold me some five or six years ago preserved in fact all its contents in the late fire in Greenville on the 16th inst. The safe stood at a point in my office in the Opera House block that must have been one of the hottest parts in the great conflagration. It contained many papers and other things of value. When it was taken out of the ruins and opened, some twelve hours after the fire, everything in it was found to be safely preserved and in good condition. I cheerfully make this statement of facts in recognition of the valuable service rendered me by this safe and you are at liberty to make such use of it as you may see proper.

THOS. J. JARVIS.

The Victor Safe is made in all sizes, convenient for home, farm, office or general business use. Every Safe sold with a guarantee to be fire proof. Prices range from $15 up.

The fire in Kinston yesterday morning proved not to be of a serious nature. It was in a small frame building just across the river from the town.

There are lots of ways for taking in the unwarly and making money, and the man going around with pasteboard and crayon drawing what purports to be a photograph, found plenty of people ready to give him a quarter.

Just what to do with their crayon (?) pictures is puzzling some of the boys. Little Hart and our Walter are offering to dispose of theirs for scarcely a cent, but Billie says as fly exterminators they would be simply out of sight.

Zeno Moore and J. L. Hearne left this morning for Scotland Neck. From there they went to the home of the bride in Edgecombe county where Mr. Moore and Miss Eloise Draughan were married at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The bridal party will return to Greenville on the evening train.

Died.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Cheek, whose illness was mentioned in Tuesday's REFLECTOR, died Tuesday evening about 8:30 o'clock. The remains were taken to Raleigh this morning for burial. The family have the sympathy of our people.

Soon Be Ready.

Mr. S. C. Hamilton informs us that work has commenced on the building for the electric light plant. The arrival of the machinery for the plant is expected daily and we may now expect for all to be in readiness for turning on the lights within a few weeks. This will be a substantial improvement for Greenville.

Goes to Asheville.

The Executive Committee of the Teacher's Assembly have decided that the next session will be held in Asheville. The meetings have been held for the last nine consecutive years at Morehead.

We are inclined to believe, that the crowd at the Assembly would be larger this year if it had been held at Morehead again. Our people will be sorry to know that it has gone so far. Greenville has been furnishing a large number at each session of the body for several years. However, it will be a nice, cheap trip to Asheville. The hotels have put their rates at one dollar per day.

OFFICE OF THE
EQUITABLE NATIONAL BANK,
CINCINNATI, Jan. 9, 1894.

Hon. John M. Pattison, President
Union Central Life Insurance Co.,
Cincinnati, O.

DEAR SIR:—I take pleasure in acknowledging receipt this day through E. W. Jewell, your General Agent in this city, of $10,327.68, in payment of policy No. 9,928 in your company.

I wish to express to you my hearty thanks. My policy was for $10,000.00 and on your Life Rate Endowment Plan I paid you but the Ordinary Life Premium, just the same as I would have paid any of the other leading companies for a policy to be paid only at death, and yet your profits have been so large that in a little over 22 years it has matured for an amount over the $10,000, and thus I have an Endowment Policy at Ordinary Life Rates.

I am greatly pleased at my good fortune. No other company known to me gives such a contract or secures such results. I carry policies in a number of the leading companies, but I have none whose results compare with this.

I am glad that my own city of Cincinnati is the home of such an institution as the Union Central Life Insurance Company, and as a citizen I am proud of it. I am.

Yours respectfully,

GEORGE FISHER.

The policy contracts of the Union Central Life Insurance company are attracting a great deal of attention as well as the unequalled results for the insured arising from our interest rate, which is the largest of any company, and from our death rate, which is the smallest of any company.

Write for explanation for a policy on your life, stating age.

WHITE & SPEIGHT, Agents.

OUT A QUARTER EACH.

The REFLECTOR office cat tried his hand at picture taking again today and got this combination of Little Hart, our Walter and Jesse Speight just after the crayon man had done them up.

NOT A POLITICIAN.

A Grocer.

The politician has dropped the tariff. I have almost dropped it—goods going at such short profit. The politician spends his time talking finance—gold standard, single standard, bimetalism and free silver. My time is spent in talking GROCERIES and exchanging them for money and produce. Not particular as to the kind of either so the quality is good. Prices low as the lowest. Seed Irish Potatoes. Try Red Coon or Nancy Hank Tobacco.
