Facts and Figures.

It takes 72,000 tons of paper to make the postal cards used in the United States each year.

In one week last summer 112,000 tons of ice were used in New York city.

The Coliseum at Rome seated 87,000 spectators, and 60,000 more might easily have found standing room.

With 20,395 newspapers and periodicals in America and Canada the people ought not to suffer for information and opinions.

The War Department estimates for the next fiscal year aggregate $52,875,637.

The shortest time for circulating the globe at present is 66 days.

Reliable statistics show that an average of fully 100,000 strangers visit New York every day in the year.

The production of rubber bicycle tires in this country is about 1,000,000 sets per year.

Tin is a comparatively expensive metal, being worth about $400 a ton.

The production of Bessemer steel during 1895 amounted to 9,500,000 tons.

A Wonderful Kind of Cotton.

A man named Jackson, living near Atlanta, received from "an African explorer," two or three years ago some cotton seed of a kind which the explorer said, grew to the height of twenty-five feet, an average stalk bearing sixty-five bolls of cotton as fine and long as that of the Sea Islands. Jackson planted the seeds and they did all that had been promised. He repeated the operation and now has eighteen bushels of seed with which to begin cultivation next season on a large scale. Meanwhile the planters of Southern Georgia heard of his experiment, and if the Atlanta correspondent of the Baltimore American is to be believed, they have just offered Jackson $10,000 if he will give them all the seed in his possession and let them destroy it. They fear, it is alleged, increased over production and still lower prices if the new variety comes into general cultivation.—New York Times.

Many are looking forward to the election bulletins tonight.

No, Wiley, people are not sent to Sing Sing for voice culture.

The election is about over and in a few hours we will know the result.

The cry "fellow citizens," now takes a back seat until the next campaign.

There comes a time when the poor man, as well as the rich man, can pass in their checks.

Many a candidate is trembling about now through fear he has not received enough votes to elect him.

A difficulty occurred near the post-office last night between G. J. Woodward and B. L. Susman.

Owing to the very rapid service of the telegraph office, two special telegrams from Raleigh to the REFLECTOR after being held for more than an hour in that office reached us too late for the paper Monday evening.

This issue of THE DAILY REFLECTOR is what you might call "betwixt and between" and has been a right hard one to get up. Too late to say anything political to effect the election and too soon to tell the result. Billie has filled in the day counting over the stock of roosters, while the office cat has walked around with that same smile on.

PROFITABLE PUBLICITY.

Appearances.

BY NATH'L C. FOWLER, JR., OF NEW YORK, DOCTOR OF PUBLICITY.

The decorated side of wall paper is on the outside.

Rosewood veneer is not on the inside of the piano.

The seams are on the inside of your clothes.

The wrong side isn't polished. Appearances count.

What a thing appears to be has as much to do with its sale as what it really is.

Intrinsic value is important, but the value of intrinsic value is in the appearance of intrinsic value.

If you appear to be doing business people will make you do business by doing business with you.

The man who advertises shows his progression so folks can't help seeing it.

The appearance of advertising, as well as the advertising itself, brings business.

APHOBISMS.

Beware of dark places, there robbers hide.

He who does good for fear of being punished, is punished in so doing.

A wise man listens to the advice of others and uses his judgment afterwards; but a fool does neither.

Love, when based on outward show, is as easily broken as a spider's web, but when based on principle is immortal.

Another Store Robbed.

Sunday night about 9 o'clock some one broke into the store of J. L. Starkey & Bro. by prizing open the shutter to one of the rear windows and cutting out part of the sash. As Mr. Starkey was returning from church with a friend he concluded to go in the store and get some cigars, and as they went in the front door the thief rushed out of the rear window. It seems that this particular thief was after fire-arms, as an investigation disclosed that he had taken about a dozen pistols and a lot of cartridges.

The thief might have taken other goods also but for the unexpected arrival of Mr. Starkey which routed him. We are authorized to say that a liberal reward will be paid for evidence to convict the thief.

Married.

HOBGOOD—McLAWHORN.—A beautiful wedding took place at the residence of the bride's father, Elder Fred McLawhorn on Sunday, November 1st. Mr. J. E. Hobgood and Miss Rosa E. McLawhorn were married. Elder C. L. Little, of the Free Will Baptist church officiated.

75 Cents Worth for Twenty Cents

Marion Harland's celebrated Talks on health and happiness make a handsome cloth covered book. Regular price 75 cents, but readers of the REFLECTOR can have this work by ending ten 2 cent stamps to The Trade Company, Boston Mass.

Tomorrow's issue of THE DAILY REFLECTOR will appear in the morning instead of in the afternoon. The morning edition will contain as full election news as can be had up to the hour of going to press. The weekly edition will appear about the middle of the day and also contain the election news.

HIGH PRICED KNOBS.

Art in Metal Work as Applied Now to Builders' Hardware.

Twenty-five dollars for the knob and plate of a front door may seem to be a bit of extravagance, but in these days of high art in furnishing a good deal more than that can be spent for hand chased and gold plated bronze knobs from special designs. There are hundreds of patterns of high priced door fittings, and it is very easy to select knobs, hinges, lifts, escutcheons and other fittings of the doors and windows of a single story to cost from $350 to $500. Some of the patterns are so costly that dealers do not pretend to keep the articles in stock, and manufacturers require time for filling some orders for articles sold by samples or photographic reproductions of patterns. If the articles are to be made from the special designs of an architect for a particular purpose, the cost can easily extend to thousands of dollars.

The development of art in metal work, as applied to the regular trade of builders' hardware, has been gradual. Some of the old time workers in iron and brass produced patiently and laboriously large and elaborately designed hinges, knockers, locks and latches that were artistic and are valued today by collectors of antiques. The present workers can cast and finish in a few hours many elaborately designed knobs, plates and hinges, and artists are employed to design dainty, graceful and appropriate patterns or to copy and apply the best and most practicable designs that art has produced so that the ornamentation of a knob and plate may be artistic and refined.

The demand for knobs and plates has run through plain finished brass and wrought iron to brass and bronze, with varied finishing. Oxidized copper finish seems to be preferred now for articles of moderate cost, but silver plated brass and bronze, gold plated bronze and bronze with oxidized silver finish or verd antique finish are used in the most costly houses. The demand for cast iron, wrought iron and steel, with dull black finish, has increased to some extent, but they are the only methods that can be used appropriately in some instances. Designs that are in harmony with the colonial style of architecture have been produced, and they are severely plain when alongside some of the designs from the French school.

Polishing and hand chasing make the cost of hardware mount up, but the niceties of casting have been developed so much in recent years that some plates and other articles need only to be cleaned with sand and touched in spots with files and emery paper. The process used in finishing some of the metal is, through the fumes of acids, dangerous for the workmen, but in the foundries and machine shops the smiths and machinists may work for many years without loss of health. In one foundry in Connecticut are smiths who are robust and skillful at 60 years of age, and in the machine shops adjoining are many old workmen, some of whom have made such valuable improvements on machines for making locks that the attachments or devices have not been patented owing to the fear of having them stolen or copied. The company and the faithful old workmen keep the secrets.—New York Times.

ETIQUETTE IN 1628.

In a Book Written Then Are Things Which Sound Curious Now.

What is probably one of the oldest books on deportment in existence was discovered in Paris the other day, says the New York World. It was published in that city in 1628 for the College of the Jesuits of La Fleche and is entitled "Good Manners In Converse Among Men." The text is in French, with a Latin translation.

Deportment in public is first touched upon. "In yawning do not groan," this ancient guide to politeness says, "and do not gape even when speaking. In blowing thy nose do it as one would sound a trumpet and afterward regard not fixedly thy handkerchief. Avoid wiping thy nose as the children do—with thy fingers or upon the sleeve. When listening to some one speaking do not wiggle about, but keep thyself in thy skin the while."

It must have been hard to obey this latter injunction, judging from what is said a little farther along, "Kill not fleas or the like in the presence of others, but excuse thyself and remove whatever torments thee."

Three hundred years ago gentlemen did not wear such sad colored costumes as they do today, and one cannot help feeling that a little pride and swagger were excusable in a dandy of those days when he donned for the first time a particularly fetching costume of high colored silken doublet and hose. Yet this "guide" remarks severely: "If thou art well bedizened, if thy hose be tightly drawn and thy habit be well ordered, parade not thyself, but carry thyself with becoming modesty. Demean not thyself arrogantly, neither go mincingly about. Let not thy hands hang limply to the ground and tuck not up thy hose at every turn."

"Do not embellish thyself with flowers upon thy ear" is another injunction which sounds curiously today, but the advice, "When speaking, raise not thy voice as if thou wert crying an edict," is just as pertinent now as when the budding young gentlemen of La France had it drummed into them.

Table manners in those days must have been rather more primitive even than those of some of the 50 cent table d'hotes in this city, for the book says: "Being seated at the table, scratch not thyself, and if thou must cough or spit or wipe thy nose, do it dexterously and without a great noise."

"Stuff not thy mouth with food when eating, and drink not too much of the wine if thou art not master of the house. Show not overmuch pleasure either at the meats or wine. In taking salt have a care that thy knife be not greasy. When it is necessary to clean that or the fork, do it neatly with the napkin or a little bread, but never with the entire loaf. Smell not of the meats, and, if by chance thou dost, put them not back afterward before another."

"It is a very indecent thing to wipe the sweat from thy face with thy napkin, or with the same to blow thy nose or clean the plate or platter."

Governors' Salaries.

There is a great difference in the compensation of the governors. New York pays the most—$10,000 a year and house rent free. New Jersey and Pennsylvania pay their governors $10,000 a year, but do not furnish mansions for them. Ohio and Massachusetts pay $8,000 a year. Illinois and California pay $6,000 a year. Colorado, Indiana, Kentucky, Minnesota, Missouri, Virginia and Wisconsin pay $5,000. Maryland pays $4,500. Eight states pay $4,000 a year. The remaining 21 states pay miserably small salaries to their executives. In Vermont and Oregon the governors receive only $1,500 a year—hardly enough to pay a capable private secretary. In Michigan the salary of the governor remained for many years at $1,000. This restricted the office to rich men, for no poor man who was competent could afford to take it. The salary in that state now is $4,000.—Exchange.

A Lamentable Failure.

McLester (sadly)—The new figure I invented for the cotillon failed last night.

Friend—What was it?

McLester—I arranged a set of beautifully decorated flowerpots in one end of the room, each with the name of a gentleman, and then the ladies were to get partners by throwing a golden heart into the flowerpot.

Friend—Why didn't it work?

McLester—They smashed all the windows and didn't hit a flowerpot.

A FRENCH SQUIRE.

How He Dressed, His Weakness For Perfume and What He Ate.

The squire's shoes were of a very plain and solid make, little better than those provided for his laborers, and such was his economy that he bought leather and had them re-soled by a cobbler living at the chateau. He was much more particular about his headgear. Felt hats were brought by sea from Rouen to Cherbourg. Gomberville paid 25 francs for his own, while those for his servants were not more than a third of that price. His rich velvet caps cost nearly 40 francs.

The squire had a peculiar weakness for perfumes, which he distilled on the spot, such as rosewater, Damascus water, "eau a la mode," etc., and he did not think it beneath his dignity to go and gather the pinks at a neighboring monastery. He was also very fastidious with regard to his gloves and would pay 12 francs a pair for them.

A word may be added as to the arrangements for the table at the chateau. The flour was ground and the bread made at home, although when there was not time to do so a loaf of 12 pounds would be bought from the baker for 3 francs. He paid a higher price when he expected friends, and especially the cure of Cherbourg, who was somewhat of an epicure. There is little said about pastry except the "gateau des rois," so essential to the festivities of Twelfth Night or Epiphany. The desserts consisted of cheese, honey, fresh and dried fruits, oranges and grenades from the south, with a great variety of wines. Generally the preference was given to solid food. Sometimes oxen and sheep were slaughtered at home; sometimes choice morsels were bought at the town, and wonderfully cheap they were. On one occasion the half of a calf and a pound of candles are purchased for 5 francs. Kids were much in request for special entertainments. Pork was then, as now, a favorite article of diet among the peasants. One day, when going to the chase, he rose at 4 o'clock and breakfasted on pork and herrings himself. The fact speaks well for his digestive powers—unless he had reason to repent of the indulgence.

Special luxuries were occasionally provided at his table, as when the servant of a neighbor brought him an Indian cock, and then he was pleased that he gave the messenger a pourboire of 4 francs. This little circumstance is not without interest, as showing that the turkey was not then unknown in France, and throwing doubt on the common tradition that this bird was first introduced there by the Jesuits and served at the royal table of Charles IX, 1571. Fish appears often on the squire's board, as his chateau was near the sea, and the rivers also furnished a good supply.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Slack Mindedness.

A Bern newspaper contained the following prospectus of a hotel: "—, in the Bernese Oberland, is the favorite place of resort for those who are fond of solitude. Persons in search of solitude are, in fact, constantly flocking there from the four quarters of the globe." I gather from my informant that this is either a copy or a translation of the prospectus. But I forbear to give the name of the favorite retreat, partly because I have not myself seen the advertisement and partly for fear that many of your readers might be tempted to swell the crowd in that haunt of populous solitude.

In my Harrow days it was reported that the very clever and kind hearted but irascible and sometimes inconsequent second master (long since dead) once called out to the boys in his form, "If one boy prompts another, the boy who prompts shall have ten times as many lines to write out as the boy who is prompted, and the boy who is prompted just the same."—London Spectator.

A Display of Confidence.

On one of the busiest corners of Chicago is a newsstand. The young man who sells papers has a large and abundant confidence in human nature, for as soon as he gets his papers displayed at the stand he empties a handful of nickels and pennies on top of a paper. He cries his wares without intermission, for he holds a bundle of papers under his arm. But for every paper he sells from the bundle he carries he sells two from his stand. His customers, who know him, pick out their papers, lay the coins on the stand and walk away. If they lay down a nickel or a dime, they make change for themselves from the loose coin placed for that purpose.

HARPOONING A WHALE.

The Capture of One That Seemed Like Cold Blooded Murder.

As we came abreast of a tiny cove or cleft in the cliffs the harpooner suddenly stiffened with excitement, and he muttered "Blow-ow-ow" in an undertone. There in that little docklike cleft lay a monster just awash, a tiny spiral of vapor at her side showing her to be accompanied by a calf. Down came the mast and sails as if by magic, and in less than one minute we were paddling straight in for the cove. The water was as smooth as a mirror, and the silence profound. A very few strokes and the order was whispered, "Stand up!" to the harpooner. Louis rose, poising his iron, and almost immediately darted. The keen weapon was buried up to the socket in the broad, glistening side. "Stern all!" was shouted, and backward we swiftly glided, but there was no need for retreat. Never a move did she make, save convulsively to clutch the calf to her side with one of her great winglike flippers.

We carefully approached again, the harpooner and officer having changed places, and, incredible as it may seem, almost wedged the boat in between the whale and the rocks. No sheep could have more quietly submitted to slaughter than did this mighty monster, whose roll to one side would have crushed our boat to finders, and whose death struggle had it taken place as usual, must, in so confined a corner, have drowned us all. Evidently fearful of injuring her calf, she quietly died and gave no sign. Case hardened old blubber hunters as we were, we felt deeply ashamed, our deed looked so like a cold blooded murder. One merciful thrust of a lance ended the calf's misery, and, rapidly cutting a hole through the two lips of our prize, we buckled to our heavy task of towing it to the ship. We were soon joined by the other boats, but all combined made no great progress, and we had seven hours of heavy labor before we got the carcass home. Securing it alongside, we went to a hard and well earned meal and a good night's rest.—Good Words.

THE GREAT METROPOLIS.

New York City as the Paris of the American Continent.

After taking into full account the claims of the sensitive city of Chicago, it may be truthfully stated that the city of New York is the Paris of America. There are other municipalities which are doing their best in their several ways to rival her, but it is toward New York that all the eyes in the country are turned, and from which they take suggestion as a cat laps milk. The rest of us are in a measure provincial. Many of us profess not to approve of New York; but, though we cross ourselves piously, we take or read a New York daily paper. New York gives the cue alike to the secretary of the treasury and (by way of London) to the social swell. The ablest men in the country seek New York as a market for their brains, and the wealthiest people of the country move to New York to spend the patrimony which their rail splitting fathers or grandfathers accumulated.

Therefore it is perfectly just to refer to the social life of New York as representative of that element of the American people which has been most blessed with brains or fortune, and as representative of our most highly evolved civilization. It ought to be our best. The men and women who contribute to its movement and influence ought to be the pick of the country.

But what do we find? We find as the ostensible leaders of New York society a set of shallow worldlings whose whole existence is given up to emulating one another in elaborate and splendid inane social fripperies. They dine and wine and dance and entertain from January to December. Their houses, whether in town or at the fashionable watering places to which they move in summer, are as sumptuous, if not more so, than those of the French nobility in its palmiest days, and their energies are devoted to the discovery of new expensive luxuries and fresh titillating creature comforts.—"The Conduct of Life," by Robert Grant, in Scribner's.

Beacon Hill's Glory Departed.

Who among the prophets could have foretold 20 years ago that real estate on far famed Beacon Hill would have depreciated in value more than in any other section of Boston? And yet there is the fact, and it illustrates how the whims of fashion dominate over all things terrestrial.—Boston Herald.

The Zero of Temperature.

No explorer has yet been able to hang his cap on the north pole, nor has the chemist in his laboratory yet succeeded in reaching what may be called the north pole of his researches—namely, the zero of temperature, or the temperature of celestial space. This zero has been defined as that point of temperature at which gas particles would give no pressure and have no volume, a condition which, it is said, would take place at a temperature of 274 degrees below the freezing point of water. Unlike the arctic explorers, however, who have a number of roads open by which to approach the pole, the chemist has only one route by which to reach the chilly destination he seeks, and that is by the liquefaction of all the gases. This, the textbooks state, has already been accomplished, but the chemist in search of the zero temperature knows better.

Though compressed hydrogen when expanded yields a mist, the victory over this baffling element has not been achieved, and as the experiments in this direction are difficult and costly it seems probable that the explorers will reach the north pole, by balloon or otherwise, long before the chemists reach their zeroic temperature, the temperature of celestial space. One practical result the chemist names as a reason of his researches after the zero temperature is that should it ever be reached we could then completely transform heat into mechanical power, whereas at present we succeed in getting only about 10 per cent so converted.—Chicago Interior.

The Tie.

"Help!" he shrieked.
He clutched wildly his throat.
"Help!"
He clutched his throat until his wife came and tied his four-in-hand for him, after which he quietly finished dressing.—Detroit Tribune.

DRESS GOODS.

It gives us pleasure to announce that we are now displaying the most extensive and attractive stock of wool Dress Fabrics ever imported by us, selected with the utmost care as to desirability of weave, beauty of effect and excellence of quality; the result has been to enable us to present a superb variety of superior grade goods in a truly wonderful assortment of the most recent creations of wool and silk and wool "fashion's favorites."

Handsome materials and fashionable fabrics will be difficult to obtain this season, for the reason that importation are much below the average, particularly in fine silks and dress fabrics, and the American manufacturers have been obliged to curtail their productions.

Each department of our business is fully prepared to show the newest and correct materials, styles and colorings for fall and winter, and we strongly recommend an early examination of the various departments.

Wilson Air-Tight Heater.

With Patent Automatic Smoke Doors.

The Wilson Heater, which is a stove for house heating, is the most remarkable that has ever been patented.

In the first place it radiates more heat than any stove known, and will save 25 per cent. in fuel over any stove made.

Second, with two or three ordinary sticks of pine stove wood it will keep the fire from 36 to 48 hours, and with ordinary care the fire will never go out.

Third, being entirely closed at the base there is no danger of fire, and it is the cleanest stove in use. It is not necessary to remove the ashes oftener than once a month. These stoves are made of different styles—the small one, which is made for bed-rooms, is specially recommended for health as well as comfort.

The Wilson Heater has a great advantage over any similar stove, because it has Patent Automatic Smoke Doors, which prevent the smoke from coming into the room when you take the top off to put in the wood. These doors are so constructed that they can be taken off and put back on in one minute. These stoves can be seen at our store, come and look at them.
