STILL IN DOUBT.

Both Sides Claiming the Election of President and Governor.

From the bulletins that came in over the wires Tuesday night, and as published in THE DAILY REFLECTOR Wednesday morning, it looked like McKinley had swept the country and would receive a large majority of the electoral vote over Bryan.

The almost complete suppression of news during Wednesday, and nothing at all being given out to confirm the bulletins of the night before, aroused suspicion that something was wrong, and that at best the result would be close. Repeated efforts were made to get news; but none could be had.

About 3 o'clock in the afternoon the following was received from Tarboro: "It is believed here that Bryan is elected, because we are getting no bulletins, the Western Union Company being operated by gold bugs and the last night affair being a fake."

This instantly aroused hope among Democrats that Bryan was safe and that when the actual result could be ascertained he would be elected.

About 5 o'clock the following was received: "The latest returns are favorable to Bryan. Democrats still claim his election, and that he will have 256 electoral votes."

This caused hope to spring still higher, and the following received this morning makes the outlook all the more favorable.

Mr. Bryan gives out the following: "The Democratic national committee claims enough votes to make a majority in the electoral college, but the vote is very close in several of the States and the result will not be known positively until the entire vote is counted in all close contests. It is wise for both sides to watch the returns to guard against the possibility of a mistake intentionally or unintentionally."

Democrats are claiming that Bryan has 256 electoral votes and Republicans are claiming that McKinley has 364.

No news has come during today that throws any more light on the situation.

It is impossible yet to give the result in North Carolina. The Republicans are claiming everything, but chairman Manley says the indications point to Watson having the State by a small majority. He also says Kitchen has beaten Settle in the fifth congressional district and that there are chances for Adams and Lockhart in their districts.

The returns that have come in so far from the first district indicate Skinner's election by a large majority.

Contagious Yawning.

Two young men boarded an Oldtown trolley car this week to settle a very peculiar wager, the one having bet the other a $5 silver certificate that he could make six people out of ten yawn anywhere without saying a word. A well-filled car was selected for the purpose. The young man who proposed the wager had not taken his seat many minutes when he opened his mouth and gave a prodigious yawn. He speedily followed it by another, and awaited results. A moment later a middle-aged lady promptly put her hand up to her mouth to smother a cavernous yawn. Almost everybody in the car after that seemed to be in a hurry to follow the lady's lead. Out of the nineteen people in the car there were fourteen who were seized by the affliction.—Bangor News.

Gen. Evans at the Grave of Crisp.

A man might die content if he knew that a friend, who understood both his virtues and his follies, would stand by his funeral bier and point faithfully and honestly the lesson of his life. It was a sadly thrilling spectacle when Mark Antony preached the funeral of his friend, Ceasar, but the Roman orator used his opportunity to stir the passions of the populace. It is a far sublimer sight when one who has lived in an era of more light than the noble heathen of the olden days lifts his clasped hands over the ashes of the Christian dead and teaches a lesson such as the Hon. Clement A. Evans, of Georgia, taught in his funeral oration at the burial of his friend, the Hon. Charles Frederick Crisp. The eloquent Georgia orator in concluding his sad mission, referred with pathos and power to that supreme and inevitable hour in a man's life. He said:

"We may suffer ourselves to be counseled even by death. Meet it we must; meet it dourly we may; meet it reverently we should, for it is designed to be but as the priest in the black gown sent to conduct us to the Prince of Life Eternal.

"The last object that man beholds on earth is not the State and its officials; not the Church and its ministers; not the family of loved ones, and not friends in tears; but the last being alone with man on earth is Almighty God. In the article of death, after every mortal citadel has been stormed, the eyes of the unassailable soul turns from the delightful scenes as well as from the ghastly horrors of Time to look with clairvoyant power and boundless interest upon the serene eternity of infinite things. In that moment of an indescribable crisis the lone soul looks before it springs and as it looks it encounters the face of God. The Almighty God! The immortal soul! Face to face! Does the soul reflect the image and likeness of Him into whose face it looks? This is life's crucial question! Blessed in such a crisis are the pure in heart.

"In the crucible of every human career, after all fires have been burned down and the vessel is cold, there should remain at last refined and prepared for eternal use an immortal soul which serenely reflects in character the face of God.

"It is well for us who are here, and who know each other's nature well, to understand that in our inmost unexpressed thought we believe there is something better than the poor prizes for which we are all contending."

A Financial Question.

The colonel had been missed at the Ague Club for the last week. Yesterday he reported there as of old. "What's the matter? Where have you been?" queried one of the boys.

"There's a note over there in the bank that's been bothering me a little," confessed the old man.

"Ah, I see," continued the questioner, "you've been trying to meet that note."

"Nope," was the frank reply: "I've been trying to find a place where it wouldn't meet me.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Collecting Debts.

A new way of collecting bad debts is reported from Paris. A man has gone into business here who will collect exclusive accounts which ordinary collectors have not been able to settle.

The debtor has absolutely no redress, since no one can compel a man sitting in his buggy in the street to move on.

The Tennessee Centennial Exposition will open at Nashville, May 1, 1897, the centennial anniversary of its admission as a State into the Union.

SOME ANCIENT FAT.

Adipose That Accumulated on a Mammoth Tens of Thousands of Years Ago.

Dr. Dall of the Smithsonian institution, during his recent visit to Alaska, secured a natural history specimen that was a prize indeed.

Bodies of mammoths in a fresh state have been dug up from time to time in arctic Siberia, preserved in natural cold storage since a period probably antedating the first appearance of man on the earth.

Agas ago this mammoth died under such circumstances that its corpus was buried in mud. At about that time there was a great and permanent change in the temperature of circumpolar regions.

Hundreds of centuries later a stream flowing through an Alaskan valley tackled the clay bank referred to and began to cut it away.

However, the natives finally summoned courage enough to drag the remains of the mammoth out of the clay bank piecemeal.

In the office of Osteologist Frederick A. Lucas, at the National museum, is a mammoth's molar tooth, to which an odd story is attached.

Mastodon bones, of course, are frequently dug up in the United States. The mastodon was a kind of elephant, but it did not belong to the genus elephants.

The first mastodon ever dug up was found in 1813. The remains of mastodons are by no means confined to the United States.

Diphtheria of the skin, a very rare disease, was cured by the use of antitoxin in a little 2 1/2 year-old Berlin girl recently.

"Help!" he shrieked. He clutched wildly his throat. "Help!" He clutched his throat until his wife came and tied his four-in-hand for him, after which he quietly finished dressing.

A SECTARIAN MULE.

This Mountain Animal Had Prejudices In the Matter of Sects.

As I jogged along the sandy banks of the Poor fork of the Cumberland river, letting my horse take its own head, I caught up with the mountaineer on a mule, also taking his time.

"Mighty," says he, "ef y'ain't ridin in a mule."

"I don't know about that; some of the pleasantest rides I've had in the mountains have been mule-back."

"That's case yer didn't have ter ride one only when yer wanted ter. Ef yer do it frum needosity, it's different."

"That one you're on seems to be a pretty good one."

"Bout ez good ez a mule ever gits ter be, I reckon," he said in a tone indicating his lack of faith in the mule.

"What's the matter with him?"

"He's got his notions."

"What are they? Notions to kick the top rail off the fence?"

"No; he ain't much uv a kicker; he kinder 'pears ter have a satisfied sort uv mind an takes things pretty much ez they come."

"Then what ails him?"

"Well, I want ter git over on t'other side uv the fork, an I can't till I git up here about two miles whar thar's a boat, so's I kin ride over in that."

"Why don't you ride him over?"

"That's what I don't like about him."

"Why?"

"He's a Baptis' mule an I'm a Meth'dis'."

This was a poser and quite beyond my scope of comprehension. I had heard of religious prejudices, but they had never gone so far as to affect any other animal than man.

"You will have to explain that point," says I. "It's too far over for me."

"Well, it's this a-way," he said, with a short laugh. "Yer see, I got this critter from a Baptis' preacher that had raised him from a colt, an had rid him fer seven ye'rs on circuit, an wouldn't a parted with him fer no price, only he wuz goin ter Miz-zoury an couldn't take the mule along.

He was a power ter work, an the preacher used ter help out his wages lettin the mule ter people when he wuzn't ridin him. That's how I come ter git him. Well, the preacher never said nothin, an I never axed nothin, an the fust Sunday after I got him I rid off ter the Meth'dis' meetin, never thinkin nothin.

About a mile from the meetin-house I had ter ford the fork, an the water wuz purty deep that mornin, but the mule knowed the way, an I jis' let him have his head. An, by gum, he done it, fer when he got ter the deepest place he stopped squar' in the crick, tucked his head, h'isted his heels an sent me kitin over his years inter the water whar it wuz four feet deep ef it wuz a inch, an soused me clean outen sight."

"Did he run away?" I asked as the mountaineer paused a moment to think over it.

"Nary a run," he said. "When I come up, sneezin an a-snortin, he wuz waitin thar fer me ez quiet ez yer gran'mamma, an I got on an rid out. Yer see," he concluded, "the dern mule knowed I wuz a Meth'dis', an ez he wuz a Baptis', born an raised, he jis' run his doctrine ont me an soused me all over when he had the chance. He's too good a mule ter kill, an ef he ever does that agin I'll kill him shore. So's not ter give him no temptation, I never try no more fordin with him."—Washington Star.

Lincoln's Postoffice Money.

"While at Washington," said Mr. Wanamaker, "it came under my notice at the postoffice department that Abraham Lincoln, in his early life, had been postmaster at a small Ohio town.

"Years afterward it was discovered that no settlement had reached Washington of the affairs of that little postoffice. A visit was made to Mr. Lincoln and the case stated. He rose from his desk and walked over to a chest of drawers and took out a bundle of papers, among them an envelope containing $17 and some cents, the exact sum in identical money of the government safely in keeping until called for. As he handed it over to the agent of the postoffice department he said: 'There it is. I never use any other man's money.'"—Philadelphia Record.

MRS. ALFRED FORBES, Greenville, N. C.

Fales of the Post That Are Told Among His Chicago Friends.

During one financial crisis that was especially severe Eugene Field could see no way out of his difficulties except to ask for a raise of salary, and that was as abhorrent to his fine nature as it would have been to do a mean action. Several days in succession he came to the office resolved to make appeal to Mr. Stone, and each day he went home having failed to nerve himself up to the speaking point. Finally he formed a thoroughly characteristic resolution, and for a week was not seen in the office at all. Then one afternoon he marched into Mr. Stone's office followed by four of his little children, the five of them presenting such a pitiable appearance as would have wrung tears from his employer had his heart and his name been synonymous, which was far from being the case. Father and children were dressed in rags and tatters from head to foot; the children's toes were sticking out bare through holes in their shoes; their faces were unwashed and their eyes red, as if they had been crying. Field himself was in no better plight, and there the five stood in front of Mr. Stone, speaking not a word, but looking at him with appealing glances. All this of course had been carefully rehearsed by Field during the week of conspiracy, and the result was simply overwhelming. At last Field broke the silence, looking at his employer, who was also his best friend, out of those big eyes so full of human kindness, and said:

"Do you think you can see your way, Mr. Stone, to raising my salary?"

Needless to say he got the raise. Field's eccentricity showed itself in the books he purchased, many of which had no possible bearing upon his work and indeed had small intrinsic value. "My library," he used to say, "is full of fool books," and there was some truth in this. For example, he had hundreds of volumes containing the works of unknown and or the most part unworthy poets. Nothing pleased him more than to buy some little volume of execrable verse produced by a poet in Peoria or Coldwater or any other insignificant place, and these he would range proudly with the others and sometimes turn over the pages "just to see how bad they were." He said that things had to be either very good or very bad in order to please him.

One of the queer things he did at The News office was the establishing of what he called the "Field memorial window," really a portion of a glass door over which he had an artist draw a cherub with the orthodox wings attached to his own head and face. Under this cherub's head he took delight in pasting all the disagreeable clippings he could gather from newspapers and periodicals regarding any one in the office and especially about himself. This window came to be regarded as a regular bulletin board of spleen, and many a quiet chuckle Field would have watching the long faces of his companions as they read sarcastic or facetious remarks about them. Field never cared how much fun was made of him, and he was the first to applaud when the laugh was at his own expense.—New York Sun.

He Dodged.

"Be sure your sin will find you out," said a man who has a weakness for high hats, which is inconsistent with his general mode of dress. "At the instance of my wife, who did not like his styles, I abandoned my old hatter not long ago and got a hat at another shop. For fear he would discover this I went around the block rather than pass his shop when on my way to business.

"I only postponed the evil day. I took a seat in a restaurant yesterday at the very table at which one of his salesmen was seated. He started as he saw my hat, but at once looked the other way. When he got up, he said pleasantly that he hoped I would come back to them before long. One comfort is that I won't have to go around the block any more."—Exchange.

Nippon.

The Japanese residents of Chicago have a club called the Chicago Nippon club. "Nippon," says one of the members, "is really the name of our country, and the nickname 'Japan' came about in this way: The Chinese pronounced 'Nippon' as 'Yappon,' and then the Portuguese traders shortened it into 'Japan,' but the Japanese speak of their country as 'Nippon,' so our club is the 'Chicago Nippon club.'"

Broke the Bank at One Play.

A local sport named Salazer walked into the gambling rooms of the Cantina del Teatro at the commencement of play the other afternoon. The first hand at monte was being dealt. Laying down what appeared to be a $10 bill with $4 in silver on the top of it on the "siete de bastos," he calmly awaited the result of the draw. The card won, and on the dealer proceeding to open the $10 bill he was surprised to find neatly folded inside two $1,000 bills.

The sport had won $2,014, which was promptly paid, although it took the whole bank and $14 more to do it. The lucky gambler rolled a cigarette in the customary Mexican nonchalant manner, and, bowing politely to the croupiers, left the room, leaving those gentry staring vacantly at the waste of green cloth in front of them and wondering what was the best thing to do.

Knightly Massacres.

The chronicles of Froissart abound with accounts of the massacres perpetrated by the most notable knights of that chivalric age. They thought it no harm to burn churches, destroy religious buildings and plunder and butcher a peaceable and inoffensive population.

Rhode Island, although the least of the states, is strong in manufacture, employing 85,976 hands and producing $142,500,625 worth of various lines of goods.

The manuscripts of the fifth and twelfth centuries were written with very good black ink which has not shown the least signs of fading or obliteration.

All that is good in art is the expression of one soul talking to another, and is precious according to the greatness of the soul that utters it.—Ruskin.

Gallon was originally a pitcher or jar, no matter of what size.

NOVEMBER ECHOS.

Keep Up With the News These Election Times.

Heavy rain Wednesday night.

A new lot of Cranberries just in, at Morris Meyer's.

Money loaned on 30, 60 and 90 days. Apply to F. C. Harding.

For a choice smoke, try Philadelphia Seal, at D. S. Smith's.

Something new in season Buckwheat, Oat Flake and Portorico Molasses, at S. M. Schultz.

The rain has just come down today.

Ed. H. Shelburn and M. Owens both commenced moving into the Rialto block today.

This has been a bad day for news. People don't want to hear anything except about the election and nothing positive can ever be had in that direction.

How's This for Prices.

Mr. E. Hardy sold on the floor of the Planters' Warehouse, Tuesday, October 27th, the following lots of tobacco and we challenge the State to beat it.

It is said to be a fact that hundreds of Washington women wear upon their hats the plumage of birds which have lost their lives by flying against the Washington monument in the dimness of twilight or daybreak. Hardly a morning comes that there are less than a score of dead birds about the base of the shaft. Strange to say, few English sparrows lose their lives by flying against the monument.

WHO'S ELECTED?

Services in the Baptist church to-night.

Mrs. W. H. Ricks is visiting her parents at Grimsland.

Mrs. Ollen Warren and children, of Conetoe, are visiting relative here.

Prof. S. D. Bagley will move from here to Conetoe to conduct a school at the latter place.

Notice.

There will be a meeting of the Board of Town Councilmen tonight at the Mayor's office. Every member is requested to be present.

OLA FORBES, Mayor.

Died

Little Roye, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Hart, died Wednesday night about 11:30 o'clock. The child had been sick about two months, and during a greater part of the time suffered intensely. It is a sad bereavement to the parents, their only child being taken, and our people generally sympathize with them in the sorrow that darkens their home. The funeral services were held this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Cherry Hill Cemetery.

Marriage Licenses.

During the month of October twenty four marriage licenses were issued in Pitt county.

The REFLECTOR is not much given to making apologies, but our readers are asked to bear with us a little for the scarcity of news items. The entire force of the office worked almost continuously from 2 o'clock Monday morning to Wednesday evening, and the result is the whole crowd, editor and printers, are so near broken down as to be almost unfit for work today. A little rest will put us all right again.

RICKS & TAFT.

We Sell Goods Cheaper Than Any Other House.

DRESS GOODS.

It gives us pleasure to announce that we are now displaying the most extensive and attractive stock of wool Dress Fabrics ever imported by us, selected with the utmost care as to desirability of weave, beauty of effect and excellence of quality; the result has been to enable us to present a superb variety of superior grade goods in a truly wonderful assortment of the most recent creations of wool and silk and wool "fashion's favorites."

Handsome materials and fashionable fabrics will be difficult to obtain this season, for the reason that importation are much below the average, particularly in fine silks and dress fabrics, and the American manufacturers have been obliged to curtail their productions.

Each department of our business is fully prepared to show the newest and correct materials, styles and colorings for fall and winter, and we strongly recommend an early examination of the various departments.

Wilson Air-Tight Heater.

With Patent Automatic Smoke Doors.

The Wilson Heater, which is a stove for house heating, is the most remarkable that has ever been patented.

In the first place it radiates more heat than any stove known, and will save 25 per cent. in fuel over any stove made.

Second, with two or three ordinary sticks of pine stove wood it will keep the fire from 36 to 48 hours, and with ordinary care the fire will never go out.

Third, being entirely closed at the base there is no danger of fire, and it is the cleanest stove in use. It is not necessary to remove the ashes oftener than once a month. These stoves are made of different styles—the small one, which is made for bed-rooms, is specially recommended for health as well as comfort.

The Wilson Heater has a great advantage over any similar stove, because it has Patent Automatic Smoke Doors, which prevent the smoke from coming into the room when you take the top off to put in the wood. These doors are so constructed that they can be taken off and put back on in one minute. These stoves can be seen in our store, come and look at them.
