THE PRESIDENT.

What He Receives in Addition to His Salary.

The following, according to Harper's Round Table, is a fair idea of the many incidentals that come free to a President. Every bit of linen, bedding, towels, and such things is furnished. He is shaved by the White House barbers. His table is spread with the finest, daintiest damask, set with the most exquisite china, and bountifully supplied with flowers from the White House conservatories. He sends a telegram, it is done from an instrument in the White House, for which the government pays. His stationery, postage, etc., cost him nothing. Should he desire a game of billiards, there is a beautiful table at hand; or if he wants to take a drive his stables, which the government pays the rent for and takes care of, are amply equipped. When he enters his business office, a man is stationed at the door to open and close it; and a private secretary, to whom the government pays a salary of $5,000 a year, assists him with his correspondence. The services of a typewriter are also furnished. He is protected from the curious by a number of private watchmen. Should he want a cruise, a magnificent steamship from the navy is placed at his disposal.

There are many other things that cost him nothing, such as the culinary arrangements, his steward, who does the marketing, the many fancy delicacies sent him by enterprising firms. This, by the way, is a sort of nuisance, for it seems to be the desire of every manufacturer of some new eatable or drinkable to get into the White House. Things of value find their way there that are never accepted.

Words of Wisdom.

Whoever has a bad habit has a master.

Wine hath drowned more men than the sea.

When the outlook is not good try the uplook.

We best serve ourselves when we best serve others.

The brightest of all things, the sun, hath its spots.

The man who has no God to worship worships himself.

A fault will attract more attention to us than a virtue. The man who has the "big heel" often wears a small hat.

It is not the longest prayers that are answered quickest.

The spots we see on others are nearly always on our own glasses.

Every man who does wrong is helping to lead an army of boys astray.

If some men would give up more and lay up less, how soon they would be rich.

There are people who never care for music except when they play the first fiddle.

The man who is trying to ride behind a hypocrite now will not do it in the judgment.

Some people talk much about what a happy place Heaven is and do nothing to make the homes resemble it.

Taken Back for Trial.

Ex-Sheriff A. H. Ricks, of Nash county, came to Greenville Friday evening and left this morning taking with him John Jordan, who has been in Pitt jail several weeks for safe keeping. Jordan killed a man named Catlett in Rocky Mount on Sept. 18th, and because of threats to lynch him he was first removed to Wilson jail and afterwards brought to Greenville.

SERVICES IN THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The Rev. Stewart McQueen, of Goldsboro, N. C., will hold a mission of four days duration in St. Paul's Church, Greenville, N. C., commencing Tuesday the 10th inst. at 10 o'clock A. M.

The following schedule of services will be observed:

Tuesday, 10th, A. M.

Morning Prayer and celebration of the Holy Communion followed by a sermon on "The Christian Training of Children."

Tuesday, 10th, P. M. Evening Prayer and sermon on the subject, "The Sacred in the Secular."

Wednesday, 11th, A. M. Morning Prayer and sermon, subject, "Prayer."

Wednesday, 11th, P. M., Evening Prayer and sermon, subject, "Neglecting Salvation."

Thursday, 12th, A. M. Morning Prayer and sermon, subject, "The Church."

Thursday, 12th, P. M. Evening Prayer and sermon, subject, "Righteousness and Judgment—The Habitation of God's Throne." Other services will be announced.

The citizens of Greenville and vicinity are cordially invited to attend these services.

ORIGINAL OBSERVATIONS.

Sympathy is the blossom of love.

Idleness is the fertilizer of crime.

They toil and spin—bicycle riders.

The man who keeps his own counsel doesn't have to hire a lawyer.

Many a man who jumps at a conclusion falls into an error.

Many sarcastic women, like certain popular melodies, are too sharp to be natural.

Some men lie because it pleases them best, and some lie because it pleases others best.

The value of a good name is best shown when a note is presented to a bank for discount.

The man who paves his own way to fame has frequently to walk over a rough and rugged road.

If a cheerful heart is a continual feast, there must be a large number of people who do not get a square meal once a year.

It must have been a great relief to Adam, after his fall, that there were not a dozen or so of indignant neighbors to kick him after he was down.—Orange (Va.) Observer.

Can't Understand the Clocks.

The REFLECTOR office has got some comical clocks. One in the printing room stopped work at 16 minutes to 1 just 16 days before the election. That clock was set to work again the morning after election and is ticking along all right, but the one in the telegraph room stopped right still a few minutes after the final news came Friday morning of McKinley and Russell's election, and several efforts since to get it to work have proven fruitless. We are going to send that clock to Dr. Griffin.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6th 1896.

The Democrats are up against the hard wall of defeat again. True, the defeat isn't as overwhelming as the McKinleyites tried to make the country believe it was, but still it is defeat. Democrats do not like defeat any better now than in the past nor any better than the Republicans did four years ago, but there are numerous reasons which serve to make the defeat of Bryan especially aggravating, not the least of which is the knowledge that his election would have been so easy had the gold Democrats given him as loyal support as the silver Democrats gave to Cleveland in his three campaigns. Still, there is very little bitterness expressed by Democrats. They made their fight against the greatest odds any party ever fought against and came so near winning that they frightened some of the other fellows almost to death, and, being good citizens and thorough believers in the rule of the majority, they are generally disposed to accept the result philosophically and to wait for time to even up things, as it generally does, in politics and in everything else.

Although it is too early, owing to the absence of full and authentic returns, to pass final judgment on the extent of the defeat, it is known that a majority of McKinley electors have been elected and probable that a majority of the popular vote has been registered against the free coinage of silver; it is certain that a majority of the next House will be anti-silver Republicans, and feared that enough legislatures have gone Republican to elect enough Senators to wipe out the silver majority in the Senate and give that body over to the control of the anti-silver Republicans. Granting that these probabilities will all turn out to be facts, they are not so terrible, from a Democratic point of view, as they at first glance appear to be. In fact, if the Democrats could not have the Presidency and both branches of Congress it is much better for the future of the party—let it not be forgotten that the Democratic party is the one deathless political party that this country has known—that the Republicans should have them all. With the executive and legislative branches of the government in their hands there can be no shirking of responsibilities on the part of the Republicans. They have promised the country a renewal of prosperity, if they were restored to power. Now that is exactly what the country stands most in need of and what the Democratic party hoped to accomplish. A majority of the voters of the country have decided that the Republicans should have another trial. All right, let them go ahead and give us prosperity as soon as possible. If they do it, the voters will be sure to give them full credit for it, and they may be sure that the Democrats will be too anxious after their long period of "hard times" under previous republican legislation and policy to get a little of that prosperity for themselves to raise any obstacles to prevent its coming or drive it away after it arrives. If they fail, as they have done before, the voters will see their mistake and will give the Democratic party a chance to see what it can do towards making the country permanently prosperous, instead of spasmodically prosperous with long intervals of "hard times" between.

Many things might be said about the methods pursued to secure McKinley's election, but as the case is analogous to that of some of our unscrupulous rich men who have no hesitation about violating moral laws to get money but are almighty careful not to violate the criminal laws, it is probably best to let them go without comment.

Since the election there has been considerable talk about a reorganization of the Democratic party upon some basis which will bring together in one organization all those who believe in the fundamental principles of the party. Such a movement properly conducted is worthy of all commendation, but if it is intended merely as a means of restoring to leadership the men who failed the party in its hour of need it will be certain to receive the condemnation it deserves, from the rank and file of the party—the men who bore the brunt of the battle just lost. There may be two opinions as to the need of a reorganization of the Democratic party, but it is certain, to my mind, and I think to that of the most of those who are familiar with the working of the campaign just ended, that the Democratic party needs organization very badly in some States. That is one of the few things that the party might find that it would be advantageous to copy after its opponents. Had the Democratic party been organized as it should have been Senators Jones and Faulkner would have had more trustworthy information from several States than they were furnished with, and had they known the real situation in several States that were lost they might have taken steps that would have saved them and possibly have changed the result of the election. It is the custom to sneer at party machines in some quarters, but for all that they are necessary adjuncts of most successful campaigns.

Darwin's Theory in Majolica.

Mrs. Brightwen, in "Inmates of My House and Garden" (Unwin), a very interesting and tastefully illustrated little book in which she describes her experiences in taming and keeping birds and animals of different kinds, tells a good story of unlooked for intelligence. One day in the dining room she was talking to her cook on culinary matters when the latter suddenly looked up at a majolica plate over the doorway and said: "That's a mythological subject, isn't it, ma'am?" Mrs. Brightwen replied that it was. The cook then said: "Is that Pan in the foreground?" Mrs. Brightwen said, "No, but it is a satyr." "Well," replied the cook, "I was saying the other day to the butler if there were creatures of that sort to be seen nowadays it would go far to prove the Darwinian theory. Wouldn't it, ma'am?" "History," adds Mrs. Brightwen, "does not record my reply."—Westminster Gazette.

AMATEUR MASSAGE.

The Different Movements of the Hands and What They Are For.

The benefits of massage are so well known that it is needless to recount them, and no ill person should be denied the invigorating effects of "the laying on of hands." Many persons are kept from the curative effects of massage by the thought of expense, skilled masseuses receiving high wages. To enable the home attendant or friend in some degree to take her place is the aim of this article.

The skilled masseuse must know the body, with the location of nerves and muscles, that he or she may be able to give such as need it special treatment.

Massage supplies to the feeble the exercise they are unable to obtain otherwise and includes a series of movements of limbs, fingers and toes, as well as the strokes of the masseuse's hands. These, somewhat violent, should not be tried without the advice of the physician, and no direction for their use is included in this article.

The strokes given in massage are for restfulness or for the purpose of rousing blood vessels and other organs to action and may be light or hard, the same variety of stroke being varied to suit the patient. No rule can be given for this, as judgment is something given only by nature and experience.

Massage must never be given to weary, and the masseuse should have a hand firm, but soft, flexible, sensitive and strong. Even an amateur may have this kind of hand, and practice will make it full of healing to the sick.

The masseuse must stand or sit in a position comfortable for herself, or otherwise she will be unable to give comfort. It is the rule to rub the limbs toward the body. Beginning at tip of fingers, rub with steady stroke toward the shoulder, varying the force according to the wish of the patient, and covering the whole arm. Starting with the toes, rub toward the thighs. The rubbing of the abdomen is in a circular course. On the back it follows the course of the backbone and must have some force to it.

With all the motions, in a general treatment the arms are taken first, then legs, chest, abdomen, back—from one end to the other of the spine.

Rubbing with the flat hand is the ordinary method known to every one. There is also rubbing with the tips of the fingers, which is very soothing when done lightly and often induces sleep when practiced on the head and wrists.

An invigorating motion is given by resting the base of the hand on arm or body, placing tips of fingers firmly on the skin and drawing toward the base of hand, working in this manner from wrist to shoulder and from foot to thigh. The hand is never flat when doing this, but bent to give purchase to the action of the fingers.

It will be found that the motion of kneading the flesh, which is almost precisely that of kneading bread, will give both stimulus and a restful sensation to the invalid. On the limbs this is taken from side to side, not up and down, as the former, but like it in that it starts at the wrists and ankles working upward.

Last of all, and often omitted save in cases of sluggish circulation, comes percussion, which is slapping the entire body from hand to shoulder, from foot upward, the head being omitted. This may be done with the entire hand flat, or with it bent so that only the fingers, thumb and base of hand touch the flesh, and must be done carefully, as even gentle blows on tender surfaces are often not beneficial.

Practice will make these hints plain and enable any one with a sound body and sympathetic nature to aid in curing the sick or in making their sufferings more easily borne, and there are many women and children who will take massage from those they love, who will not take it from a more skilled masseuse who is a stranger. These notes are written to those who long to help others, and who know nothing of massage save rubbing, which soon wearies both persons concerned. By using these four motions a beginner can give an hour's massage without becoming greatly fatigued, and their benefit is marked to the sufferer.—New York Ledger.

Of what consequence is it that anything should be concealed from man? Nothing is hidden from God; he is present in our minds and comes into the midst of our thoughts. Comes, do I say? As if he were ever absent!—Seneca

IT WAS A COMPLIMENT.
But It Made Her Blush, and She Didn't Seem to Enjoy It.
She was evidently bent upon producing an impression not only upon the old acquaintances she had just met, but upon all the other people in the car as well.
"Yes, I heard you had come back to Chicago to live," she said, after greetings had been exchanged, "but really I've not had time to come to see you. I have no cook—servants are the plague of a housekeeper's life in Chicago."
"Ah, I suppose you keep a good many?"
"Well, you know, we can't get them well trained, and it is one person's work to keep them going."
"Oh, well, I haven't had much trouble, but then I only keep two. How many?"
"Of course, my house is large and I am particular."
"Where are you living now? I want to come to see you."
"On the North Side. I only wish I could ask you over to dinner, but it is impossible so long as I am without a cook, and as I am particular about references I may not be suited for a long time."
"How lucky that I met you today. An old cook of mine is hunting a place. She will just suit you, for she is an excellent servant, fond of children, seldom goes out, and"—
"How nice! Have you seen Ellen since you came back?"
"I was going to see her today. I am so anxious to get Christine a place and I thought she might take her, but now that I've met you I shall not need to go. I can give her the best of recommendations, so you"—
"Yes, I haven't seen Ellen for a long time. She lives plainly, I might say poorly, and of course we don't go out together at all."
"Indeed, now, about the cook; shall I send her to you, or"—
"Oh, don't trouble yourself; I"—
"It is no trouble at all. What is your number?"
"Dear me, I don't believe I have a card with me. I intended to stop at the engraver's today, but the fall things in the shops were so lovely I forgot all about it."
"Too bad. However, I can write down your address. You will find her a treasure, I assure you."
"Yes, yes; no doubt. But really I am getting along very well and I hate to train."
"But you won't need to train Christine. I did that myself and I'd take her now only I have a treasure already."
"Yes. Do tell me if you ever see the Upwells now?"
"Yes, indeed. They have just gone to boarding. Christine had been living with them for a year, and Laura was perfectly delighted with her. You had better engage her at once. Why, isn't that your husband coming in? So glad to see you, Mr. Van Tompkins. I am perfectly delighted to see Dora looking so well. Why, she hasn't changed a bit in five years."
"Indeed she hasn't. I think it is wonderful too. Six years married, and the way that woman has worked! Why, she never had a hired girl in the house except once when the twins had scarlet fever. Why, Dora, I haven't seen you blush so at a compliment since you were a girl!"
—Chicago Tribune.

Robert Louis Stevenson's Face.
Look at his portrait in profile, and you will see sensitiveness and refinement of a virile sort in the general cast of the face and head, sagacity in the long but not prominent nose and poetic feeling in the contour of the brow. But in a full view the countenance was still more remarkable. The upper part, extraordinarily broad between the eyes, was deer-like in its gentle serenity, but the lower part, very narrow in comparison, was almost foxlike in its keen alertness, and the mobility of the mouth hardly seemed to fit with the steady intentness of the wide, dark eyes. But if at first this face appeared to contradict itself the reason lay, I think, in the fact that we seldom see the face of a man who is at once a lover of action and a lover of dreams and of books, an astute and yet a most affectionate observer of life and of men and of the humors of the lives of men and besides an artist of imaginative mold—"Robert Louis Stevenson and His Writing," by Mrs. M. G. Van Rensselaer, in Century.
Each state is supposed to have a militia, composed of men from 18 to 45, capable of bearing arms, but in nearly all the states the militia organization is very incomplete. The number of militia actually organized is not far from 100,000.

It Puzzled Him.
A girl who has been in Leipzig brings back a tale from the pension where she stopped. It is much frequented by English and Americans, and thither resorted a young German to learn English as she spoke. He confided to my friend that he got along pretty well with the exception of one word. This word was used constantly, and from the context he judged it was a general term applied to food. He had looked up the word itself in the dictionary and had looked it up under the head of "food," but without success. He noticed it was used when the plates were passed for meat, fish, vegetables or what not. "When I asked what this strange word possibly could be," concluded my friend, "the young German said: 'S'more. Please give me s'more.'"—Chicago Post.

Fitness.
"Please, sir," whistled the boy with two front teeth missing, "Minnie Williams' mother says Minnie can't come to school 'cos she's got a stitch in her side."
"Who is Minnie Williams' mother?" the new schoolteacher asked.
"She's the seamstress."
The teacher turned reflectively to the blackboard. "How wonderful are the influences of heredity!" he muttered. — New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The predicted good times in case of Republican success should hasten to be forthcoming.

The scramble for office will set in early. Many Republicans are hungry to get to the pie counter.

Cotton declining nearly a half cent since McKinley's election does not argue much for better times.

Several of the carpenters who have been at work for Riddick and Barnes on the Riato building, left this morning for their homes in Suffolk, having completed their work here.

J. F. King is off in West Virginia buying horses and mules for this market. He says tell the people to wait until he gets back and he will be able to sell them good stock at their own prices.

The colored people had on a jubiling spirit last night. They held a festival of two and the band played on. Well, it is their victory anyway, and they have a right to celebrate orderly if they wish to.

Lang looks quite at home in his new store. Being the same location he occupied for so long a time previous to the fire makes it look natural to see him back there. His store is being made a place of beauty.

Cistern Without Water.

The fire cistern has been completed some time and there have been two or three good rains since the work was done, enough to have run in many hundred gallons of water if pipes had been connected with the cistern. People are wondering why that part of the work is not done also.

Caught and Jailed.

On Thursday a colored man giving his name as Nollis Cobb was offering several pistols for sale in Bethel. People over there had read in the REFLECTOR about some one breaking into the store of J. L. Starkey & Bro. here and stealing a lot of pistols, and Constable Bullock took the man in custody. The man confessed that he broke in the store. He was brought to Greenville and placed in jail. Several keys were found in his possession that were believed to have been taken from D. D. Haskett's store the night it was robbed and the man has confessed that he had a hand in that robbery also. He said he came from Greene county.

An Italian band came in on Friday evening's train and stopped at the King House. After supper they made some charming music in the hotel office which was enjoyed not only by those present but by several who had their phones connected.

A slight typographical error occurred in the closing sentence of Goy. Jarvis' card in yesterday's REFLECTOR "coarse and brutal language" being made to read "course and brutal, etc."

We Sell Goods Cheaper Than Any Other House.

DRESS GOODS.

It gives us pleasure to announce that we are now displaying the most extensive and attractive stock of wool Dress Fabrics ever imported by us, selected with the utmost care as to desirability of weave, beauty of effect and excellence of quality; the result has been to enable us to present a superb variety of superior grade goods in a truly wonderful assortment of the most recent creations of wool and silk and wool "fashion's favorites."

Handsome materials and fashionable fabrics will be difficult to obtain this season, for the reason that importation are much below the average, particularly in fine silks and dress fabrics, and the American manufacturers have been obliged to curtail their productions.

Each department of our business is fully prepared to show the newest and correct materials, styles and colorings for fall and winter, and we strongly recommend an early examination of the various departments.
