SOME INTERESTING HISTORY.

It Snowed Here 34 Years Ago Today.

In conversation with Governor Jarvis this morning he mentioned that he was for the first time in Greenville 34 years ago today and as he remembers it then it was a "we bit" of a place. He told us the circumstances of his visit. He said his regiment—the 8th, in which he was a company commander—was in camp at Kinston. A courier brought the news there that the Federal troops had camped at Greenville and were burning and destroying everything before them. Col. Shaw with his regiment, the 8th, a battery of artillery and some other troops made a rapid march over to Greenville to attack the Yanks and to protect the people.

The report turned out to be false and the troops all returned the next day. The Governor tells us that his regiment camped that night—the 8th of November, '62—in the woods on the old plank road about two miles from Greenville near Mr. John Stanley Smith's, that he went to sleep with some pine straw and the earth for his bed and a blanket and the sky for his covering, and that he woke up the next morning covered up about two inches in snow.

He also tells us that he came into town early that morning, the 9th of Nov. '62, and that it was still snowing, that about ten o'clock he received orders to act as officer of the Rear Guard on a forced march back to Kinston and that he left Greenville about eleven o'clock, and that they were compelled to go by the way of Hookerton to cross the Contentnea, and that he went into camp at Kinston before dark. He also says that the snow melted during the day and that it made the roads very sloppy and disagreeable. The reason of the forced march back to Kinston was that a dispatch was received that morning by Col. Shaw to hurry back to Kinston, collect all his available force and proceed with all possible speed to threaten New Berne, which was done.

It must be some thirty miles or more from Greenville to Kinston by way of Hookerton. To sleep on the ground in the snow and then make that march on foot from eleven o'clock to dark in the slush and mud, reads like one of Stonewall Jackson's marches or a piece of romance; but such was the soldier's life.

Shooting at Washington.

The REFLECTOR learns by wire of a shooting scrape at Washington this morning. A man named Dick Roberts went to the telegraph office and began cursing the manager, E. J. Hocutt. The man was ordered out of the office, when he became even more abusive, using the most insulting oaths, and started towards Hocutt. Hocutt drew a pistol and fired, the ball first striking the door and glancing struck Roberts in the right side. The doctors do not think the wound a dangerous one. Hocutt was bound over to court, his bail being placed at $500.

The Leadville News Reporter means business. It says: "Ten cents per line will be charged for obituary notices of all business men who do not advertise while living. Delinquent subscribers will be charged 15 cents per line for obituary notices. Advertisers and cash subscribers will receive as good a send-off as we are capable of writing, without any charge whatever, and if some men in the country will only die we will gladly pay their funeral expenses."

The weather looked this morning like it had almost as soon snow as not.

MRS. ALFRED FORBES, Greenville, N. C.

AN OBSTINATE BRIDE.

She Didn't Care For Bill, but Wanted to Oblige Her Father.

"A certain justice in one of the New Jersey cities several years ago," said old Bob, "had hardly been opened to business on a certain morning in winter when a sleigh containing seven or eight persons came in from beyond the city limits, drove up to the door of the justice and filed out with an air of business. His honor was poking up the fire when an old man beckoned him into a corner and whispered: 'Got a job of splicing here for ye. My darter Sarah here is going to hitch to that chap there with the blue comforter and then we're going to have some oysters.' 'All right, all right,' was the reply, and in two minutes the official was ready.

"The man with the blue comforter peeled off his overcoat, laid aside his hat and extended his hand to Sarah. 'I won't do it—I'll die first!' she said as she shrank away. 'She's a little timid, a little timid,' explained the old man, while the mother rebukingly observed: 'Sarah, don't you make a fool of yourself here. William will make you a good husband.' 'And don't you forget it,' added William. 'Come, Sarah.' 'I won't unless we can go to New York on a bridal tower!' she snapped. 'You'd look nice bridal towering round New York with no better duds than you've got!' said the mother. 'Now, Sarah, you stand up and git married!' 'Be keerful, mother—don't make her mad,' warned the old man. 'Now, Sarah, if you back out, everybody will laugh at us.' 'I don't keer! I want to travel.' 'You shall,' said William. 'Where?' 'We'll all go to the House of Correction.' 'Tain't far 'nuff.'

"The old man beckoned William and Sarah aside and began, 'Now Sarah, William just dotes on you. 'But I want a bridal tower.' 'Yes, but you can't have one. The railroads are all snowed under, and towers have gone out of fashion anyhow.' 'Then I want a diamond ring.' 'Now, don't say that, Sarah, for I went to every store last Saturday and they was all out of diamond rings.' 'Then I want a set of mink furs.' 'Mink furs! William, I know you'd buy 'em for her in a second, but they've gone out of style and can't be had. Sarah, I'm yer father, ain't I?' 'Yes, dad.' 'And I've always bin tender of ye?' 'Yes.' 'Then be tender to me. I want to see ye married to William. Ye can't have a tower, nor a diamond ring, nor a set of furs, but I'll buy you a pair of gaiters. William will pay for the oysters, and I'll see that mother divides up the dishes and bedding with ye. Sarah, do you want to see my gray hairs bowed down?' 'No-o-o.' 'Then don't flunk out.' 'Will they be $2 gaiters?' 'Yes.' 'And all the oysters we can eat?' 'Yes, all you can stuff.' 'And a tower next fall if wheat does well?' 'Yes.' 'Then I guess I will. Come, Bill. I don't keer 2 cents for you, but I want to oblige father.'—Boston Herald.

The Anonymous in Magazines.

Should the anonymous be given up, as it has already been by all the monthly magazines? Certainly not. There are still many men, though the world will scarcely believe it, who are so placed that they cannot avow their literary work, or who feel as if they derogated from their dignity in avowing it, or who are unable to hear a criticism on themselves by name, which they do not feel unpleasantly when applied to their work. They know much, and they are the natural patrons of the quarterlies. There is much to be said even in the historical and scientific departments of thought which the writers do not care to say over their own signatures, and which it is to the world's interest should be said. And finally in our day work is apt to be deteriorated by being signed. The writer is anxious about himself, his own repute, his own consistency, his own standing in foreign eyes, rather than about the quality of his work. There are cases, of course, in which the name of the author adds a sincere value to his work, and cases also in which a prose writer will no more do his best while hidden behind the wax mask of anonymity than a poet will if he is never to receive a meed of praise, but the means are not lacking to provide against that difficulty.—London Spectator.

A Strange Sundial.

In Dalton-le-Dale, in Durham, England, there is a sundial on the north wall, and the time is indicated by the sun shining through the windows of the south wall.—Boston Traveller.

Some Actresses.

"Actresses who can't act were perhaps never more numerous than they now are," said one of our best dramatic critics a little time since. "They have pretty faces, charming figures and can smile most bewitchingly. What more can the most exacting playgoer require?"

In like way Charles Mathews, writing in 1875 to a country manager, said: "From my experience of provincial managers I should say that a young and pretty woman who can't act, and who knows she can't, is an acquisition, particularly when she wants no salary for her ignorance. Now, such a one my son asks me to offer you. The lady is clever off the stage and has the advantages I have named above, and he gives me his word of honor that so far as he knows she can't act a bit and looks upon a salary the first season as positively nauseous. She is anxious to come to your theater and show her insufficiency or anything else the public may require. She may be a genius or a duffer. She doesn't know what she can do, being like the man who didn't know whether he could play on the fiddle or not, having never tried. She wishes, at any rate, to put her foot on the stage, which generally means 'putting her foot in it.' Will you give her a trial? If she turns out worth anything, I pledge myself to remove her at the earliest possible opportunity. If not, you are welcome to her so long as you find her thoroughly incapable."

Men and Theories.

Man is a theory making, theory loving animal, and, as a result, there are about a thousand theories in this world to every solid fact. But still it happens that the facts have the best of it, because no fact can confound another. They live together in eternal peace, whereas theories lead but a cat and dog existence, and the mortality among them is frightful to contemplate.—"In Sugar Cane Land," Eden Phillpotts.

Magnanimity.

W. J. Bryan is as great in defeat as in victory. We understand that he has wired his congratulations to McKinley on his election to the Presidency. He must be the "greatest and best of men" as Gov. Branch said of Gen. Andrew Jackson at the Halifax banquet in 1828. Bryan has shown his equipment in all the elegancies and proprieties of life. We believe him to have been the cleanest-handed candidate for the Presidency that we have lately had and it will always be a source of pride to us that we cast what may be our last ballot for William J. Bryan.—Elizabeth City

The Companion's Calendar

It is said that the expense of making the Companion Art Calendar for 1897 was so great that had it been published in the usual quantity it could not be sold for less than one dollar. Four beautiful female figures are reproducing on four folding pages. Each figure is lithographed in twelve colors, being a true reproduction of the original water-color painting, which was selected because of its excellence of design and charm of color and tone. The size of each of the four folding pages is 10½ by 6 inches.

It is by far the best piece of color work the Companion has ever offered. Both as a calendar and as a gem of the lithographer's art, it is so attractive that it becomes a valuable addition to the mantel or center-table of any room. It is given free to all new subscribers sending $1.75 to the Companion for the year 1897, who receive also paper free from the time the subscription is received till January 1, 1897.
