ORIGINAL OBSERVATIONS.

An angelic demeanor covers many a thieving hand.

There is no beauty so deep or lasting as that of a loving heart.

There is no particular honor in doing only what other men have done.

The man who trusts in Providence—and a full pocket-book—seldom gets lost.

The milk-maid of years ago does not at all resemble the milk made to-day.

The maid's happy, even while dreading the ordeal of a high-toned wedding.

When a man becomes a "great gun" in the religious world, then they canonize him.

Judging from the large number of robberies reported daily, this is evidently the age of steal.

A fashion paper says that capes are considerably worn. So are coat-sleeves. No insinuations, however.

When money is said to be close it is really far away. We have the plainest and most explicit language in the world.

Let us live for one another, as we journey along life's road; helping every toil worn brother, we shall lighten our own load.—Orange (Va.) Observer.

The Wise Bachelor.

Flippancy is a woman's cynicism. No woman can be a heartless flirt unless she has had a real love affair.

When a man shows a woman the inmost corner of his heart she pokes around in it and says "Is this all?"

Whenever you admire a woman's hair, she thinks you are hinting around for a watch guard made of it.

No matter how asseamed a girl feels the first time she kisses a man, it never occurs to her that the man may feel that way too.

When a girl has a grudge against a man, she gives a chafing dish party and makes him hold the handle while she splashes little dabs all over his clothes.

A girl who doesn't like a kiss ought to be treated for it.

Most men could bear it better if they weren't expected to grin.

A woman can never sit in the dusk with her husband without trying to get romantic.

Life's "apartments" often turn out to be a hall bedroom.

The deepest thing in the heart of an old maid is an ache for a little child.

When a rich girl has kinky, black hair, it is called "rippling midnight."

One of the queerest things is that a nagging woman often loves her husband.

Some women's idea of taking care of men is by fussing with them when they sit in a draft.

Some men don't discover that they are fond of their wives till their wives have got through being fond of them.

It all memory of the past could be blotted out every night, married folk would be a good deal happier.

Some time before she is 20 every girl determines either to be a foreign missionary or to spend her life washing dirty babies.

When all the women callers insist that his first baby is the perfect imagine of himself, a man sneaks up in the garret and looks in a looking glass.

Sheriff King publishes a notice that tax payers should read.

In a short while the stores will be gay with Christmas goods. The merchants can find no better way to draw attention and trade than to put an advertisement in the REFLECTOR.

Why They Fail.

Now and then you will hear a merchant complain that advertising does not pay, and the solicitor who calls on him for business gets a curt refusal. "I put so many lines in your paper three times last week and I can't trace a single sale that pays me for my investment. So I have quit." Thus the argument runs if you can dignify it by that name.

It seldom occurs to the dissatisfied advertiser that the fault is in himself. He has delayed writing his advertisement until the last minute. Then in a furious hurry, he dashes off a string of incredible adjectives and some prices. He does not devote to this vitally important matter half the attention he would give to examining into the qualifications of a new office boy. The advertisement brings him no perceptible returns. Half a dozen of the merchant's neighbors have the same arid and uninteresting style of advertisement in the same paper. They all grumble and vote advertising to be little better than a numbug.

It may be well to remind these gentlemen that their advertising would be more profitable if they would be content to say less in any one advertisement, and to say it better. Do not give the bargain-hunting shopper more than she can digest. This is the principle followed out in the great department stores, which never dream of advertising more than a small portion of their stock at any one time.

A deep and varied knowledge of human nature is the first requisite in advertising. To attract and hold the attention; to persuade, to convince—these are the psychological problems to be grappled with. A merchant who does not give his advertising the closest and hardest study has no good reason to complain of failure.—National Advertiser.

Important Notice.

The Young Married Men's Protective Association will meet in Germania Hall this evening at 10:30 o'clock sharp. Business of importance to be transacted. All young married men opposing trusts and combines are earnestly requested to be present. Come promptly as the meeting must close by midnight.

The Boys' Circus.

The boys had another circus this afternoon and their street parade was quite amusing. David James led the procession and blew a cow horn as he went along. Three of the boys rode in their goat carts and there were several more on wagons. In one of the wagons they had a large tin tub which served as a drum. A cow led by one of the boys formed the menagerie. The boys have a large double trapeze in Dr. D. L. James' yard and we hear they can do some smart acting on it.

There are two companies of the circus boys, the others having their tent and outfit in Mr. W. B. Wilson's yard.

Coming Backwards.

The returning prosperity spoken about so boastfully by Republicans since McKinley's election, seems to move on at a two forty gait. In one paper last night we read of the failure of the first National bank of Sioux City, Iowa, of a large construction company in Chicago, and of one of the leading dry goods houses of Baltimore. That looks like prosperity.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20th 1896.

Has President Cleveland made a deal with President-elect McKinley? Strange as this question may appear current rumors make it pertinent.

The larger number of Republican Senators and Representatives in Washington grows the more probable it becomes that no real effort is going to be made by them to pass the Dingley tariff bill in the Senate.

Senator Mills, of Texas, is among the early Congressional arrivals. He says he doesn't care to guess what will be done at the coming session of Congress, but his talk indicates that he doesn't expect any tariff legislation.

Some of the friends of the McKinley administration are not talking as wisely as they might about the possible relations of the silver Republican Senators to the proposed protection tariff bill which is to be put through the House and attempted to be put through the Senate at the extra session of Congress expected to be called as soon as McKinley is inaugurated.

mont, after expressing the belief that the constituents of these Senators would compel them to support a protection tariff bill, goes a step further and makes the threat that if they do not vote for it they will be ignored in the distribution of Federal patronage in their States during the entire term of McKinley.

Senator Vest, of Missouri, isn't one of those who think there is the slightest chance for the Dingley tariff bill to be passed by the Senate at this session. He said: "I have no doubt that the Republican Senators who voted with the Democrats at the last session against the consideration of the Dingley bill, with the possible exception of Carter, will stand with us again, and if they do there is no possibility of passing the bill."

Senator-elect Pettus, who will on the 4th of next March succeed Senator Pugh, of Alabama, was a law partner of Senator Morgan about thirty years ago and might have been in the Senate twenty years ago had he not declined the nomination.

The Jackson Democratic Association has invited Mr. Bryan to deliver the address at its celebration of Jackson day, Jan. 8th, 1897, and are hopeful that he will accept.

The question of who the few gold Democrats in Congress will caucus with at the coming session is being much talked about. Having bolted the regular Democratic nomination, unless specially invited to do so, it is claimed they cannot attend a Democratic caucus, and nobody seems to know whether such invitation will be extended to them.

He Did Not Know the Etiquette of It

I had overtaken an old farmer in the road, and as we jogged along together we turned a bend and came upon eight or ten men, who had a prisoner in their midst, and were making preparations to hang him to the limb of a tree.

"Here—what's all this?" asked the old man, as we came to a halt.

"Goin' to hang the cuss!" was the brief reply.

"What fur?"

"Stealin' that horse over thar'."

"The 'hoss over thar' " was tied to a tree and the farmer took a look at him and then at the prisoner, and asked of the latter:

"Say, didn't you come along to my place this morning?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"And didn't I sell you that hoss fur $30?"

"Yes."

"I am sure I did. How does it come about, then, that they ar' goin' to hang you fur hoss stealin'?"

"I dunno."

"He bought that hoss of you, did he?" asked the leader of the band, who was arranging the noose.

"He surely did, and no doubt he's got my bill of sale in his pocket. Yes I sold him that critter at 8 o'clock this morning. My name's Thompson, and I guess some of you know me."

"Look a-here!" exclaimed the leader, as he turned on the prisoner, "did you buy that hoss?"

"Yes."

"And you've got a bill of sale?"

"Yes."

"Then why in blazes didn't you say so when we run you down fur a horse thief?"

"Wall," replied the man as he looked around and yawed, as if bored with the proceedings, "I haunt bin in this kentry but three or four days, and I didn't know what the custom was."

They hauled him off his feet twice just to make him acquainted with the ways of the country and then rode off in search of new game.—Washington Star.

THE NEW MAN PORTRAYED.

An English View of a Great and Interesting Problem.

Women Have Called for Their Ideal Man But Do Not Find Him—He Would Be Too Bashful and Perhaps Too Good.

So far, the new man does not appear to have come. He is foreshadowed, outlined, indicated in resolutions passed at conferences of advanced ladies, and his silhouette flits through the pages of an occasional magazine article emanating from the new school, but he is not yet here in the flesh.

Let us consider him for a moment quite seriously. There is no doubt that the relative positions of the sexes in these times have changed a good deal. That is too big a question to go into here, but if anyone doubts the fact let him consider broadly how far the eastern and western civilizations have drifted apart in their views of marriage.

So I do not deny that new sentiments may from time to time become engrafted upon human nature. The modern repugnance to slavery would have been unintelligible in ancient Rome and I doubt whether flooded-out or burned-out negroes and yellow men ever understand the altruistic subscriptions now and again got up at the Mansion house for their benefit.

But do the ladies who are clamoring for the new man realize all that their act implies? I can hardly think so; because the renewal of the British constitution would be a feat to what they propose, as a little reflection will show.

First of all, however, let us be agreed upon our terms. The demand is that there should be but one standard of morality for both sexes. Of course, this is vague. There might be a leveling down as well as a leveling up of morality, or there might be a compromise between the two sexes—a meeting half way.

Well, that idea requires following out a little more closely than has yet been attempted on advanced platforms, because it leads up to rather strange issues, for which I can hardly imagine its promoters to be prepared.

Morality, it is clear, ought to be something more than a verbal profession; it ought to spring from inner sentiment and to be closely allied to modesty. Given modesty of thought and modesty of demeanor among members of the male sex, there would follow, as a matter of course, the new morality, which in turn would yield us a race of bashful and blushing men, coy in love, lacking in initiative, who would let concealment, like a worm in the bud, feed on their sentiments.

Side by side with these developments there could hardly fail to be a complete change of the inner man effected. Proposals for marriage would have to come indifferently from either side. Indeed, many new men would probably never get over a sort of maidenly repulsion to the opposite sex, and there would besides be little attraction to them in the prospect of mating with a creature as emotional and retiring as themselves.

Too modest to confess his passion, if he had one, the new man would be constrained to take a leaf out of the book of the Burmese maiden, to light his invitational lamp in the window and wait patiently for the suitors of the opposite sex to come.

The universal sameness of the sexes would cause them to lose all interest in each other and there would be an end of chivalry, which on analysis proves to be a rather "forward" attempt on the part of the male to ingratiate himself with the female on false pretenses.

Do the advanced ladies like this picture? It is one of which they have themselves supplied the outline. I have merely taken the liberty of filling in a little detail. For the carrying out of such a complete reversal of the existing relation of the sexes something like an entire geological epoch would be required. For no more variation of custom, such as I have referred to, is comparable to it in point of importance; it would be a fundamental change, the birth of a new race. Then there are a great many evolutionary problems to be faced in connection with it. Suppose the movement to be confined to England, to that privileged tract of the earth's surface which lies within range of the speeches delivered at Exeter hall, how long would the new Englishman be able to hold his own in the struggle for life? No, my dear ladies, I am afraid your ideal is a little too remote. Try again!—J. F. Nisbit, in Pall Mall Budget.

ENGLISH SHOP GIRLS.

They Are Generally Refined and Also Pleasant.

One can hardly enter a high-class London shop without noting not only the height and air of distinction the attendants possess, but their refined voices and manner. Referring to this one day, the manager of a large establishment said that the girls in their dressmaking departments are required to have all these qualifications and for the most part they come from good families, preferring this to the overcrowded occupation of nursery governess or companion.

THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS

Monthly Illustrated
AN INTERNATIONAL
Edited by ALBERT SHAW

"If only one magazine can be taken, we would suggest the REVIEW OF REVIEWS, as covering more ground than any other magazine."—Board of Library Commissioners of New Hampshire, 1896.

THIS magazine is, in its contributed and departmental features, what its readers, who include the most noted names of the English-speaking world, are pleased to call "absolutely up to date," "thoroughly abreast of the times," "invaluable," and "indispensable." It is profusely illustrated with timely portraits, views, and cartoons. Its original articles are of immediate interest, by the best authorities on their respective subjects. The Editor's "Progress of the World" gives a clear, rightly proportioned view of the history of the human race during the current month. The "Leading Articles of the Month" present the important parts of the best magazine articles that have been written in every part of the world. The newest and most important books are carefully reviewed. Indexes, chronological records, and other departments complete the certainty that the reader of the Review of Reviews will miss nothing of great significance that is said or written or done throughout the world.

and can give you anything you may need at the lowest prices you ever heard of. Come and see our $12.50 Solid Oak Bedroom Suits. To pass us by would be an inexcusable injustice to your pocket book. This is not so because we say so, but because our goods and prices make it so. Here is a fair proposition: If we deserve nothing, give us nothing, but if you find our goods and prices satisfactory, acknowledge it with your patronage. Hoping to see you soon and promising our best efforts to make your coming pleasant and profitable, we are TAX NOTICE.

The tax payers of Pitt county will please take notice that my term of office as Sheriff expires on the first Monday in December, and all owing taxes for the year 1896 are requested to come forward and settle at once. Those who fail to pay by the 7th of December will be proceeded against as the law directs, as I will be compelled to close up the business by the first of January. Pay your taxes and save the costs. R. W. KING, Sheriff.

LIKE THE YOUNG LADY

At a ball who calls her lover an Indian because he was on her trail all the time. We are on you trail and won't be satisfied until we secure you as a customer. Our Fall and winter Clothing and Gents Furnishing are just too cheap. You certainly will be out of the swim if you do not get the bargains offered by us.

Our Shoes are Beyond Criticism.

We want every man to drop into our store, at his convenience and look through our stock of Fine Shoes and hear the prices. We will post him so thoroughly that it will be hard work for a shoe salesman anywhere to deceive him, and we won't try to make you buy against your will.

About Those Nob by Hats, Nw.

Let us say a word about our Hats and at the same time tell you that a minute's peep is better than a column of description. Nothing has a place here but what we know to be good, and when you spend a dollar with us you get a hundred cents' worth of certainty---the certainty that what you buy is the best of its kind, and all this for the least money.
