EDITORIAL AND NEWS NOTES.

Two revenue officers in this State were killed during the past by moonshiners.

The account of the continued massacre of inoffensive Cubans by the Spanish soldiers are appalling. The United States certainly ought to interfere with and stop such butcheries.

In Cartaret, Mecklenburg and Wake counties Democrats have given notice of contest for the seats in the Legislature to which Populist members have been given certificates of election.

A. C. Avery, Jr., a son of Judge A. C. Avery, was a few nights ago assaulted by two negroes in Morganton and almost fatally stabbed. The negroes were arrested and taken to Charlotte for safe keeping.

Some time ago Raleigh Alderman adopted an ordinance that all saloons in the city should close at 11 o'clock P. M., and set January 1st, as the time when the law should take effect. At a recent meeting, through deference to the coming Legislature, the time for the ordinance to go into operation was extended to March 15th. Doubtless the Aldermen see that the Legislature will afford a harvest for Raleigh whiskey sellers and they want to give them plenty of time in which to get drinks.

A Disgusting Spectacle.

Depravity is bad enough in a man, but when it is displayed to a marked degree in a woman the spectacle is almost sickening. There was an unknown white woman at the depot Monday night who showed such a want of decency in her speech and manner as to render herself simply disgusting. She wore a shabby black dress and antiquated straw hat, had a grip and market basket along with her, and said she hailed from Massachusetts. Things about the depot and waiting room did not seem entirely to her notion and she indulged freely in vilest oaths in denouncing everything in general and Southern customs in particular. Many who heard her were charitable enough to think she was full of whiskey, but to all appearances it was a case of human depravity at its lowest ebb.

Don't Fail, Please.

In two days more THE DAILY REFLECTOR will complete its second year. This announcement is made in advance to give our subscribers in town notice that our collector will be around this week and to request every one to be ready for him and settle accounts promptly. We desire to start the new year with our books as near square as possible and hope no one will put the collector off. There is considerable due us in small accounts and it will be quite a help in finishing up the year's work if every one will pay promptly.

New Election.

Superior Court Clerk E. A. Moyer has ordered another election to be held on the 22nd inst in both Farmville and Falkland townships, there having been a tie vote at the last election on one Justice of the Peace in each of those townships.

A Strange Fowl.

A peculiar water fowl was brought to town Monday and left at the store of S. M. Schultz. It was about the color of a duck though larger in size, had very large web feet and a long sharp bill. The fowl was captured in a field a few miles north of town, where it had fallen in the snow. We have not seen anyone who can tell what it is.

A PLACE OF BEAUTY.

The Bazaar in Readiness for Visitors

One has but to peep in at the O'Hagan building, where the ladies of the Baptist church hold their bazaar this week, to realize that a pleasant occasion is in store for all who attend. The decorations are beautiful, the booth exquisitely arranged, and everything as attractive as can be.

The hall is draped in white and red and in this the Forbe Orchestra will render delightful music.

The north room is draped in blue and pink. In the first corner to the right is a booth presided over by Mrs. J. H. Blount and Mrs. F. James, who will have a bowl of beans and award at prize, a solid silver olive fork, to the one guessing nearest to the correct number of beans in the bowl.

Next are tables laden with fancy articles of different kinds. This department is presided over by Mesdames L. E. Cleve and D. J. Whichard.

Next is another booth, presided over by Mrs. R. J. Cobb, and Miss Jennie James with a canary bird and cage to be voted to the most popular young lady. Cigars will also be sold in this booth.

On the opposite side of the room is the doll booth, presided over by Misses Rosalind Rountree and Bettie Tyson. Here are many beautiful dolls tastefully dressed in different styles.

Next is the fish pond presided over by Mrs. E. D. Welis. Here the little folks may expect great fun.

The south room is draped in yellow and holly. This is set apart for the dining room and will be presided over by Misses Lillie Cherry, Salie Lipscombe, Julia Foley, Ada Wooten and Sophia Jarvis.

They will serve fried oysters, turkey ham, barbecued pig, chicken salad, tea biscuits, bread, pickles, coffee, ice cream jelly and cream, ambrosia, cake, &c.

The Christmas tree will be on exhibition from 2.30 to 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Let all the children take a dine along and get a present from Santa Claus.

Fire at Beaver Dam.

Monday night about 10 o'clock Mr. Abram Joyner discovered his barn on fire and it proved to be a total loss. He had 40 barrels of corn, a stack of fodder and 60 bushels of cotton seed to burn up. He estimates his loss at $200. Mr. Joyner thinks there is no doubt, but what it was set on fire. This is a heavy loss to him and the miscreant should be caught and severely dealt with.

He Made a Good Sheriff.

On Monday evening R. W. King turned over the office of Sheriff to his successor, W. H. Harrington. Mr. King served the county as Deputy Sheriff for eight years and was Sheriff for four years. He made an acceptable officer, performed his duties faithfully, and leaves the office in excellent condition.

I have a select line of nice Christmas novelties. Call and see them.

What the Figures Show.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat, which makes a specialty of collecting and analyzing statistics of timely interest, has turned its attention to the official figures of the last election.

Table with 2 columns: Candidate Name and Vote Count. Includes McKinley (7,044,884), Bryan (6,452,218), Palmer (116,698), Levering (104,427), Bentley (10,678), Matchett (9,942).

Total vote 13,732,208; McKinley's plurality 592,666

These figures make certain several things of more than passing interest. For instance:

- 1. That there was no popular landslide in behalf of McKinley.
2. That the plurality of the Republican candidate was not the 1,000,000 predicted, nor the 800,000 figured out by the eastern press, but only 592,666.
3. It is not the largest plurality ever received by a candidate for the presidency, being below Grant's in 1872, but little over his in 1868, and but little over Lincoln's in 1860, and Buchanan's in 1856.
4. That the tabular statement invented by the New York World and made the basis of all newspaper estimates is an arrant fake.
5. That the Democratic party, represented by those who voted for its presidential candidate, was defeated by a very narrow margin, and
6. That the party is stronger and in better fighting trim today than it ever has been after a defeat.

Our readers may sum these things up to suit themselves. They are simply the irresistible conclusion to be drawn from the figures compiled by The New Orleans Times-Democrat, which will not vary from those to be officially promulgated to the extent of one-half of 1 per cent.—Atlanta Constitution.

A summary to the financial situation of the Spanish Government in Cuba may prove rather unpleasant reading at Madrid. The ordinary Cuban budget calls for $23,000,000 per annum, while the revenues of the island for the current year will not exceed $7,000,000, thus leaving a deficit of $16,000,000 to be covered.

Spain on account of Cuba for 1895 is seen to have reached the sum of $94,000,000. The proceeds of the popular loan of $50,000,000 recently floated in Spain, or so much thereof as has not been required to pay obligations past due, will hold out at the most only four or five months; and since Cuba has been exhausted as a source of revenue, and the huge sums consumed by war expenses cannot be obtained by increased taxation in Spain, the only resort of the Spanish Government must be a new loan.

According to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, President-elect McKinley will probably have two of the handsomest horses ever seen in Washington. The late General Joseph T. Torrence, of Chicago, possessed as fine a stable of horses as was owned in the Windy City.

John Wilmonth, 32 years old, of Jersey City, called Tuesday night on his friend, McCauley. They were sitting in the library smoking and talking about the Princeton-Yale football game.

Election Notice.

Whereas at the election held in Farnville Township on Tuesday the 3rd day of November, 1896, there was an equal number of votes cast for two persons for Justice of the Peace, thereby causing a tie, and whereas in such cases the law requires the clerk of the Superior Court to call another election to fill the vacancy.

Now, therefore, by virtue of the powers conferred upon me by the laws of North Carolina, another election is hereby ordered to be held at the different precincts in said Township, on Tuesday, the 22nd day of December, 1896, for the purpose of electing one Justice of the Peace for said Township.

A BARN THAT GREW.

It Was Still Enlarging When the Smart Man Disappeared.

"Say, stranger, how high mought that building be?" asked a country-fied looking individual as he stood at Broadway and Ann street, gazing up at the towering structure there.

"Shu, you don't say so!" exclaimed the farmer. "How high mought some of them buildings going to be?"

"Six to eight hundred feet, not counting the towers," replied the smart man. "Shu, you don't say so!" ejaculated the farmer.

"But, say, stranger, how's the people to get up to the top of them?" "Oh, that's easy enough," said the smart man, thinking of the fun he was having.

"Oh, say, old fellow," replied the funny person, "you're talking through your hat. No man could build as big a barn as that."

"That's all right," said the farmer, "but my brother's barn wasn't no ordinary barn, b'gosh. It wasn't so big at the start, but, you see, it took a-growing, and before it stopped it covered his whole farm—a whole section, sir, about one square mile."

"It took a-growing, did it?" remarked the puzzled person who had been having the fun. "Say, mister, what are you driving at anyhow? Who ever heard of a barn growing?"

"Well, there's not many people, I'll admit, stranger," proceeded the farmer. "It was the first time that I ever heard of one; but, as I said before, my brother's barn wasn't no ordinary barn. You see, he built it of green hemlock, and as he was in a hurry to get it built before harvest, he couldn't wait for the wood to dry out.

But the farmer stopped and found that he had been talking to himself. The man to whom he had been telling the story was a block away, and he was walking as if he had a letter to post for his wife or an extremely important engagement to keep.

OLD ENGLISH VOLCANOES.

Britain's Great Dikes Caused by Their Eruptions in Early Times.

Sir Archibald Geikie, F. R. S., in a lecture before the Glasgow Geological society on "The Latest Volcanoes in the British Isles," says that the subject is one which had occupied him closely for the last 20 and more especially for the last 7 years. These islands of ours were especially fortunate in the wonderfully complete record which they had within their borders of the history of volcanic action. He supposed that there was no area of equal dimensions on the surface of the earth where the story of volcanic action had been recorded so completely and with such wonderfully voluminous details.

From the earliest geological times they had an almost continuous record of volcanic eruption along the western border of the European continent. There were once active volcanoes along a great valley between the outer Hebrides on the west and the mainland of Scotland on the east, and they extended from the south of Antrim through the line of the inner Hebrides far north into the Faroe isles and beyond them into Iceland. The present Icelandic volcanoes were the lineal descendants of those which were in action in this country in tertiary times.

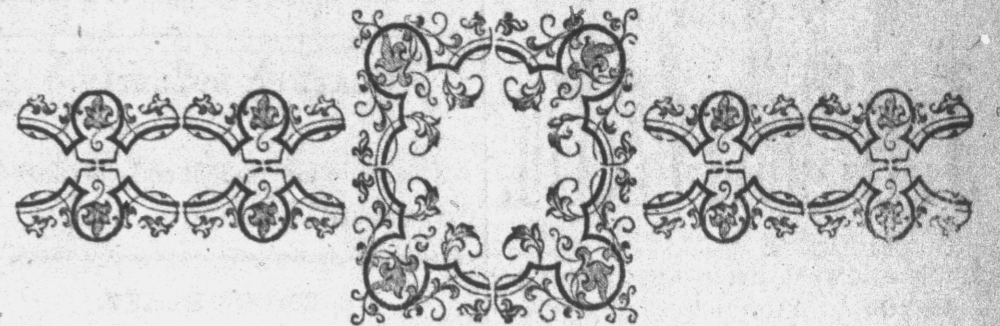

The story of volcanoes in this country was to be found by the side of volcanoes in Iceland and one of the most prominent features of the modern volcanoes in that country was that they did not form mountains like Etna or Vesuvius. Their dominant feature was the production of great rectilinear fissures, but there were also cones. Every one who had sailed along the shores of the Clyde was familiar with the dikes that rose up sometimes with singular prominence along the shores of Arran, Bute and the Cumbreas, great, wall-like masses of black rock through the sandstone. These dikes marked some of the fissures produced during the time of the early volcanic eruptions.

The eruptions appeared to have begun with the formation of these fissures. They had them in Antrim, Mull, Rum, Canna, Sanday and Syke. The inner Hebrides were merely fragments of what may have been originally a volcanic plateau extending from Antrim in the south to the north of Syke. The successive overflows of basalt could be traced in layers in old river channels, and these layers had been repeated at least four times in the history of the plateau, as shown in the islands of Canna and Sanday.

From the beginning of the story to the end the production of fissure seemed to have been the fundamental fact. There was great difficulty in fixing the age, but within the last few months, in the course of their work in the geological survey, they had come across evidence which would enable them to spell their way among the dikes of the whole western highlands. The volcanoes, however, belonged to a very recent period—to a time actually younger than the soft clay on which London is built. That clay was there before the volcanoes began to blaze forth. In closing Sir Archibald referred to the subject of denudation of waste, which he described as one of the most fascinating departments of geology and one which gave valuable aid in enabling them to determine the age of different strata, and there was, he said, no place where the geologist could study that subject with more profit to himself and benefit to science than along the north shores of Faroe islands, where there were the finest sea cliffs in Europe, some of them 2,000 feet in height.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Patti's Treasured Album.

Baroness von Zedlitz, who was a guest of Mme. Adelina Patti at Craigy-Nos some time ago, has published in a German review an account of her sojourn at the singer's castle. Among other things, she writes concerning an album containing the autographs, over words of admiration, of many musical celebrities of the last half-century. Among the singers are Mario, Tamberlik, Niemann and Capoul, who express their admiration for the great soprano in graceful, flattering verses. There are also pleasant phrases from Ghisi, Albani and Christine Nilsson. Bars of music, accompanied by words, have been written in the album by the composers Rossini, Meyerbeer, Auber, Gounod and Bizet. Verdi has written the names of the three prima donnas who, to his mind, have best interpreted "La Traviata." The maestro signs his name to the following, "D'abord Adelina, ensuite Adelina et encore Adelina." Finally, on a page almost yellow with age, in microscopic characters, the pen of Hector Berlioz once translated these two Latin words, "oportet Patti!" which means, "One must suffer," though the facetious ecclesiastical friends of Mme. Patti say it means, "Bring on the pate." Her musical friends construe it, "Patti is necessary to us." The mistress of Craigy-Nos is said to prize this page more than all the others.
