THE LEGISLATURE.

Condensed Report of Proceedings.

SIXTH DAY.

HOUSE.

Prayer offered by Representative Green.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. Sutton, to prohibit foreign corporations from doing business here without a license from North Carolina; to repeal chapters 135 and 159 laws of 1895, relating to the appointment of two extra commissioners and permit the people to elect five; to fund the bonded indebtedness of Cumberland county; to abolish the act requiring candidates to file sworn statement of their expenses.

Mr. Hauser, to provide a means to enable any one to change his name (after 90 days notice the court can make change.)

Chapin, for the relief of J. M. Ballard, a wounded Confederate soldier, (put him on third-class roll.)

Petree, to permit deputy registers of deeds to issue marriage license.

Peace, to fix the bond of the register of deeds of Vance county (to make it $3,000 instead of $5,000.)

Lyle, to protect iron bridges of Macon county.

The Speaker announced that inadvertently he had announced the committee on investigating the charges of bribery in connection with the Senatorial fight before the bill had passed its third reading. It was recalled, put upon its third reading, and passed unanimously.

A resolution to print 500 copies of the Governor's Message was adopted.

Promptly at noon the Senate, with Lieut-Gov. Doughton, at the head, entered the House of Representatives, and were seated. The Lieutenant Governor called the joint session to order, and directed the principal clerk of the Senate to call the roll of the Senate. Forty-five Senators were present.

The principal clerk of the House then called the roll of that body. One hundred and twelve were present.

The Lieutenant-Governor appointed Senators Atwater and Anthony as tellers on the part of the Senate. The Speaker appointed Messrs. Cook, of Warren, and Nelson, of Caldwell, as tellers on the part of the House.

There were errors from Bertie, some votes being returned for D. L., D. R., Daniel Russell, and the tellers tabulated these votes, giving all to Daniel L. Russell. There were many other mistakes and discrepancies in the returns, but they did not affect the result appreciably, and the tellers counted the vote as it was by townships when there was conflict in the returns.

It was 2:45 p. m. before all the counties were reached, and then the vote was announced as it had been counted by the Secretary of State. It would have taken the tellers eight hours to finish the count. Lieut-Gov. Doughton after announcing the vote and declaring the several officers elected, appointed as a committee on the part of the Senate to escort the Governor and State officers into the hall Senators Parker, of Randolph, and Grant, and Messrs. Cooke, Dixon and Schulken were appointed by the Speaker.

The newly elected officers had been waiting, with as much patience as they could command for the completion of the count in the State Treasurer's office, and they were relieved when the committee notified them that the members were ready to receive them. Preceded by the committee, with Chief Justice Faircloth, they marched into the hall of the House of Representatives and took their seat in front of and to Watches at Auction.

Mr. R. Ansell, the pawn broker of Chattanooga, who is here with a lot of watches and jewelry to sell at auction opened his stock this morning in J. W. Brown's store and will have his first sale tonight. Mr. Arthur Littmann is with him. The latter is known in Greenville, having once lived in this town, and was married here sixteen years ago to Miss Annie Harris.

Telling People About Things.

Advertising is telling people about things. Telling them what things look like, what they are good for, who sells them and what they cost. Getting business is merely a question of asking hard enough and long enough and often enough and in the right way. Sometimes it takes a good while to find out the right way, but there is a right way for everything.—Ex.

Good-Will.

Good-will is the best result advertising can bring. When the advertiser can say truthfully, "We are advertised by our loving friends," he has reached the acme of successful advertising. It is one thing to make people talk about you, and another to make them talk in the right way. Bad talk is worse than none. Good talk is the best kind of advertising, because it is given "without money and without price," and comes from the sincerity of conviction. Money cannot buy it. Merit alone can secure it. To win back a dissatisfied customer is better than getting five new ones. It is like turning poison into ointment.—Trade Press.

Down South.

In a letter to the editor from Mr. O. L. Joyner, written at Ocala, Fla., on the 11th, he says: "The orange industry was almost entirely killed by the cold weather two or three years ago, but there are a number of young groves coming on now. You ought to have been with me to dinner today—green peas, tomatoes, cabbage and other vegetables that were of the Old North State enjoy only in midsummer. The climate here is delightful. * * A number of tobacco men from different portions of the Union have come in and the convention promises to be an interesting one."

Mr. W. W. Leggett writes us from Charleston, S. C., that the weather there is fine. Strawberries are blooming, lettuce and cabbage are looking well and will soon be ready for market if no freezes come to give them a set back.

Brighter for Cuba.

Representative H. D. Money, who has just returned from Cuba, where he went to investigate the condition of affairs himself, is quoted in the New York Journal of the 11th as giving utterance to the following:

"At the very outset I will say that everything I saw and heard taught me that Spain is unable to cope with this insurrection. She will never put it down. Spain will never end this war with victory to herself.

"This is also the opinion of Consul General Fitzhugh Lee, and he has herebefore expressed it to Secretary Olney. He has told the Secretary of State that the insurrectionists, whether soon or late, were bound to succeed. The last thing Gen. Fitzhugh said to me as I left Havana was:

"Please see Secretary Olney and tell him that today I am more firmly convinced than ever that Spain cannot put down the insurrection, and that every day it continues means a loss of life and property, without the remotest encouragement of any final Spanish success. As I long since told him, the insurrection will succeed. My judgment to that effect receives daily confirmation.

"Yesterday I saw Secretary Olney and communicated to him Gen. Lee's message. I am not permitted, however, to make public Mr. Olney's comments."

THE LEGISLATURE.

the right of the Speaker's chair. They were received with manifestations of applause. The oaths of office were administered by Chief Justice Faircloth. Mr. Chas. H. Mebane, the new Superintendent of Public Instruction, was the first to take the oath. He was visibly very much embarrassed, and was so nervous that his hand shook when he appended his name to the oaths in the book kept for that purpose. The oaths were then administered to the other officers, each signing his name in the book kept for that purpose, in the following order:

Hal. W. Ayer, State Auditor.
 Cyrus Thompson, Secretary of State.
 Wm. H. Worth, State Treasurer.
 Zeb. V. Walsler, Attorney-General.
 Chas Reynolds, Lieutenant Governor.

Daniel L. Russell, Governor.
 GOV. RUSSELL SPEAKS.

When Lieutenant-Governor Doughton introduced the new Governor, he was received with great applause. His opening sentence, hurled from his mouth with a spirit that looked malevolent, "There is retribution in history," was received with a thunder of applause, led by the negroes who swarmed in the right gallery.

His face lit up with the culminating malice of twenty years, as he received this endorsement from those whom he termed "savages," and he turned his eyes up to the black gallery and gave them some more of the spirit of slander of his State that was so conspicuous in his campaign. His denunciation of election frauds, which composed the next section of his preface of venom was also joyfully received in the gallery. Those who have studied the election returns know that Judge Russell was himself elected by fraud, and importation and bribery, secured through a law of which he is the author. In this light his air of "I am more holy than thou" was in the light of crying "stop thief" to prevent attention to the frauds of his own party.

He had no more applause until he praised the judicial system of 1868, and though they didn't understand it, his "savages" a ain applauded, on the theory that everything connected with the 1868 regime was offensive to Democrats, and therefore dear to their hearts.

The next utterance that got applause was his allusion to mobs and lynching. If a stranger had happened in the hall at this juncture he would not suppose it to be a fact that lynchings have been suppressed in North Carolina by reason of a statute drawn by Hon. Cyrus B. Watson, when he was in the General Assembly some years ago. It is the most stringent law on the statute books of any State, and left no warrant for the remarks of Governor Russell in his inaugural. It was a gratuitous slander of the people of the State, who have been foremost to prevent lynching, thanks to the wisdom of Judge Russell's competitor for the Governorship.

It would have been a graceful thing for the new Governor, if he thought it necessary to ring in the customary Republican talk about lynching, to have said that his competitor had put a statute on the North Carolina books that prevented in so far as legislation can do so. But that would not have been playing to the galleries.

There was nothing else startling in the address until he came to discuss the railroads. He started out in a line that seemed to please Jeter Pritchard, Vance Walsler, Jim Boyd and other attorneys of Southern Railway, by speaking of the great value of the railroads to the people, and the debt they owed the capitalists who built them. But these attorneys were not happy long, for pretty soon the new Governor jumped on the lease of the North Carolina Railroad with both feet, and gave unanswerable reasons why it should be speedily annulled. Warming up to his subject, he dropped his manuscript as the perspiration rolled down his face, and said:

"Let me stop here and speak on the impulse of the moment, but not without due deliberation, and a deep sense of its import and with all respect to you. If this foreign corporation is not compelled to pay for this property a sum commensurate with their needs and its value to them, the fault will be with this General Assembly."

There was some applause at this extemporaneous declaration that if the lease is not revoked "the fault will be with this General Assembly," but the aforesaid Republican Southern Railway attorneys, and other attorneys and politicians who are down here on free passes, didn't join in the applause. They were cold, pale, silent constrained. They sat looking as if they had partaken of something that did not agree with them until Governor Russell got back to his partisanship about "the solid South is broken," and other such Republican stock-in-trade talk, and then these fellows joined the "savages" and made the hall ring with their applause of partisanship when they were silent over their own Governor's vigorous attack upon the lease. Plenty of cheers for narrow partisanship; not a word for protecting the interests of the State!

The declaration in favor of fostering the University met with warm applause, led by C. A. Cook, of Warren, and the close of the address, which had much more of the offensive spirit that marked its beginning, was liberally cheered, and when he finished the cheering was general and continued. For several minutes the people gathered about the new Governor, who held an impromptu reception in the hall.

SENATE.

The Senate met at 10:30 pursuant to adjournment, Lieut-Gov. Doughton presiding.

Prayer was offered by Rev. McNeill, Senator from Wilkes.

The following bills and resolutions were then introduced and referred to proper committees:

By McCaskey, a bill to establish a reformatory for young criminals.

By Smathers, a bill to prevent delay in the trial of criminal actions.

By Rollins, a bill in relation to the registration of physicians.

By Butler, a bill in regard to railroads.

The committee of conference made a report stating that they had agreed to have 500 copies of the Governor's message printed. The report was adopted.

The following bills and resolutions were ratified:

An act to provide for the counting of the votes of State officers and to carry out the provisions of Article III. of the Constitution.

The bill for the inaugural ceremonies having arrived, Lieut-Gov. Doughton announced that the Senate would proceed in a body to the House, where the vote for the Governor and State officers would be opened and officially counted.

Smathers then introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Senate extend to the retiring Lieutenant-Governor Doughton a vote of thanks for his impartial ruling as the presiding officer of the Senate, and extend to him the best wishes of the body.

It was seconded by Senators Ramsay and McCaskey, and adopted by a rising vote.

Good Business Advice.

Never look for a "bargain" in an employee. If a man is not worth fair pay he is usually not worth having at all.

The merchant who can't laugh heartily can't make money, because he is too sour natured to make and hold customers.

Give two men the same location, the same stock, the same opportunities, and one will make a success and the other a failure in business.

Politeness has been defined to be artificial good nature, but we may affirm with much greater propriety that good nature is natural politeness.

If it has not been your custom heretofore to read the advertisements systematically, begin now. There may be more money in them than you think.

Keep your book account as small as possible. Have frequent settlements with your customers, and at stated times. Have them understand this is a part of your business, and they will respect you more and increase their trade.—Exchange.

Meant to Be Funny.

Shysters are never shy.

The Phillies are after a ball player named Buckwheat. He ought to make a good batter.

"I can see your finish" is a popular bit of slang. But it can't be applied to the Public Buildings.

Some fellows don't seem to realize what a serious matter courting a girl is until she brings him into Court.

Bobbs—"I hear you are a great sportsman. Are you fond of fishing?"

Stobbs—"That's where I draw the line."

Nell—"I wouldn't marry Clarence Softsnap."

Belle—"Because of his falsetto voice?"

Nell—"Yes, and his false set o' teeth."

"Doan hit a man becuz he am thin," says Brother Watkins. "Yo' can't tell how much fish dere am in a match tell it am struck."

The Ingenue—"My part is wretched. I didn't get a bit of applause."

The Soubrette—"Never mind, dear; you are not the only frost on the widow pane."

Improvement.

"Is it a fact," asked the cynic one day, "that you improve each shining minute?"

"Yes," answered the busy little bee modestly.

"How long have you been doing that?"

"Always."

"Well, you ought to be having a better time than you seem to have, if that is the case."—Detroit Tribune.

A Fatality.

"What has become of your backer?" asked the idle person of Barnes Torner.

"I guess I worked him too hard," replied that eminent tragedian. "I killed the goose by pulling his golden leg, as the proverb goes."—Indianapolis Journal.

W. H. RAGSDALE,

THE SOUTHERN GIRL.

An Attempt to Analyze a Young Woman Who is Superior to Analysts.

The southern girl is many sided. She is mettlesome and sentimental, practical and fanciful by turns, apt to dance divinely and to flirt and to be not overcareful nor overindustrious, but she never forgets to say her prayers, and she has unshakable faith in humankind.

In man she believes implicitly. She may not believe all the rapturous things he says to her, but she credits him with generous impulses, thinks him capable of all the higher emotions and values him as a comrade, an admirer and a repository for romantic confidence. If he tumbles out of the niche where she has put him, she wonders, but is willing to regard the case as an exception and to set him up again, after due scolding and punishment. She has unbounded confidence in his ability for smoothing over rough places for her and removing any obstacles that may rise in her path. Men are always good to women, she thinks—her father is, and so is her brother and her cousin Jim.

The southern girl enjoys with all her heart. She likes music and motion and life and color and plenty of nice people about her saying pleasant things. She likes all this, but she is seldom mercenary. Reared usually among simple surroundings, the greed for money has not entered into her soul. It is possible for her to have attained her twentieth year and never to have dined or supped outside of a private house in her life. She likes the person who pleases her, independent of his extrinsic surroundings, and at any time will elight the attentions of a "good match" to devote herself to the man whose waltz step suits her and who has power of entertaining. She is ingenious and tactful, with all her dawdling ways and languid airs. She can turn her last season's ball dress upside down and inside out and make it look almost as good as new, and she can darn the parlor curtains almost as well as grandmother could and change the furniture round so that the shabby spots will be in the shade. She can arrange a dish of fruit to resemble a poem, make an evening bonnet out of next to nothing, and, last but not least, she can rattle off nonsense with an infectious delight that makes her the life of whatever company she is in.

The southern girl or woman born in the murky atmosphere of the late sixties, imperfectly educated, debarred from advantages which her parents craved for her, will give the stranger an impression of culture which perhaps a critical examination would not bear out.

The southern girl is a paradox, with her capacity for unselfishness and absurdity, with her pride and scorn of petty meanness and her serious strivings after the economical. She will buy flowers for the table even if the larder is empty, and if she gets a windfall in the form of a legacy she will put half of it in a marble casket for the church and the other half in some jewel for personal adornment, even though new curtains and carpets and whole everyday gowns are a crying need in the household.

The new woman finds little encouragement in the south. She sends out her piping notes to the northern suffrage societies and offers petitions to the state assemblies, but the popular voice is against her, and sometimes it comes out that the woman's suffrage associations of the south, so much talked about, have membership only sufficient to furnish the necessary officers.—New York Sun.

What It Cost Him.
Mrs. Watts—There! We have cleared off the last of that church debt, and it never cost you men a cent. See what women can do.
Mr. Watts—I don't know about the other fellows, but I know you have made me spend more than $100 for extra meals down town while you were out monkeying around.—Indianapolis Journal.

THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS
Monthly Illustrated
AN INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE
Edited by ALBERT SHAW

"If only one magazine can be taken, we would suggest the REVIEW OF REVIEWS, as covering more ground than any other magazine."—Board of Library Commissioners of New Hampshire, 1896.

THIS magazine is, in its contributed and departmental features, what its readers, who include the most noted names of the English-speaking world, are pleased to call "absolutely up to date," "thoroughly abreast of the times," "invaluable," and "indispensable." It is profusely illustrated with timely portraits, views, and cartoons. Its original articles are of immediate interest, by the best authorities on their respective subjects. The Editor's "Progress of the World" gives a clear, rightly proportioned view of the history of the human race during the current month. The "Leading Articles of the Month" present the important parts of the best magazine articles that have been written in every part of the world. The newest and most important books are carefully reviewed. Indexes, chronological records, and other departments complete the certainty that the reader of the Review of Reviews will miss nothing of great significance that is said or written or done throughout the world.

J. R. Smith, of Ayden, spent today here.

W. S. Greer came in this morning and was shaking hands with his friends today.

J. F. Cox, representative of the Economy Bin, returned to Tarboro this morning.

E. C. White returned from Richmond last night where he purchased a fine drove of Kentucky thoroughbreds.

Prof. W. H. Ragsdale left this morning for Raleigh to attend a meeting of the committee recently appointed by the Teachers Assembly to draft a bill for the supervision of the public schools.

"Death," says Brother Watkins, "is a de cease ob life."

If there be "luck in odd numbers" 1897 should be a prosperous year.

The Academy boys are getting two days vacation while Prof. Ragsdale is in Raleigh.

I have just returned from Richmond with a car of Kentucky Bred Horses, best ever brought to Greenville.

E. C. WHITE.

Sunday morning a man named Burnett was found dead lying upon a pile of tobacco in one of the warehouses at Wilson. He was a hard drinker.

The snow that fell yesterday showed good staying qualities, even the rain of last night failing to take it all away. There were several white patches to be seen this morning.

I have added livery in connection with my stables and can furnish first-class turnouts. Everything new and neat.
