We have received from the Washington Post a copy of their Almanac and Encyclopedia for 1897. Hanesomdly gotten up and is full of interesting historical and statistical facts. Information on any subject can be found within the covers of this excellent book. Of course you need one and should have it. Send 25 cents to the Post Company, Washington, for a copy.

Union Services.

Rev. J. B. Merton preached at the Methodist church Sunday night to a large and appreciative congregation. It was one of the finest discourses we ever listen too. It was on the subject of closer denominational union and his picture of the denominational ships on the ocean of time, making for the same port, was grand, elevating and calculated to do much good in this community. He said we would be so happy when all the ships landed in port that there would be no thought of denomination.

ORIGINAL OBSERVATIONS.

Man's cup of happiness is not a cup of fail.

Pure thoughts adorn the mind as choice pictures do a room.

Weeds will grow without any help, but volunteer corn is never very valuable.

The saddest of all sad words are these: "I cannot pay—will you charge it, please?"

Life is a school, and most of us study on hard benches till the final dismissal comes, learning but to forget.

It doesn't cost anything to remember the poor, but if you want the poor to remember you it will cost you something.

All men presumably are created free and equal, but some men do not remain so—they marry women who boss them almost to death.

There is a great deal of talk now about Turkey being in Greece, just as it was not eminently proper and palatable for turkey to be in grease—at meal-time.

What sense is there in carrying a big trunk to the depot and there allowing it to remain? What evidence of wisdom is it to carry wealth to the grave—and then leave it.

Each day is a life, a history, a portion of eternity. The hopes of the morning are the tears of evening—the air-castles of Monday morning are the graves of Saturday night.—Orange (Va.) Observer.

Ruined His Pants.

A man's peculiar habits, even the innocent ones, may often get him into a peck of trouble, to say nothing of petty embarrassment. There is a well-known young society man who always carries a silver matchbox in his trousers pocket and who has fallen into the unbecoming practice of sticking his hand into his pocket and snapping the lid which operates with a spring. He doesn't do it any more, however, and there's where the story comes in. A few evenings ago he was a guest at a dance given in Horticultural Hall. Everything was moving smoothly toward the cotillion when a yell which might have done credit to a Comanche Indian sounded from one corner of the hall. Immediately there was the greatest consternation, and a feather-brained idiot shouted "Fire!" His voice was too weak, however, to start a stampede, and when the excitement had subsided it was discovered that the youth with the matchbox had been indulging in his unbecoming practice, when the lid came down on the head of a match, igniting the entire contents. There was a puff of smoke and a mad rush for the ante room, and in a few minutes a messenger was dispatched for a change of trousers.—Philadelphia Record.

THE RECTOR'S DAUGHTER.

Tripping softly down the aisle,
 With a brave, religious air,
 And a sinful little smile,
 Comes the rector's daughter.
 Kneels she in the family pew.
 Bends her pretty head in prayer,
 As her father tells her to,
 As her mother taught her.

Eyes and hair as black as night,
 Cheeks and lips like roses,
 Little teeth, all pearly white,
 Has the rector's daughter;
 Form as frail as a cyclamen,
 Tiniest of the noses—
 Who shall blame the many men
 That have vainly sought her?

Sings she with a hundred charms
 Holy hymns and olden,
 Just as though an angel's arms,
 Heaven-sent, had caught her,
 Yet these ways of sanctity
 One small soul embolden—
 For today she winked at me,
 Did the rector's daughter.

—Puck.

Baptists, See Here!

The Southern Baptist Convention meets this year in Wilmington, N. C., May 8th. Now, you want to go to this convention, and you also want to go in style and comfort. There is only one good first-class line from the South and Southwest to Wilmington, and that line is the Seaboard Air Line, which runs the finest and fastest trains in the South and makes the lowest rates of any railroad running from the South or Southwest. A Gambler and His Case.

Every faro dealer of note in the country has at some time had Little Dick in hock for $500 or more. In the days when confidence men were making big money working the railway trains Canada Bill had as a side partner a dapper little fellow named Dick Cody. It was the fashion those times for the dudes to carry small canes with richly mounted and decorated heads. These were too small for use as walking sticks and were intended for show solely. Dick Cody was a dude of dudes, would change his clothes two and three times a day, and always looked as if he had just stepped out of a bandbox. After getting his share of a "trick," as the robbery of the innocents was termed, Cody would strike for the nearest large city to have a good time, and this to his mind meant rich meals, a few bottles of wine and a bout at faro. He was a careful, methodical little fellow, and on reaching town would plant most of his money in a safe place, retaining only $200 or $300 for his spree.

After his meal and wine he would march to some favorite faro bank and tackle the tiger. If he won, he would keep on playing until the game closed or the dealer turned up the box. If he lost, as he generally did, Dick would begin to look closely at the gold mounted stick he always carried, and the dealer knew what was coming. Handing over the cane Cody would say in a cool, natural manner, the same as if he was cashing a certified check:

"Put Little Dick in for $500, please."

And no dealer who was on to his job ever refused him. Win or lose, Cody was always around promptly to take his cane out of pawn. The stick itself was not worth at the outside more than $10, but Cody could go into any faro bank of note in the country and get a loan of $500 or any reasonable sum on it. It was his way of giving a promissory note for the credit, and he never repudiated the obligation.—Chicago Tribune.

Resigned.

It will be seen from a report elsewhere of yesterday's services at the Baptist church that Rev. E. D. Wells, has resigned and cannot serve the church for the present year. Mr. Wells has been here just one year, but no one has ever been among this people who has impressed himself both upon the church and those outside as a consecrated christian minister, a man of very high sense of honor and integrity, and with an advanced view of christian life and living.

His life in every way has tully illustrated, and been in keeping with his profession. No more Godly man has lived among us, and he will always be thus remembered by the people of Greenville.

Review of the Year.

At the conclusion of the morning sermon yesterday at the Baptist church there was held a reunion service at which the roll of the church membership was called. After which Prof. Ragsdale, Chairman of the Finance Committee, made some statements as to the work done by the church during the year and as to its present financial condition. He stated there had been a debt hanging over the church since its dedication, besides some other obligations that during the past year every one of these had been paid in full. That all the obligations for the past year had been paid, including the pastor's salary. That during the present year the total amount paid for the various objects had been about twelve hundred dollars. That at present the church was free from debt every obligation being paid to date.

The pastor, Rev. E. D. Wells then made some statements in reference to his work during the past year. This report showed over five hundred calls made by himself and wife, over two hundred and fifty calls received and seventy-seven sermons preached. That ill health had prevented his doing more. He then announced that his resignation was in the hands of the Deacons to be acted upon by the church at its next conference.

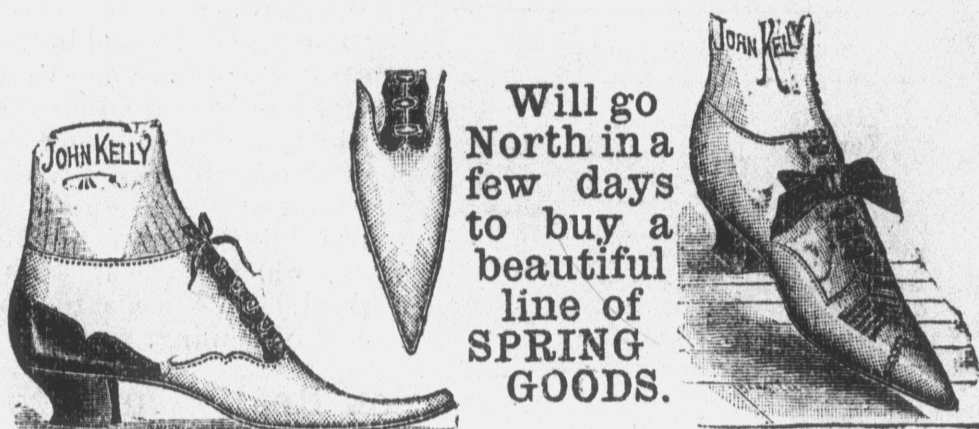

After this the Lord's Supper was administered.
