WORTH CONSIDERING.

Greenville Should Begin to Move in This Matter.

There is unquestionably going to be a railroad built from Snow Hill to some point on the Wilmington & Weldon or Atlantic & North Carolina roads. There are four given points to be considered—Kinston, Goldsboro, Wilson and Greenville. Heretofore every project has been to have Snow Hill the objective point. The charter granted by the recent Legislature makes Snow Hill the beginning point with the privilege of connecting with any point on the two roads above named.

Already Goldsboro and Wilson are making preparations for bidding to have the road to those towns. Greenville is a far more preferable point of connection than either of the other towns. Logically and from every business view Greenville should secure this road to come here.

To run this road from Snow Hill via Farmville to Farmville would add much to the building up of Greenville and much more to the progress of Greenville. Beside this, the advantage to Snow Hill in coming here, where the benefit of water competition could be had, would prove of untold benefit to that town also. It is to be hoped that this railroad connection will be seriously considered by the people of Greenville and the county generally, as to secure it would be worth many thousands of dollars to us.

Our people already see the mistake of not securing the rebuilding of the Greenville Lumber Co's. plant here, and the loss to the town in that one particular should awaken our people to the necessity of taking advantage of every opportunity that is presented. Don't sit idly by and let some other town secure this road when with proper exertion it can be brought to Greenville. One thing is certain—this road is going to be built and one of the towns mentioned will get it. By all means Greenville should have it.

Glowing accounts reach us of the push and nerve of North Carolina republicans now in Washington on a visit to the Great Father. They are said to be three deep in the cheap boarding houses, while hundreds of them call at the offices of the principal hotels for their mail. They line Pennsylvania avenue, holding in their pleading hands testimonials they wish signed by every statesman from Maine to California. They are first in the White House before it is swept in the morning, and they are on hand to put the president to bed at night. Four of them sit up with McKinley's private secretary to o. k. any appointments that may appear of North Carolina men. Every avenue of approach to an official that can name a man to office is guarded by at least six North Carolina republican office seekers, and more are leaving for the seat of war on every train. In the offices of the two senators from this state the candidates are packed away in layers like herring, no salt being necessary, however, to keep them fully as fresh as when they left home. North Carolina republicans who never earned $1,000 in a year by real industry, are asking for $5,000 to $10,000 positions, and some of them have not voted for more than one republican president, and may never vote for another.—Asheville Citizen.

ANOTHER BROKEN BARGAIN.

The Eastern Colored Hospital—The Negro Not in it—Except as an In-mate.

The new Governor-Russell-appointed board of directors of the colored insane asylum met in this city today and organized in secret conclave by electing Dr. J. E. Person chairman.

The session was a long and doubtless a turbulent one, and resulted in the election of Dr. Ab. Alexander, of Tyrrell county, superintendent. Dr. Alexander is a republican, a white man, a member of the unlamented legislature, Drs. Williams, colored, of Charlotte, and J. D. Spicer and J. E. Person, of this county, were placed in nomination, and received votes on the first and second ballots; but on the third ballot Dr. Alexander won.

A resolution was then introduced to the effect that the assistant physicians and other officers of the asylum should be colored, men, whereupon a discussion arose, and pending the discussion a resolution to adjourn—which is always in order—was carried and the meeting "broke up" subject to the call of the chairman, Person, at some future day.

And this is what the colored brother gets out of the promises of pie for his votes in the late election and in the legislature.

But it was ever thus.—Goldsboro Argus.

Dr. Hartshorne's Will

The will of Dr. Henry Hartshorne, of this city, died recently in Tokio, Japan, was admitted to probate yesterday by Register of Wills Smithers. In disposing of his estate of $50,000 the testament devises to the library of the Havertord College his copy of the Japanese translation of "My Essentials of Practical Medicine" as a curiosity. Other medical books are bequeathed to the Woman's Medical College, and a portion of his library to the Bryn Mawr College for Women. In a codicil the bequest made to Bryn Mawr College is revoked and given to Guilford College, New Garden, N. C.—Philadelphia Record.

Baptists, See Here!

The Southern Baptist Convention meets this year in Wilmington, N. C., May 8th. Now, you want to go to this convention, and you also want to go in style and comfort. There is only one good firstclass line from the South and Southwest to Wilmington, and that line is the Seaboard Air Line, which runs the finest and fastest trains in the South and makes the lowest rates of any railroad running from the South or Southwest. Don't be fooled into making your arrangements until you have consulted one of the Seaboard Air Line agents, who always esteem it a pleasure to serve you. B. A. Newland, General Agent Passenger Department, 6 Kimball house, Atlanta, Ga., will be glad to write you or call on you, or you can apply to any of the representatives of the Seaboard Air Line in any town or city. This is the official route. Do you want to go with your friends?

SIGHTS IN MEXICO.

Bishop's Palace—A War Incident—Uncanny Grave Yard Stories—Military and Criminals—Free Silver and Prices—Horror of a Bull Fight.

Monday morning we were up early to put in a full day at further sightseeing in Monterey. The first trip was out to the Bishop's Palace, on the suburbs of the city, where are the ruins of what was once a magnificent structure. To reach this was necessary to climb a hill several hundred feet high, but the view obtained from the summit repaid the fatigue many times over. On one side nestled the city almost surrounded by hills and mountains; and on the other for miles away stretched a beautiful fertile valley. Back of the palace the hills rise higher and higher until they reach the range of mountains beyond.

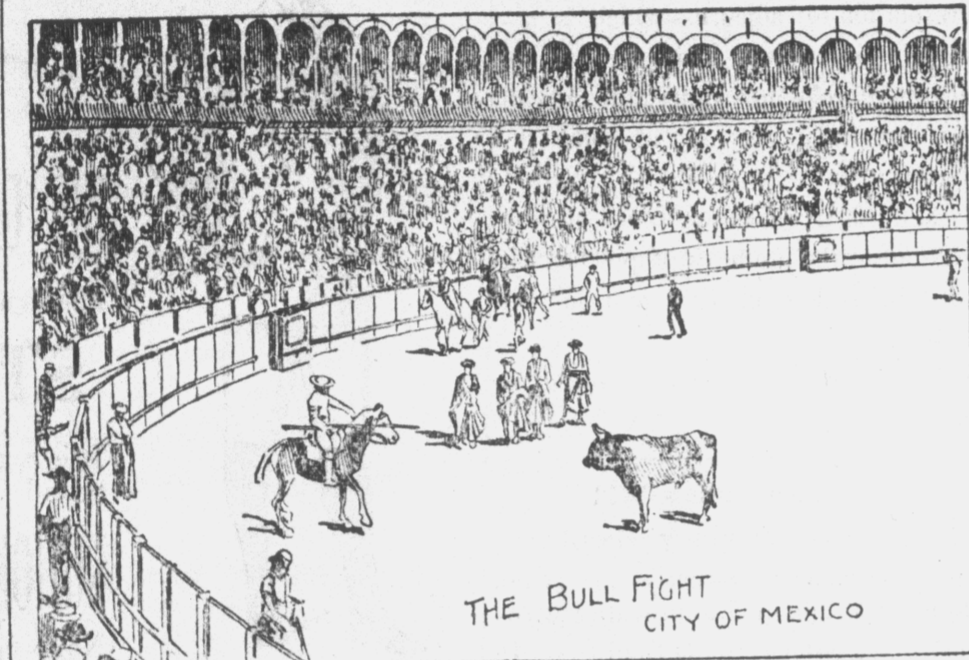

In the war of 1847 this palace, a massive stone structure, because of its commanding prominence overlooking both the city and valley, was used as a fort by the Mexicans to protect Monterey against an attack from the Americans. But it was here that Gen. Zachary Taylor, in command of a regiment of United States troops, showed that "Uncle Sam's" army was better skilled in military exploit than those of Mexico. Gen. Taylor was seen marching his regiment up the valley towards Monterey, but was careful not to bring them within range of the guns in the fort. Suddenly the regiment turned to the right and disappeared among the hills, the Mexicans thinking this meant they would retire to the mountains and make no attack. Finding their way among the hills the American soldiers bravely marched and tugged their guns to the top of a hill overlooking the palace and planted their artillery on the summit. Then before the Mexicans were aware of it death dealing missiles were being hurled into their midst. Gen. Taylor's men literally stormed and captured the palace and from this vantage ground captured Monterey.

Our guide on this trip to the Bishop's Palace, a very intelligent young Mexican, Armaado Yereba by name, had this chapter of war history at his tongue's end and was quite dramatic as he interestingly related it, doubtless feeling that speaking well of American chivalry and bravery would be pleasing to an American audience, even if it was a small one.

While taking a birds-eye view of the city from the palace heights, our guide pointed out a cemetery over on the northern suburb and narrated some very uncanny things about burials that take place there. The rich are of course able to bury their dead decently and erect monuments over them, but the poor go to their last resting place with little or no ceremony or mark of respect shown them. Among the latter class burials often take place without a coffin, a shallow trench being cut in the hard earth, the body placed therein and a few shovels full of dirt thrown over it. When coffins are used it is no uncommon thing for robbers to visit the cemetery the night following the burial, remove the remains from the coffin and put them back in the excavation, and take the coffin to the city to sell again. There is so much alkali in the soil that a body once exposed to it is quickly eaten away or the flesh burned off leaving nothing but the bones. To save the trouble of digging new graves in the hard soil it frequently occurs that the undertaker scrapes into an old grave and if the body has all decayed the bones are thrown in some out of the way corner and another body placed there. Deliver us from ever having to be buried in Mexico!

During the day we visited many other places of interest—the Governor's Palace, the penitentiary, Civil College, the leading educational institution of the city, and so on. At each of these our party met with every courtesy and mark of respect. In fact we were impressed with the civility of the people of all classes. They seemed anxious to point out or tell us anything desired, would offer us their seats on the street cars if they happened to be crowded, and would invariably step down and give us the right of way on the narrow sidewalks.

Another very noticeable thing was the large number of soldiers to be seen. Several garrisons are in the city and the uniformed gentry were visible everywhere. These were of two classes with a marked distinction between them—the standing army regularly paid by the government and the criminal soldiery. They have a custom in the republic of sentencing a criminal to so many years service in the army according to the tenor of his offense, in case he is not needed about any of the trade departments connected with the penal institution. In extreme cases the offender is given his choice of serving in the army for life or going to the salt mines for 5 years. If the criminal places any value on his life with such a choice before him, he goes to the army, for no man has ever been known to live longer than 3 years in the salt mines. Because of this custom of sentencing criminals to the army, only about 300 are confined in the State prison of Nuevo Leon. These worked at different trades, the younger ones also attending a school.

A few words relative to prices and financial conditions in Mexico may be of interest. REFLECTOR readers well remember that during the free silver and gold standard arguments of the last campaign, Mexico, a free silver country, was frequently pointed to as an example, the gold advocates telling us that while an American dollar was worth two Mexican dollars everything was twice as high in Mexico as in this country. We did not find this to be true. Of course in our brief stay there, and desiring to give attention to many other things as well, there was not an opportunity of making a close study of this question. But so far as our observation went we reached the conclusion that with perhaps some exceptions a Mexican dollar will buy just as much of Mexican products as an American dollar will buy of American products. There is a difference when it comes to American articles sold over on the other side of the border. A few examples may illustrate this: In the United States cigarettes sell for 5 cents a pack. The very same cigarette sent from this country and sold in Mexico bring 10 cents (5 cents in our money) making the price on both sides the line the same. But cigarettes of Mexican manufacture, made just as well and of purer tobacco, can be bought for 6 cents (3 cents our money.) Again, over there Mexican made cigars can be bought at 6 for 25 cents that are as good as can be found anywhere in the United States at 3 for 25 cents. In this case the odds are largely in favor of Mexico. Once more; our party stopped at a hotel whose regular rate is $3 per day ($1.50 our money) and there is not a hotel in the United States that gives better accommodations for the same money that we got there. Other comparisons were made but these are enough to mention.

And now we will tell about the bull fight. The Spanish love for blood and brutality that has always been a characteristic of those people has been hereditary through their generations and still exists among the people of Mexico. Certainly almost every American has heard or read something about a bull fight, yet few have a conception of what it really is. A more horribly brutal, cruel, inhuman spectacle cannot be imagined. It is sickening to witness and even revolting to write about. Still the Mexican has great relish for such sport and would spend his last dollar to see a fight.

These fights take place in an immense amphitheatre surrounding a large arena and are governed by a code of rules. There are points in favor of the bull which are guarded by the judges. The judges consist of the Governor of the State, Mayor of the city and two or three other high officials, showing that even the high officials sanction such brutality. These are attended by a bugler through whom all the signals are given. At the first sound of the bugle a gate swings open and the company of fighters, consisting of six matadors and two horsemen and attendants enter. They parade the arena with great pomp, salute the judges and receive rounds of applause from the wild, boisterous mob of spectators. The bugle sounds again, the fighters take positions about the arena, the attendants retreat to places of safety, another gate swings open and in rushes a bull. The animal has been kept in confinement several days pre-

SIGHTS IN MEXICO.

Went to the fight, started and tortured to arouse his vicious nature, and now further infuriated by the playing of a band, the shouts of the crowd and the flaunting of colored blankets by the matadors, he rushed madly at anything in sight.

The first part of the fight is between the horsemen and the bull, the matadors only aggravating the bull while his progresses. None of them have death dealing weapons as yet, but the horsemen are armed with a steel pointed lance about 8 feet long. The horses used are either blind or blindfolded, leaving them at the mercy of the maddened bull. They are spurred toward the bull until he makes an attack, when the rider displays his skill by catching his lance in the bull's shoulders and warding off the charge. There is some science and much bravery connected with this and frequently the bull is skillfully turned aside. But when the rider fails to catch or hold the bull the spectacle is sickening. He rushes on the horse and with his long horns literally disembowels the poor brute. Sometimes the rider is dismounted in which case he runs for his life and leaves the horse to be killed by the bull. Every advantage gained either by the horsemen or bull is wildly cheered.

Whether the horses are killed or not, this stage of the fight ceases after a few minutes and another sound of the bugle takes the horsemen from the ring. Then the matadors take the bull in hand and further sport with and torture him by striking banderillas, two at a thrust, in the bull's shoulders as he charges on them. This is a very daring and dangerous feat, as the banderillas are only about two feet long, hence the matador must be very close to the bull's dangerous horns when the thrust is made. After this goes on for a few minutes longer the chief of the matadors advances to the front of the judges' stand and asks their permission to kill the bull. Consent is given, and the one selected to do the killing arms with a keen sword and scarlet flag and goes out to dispatch the bull, the other matadors being at convenient places to go to his rescue in case the bull gets the advantage of him. Thisayer is not allowed to strike the bull until the animal has charged him three times, after which he watches for an opportunity to strike a death blow. This must be done from in front over the head, the sword to be thrust between the shoulder blades to the heart. If he misses the heart and pierces the lung or makes a thrust in any other part of the body, he is fined. When a thrust to the heart is made the bull falls, a dagger is thrust in the brain to extinguish any spark of life that may be left, and the drag-out team enters to take the carcass from the ring.

One might naturally conclude this performance sufficient to satisfy the blood, thirsty natives. But not so. They keep their places and continue their boisterous demonstrations until the horrible exhibition has been six times repeated in detail and as many bulls killed. A bull that will not charge a horse upon entering is ruled out and driven from the arena, and if the company giving the exhibition fails to furnish six fighting bulls a heavy fine is imposed.

But enough of this except to say that no one need have any desires to see a bull fight. It is sickening and repulsive in the extreme. However, if such a thing is possible a united effort should be made to get our neighbor republic to abolish such species of barbarity within her borders.

We turned our back on Monterey Tuesday morning, Feb. 23rd, and set our faces homeward, making stops at Houston, New Orleans and Birmingham on the return. Other incidents of our Southern trip might be written about, but perhaps enough has been said and this article brings the series to a close.
