LATE NEWS.

A hurricane did much damage in portions of Alabama Monday.

The Governor of Arkansas has called an extra session of the Legislature.

Charles O. Scull, general passenger agent of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, has resigned.

The General Assembly of New York passed the Greater New York charter bill over Mayor Strong's veto.

A company capitalized at $2,000,000 has been formed at Minneapolis, Minn., to manufacture sugar from beets and fight the sugar Trust.

Contrasts.

When the frost is on the windows and the kitchen pail is froze, when the little icy needles come with every breath that blows; when chilblains make us sick and taint, and cold feet give us pain, it's safe to bet we will all wish for summer day again. For while we sweat and fume around in gauzy summer clothes, it's an easy thing to get cooled off, as everybody knows. But is difficult in winter, when the wind is full of ice, and the weather is as hard to beat as a pair of loaded dice. We may talk about our climate, and about our spring and fall, but the balmy days of summer are the days that suit us all.—Orange Observer.

When the sun is hot in summer and the sweat runs off your nose, when the ice-house is a-melting, and you don't need any clothes; when the mercury is dropping, dropping down out o' sight, you will long for the pleasure of a cold winter night. When the weather is oppressive and the leaves refuse to shake, you will think of these assertions, Mr. Robinson which you make. You will long for cold December, and the blessing which it brings, you will hate winter, and say many naughty things, you will think of snowflakes, and the bracing winter days, of the crackling parlor fires and the jingle of the sleighs.—Farmville Journal.

Early Morning Marriage.

This morning at 8:15, in the Methodist church, by Rev. N. M. Watson. Mr. Thos. McGee, of Goldsboro, was married to Miss Delia W. Marshal of this town.

Just as the clock pointed to 8:15 Mrs. J. B. Cherry began playing the wedding march, and Messrs. J. G. Moye and Phil Crawford walked up the right aisle and Messrs. J. L. Little and Jarvis Sugg up the left, immediately following came the groom with his best man, Mr. R. M. Harper, of LaGrange, and up the opposite aisle the bride on the arm of Mr. J. B. Cherry. The bride and groom met at the altar, and were then made man and wife.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom took the morning train for Goldsboro, where they will make their home.

Mr. McGee is a live insurance man of Goldsboro and he is to be congratulated in having won the heart of a woman, whose amiable character and lovely disposition has made her a favorite in Greenville society.

Will Sell Her Finger.

For one thousand dollars a young and pretty woman is willing to sell one of her fingers. She is Miss Grace Dinsmore, and her home is in Binghamton, N. Y. She saw an advertisement in a New York paper giving pay for the middle finger at middle joint, to be used in a necrosis, or bone-grafting operation. Miss Dinsmore answered the advertisement in person. She is anxious to become a singer and wishes to complete her musical education at the Boston Conservatory of Music, and takes this means of securing the money.

Her Answer in Three Letters.

He loved her with all his heart, but he was not certain that his affection was reciprocated. He determined to trap her into a promise to marry him. He made a mathematical calculation. "Mary," he said, his voice trembling with emotion, "I love you. I am going to ask you to be my wife. Will you give me your answer in word of three letters?"

Her face was turned partly from him and her eyes were downcast. A faint blush mantled her cheeks and her lips trembled as she softly murmured, "I will."

His eyes reflected the joy in his heart at her words and more tremulously, more tenderly than he had spoken before he whispered:

"Mary, darling, I love you; will you be my wife?"

"Nit."—Chicago Times-Herald.

An old time country darkey was on the streets Friday afternoon and while passing along in the front of J. S. Miller's grocery store, having noticed the watering trough at the pump laying down upon the ground and drank freely. As he arose he remarked: "I neber suffers fur water whin I kin git to it."—Concord Standard.

One Died of Grief, the Other of Joy.

An impressionable Paris banker, the owner of immense riches, died of grief on hearing that he had lost everything in the world except 100,000 francs! His pauper brother on inheriting that sum from him died of joy.—London Tit Bits.

S. A. L. Industrial Agents.

CHARLOTTE, N. C. April 7.—The industrial agents of the Seaboard Air Line in Virginia, North and South Carolina and Georgia, met here today. Twenty-eight of the Seaboard's experiments farms are now in operation, 30,000 fruit and shade trees had been set out along the line, flower gardens had been established at all stations, and forty towns improvement society organized. This movement was inaugurated by the Seaboard two months ago.

Burned to Death.

Willoughby Jackson, an old colored woman, was burned to death near Manchester Saturday while burning grass in a graveyard. A number of colored people were to meet and clean out the graveyard that day, but only this good old woman kept faith. She undertook to do the cleaning herself, and while burning the grass, her clothing caught afire and she was horribly burned, dying in great agony soon afterwards.—Fayetteville Observer.

The Editors Luck.

A Georgia newspaper man is going to give up journalism, because he thinks editors are not treated fairly. "A child is born," he says; "the doctor in attendance gets $10, the editor notes it and gets 0; it is christened the minister gets $4, the editor writes it up and gets 00; it marries, the minister gets another fee, the editor a piece of cake or 000; in course of time it dies, the doctor gets from $5 to $10, the minister gets another $4; the undertaker gets $25 to $40, the editor prints it and receives 0000.—Ex.

Miss Demeaner Did it.

Monroe Enquirer: An old lady received a letter from the president of a college, which her son was attending, stating that her son had been expelled on account of misdemeanor. The old lady read the letter carefully and said, as she wiped the tears from her eyes, "Well, well I've always heard that a woman was at the bottom of every man's trouble and now this here young woman, Miss Demeaner, has got my son John into such deep trouble that he has been sent away from school on her account."

For the Reflector.

MY DEAR ONE THAT'S GONE.

BY L. W. R.

How well do I remember
 When first I heard your voice;
 Little did I think then
 That I should be your choice.

I had been invited
 To attend an evening ball;
 It was there that first I met him,
 My dearest dear of all.

He did not like dancing,
 So we passed the hours away
 By chatting and coquetting,
 In the long and broad hall-way.

After this most glorious evening,
 It is useless to deny;
 That he made me special visits,
 And to please him I did try.

How well do I remember,
 How he held my little hands;
 And told me over and o'er
 His love was the truest of man's.

I never one moment doubted
 Those words so sweet and true;
 And only a short while afterward,
 I rested with him secure.

I was always very happy,
 During these few short years;
 But Oh! before eight years had passed,
 My joy was changed to tears.

This part of my story is painful to tell,
 It's so sad but yet so true,
 For the Angel of Death has crept into our home,
 Leaving one where there has so long been two.

But God in his infinite goodness,
 Knoweth and doeth all things well;
 Therefore to His will I must submit,
 And through Him my sorrows repel.
 But yet I have one hope left to console
 me,
 And the memory of it brings a sigh;
 Not until I pass through the valley of death
 Can I see my dear one that's gone by.

Adopted Their Own Son.

In 1876 a careless nurse deserted the preambulator in which she was wheeling the two year old son of M. F. Britton, at Montreal, Canada, while she went for a short walk with a soldier sweetheart from the local English garrison. When she returned her charge was gone. The Britton family made every effort to recover the little one but without avail.

As has recently developed, it was stolen by a man named Myers in the hope of securing a reward. After the crime was committed he became so much alarmed that he never dared to claim money from the infant's family and the child reached the age of 7 years under his care.

In 1883 Myers died, and for a year his wife kept the boy with her. She was greatly troubled in her conscience, and finally resolved to devise some plan of returning the lad to his family. She feared to go directly to them with her story, and by way of reaching them secured employment as a domestic in their household.

The Brittons were without a child of their own, and when Mrs. Myers suggested that they adopt her "son," a bright lad of ten at the time, they readily fell in with the plan. Mrs. Myers soon after left their employ. She kept up a desultory correspondence with them for several years and finally dropped entirely out of sight.

In the meantime the Brittons and their supposedly adopted son removed to a farm in northern New York and afterwards to another near Akron, Ia. A few days ago they received a letter from Mrs. Myers, in England, giving full particulars of the abduction of their child 21 years ago and the method she adopted to return him to his own father and mother.

A Curious Monstrosity.

A monstrosity was born near Hunting Creek, Wilkes county, last week in the shape of a lamb. It had eight well developed legs, four ears, two eyes and two tails. From the middle of the body back, there was two bodies, while in front there was one body only. If any doubts the above they are referred to Mr. G. B. Revet, who gave the Elkin Times the item.

His cast-off boots number 200 pairs a year.—London Woman.

JOHN F. BIVINE, General Supt.

T. M. EMERSON, Traffic Manager, J. R. KENLY, Gen'l Manager.

Dr. Tanne's feat of fasting forty days is about to be equaled in Norfolk by a colored boy, who bears the distinguished name of George Washington. While the doctor's effort was voluntary, that of the colored lad is quite to the contrary and his frequent cries for bread are almost heartrending. George Washington is the son of John H. Washington, who sells wood, coal and ice at the corner of Bank and Bute streets and who lives on No. 72 Scott street. He is 14 years of age, and from his infancy has been crippled slightly. Like many other people, old and young, he has a hobby, and it was to this that he can now ascribe his condition.

Whenever George saw a bottle he had an uncontrollable desire to drink some or all of its contents. He preferred something strong, and this being known to his parents, he was carefully watched while at home. Last November he was visiting the home of a neighbor and walking into the kitchen espied on a shelf within his reach a bottle. There was no label on it, and when no one was near he proceeded to drink therefrom. Its contents, carbonic acid, proved a little too strong even for George, and convulsions immediately followed. He was carried home and medical aid at once summoned, but notwithstanding every effort on their part, he is now in bed, a living, breathing skeleton.

Although he suffered inexpressibly it was not until four weeks ago that the boy found it impossible to retain anything on his stomach. Not a mouthful of food has he had during the past month, his only nourishment being a sip of milk, or whiskey now and then. From a lively lad of about one hundred pounds in weight he is now nothing but skin and bones, lying by inches and weighing not more than thirty pounds. His constancies are for something to drink, but generally whenever bread or any other food is offered he refuses it. Physicians say his death is only a question of time, but his appearance in life is that of an ossified being. His parents have become reconciled to his fate, while the boy himself does not comprehend anything save that he is a sufferer.

Have you heard of the Sundown sea, love, With its blue and golden skies, Where the ripples play the living day And the summer never dies? There are wealth and health for you, love; There are health and wealth for me; There is all that's best in the golden west On the shores of the Sundown sea.

There's a tear on every thorn, love, Of the storm scarred locust; there Are dripping leaves and icy eaves; There's a wail on the weeping air; There's a song in the frozen rill, love, But it's lost to you and me; There's a smothered cry in the rain swept sky. Then away to the Sundown sea.

The luster is gone from your hair, love; Your cheeks are thin and pale; Your dark eye turns and your spirit yearns For a glimpse of the sunset trail. I will sing a new song to you, love, And you'll sing a new song to me, And we'll grow young as we journey along On the way to the Sundown sea.

Willing to Prove It. The coach was being driven up a steep mountain road, and at one side the cliff ran straight down for 100 feet. A youth seated on the back seat next to a loquacious damsel of uncertain age was in a state of misery. The one being he loved most of all the world was in the front with his hated rival, and nothing could dispel his gloom.

"Oh, Mr. Foster," tittered the young woman next to him, breaking in upon his meditations, "suppose the coach should upset or I should fall out, would you try to save me?" "Why, of course," was the reply. "Certainly—to be sure." "Would you really?" she asked. "Now, tell me exactly how." "Oh, I—eh"—began the young man, intent upon other things. "Why I"— "Oh, Mr. Foster," sighed the fair one, "you don't know really what you'd do." "Well," he answered, thoroughly aroused, "if you doubt me, why, I'll show you just what." "How can you show me?" she whispered. "Can you truly give me some proof?" "Yes," he returned. "All you have to do is to proceed to tumble out, and I'll prove the rest to everybody's satisfaction." — Scottish Nights.

'T WAS EVER THUS.

A few days since an insurance agent accepted an invitation to inspect a new and beautiful house built by a friend. After taking a peep at the whole establishment from top to bottom, inquired—

"House insured?"

"Yes."

"What do you insure it for?"

"Because it MIGHT burn."

"Not SURE of it, are you?"

"No."

"Is your life insured?"

"No."

"Di, won't you?"

"Yes."

"Sure?"

"Yes."

"Then why not insure your life as well as your house?"

"Well, really, I never thought of the matter just in that light before, and will give it early attention."—Travelers Record.
