Base Ball.

Cleveland, May 29—White Cuppy was easy for the Orioles today the Indians could not touch Nops. Both sides did good work in the field. Attendance 5,000. Score. Cleveland, 2; Baltimore, 8.

New York, May 29—The Giants made it three straights by taking both of today's games from St. Louis. Both contests were ragged and uneven, inexcusable errors alternating with brilliant fielding throughout. The Browns were never in danger of winning and what little heart they exhibited was taken from them by McDermott's umpiring.

In the second "Dad" Clark redeemed his reputation by holding down and scattering the visitors' hits and striking out six men. Score. New York, 7; St. Louis, 6.

Second game—New York, 8; St. Louis, 5.

Cincinnati, May 29—The Reds won from the Bostons today in an exciting game. The fielding of both teams was excellent. Attendance 5,000. Score. Cincinnati, 2; Boston, 1.

Pittsburg, May 29—Pittsburg took two straights from the Brooklyns today. The morning game was won by good hitting in the sixth. The afternoon game was a slugging contest. Attendance 7,500. Score. Pittsburg, 5; Brooklyn, 4.

Second game—Pittsburg, 9; Brooklyn, 7.

Louisville, Ky., May 29—Both McJames and Hemming pitched fine ball today. The errors of Dolan and Clingman were responsible for four of the Senators' runs. Score. Washington, 5; Louisville, 2.

Chicago, May 29—After having batted Orth off the slab and securing what looked like a safe lead, the Colts went to pieces in the seventh and eighth and presented the Quakers with six runs and the game. Attendance 5,600 score. Chicago, 10; Philadelphia, 11.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT THE UNIVERSITY.

Baccalaureate Sermon.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., May 31 '97.

A large and appreciative congregation of visitors, towns people and students gathered in Gerrard Hall Sunday morning to hear the baccalaureate sermon by Rev. Dr. J. S. Felix, pastor of the First Baptist church of Asheville, N. C.

The hall itself seemed to present a sacred appearance for as we gazed upon its walls many things were to be seen to call to memory the darker days of the State and the republic as well as the struggles of our forefathers and to fill our hearts with gratitude to God at the blessings we now enjoy. In the back ground to the rostrum hung a large flag bearing the stars and stripes and also the insignia of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, and above this flag were the portraits and busts of the fathers and founders of the University looking down upon us as though they still watched over our every interest. In contrast with this was the "white and blue" with which the building was draped and the many pictures of the University as it is today pointing out to us the many blessings and privileges of peace and prosperity we enjoy that our forefathers did not enjoy.

At 11:30 o'clock the forty members of the Senior class, robed in their caps and gowns formed in front of the President's office and the procession headed by President Alderman, Dr. J. S. Felix and Dr. Thomas Hume, marched to the Hall. Dr. Hume opened the service by asking the choir to sing a very appropriate hymn after which he read a selection from St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. After another hymn Dr. Hume presented the Rev. Dr. Felix, who took his text from Romans 8:28. "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose."

Dr. Felix said in substance: "God in the creation of the world must have had a definite purpose in view. The world is not an accident. God works for His own glory and this was His purpose in creating the world. This purpose must have been a benevolent one. Men should not make their standard and expect God to measure up to it and to fit to their theory, but they should first learn the truth and the ways of God and bring themselves up to that."

"If God's purpose was a benevolent one why did He make man so he could sin and tear down His kingdom? Man would not have been man if he had not been a being of choice."

"God's purpose is a benevolent one. He could not have had a malicious one. He could not have made man just to get an opportunity to down him. We are largely what we determine to be. If we trust in God and determine to make the best of everything we shall find the very adversities of life working together for good."

God's purpose must be fulfilled. This calls into question the sovereignty of God and the free agency of man. These are wedded together. They blend into each other as the night into the day. We can tell one from the other but we can't find the dividing line. Text does not say all things are good but that all things work together for good. Good in the world is predominant. If it does not so it is because our crimes and misfortunes are kept constantly before our minds while the many millions who toil on patiently and in a Godlike way are never mentioned. If we could see all the good we should no longer doubt that the good predominates and that God's purpose is being fulfilled."

"Those who love God are one with God. To love God is to be in harmony with God and want the things that He wants. When a man becomes conscious of his ignorance and weakness he turns to God and confesses his wickedness. Then God instead of chastening him forgives him and helps him to lead a new life and work for good."

Dr. Felix closed his sermon by repeating that beautiful hymn of Cowpers: "God moves in a mysterious way. His wonders to perform."

The sermon was an able one commanding the close attention of the congregation for more than an hour, and it will doubtless be long remembered by many of those who heard it. X.

Thinks Newspapers too Cheap.

The viciousness of our newspaper situation is in having all their profit depend upon getting advertising by means of circulation. The circulation itself ought to pay. The newspaper is too cheap. So long as it is cheap it tends to be nasty. The subscription of a newspaper ought to pay for its production. A good newspaper, well printed, with trustworthy news of the world, is worth three times the present price of our ordinary journals. Even then it would be the cheapest thing in the market. The advertisements that came to such a paper would pay it for its expenditure of brains and industry.—Chas. Dudley Warner, in Harper's Magazine.

The South is Wailing.

In commenting on the recent virulent and superloyal outbreak of a certain element of the Grand Army of the Republic touching the school history question, the Providence Journal says:

We ought by this time to have become sufficiently removed from the passions and prejudices of the civil war to be willing to give the South due credit for the sincerity and courage we claim in behalf of the soldiers of the North.

Our Providence contemporary says, further, that it is time to teach real history in our schools; declares that it is unjust to attempt to teach the youth of the North that there was no bravery, no chivalry, exhibited in the conflict except by the Federal combatants, and severely reprobates the suggestion that the idea be inculcated in that section that every Confederate was a despicable character.

For its words the Journal merits the thanks of every Southerner. And we assure our contemporary that all the South asks is that real history be taught in the schools North and South. Not only on the issue of courage and chivalry, but on the issue of principle, right, and patriotism the South is entirely willing to be judged by the unvarnished facts.—Richmond Dispatch

Mr. J. H. Wood, who lives at the Zollcoffer place, about two miles from town, will soon have one of the "sweetest" houses in Halifax county. On one corner of the building the sun has drawn the weather boarding from the original place. Saturday one of the largest swarms of bees ever seen before came and lodged in the crevice and finding it a good place began to make honey. In a few hours another large swarm came in from exactly an opposite direction and they also concluded to make their home in this one particular spot, and now Mr. Wood has two great united aggregations of bees—combined and ready for business. Mr. Wood says when the bees are at work they can go all between the weather boarding and laths of that portion of the house and this fall he expects to have honey to burn. This is no fake and any one doubting the facts can go and see for themselves.—Weldon News.

Just try a box of cascarets, the finest liver and bowel regulator ever made.

The Chatham Record says that a certain justice of the peace in that county has very little respect for our Supreme Court, although in politics he agrees with a majority of the present members of that tribunal. This justice recently returned some papers in an appeal from him to our Superior Court, and among the papers is one on which he wrote as follows:

"We J. P. don't have the decisions of the Supreme Court, and half the time the law says one thing and the Supreme Court decides another."

HOW HE GOT EVEN.

The Boy Waited a Year to Pay His Father Back.

Laurence Hutton, in an article in Harper's Round Table, tells the following good story of an April fool joke that his father played on him and the way he got even:
In my bread and butter days I was a frequent and unhappy victim of what Shakespeare calls a raging tooth. A long siege with a certain molar had left me one early spring day with a broken spirit and a swollen face. My father had walked the floor with me, and had groaned with me, and had suffered in his feelings and in his sympathies more perhaps than had suffered in a physical way the patient himself.

He was going that morning to attend the funeral of his old friend, Dr. McPherson, and he asked me before he left the house—to which I was confined—what I thought I would like him to bring me back—a way of his whenever I was in any serious condition of invalidism. I demanded without hesitation a brick of maple sugar. A very strange request certainly from a person in my peculiar condition and one which appealed strongly to his own sense of the ridiculous.

When he returned at dinner time, he carried the brick enveloped in many series of papers, beginning with the coarsest kind and ending with the finest kind, and each of the wrappers was fastened with its own particular bit of cord or ribbon, all of them tied in the hardest of hard knots. The process of disentanglement was long and laborious, but it was persistently performed, and when the brick was revealed, lo, it was just a brick—not of maple sugar, but a plain, ordinary red clay, building brick, which he had taken from some pile of similar bricks on his way up town. The disappointment was not very bitter, for I knew that something else was coming, and I realized that it was the first of April and that I had been April fooled.

The something else, I remember, was that most amusing of amusing books, George Derby's "Phoenixiana," then just published, and over it I forgot my toothache, but not my maple sugar. All this happened when I was about 13 years of age, and I have ever since associated Squibbob with the sweet sap of the maple, never with raging teeth.

It was necessary, however, to get even with my father. Not an easy matter I knew, and I consulted my Uncle John, a youth some six or eight years my senior. He advised patient waiting. The father, he said, was absolutely devoted to The Commercial Advertiser, which he read every day from frontispiece to end—market report, book notices, obituary notices, advertisements and all—and if I could hold myself in for a whole year my Uncle John thought it would be worth it. The Commer cial Advertiser of that date was put safely away for a twelvemonth, and on the 1st of April next it was produced, carefully folded and properly dampened and was placed by the side of my father's plate, the mother and son making no remark, but eagerly awaiting the result. The journal was vigorously scanned. No item of news or of business import was missed, until the reader came to the funeral announcements on the third page. Then he looked at the top of the paper through his spectacles, and then he looked over his spectacles at me, who was very busy with my bread and milk, and he made but one remark. The subject, like that of the tailor's bill, was never referred to afterward between us. But he looked at the top of the paper, and he looked at me, and he said, "My son, I see that old Dr. McPherson is dead again!"

Changing the Boundary.

El Paso, Texas, May 29—This morning a mass meeting of the citizens of El Paso was held to organize for the relief of 1,800 destitute people, whose homes were swept away by the flood. People are still moving out of the flooded districts and employing boats to transport their household goods across to the main land where they can be reached by wagons. Fully 2,500 people have been driven from their homes in this city and East El Paso and 2,000 of that number are in destitute circumstances. It is impossible almost to estimate the damage done by the flood but it is especially severe, because a very large percentage of the sufferers are poor laborers. The river has changed its course considerably and those who for years have watched the antics of the erratic Rio Grande say that when the flood recedes it will be discovered that the river has shifted its course, leaving about fifty blocks of El Paso on the Mexican side of the stream. Among the buildings certain to be swept over on the Mexican side of the river will be the international copper smelting plant. The current of the river in the lower end of the city is now on Fourth street, six squares from the original bank of the river.

Lang Sells Cheap.

When sweet spring across the hills
Sets the prisoned flow'rets free;
When the babbling of the rills
Joins with song bird's symphony
Then, it seems to us, we oughter
Turn our thoughts to soda-water.

For the balmy April breeze
Tells the sultry days are nigh
When we linger 'neath the trees,
And our throats are hot and dry,
Then Shelburn's soda fount
Fattens up his bank account.
