OVER THE COUNTRY.

There were sixty new cases of yellow fever at New Orleans according to the report received Thursday night.

At a meeting of the American Association of General Passenger Agents held in St. Louis, Col. W. A. Turk, of the Southern Railway, was elected President.

Benjamin F. Hunt, of Bridgeport Conn., aged 87, and Mrs. Julia Ann Sherman, of Watertown, N. Y., aged 90, were married at the latter place Wednesday.

A mob of 100 masked men went to the jail at Liberty, Mo., for the purpose of lynching two murderers who were confined awaiting trial, but the sheriff and his deputies drove them back.

At Ingalls' Park, Joliet, Ill., Joe Patchen, the black stallion, broke the world's pacing record to a four wheel sulky by nearly four seconds. He made the circuit in 2:04 1/2, thus reducing the record 3 1/2 seconds.

About 7 o'clock Thursday morning George Young, a farmer, living about two miles from Blue Earth City, Minn., shot and killed his entire family, consisting of his wife, his two boys, aged 2 and 4 years, and himself. All died instantly. Business and domestic troubles form the only explanation for the deed.

T. J. Thompson, train dispatcher, of the N. & W. railroad at Norfolk, has been arrested charged with felonious assault on an 18 year old girl. While she was on the street looking for a place to sleep he lured her to a house of ill fame under the pretense of taking her to a hotel.

A Cyclone That Smashed.

Some newspaper men are terrible liars. In writing of a cyclone out West one of them said it turned a well worn side out, a cellar upside down, moved a township line, blew all the staves out of a whiskey barrel and left nothing but a bung hole, changed the day of the week, blew the hair off a bald headed man, blew mortgages off farms, blew all the cracks out a fence and took all the wind out of a politician.—Exchange.

Married.

In the Baptist church at Bethel on Tuesday morning Mr. L. B. Thigpen, of Nashville, Tenn., was married to Miss Cera Cherry, daughter of the late M. C. S. Cherry, Rev. J. B. Morison, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Tarboro officiating. The newly wedded couple took the train for their future home in Nashville.—Tarboro Southerner.

The Peanut Crop.

A card received from J. W. Perry & Co., Commission merchants of Norfolk Va., contains the following which may be of interest to those farmers who have raised peanuts this year.

"We believe that peanuts have been greatly damaged by the drought. We would advise growers to separate good peanuts from saps, put them in good order, and not to be too anxious to put them on the market. Let the small stock of old nuts be consumed and then the new crop will be wanted. Market them slowly."

A Gold Mine to the Merchant.

An exchange very properly says that a local newspaper which circulates extensively through the homes of any given territory is a veritable gold mine to the merchant who will use its columns with intelligence. If only one paper is to be selected in a community, the advertiser should pay some attention to the character and standing of the one he selects, because an advertisement in a paper of influence carries much more weight to the reading public than the same advertisement in a medium of a different character.

C.F.H.'s Beat.

When the north bound passenger train came in this morning Engineer Peter Carpenter occupied the seat at the throttle. Those of us standing around began wondering where was the familiar figure of George Smith, when that gentle man stepped off the passenger coach, rigged in his best suit of store clothes, and began shaking hands with his friends. It developed that he had been summoned as a witness in a case to be tried in Bethel today, so he had to take a day off and attend court.

STATE NEWS.

Two public school teachers in Mecklenburg county, one white and the other colored, have been debarred because it was learned that they are infidels.

It is really alarming the vast amount of fertilizers being sold in this market. Camp lots are crowded almost every night and dozens of loads go out daily. If the crops should be a failure next year hundreds of farmers will be in an almost destitute condition.—Lexington Dispatch.

The Oxford Ledger tells of a man raised within 15 miles of that town, who never went to the town until one day last week, though he is 65 years old. It is further said of the man that he makes everything to eat and wear and has not had any of either to buy since the war, and he has never drunk a drop of whiskey.

Justice to Us

Mr. Frank H. Heywood writes in his paper—Southern Progress, of Philadelphia—as follows:

"There used to be and I presume there still are a good many people who fear to go South owing to the belief that it is a hot bed of lawlessness and rebellion. But on this subject there is a vast deal of misconception. Humanity is humanity the world over, and nothing can be more unjust than the assumption of the superior morality by the inhabitants of any part of it. No people in the world are more homogeneous than the people of the United States. When differences exist they are partly exterior. The self-governing principle, the vestal fire of our Anglo Saxon race, is strong enough and warm enough to maintain our system of farthest ends of the republic. Like a touch of nature making the whole Union kin, it joins the States, and should be left in each to do its own work in its own way. The methods which suit one State may not suit another, but in all we may safely trust the result to the good sense and the good feeling, shaped by the interest and guided by the intelligence of the greater number, sure that in the South, no less than in the North, the conservative forces of society left to themselves will prevail."

There is more of this editorial, the substantial part of which is a tribute to the women of the South. It is, throughout, a highly agreeable production, the keynote of which is that found in the last sentence of the extract quoted above. It is that the South is not, any more than the North, a lawless community; and that, after all, the conservative forces of society will prevail. This is another way of saying that, after all discouragements, the American people are still capable of self-government—a fact which it will never do for any of us to question, even in our own minds.—Charlotte Observer.

Now Vance.

People do not always fully realize and appreciate a thing in its true significance until it comes close home to them. They have read in the newspapers about white men being arrested by negro constables and tried before negro magistrates, and although this has been done in North Carolina—aye, and in a neighboring county—still it did not have the same effect perhaps as if the occurrence had been more in the nature of a personal matter—closer home to them.

But this can no longer be pleaded in extenuation of ignorance or indifference to the situation that confronts us. A practical object lesson has been given us right here at home. Last week a white man named Finch was arrested upon complaint made by a negro. The warrant was issued by a negro magistrate. A negro constable served the warrant and made the arrest. The trial was held by a negro Justice of the Peace, and the man was committed to jail in keeping of a negro jailor. These are the facts as reported to us.

What have white men, who by their votes helped to bring this sort of thing upon us, to say? Are they satisfied with the condition of affairs which faces us in this State today?

God pity the man whose lack of self-respect and race pride are such that he can look complacently upon the situation without a blush of shame or a shudder of horror as he contemplates the degenerate times upon which we have fallen.—Henderson Gold Leaf.

The State Guard.

The Messenger has year after year favored a liberal and appreciative spirit in behalf of the State toward the excellent State Guard. It deserves public recognition and support as an arm of safety, a strong defense against lawlessness and mobs. If the people are wise they will do more in sentimentation of this important auxiliary in behalf of public safety and order. The Messenger has often urged that it should be raised to 2,500. Its present strength is about 1,500, perhaps or a little more.

There ought to be in every one of the larger towns a Gatling or Maxim gun, kept under strict guard night and day in a secure place. A gun of this kind is worth a regiment or a brigade in a fight with a mob. A Maxim gun could destroy in a half hour 10,000 men if they would not flee, for it fires 1,300 large balls every minute. Well directed, no body of men could stand and survive before such an engine of destruction.

It ought to be the pride of the people to help maintain this fine body of citizen soldiery. It would be comparatively a small cost. And yet in times like these—so chaotic and uncertain—what a sense of safety comes out from the knowledge that there is a body of drilled soldiers ready to do service and maintain order in North Carolina.

New York city expends more perhaps on one of its companies annually than North Carolina expends on the entire State Guard. One of the armories in that city costs more than North Carolina will have to expend in a century upon its own body of soldiery.—Wilmington Messenger.

The Work of the Railroads

There are some very interesting facts shown in the annual report of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

We have in this country 182,776 miles of railroad, 35,950 locomotives and 1,297,649 cars in use. There were 511,772,737 passengers carried during the year, of whom only 181 were killed, or only one in 2,827,474.

Could figures better illustrate the extreme safety of railway travel and the success of invention in overcoming danger?

There are 886,260 employees in the service, and their wages amount to 60 per cent. of the total operating expense. This means more than half a million homes made prosperous by this one industry.

As for the effect of railway operation in enriching all the rest of the people, bringing to their doors the products of a continent at inconsiderable cost, and carrying their grain and meat and manufacturers to the sea on their way to foreign markets—all that is a beneficence that cannot be expressed in figures or words. It is a crowning glory of civilization.—New York World.

It is Said of the Kitchen.

That in most houses the kitchen is the last room by no means the least, in influence and importance.

That the young housewife who asserted that "the kitchen in her new home should be as cheerful and attractive as any apartment in it" was a very judicious woman; and she gave excellent reasons for her resolution.

That a careful mistress should spend a portion of each day there.

That light, ventilation and convenience are requisites.

That papered walls become soiled and hold the odors from cooking until they are very objectionable; while once painted, they can be kept sweet and fresh for a long time with occasional washings, or by wiping off with a damp cloth.

That buff or light yellow for walls and ceiling and oak-graining for woodwork, give a bright cheerful appearance.

That shades, and half sash white muslin curtains, that can be put up clean at least every other week make the best window furnishings.

That the shades should be hung three inches from the top of the casing, so that the window can be lowered and fresh air come in, while the smoke and heat go out.

That a clock is desirable, as the duties of a servant are such that they must be regulated by time.

That screens are a summer necessity, both for the windows and the doors for excluding the flies, and weather strips for winter comfort, keeping the windows "snug" except when opened for ventilation.—Philadelphia Record.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

When a woman weeps scalding tears she is boiling with rage.

An old bachelor resembles a pair of scissors with only one blade.

It doesn't always take the ruffles out of a man's temper to iron him.

Some girls get married just to let others know that they can.

It is hard for a man to support a sealskin wife on a muskrat salary.

When a woman flies into a passion it's time for her to have her wings clipped.

Honesty may be stamped on a man's face and yet leave a very wide margin.

Some people are so illogical that even the climate doesn't agree with them.

People often talk of breaking the ice but it would require a powerful flight of the imagination to think of breaking the iceman.—Chicago News.

In Ohio the negro has a full State ticket, composed entirely of men of their own race. It is called the "Negro Protection" ticket, and the petition to place it on the official ballot was signed by 10,845 voters. These were nearly all negroes, and if the ticket is supported by those only who signed the petition it may cause trouble in the Republican camp. There are 30,000 negro voters in the State, and the nomination of the ticket results from a failure of the Republican white bosses to give the negro proper recognition in dealing out political pie.—Wilmington Star.

SUBSTANCE OR SHADOW.

The Telltale Mirror as Testimony in an Important Case at Law.

"What is and what is not testi- mony," remarked the attorney who goes 20 miles out on the railroad ev- ery evening to sleep, "is not always determined by Chitty, as I can testi- fy after an experience I had not long ago. I was spending a week with a friend who keeps a moun- tain resort in Virginia, and during my visit the room of one of the guests was robbed of jewelry amounting to $40 or $50. Several servants were suspected, but the theft could not be fixed upon any one of them until I happened upon the laundryman who came to get the linen of the guests on that floor, mine among the number. This man was thoroughly reliable and of some means, which he had saved during many years of work about the hotel.

"I was interested in the case, and when I mentioned it to my laundry- man he looked surprised and asked if he could not have a private talk with me on the subject. He gave me such information that I felt safe in having a colored chambermaid ar- rested for the theft, the prosecuting attorney, of course, taking the lead in the action. The girl denied steal- ing the jewelry, but we stood ready to prove what we had charged and the case came promptly to trial be- fore a magistrate.

"Our side did not have much show until I called the laundryman. He was duly sworn and testified that on the day of the stealing he had stop- ped in front of the door of the room in which the theft was committed, thinking it was a room where he was to call for clothes. In getting close enough to see the number on the door, his attention in some way was attracted to the large transom over the door, which was set open at an angle reflecting the interior of the room. The transom was of one large pane of glass, with a piece of dark silk over the inside, making it to all intents and purposes a mirror.

"In this mirror he had distinctly seen the reflection of the figure of the prisoner, Mary French, whom he had known since her childhood. She was standing at a bureau or dresser looking at and handling some jewelry which had been left there. After a few moments he saw her take in her hand a breastpin of gold and move away about her work in the room; at least he could hear her moving about sweeping, though he could no longer see her, as she had got where the glass did not re- flect her. The laundryman's son, a lad of 16, testified to very nearly the same facts, as he had been standing by the side of his father.

"The pin thus described as having been taken was the pin which was lost, and the evidence seemed sure to convict, but the magistrate was very cautious. The laundryman tes- tified further that he had not men- tioned it because he had not heard of the robbery until I spoke of it and he had not cared to make any trouble at first because he supposed the girl might have been only going to put the pin in a safe place.

"This kind of testimony was, in my opinion, good enough to convict in any court, but his honor, the squire, looked wise and refused to admit it on the ground that the wit- nesses had not seen the prisoner take the pin nor had he seen the prisoner at all. It was her reflection, and as he had not seen her and had so testified then, of course, not having seen her, his testimony as to what she had done during the time of her reflection was not competent, and he would throw it out, which he did, and the state lost the case of course. Since that time I have been mak- ing a study of evidence and calculat- ing the value of the relation of a shadow to its substance in a court of law presided over by a Virginia jus- tice of the peace."—Washington Star.

Big Sales.

Tobacco sales were immense today and it looked like old times again around the warehouses. There was some good tobacco here, too, and many piles got well up in the fories before being knocked off. The buyers are anxious for fine tobacco and they bid lively on it at every opportunity. Good tobacco always brings high prices.

Devous Definitions

P. S.—The business end of a woman's letter.
