BLOCK DAYS.

Warehouses Overrun Two Days in Succession

There was tobacco here Thursday and today to talk about. Block sales two days in succession. There was so much on Thursday that darkness overtook the buyers before they were through with the last house and it had to be finished up first thing this morning. Today there was more tobacco here again than could get on all the four warehouse floors. If Greenville was not getting just as good prices for tobacco as can be had on any market you would not see our warehouses having such tremendous breaks. The fact is, Greenville has the best market in Eastern North Carolina.

OVERTHE COUNTRY.

Within a period of eight years, beginning with 1890, the people of Kansas have paid off $160,000,000 of mortgage indebtedness.

The presence of a mouse in Castle Square Theatre, Boston, Mass., Monday night, almost caused a panic among dozens of screaming women.

The bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church are holding their semi annual session in Baltimore.

Hon. W. J. Bryan is making speeches in Ohio in behalf of Democracy.

It turns out that the late George M. Pullman was not worth near so much as reported. When his will was filed for probate in Chicago the aggregate showed only $7,600,000.

At St. Louis, on Wednesday, the offices of the Wabash Railroad were destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $900,000. The fire was caused by a cigarette thoughtlessly dropped by one of the clerks.

Colorado is having heavy snow storms.

Twenty of the crew of the cruiser Baltimore have deserted since she arrived at San Francisco, Cal.

Circus Man Killed.

Engineer George Smith, of the passenger train, told us this morning that one of the circus laborers was killed as the show was leaving Kinston Thursday night. Over on the A. & N. C. railroad the train had to be made up in two sections. The man was killed by the first section and lying beside the track, and the second section when it passed by would not even pick the body up.

STATE NEWS.

Raleigh is soon to have a new daily paper.

The Raleigh News and Observer says there is a rumor on the streets there that two of the Supreme Court justices will favor sustaining Judge Robinson, which would oust S. Otho Wilson from his office; that two regard the law under which the Governor acted unconstitutional; and that one is as yet undecided.

Mr. J. L. Jamison, of Long Creek, has apple trees in full bloom. He says he never saw anything like it before. He has had cherry trees in bloom at this time of the year, but never apple trees.—Charlotte Observer.

North Carolina is not a fast State, but a Surry county man is entitled to the cake for rapidity. He got a divorce from his wife at 9 a. m., walked 12 miles to his home, got his best clothes, walked 10 miles to get a marriage license, secured it and then made a final tramp of 8 miles to the home of a widow and at 9 p. m. married her. A man like that is bound to get a wife.—Releigh Cor. Charlotte Observer.

The Landmark says that a Statesville cotton buyer, who has been buying cotton on that market for years, says a large number of the farmers of that section are holding their cotton for higher prices, as little has been sold there. The fact that so many of the farmers can hold their cotton argues, this buyer thinks, that they are in better condition than formerly.

Some More Eastern Prices

Here is another of those fine sales made by the Eastern Warehouse. R. J. Little had 716 pounds in seven lots that brought $8, $15, $16, $49, $40 $30 $34, an average of $21.17½. Such prices as these count and they are what bring so many of the farmers to the Eastern Warehouse. The farmers know that Old Man Gus and Otho Joyner are going to make their tobacco bring the best prices that can be had.

Elephant's Hide.

Mr. F. M. Hodges has a souvenir of the circus that is decidedly out of the ordinary. It is a small piece of the hide off the bad elephant. He was over at the train while the keeper was doctoring the burnt place on the elephant's side and the keeper gave him a piece of the hide that peeled off.

All members of the Baptist choir are requested to meet at the church at 7:30 tonight for practice.

If Washington were alive he would be attracted by the National Flag floating over Frank Wilson's store.

AND MIGHT BUY HIS Clothes

there, too. People who are alive usually do. But he'd have to buy up to date garments. We don't keep the style he wore. And what a grand choice he'd have.!!

Sack suits, single and double breasted cutaways, Prince Alberts each with a style peculiar to us.

Cheviots, Cassimeres, Thibets and Worsted, plaids and checks and stripes in bewildering variety, blacks, blues, browns, olives and all sorts of beautiful combinations of colors.

Suits for dress, for business, for sport, suits in all prices.

Yes, Washington would certainly buy his Clothing from FRIDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1897.

It is time for the editors of the two Observers—Charlotte and Fayetteville—to call a halt and quit their controversy. They have traded compliments and called each other liars, and have not done anybody or their party any good by the wrangle. We want a coming together and not division in the ranks if Democracy is to win in the next campaign.

Perjury.

It is noticed that in his charges to the grand juries Judge Greene, of the Superior Court, is paying particular attention to the crime of perjury, which he says is increasing. At Caldwell court last week he committed one offender to jail. It is time our judges were addressing their special attention to this subject. Not only judges and lawyers and court officials, but ordinary citizens, have often seen a witness take the oath and swear falsely, as everybody in the sound of his voice knew, or might have known. But perhaps the jurors did not know it, and thus this false testimony may have influenced their verdict. Such testimony has often influenced verdicts. The courts cannot, of course, always protect themselves against perjurers, but they can punish them and thus deter others. To make even an occasional example would have a salutary effect, and Judge Greene's course in charging specially against this crime, and his action in particular in putting an offender in jail for it deserve commendation. Justice fails too often, even when the truth is brought out in the court house. If the increasing evil of bearing false witness is to go unpunished, the whole system of laws is a mockery, for it is upon the hypothesis that the truth is gotten in the court house that the whole fabric rests.—Charlotte Observer.

One hundred thousand tons of Alabama coal have been sold for delivery at Vera Cruz, Mexico, for the use of Mexican railways which have heretofore obtained their supplies from England. It is not likely that this newly acquired trade will ever again be recovered by English traders. It seems impossible that they should compete successfully against the advantages in cost of mining, cost of transportation and greater contiguity possessed by operators in the Southern coal fields.

What if you have lost your ring? Be thankful that you have saved your finger.

THERE ARE TONS OF GOLD.

But to Get It Costs More Than Its Value.

Yes, there are tons of gold in the Klondike gold fields, as is told in the alluring headlines over the news of the Alaska adventures. The idea that there are tons of gold in the Klondike fields inflames the hopes of the unemployed and breadless and tempts them to make any sacrifice to woo the fickle goddess of fortune.

Yes, there are tons of gold in Klondike region. But it should not be forgotten that there are tons of gold annually produced in California, Colorado, Montana, Idaho, and in other States and Territories of the Union, and the fact is not disputed that from the time of the discovery of the gold fields on the Pacific slope until today, every ton of gold that has been produced has cost more than its value: and not only has it cost more than its value, but there are thousands and thousands of unknown and nameless graves of those who gave their lives to win the tons of gold they dreamed of.

It seems to be a wise law of nature that the production of gold in any country since the Christian civilization has cost more than its value. Of course there are a few who win fortune; there are others who are fairly compensated; but the untold millions of capital invested in mining enterprises which are entirely fruitless, added to the actual cost of the production of gold where reasonable profit or fortune has been attained, make the cost of the producing the precious metal greatly outweigh the profit.

With this history even in the most favored civilization, what must be the history of the many thousands who crowd the Klondike region? They are braving the most inhospitable climate of the Western world, where frost penetrates the earth to bed-rock at all seasons of the year, and where the necessaries of life cannot be obtained except by 2,000 miles of uncertain water route, or one-third the distance by a yet more uncertain land route.

Taking all the gold fields which have tempted the people of any section of the world during the last century, there is no one that promises so little and threatens so much as the Klondike region. Not one in a thousand can win fortune; some have managed to live for a period there and return to their homes, but a large majority of the people who go to the Klondike gold fields this season will never return unless their bodies shall be brought back for sepulchre.

Yes, there are tons of gold in Alaska, and here and there one in a thousand or so may win fortune; but the great mass of those who are tempted by the stories of tons of gold to be found in the Klondike fields will be fortunate if they ever get back to their homes, even with utterly shattered health. Let none be tempted by the display headlines in the newspapers telling of tons of gold in Alaska. There is gold here, as it is in many other States of the Union, but all the gold fields of the world, the most uninviting for the adventurer is the Klondike region.—Philadelphia Record.

The case of aged Thomas L. Henry, of Pine Station, Pa., is puzzling the doctors. Last Saturday Mr. Henry apparently died, and notice to that effect was sent to the friends. Two hours later, however, life returned, and when his relatives arrived the supposed corpse smiled and asked them the time of day.

Novel Reading not Improving.

"It is very easy for one who reads a great many amusing books to take the whole matter too seriously," writes "Droch" in the November Ladies' Journal. "Reading novels is neither 'improving your mind' nor 'being literary.' No doubt from the best fiction one may pick up a great deal of valuable observation of life which tends to general culture, and, moreover, there is among them some of the stuff that is called literature. But knowledge comes high, and the price of it can seldom be paid in coin of the imagination. The person 'who takes fiction seriously is apt to take life frivolously.' If we can only get out of a book something to put us in a better attitude toward the various kinds of people we meet we cannot complain of its influence. A novel, is not, and cannot be expected to be, a 'great moral agent'; morality is made of sterner stuff. But it does have an insidious influence on one's ideals of manners and conduct. The whole tone of the man who writes it is impressed on his work."

The Same Result.

Ask any old man who has realized his pet object in life if he is satisfied, and he will probably answer "no." The man whose dream was to accumulate wealth is worried to death when he gets it. He fears he will lose it or that his family will squander it.

The ambitious politician who finally reaches the high office which he has sought all his life is made wretched by his foes and false friends. Every man who wants to be famous, powerful, rich or successful in any way will admit in his old age that the game was not worth the candle.

What is fame—what is wealth? Since Adam there have been millions of rich men and great men, but only a few of their names handed down. Their dust now mingles with the common clay or other mortals, and they are forgotten. The poor toiler who has serenely accepted his lot, loving his God and his fellow man, is far happier when his race is run than the so-called great ones of earth.

Rather Singular.

Tuesday 'Squire Maxwell had issued a warrant for Milton Young, the negro killed at the oil mill, and had put it into the hands of an officer to serve. The officer arrived at the mill and was just going in to arrest the negro when the latter was killed.—Charlotte Observer.
