ENTENTE CORDIALE.

Allus love your neighbor;
But likewise don't neglect
To have your neighbor view you
With somethin' of respect.
An' frequently it happens
Pure kindness doesn't do Fur keepin' of your neighbor Affection toward you.
So, Spain you musn't notice
If conversation runs
To uniforms an' tactics
An' battle ships an' guns.
We's goin' to love our neighbor
With resolution grim,
An' it's easier when we're certain
That we can't be whipped by him.
—Washington Star.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

A wagging tongue often spoils a lot of nice, sweet silence.
Peanut vendors might be accused of working a shell game.
The wise man is always known by the company he keeps out of.
It isn't always the best actress that gets the handsomest bouquet.
It is usually the most promising young man that gets into debt.
The poor man who marries nowadays usually finds himself wedded to art.
The trust may be able to limit the output of whisky, but it can't limit the input.
All men are born free and equal, but some of them grow up and spoil it by marrying.
Vices are among the oldest things on record, and yet history doesn't chronicle the loss of a single one.
Marrying without a side issue of bread and butter is like sipping the froth from a glass of soda water.
The original Americans accomplished more with an Indian file than their pale faced brothers can with a kit of tools.—Chicago News.

Forty Five Degrees Below Zero.

Chester Depot, Vt., February 3.—With the town still buried under snow, the temperature fell this morning to 40 degrees below zero, the coldest ever known here. At Londonderry the thermometer registered 45 below.
Wilmot Flat, N. H., February 3.—The thermometer registered 42 degrees below zero this morning.
Parkersburg, W. Va., February 3.—A terrific snow storm prevailed today at Leachtown, Brock Gaines, the teacher, Samuel Day, Carl Anderson and two children, named Cattill, were lost for two hours in the storm. They were nearly frozen when found. The house of William Henthorn was blown down. Several barns were destroyed and many fences demolished. The thermometer is 6 degrees below zero to-night. Both the Ohio and Kanawaba rivers are frozen over here.
Boston, Mass., February 3.—A cold wave of a severity almost equal to that of last week prevails in Maine and New Hampshire. At Nashua, N. H., the temperature was 28 degrees below zero this morning, and the range was from that figure to 40 below at Rumford Falls, Me.

A GREAT SUCCESS.

Was the "Sub Rosa" Masquerade.

Thursday night Germania hall presented a fantastic picture. It was the occasion of the masquerade given by the Sub Rosa Society, and its success proved that the young ladies know how to get up an manage such an affair.

For some days previous the occasion had been much talked and our people were expecting something interesting. None present were disappointed in this particular. A large number of spectators gathered in the hall, while the masquers met in the office of Mr. H. A. White just opposite.

About a quarter past nine o'clock the hall door was thrown open and the masquers entered, keeping step to a lively march rendered by the Italian band. J. I. Moore acted as leader and the grand march was interesting and well executed. The masquers and costumes were the best ever seen here and the personality of the wearers could be detected only in rare instances.

At 10 o'clock manager Moore drew them up in a circle and gave the order to unmask, and as merry, smiling faces began to appear from behind the masques there was much laughter among the spectators over how they had missed guessing who they were.

G. J. Woodward as the Yellow Kid was just out of sight. The yellow journal's original article never cut more capers than did George.

Misses Bouslind Rountree and Lil Cherry represented Liz and Jea. They were awful clumsy, and such faces as they did carry around with them!

J. B. Lightfoot was a regular North-Western bandit, with the fierce look and all. He'd almost make cold chills run up your back and put you to feeling for your pocket book.

Misses Sophia Jarvis and Blanche Flanagan were two sailor girls that were as chipper as could. Jack wouldn't mind having such girls for his lassies.

Virgil Lee was a stunning New York sport, one of the four hundred.

Mrs. R. J. Cobb was a pink domino, a very attractive one, too.

Miss Ada Wooten was a waitress who kept quite busy here and there.

Walter Lender as the double faced clown was immense, in fact he took up more space, both ways, than any body in the room. His notby was trying to feed folks with a spoon.

Miss Lina Sheppard was very charming indeed as Queen of Hearts, a character natural to her.

O. P. Smith was a devil sure enough. His costume was flaming red, horns, pitchfork and all, the make-up and character fitting to a nicety.

Miss Helen Perkins charmingly represented Kate Greenway, while Miss Annie Perkins was Little Miss Muffit right oyer and over.

Arthur Gary was a broken down sport, but he kept in the ring just the same.

Miss Bettie Tyson was Little Red Riding Hood, and if the original was half as attractive as she no wonder the wolf tried to eat her.

Miss Sallie Lipscomb represented a Novice, but it wouldn't do to take her for one unless you want to get left.

Mrs. Thos. Wilkinson was a Yellow Rose of Texas, but there wasn't any Texas ways about her.

Miss Margaret Laugby was a Sister of Charity ready to do any act of kindness that comes to hand.

W. J. Corbett was Willie Few Clothes, and poor boy, he looked like he had lost his own clothes, sure enough, and borrowed some from his little bud.

Miss Rosa Hooker was very charming indeed as the Admiral's daughter.

Bob Moye was a Chesterfield gent all the way through.

J. L. Fleming was a base ball player and took his bat along, which he used on the heads of the sports. He struck all the figures on she diamond, and how some of the girls did envy his arms.

Joe Jarvis was the girl who come too late, but he got there in time to unmask.

Ernest Forbes was an up-to-date Bloomer girl, with the exception of having no wheel along.

Bo Cherry as a Magician was there in great shape, but the nearest shape his legs had was that of two broomsticks. How he got in and out of those breeches is a mystery.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

Washington, Feb. 4, 98.

Although it was known a week ago that the advocates of the single gold standard were defeated, it was not supposed that they were prepared to make such an absolute acknowledgement of defeat to the country as to abandon all attempts to get gold standard legislation through the House, which is entirely dominated by Czar Reed, who is one of the boldest of the gold advocates. Such is the fact, however, Mr. Reed has decided that no financial legislation shall be put through the House at this session, and that all of his power shall be used to keep appropriations down and to bring about an early adjournment. That any bill supported by Mr. Reed could have been jammed through the House is certain, and only last week Mr. McKinley intimated in his New York speech that a financial bill would be passed by the House. From the beginning of the session that has been generally understood to be the Republican programme. Now it has been abandoned. Why? Because there are many Congressional districts in which the Republicans are afraid to make a campaign in favor of the gold standard, and they do not care to commit the party any further in that direction than the defeat of the Teller resolution by Czar Reed's slaves did. However, that is clear enough for those who do not wish to be deceived. As Representative Dockery, of Missouri, remarked: "This clears away all the fog in the atmosphere and makes the issue for 1898 and 1900 a purely financial one. Republicans will be unable henceforth to separate themselves from the cause of the single gold standard. They are absolutely committed to it, and from it next fall there can be no escape."

There have been a number of important conferences of representatives of the three parties that supports Bryan and silver in the last campaign held in Washington during the last few days, but it is not deemed advisable to make public what object is in view, further than to say that it looks to a complete co-operation of all the silver forces in this year's Congressional campaign. To go into detail might put the other side in possession of more than it would be advisable for them to know.

Representative Allen of Miss., ("Private John Allen, of Tupelo") has applied the well-known story of the negro who baked a possum, went to sleep beside it, and woke up to find the possum gone with the bones lying before him and possum grease on his finger and lips, to Republican talk of prosperity. The story makes the astonished darkey say: "Can it be possible dat I eat dat 'possum while I wuz asleep? It do look like I must have eat him, but 'fo' God, dat 'possum has less effect on my constitution dan any possum I ever eat befo." Mr. Allen says to the Republicans: "You tell us about prosperity and show figures that look like prosperity, but 'fo' God, this prosperity has less effect on my constitution than and prosperity I ever had in my life."

Senator Mason is one of the republicans—there are many more—who is not pleased with the do-nothing attitude of the administration toward Cuba. He says that it is in the power of Mr. McKinley to bring about immediate peace on the island, and that if something is not done soon he intends to offer a resolution calling upon the president to demand peace. But the offering of such a resolution, and its adoption by the Senate, would not change the present status a particle. So long as the republicans in the House stifle their opinions and vote as Czar Reed dictates it is useless for the Senate to do anything about Cuba.

In the course of one of the strongest speeches, yet made against the annexation of Hawaii, Senator White of California, the new chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, took occasion to say, that he did not believe a word of the stories about the sugar trust being opposed to annexation, and to call attention to the fact that some Senators who have generally been credited with sustaining friendly relations with the sugar trust were strongly in favor of annexation. The significant occurrence connected with the resumption of the consideration of the annexation treaty by the Senate was the voting down of the motion of Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, to postpone its further consideration until March 1.

The motion was made by Mr. Thurston because he did not wish the treaty considered while Mr. Dole the President of Hawaii remained in Washington. No record vote was taken, the motion being defeated by a rising vote. Although this incident indicates that Mr. Thurston will vote against the treaty, sixty votes are claimed for it by Senator Davis. The vote is some weeks off, however, if present plans are carried out.

The latest ukase of the Czar, of the House is that there shall be no River and Harbor appropriation bill at this session of Congress. This has caused a lot of profanity, as it had been understood by members of the River and Harbor committee and others that a bill carrying not to exceed $12,000,000 would be allowed to pass, and the committee had practically completed such a bill.

The Negro's Real Friend.

The negro has no real friendship at the North. We are willing to believe, for we see something of it here, that the negro does not show to advantage after crossing the Potomac and the Ohio. It seems to us that the further he wanders from the South the more bumptious and offensive he becomes. But this is largely due to the fact that he realizes the hostile environments in which he is placed and in his foolish way resents it. The fact remains, however, that the negro's best and most genuine friends are in the South and it is among the former slave-holding classes that he finds the truest esteem and the most helpful friendship. —Washington Post.

Take care of the poor boys and girls of North Carolina. Give them sympathy and help, open our churches, our school-houses, our colleges and university to them whether they are able to pay or not, and both the church and the State will be safe in the years to come. The church or the school that turns them away will find too late that a serious mistake has been made.—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

A Fool's Errand.

The Klondike season is about to open and it is safe to predict that if 200,000 sons are preparing to join the spring rush to the land of gold. If this is true it shows that the fool population of this country is lamenablely large. It is started on good authority that all the desirable gold-bearing claims in the Klondike have been located and the only chance for the new-comer now is either to pay a big price for a claim or go to work on wages. There will certainly be an over-supply of labor and it is safe to predict that if 20,000 persons leave this country for the Klondike this year nine out of ten of them will suffer unless they are amply supplied with money.—Atlanta Journal.

A Bill to Check Contests.

Attention has been called lately to the growing tendency to contest seats in Congress and an effort is being made to suppress it, in a measure, by cutting off the premium which Congress has heretofore placed on contests. Under the present law, each party to a contested seat is given $2,000, so every contest costs the government $4,000. A bill has been introduced in Congress which provides that in the future no man contesting for a seat in Congress shall be paid anything out of the Treasury for making the contest. There were 20 seats in contest in the present Congress and their cost, exclusive of the expenses that are incurred by the committee on elections in hearing the evidence, will be $80,000. "The fact that each party to the contest receives his $2,000," says the Chicago News, "whether he wins or not, or without regard to what the cost may have been to him in carrying on the contest, makes the business of contesting seats an easy and often a lucrative one. Most of these cases come from the South; of the twenty brought in the present Congress four only are from the Northern States. There is evidently a disposition among defeated candidates in some sections of the country to bring these contesting suits for the money there is in them, without much regard to the real merits in the controversy."

When we call to mind some previous contests that have been made from this section, we are inclined to believe that there is a good deal of truth in the conclusion arrived at by the Chicago paper. The $2,000 is certainly a temptation which many applicants for congressional honors would find it hard to resist. At best it is not a sound law, and the bill to kill it should be passed in the interests of morality as well as economy.—Charlotte Observer.

WHY?

- Why does lightning strike churches oftener than saloons?
Why should the doctors who take life easy escape arrest?
Why is it that a man never coaxes his wife to sing for him?
Why is a woman always loose his nerve lust when he needs it most?
Why is a woman's husband less dear to her than her husband's wife?
Why is it that the farther away from a dollar you get bigger it looks?
Why does a man's wife imagine he has been drinking every time he calls her an angel?

FREE TO MILLIONS

A Valuable Little Book Sent Free for the Asking

Medical books are not always interesting reading, especially to people enjoying good health, but as a matter of fact scarcely one person in ten is perfectly healthy, and even with such, sooner or later sickness must come.

It is also a well established truth that nine-tenths of all diseases originate with a breaking down of the digestion, a weak stomach weakens and impoverishes the system, making it easy for disease to gain a foothold.

Nobody need fear consumption, kidney disease, liver trouble or a weak heart and nervous system as long as the digestion is good and the stomach able to assimilate plenty of wholesome food.

Stomach weakness shows itself in a score of ways and this little book describes the symptoms and causes and points the way to a cure so simple that anyone can understand and apply.

Thousands have some form of stomach trouble and do not know it. They ascribe the headaches, the languor, nervousness, insomnia, palpitation, constipation and similar symptoms to some other cause than the true one. Get your digestion on the right track and the heart trouble, lung trouble, liver disease or nervous debility will rapidly disappear.

This little book treats entirely on the cause and removal of indigestion and its accompanying annoyances.

It describes the symptoms of Acid Dyspepsia, Nervous Dyspepsia, Slow Dyspepsia, Amylaceous Dyspepsia, Catarrh of Stomach and all affections of the digestive organs in plain language easily understood and the cause removed.

It gives valuable suggestions as to diet, and contains a table giving length of time required to digest various articles of food something every person with weak digestion should know.

No price is asked but simply send your name and address plainly written on postal card to the F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., requesting a little book on Stomach Diseases and it will be sent promptly by return mail.

DRAMA AND LITERATURE.

Their Distinctions and the Relation of the One to the Other.

The painters have long protested against any judgment of their work in accordance with the principles of another art, and at last they have succeeded in convincing the more open minded of us that what is of prime importance in a picture is the way in which it is painted and that its merely literary merit is quite secondary. They are not unreasonable when they insist that the chief duty of a picture is to represent the visible world, not to point a moral or adorn a tale, and that in the appreciation of a picture we must weigh first of all its pictorial beauty.
Nor are the sculptors asking too much when in a statue they want us to consider chiefly its plastic beauty.

Now, the orator and the dramatist ask for themselves what has been granted the painter and the sculptor —they request that an oration or a drama shall be judged not as literature only, but also in accordance with the principles of its own art, and here the literary critic is even less willing to yield. He may acknowledge his own ignorance of perspective and of pigments, of composition and of modeling; he may confess that here the painter and the sculptor have him at a disadvantage, but he is not ready to admit that he is not to apply his own standards to the works of the orator and of the dramatist.

On the contrary, he maintains that the speech and the play, if they belong to literature at all, are, by that very fact, absolutely within the province of the literary critic. He cannot see why that which the orator and the dramatist may write is not to be read and criticised exactly as that which is written by the novelist and the essayist and the poet.
Indeed it is almost a misrepresentation of the literary critic's attitude to suggest that he has need to maintain this position, for it is rarely even hinted to him that he is not fully justified in employing the same tests in every department of literature.

Yet nothing ought to be clearer than the distinction between the written word and the spoken, between the literature which is addressed to the eye alone and that which is intended primarily for the ear and only secondarily for the eye. It is the difference between words written once for all and words first spoken and then written, or at least written so that they may be spoken. When this distinction is seized, it follows that oral discourse is not necessarily to be measured on the same scale as written discourse.
It follows also that the speech and the play may be very good indeed, each in its kind, although they may fail to attain the standard of strictly literary merit which we should demand in an essay, a story or a poem.—Professor Brander Matthews in Forum.

Tawdry.

Is your neighbor's new frock tawdry, madam? Do you look with the eye of scorn upon its tinsel passementerie and its cotton backed velvet? But do you know why you condemn it with the epithet "tawdry?"

Well, back in the good old days when country fairs and patron saints were plenty there was one St. Audrey, especially beloved of girls with a taste for trinkets. She was a good English saint, her name being a corruption of St. Ethelrida. She was reputed to have been rather fond of finery herself. Indeed the qualities which caused her canonization were so interwoven with other pleasingly frivolous ones that she died from a swelling in the throat due to the wearing of an overtight necklace.

So St. Audrey was the patron saint of those who had a youthful love of finery, and St. Audrey's day was the day of the country fair dearest to those who liked to buy gewgaws.
It followed naturally that the merchants finally sold baubles that glittered more than the pure gold in them warranted, and by and by whenever a trinket tarnished or a silk cracked the gossips said, "That was bought at St. Audrey's fair." From St. Audrey to tawdry was not such a long step.—New York Journal.

HE LEVIED ON THE DINNER.

How a Tennessee Officer of the Law Collected a Debt.

"The most interesting levy I ever heard of," said Squire Bell to a reporter, "was one that I made some time in 1868 or 1869, when I was a marshal of the Memphis municipal court. I don't remember the plaintiff in the case, but old Colonel Cockerill, who used to run a hotel where the Peabody is now, was the defendant. The case was tried and judgment given for the plaintiff.
An execution was issued, and in those days the court had quarterly terms and all papers had to be served during the quarter or a report made why they were not served.
Well, I would go out and see the colonel and begin to urge him to do something toward paying the judgment, but he would always invite me into his room to take a mint julep. Then he would become so plausible and make so many promises that I kept putting off the levy till the quarterly term was nearly up. About this time the attorney for the plaintiff came to me and said he was tired of fooling along like that and wanted to know how many mint juleps I had been drinking with the colonel. This scared me some, so I determined I would do something at once.

"I went to see the colonel again, and after refusing the usual invitation to take the mint julep I told him that he would have to do something. He said that if I would just wait till Tuesday, which was the last day of the term, he would settle up.

"Suppose you make it Monday, colonel," I said, for I knew that if I failed to make the levy on Tuesday my execution was dead, and I wanted a day of grace. Well, the colonel agreed to settle up on Monday.

"When Monday came, the colonel was awfully sick, and his three boys, who were in the office, would let nobody see him. There were in those days, just as there are now, a lot of men lying round and waiting to get on the jury. I had counted the doors of the hotel dining room, and I picked out a man for each door and gave them $1.50 apiece and took them down to the hotel. When the gong sounded for dinner, I had a man stand at each door and not let any one go in. There was a great deal of travel in those days, and the hotel was crowded. Pretty soon the people began to fill up the halls and wonder what was the matter. The doors of the dining room were glass, and the people could see the tables set and the waiters standing round, but they couldn't get in.

"This didn't last very long before the old colonel sent for me. 'I call this a low trick, Mr. Bell,' he said.

"No low trick at all, colonel," said I. 'I have done a thing never done before in the world. I have levied on a hot dinner, and I am going to hold it till that money's paid.'

"The colonel waxed wroth and swore he would beat the attorney in the case just as soon as he got well.
But, finding that his getting hot did not keep the dinner from getting cold, he finally sent for the bookkeeper, who brought up about $500, which lacked just $150 of satisfying the judgment. The colonel wanted to get off with this, but I demanded security. He was lying in bed, and reached under his pillow and handed me a watch and chain worth twice as much as was still due."—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Against His Conscience.

The proprietor of a large London restaurant has a small hydraulic lift fitted up in a corner of his "second class room," which is used for conveying the various dishes from the kitchen.

One day an unmistakable native of the land north of the Tweed entered the shop, and, having ordered some refreshment, sat down to wait.
The waiter in attendance called down to the cook through the speaking tube, and in a short time Sandy was astounded to see the very things he had ordered rise up, apparently from the bowels of the earth.

With a horrified yell he bounded up, made for the door and exclam-ed:

"Na, na! Ye'll no get Sandy Mc-Nally ta hae what th' auld deil's had the cookin' o'!"—Nuggets.

Different Now.

"It's funny how marriage will change a man," said Flogg the other day. "There's Moustier, for example. Before he was married a glance of May Taintor would intoxicate him, so he used to say. Now when he comes home late at night and meets Mrs. Moustier, nee Taintor, the sight of her actually sobers him."—Boston Transcript.
