WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

Washington, Feb. 25, 98.

Senator Morgan's plain talk, in a speech against Senator Allen's attempt to make the recognition of Cuban belligerency a rider to an appropriation bill, was refreshing in these days of tricky statesmanship. He said that he had voted for the belligerency resolution that the Senate adopted last May—he was its author—and that he was not only ready to vote for the same thing again as an independent measure, but was ready to vote for a declaration of war against Spain, which he regarded as more proper than attempting to sneak a belligerency declaration through by attaching it to an appropriation bill. He added that he had always believed that Spain and the United States would fight over Cuba and that he still believed it; that he had always believed that as soon as Spain realized that it had lost Cuba, it would seek a war with us, in order to save Spanish pride by making it appear to their people at home that it was the U. S. that secured Cuban freedom.

Things are looking decidedly better in Washington, to those who believe that it is better to fight than to be trampled upon and spit upon, than they were last week. Members of the administration are still talking peace, but they have quit trying to cram the "accident" theory of the loss of the Maine down men's throats, and what is better than all, they are preparing to fight. They still claim to have no more information than they have given to the public, and to be waiting for the report of the Naval Court of inquiry, now sitting in Havana harbor, in order to ascertain whether the Maine was accidentally blown up or was blown up by a Spanish torpedo. Their claims are not worrying anybody, so long as they are going ahead energetically making preparations for that war with Spain which a majority of Congress now regard as inevitable. In fact, Mr. McKinley is said to have become convinced by reports from Gen. Fitz Lee, and other U. S. Consuls in Cuba, that regardless of the Maine catastrophe the time has about come when he must either intervene in behalf of Cuba or eat the threat of doing so, after giving Spain an opportunity to try its autonomy fake, made in his annual message to Congress. These consular reports, which show beyond the shadow of a doubt that autonomy in Cuba is dead beyond hope of resurrection, have been called for by both House and Senate. Mr. McKinley has held them back, he says because of the excitement caused by the wreck of the Maine; but it is probable that his knowledge that he must act after they are laid before Congress also had something to do with the delay. Unless all signs fail he is getting ready to act, and not a minute too soon, either.

The administration is much alarmed about the success of Hawaiian annexation, and fresh efforts are being made to get enough votes to ratify the treaty in the Senate, in order to keep the matter from getting before the House at all. This fresh alarm was started by Representative H. U. Johnson, of Ind., who surprised everybody by making a corking good speech against the the policy of Hawaii. While the Sunday Civil bill was under consideration. The applause given Mr. Johnson from his own side of the House indicates that more Republicans will vote against a resolution for annexation than had been put down in the opposition column, and the administration fears that annexation will be defeated in the House, if it gets before that body. There are about 20 Democrats in the House who would vote for annexation.

Representative Perkins, of Iowa, is the latest Republican who tried to take a fall out of Jerry Simpson and failed, as the following dialogue, which occurred in connection with a few remarks of Jerry concerning the tendency of present conditions to make millionaires and paupers, will show; Perkins—"Would you object to being a millionaire?" Simpson—"I should not, I don't believe in playing the hypocrite. But that I am not a millionaire is evidence of my disinclination to take advantage of my fellow-men." Perkins—"If you were a millionaire, I presume you would admit that there was some respectability among them?" Simpson—"Yes, I have no doubt I should add at least an air of respectability to them." The shouts of laughter convinced Mr. Perkins that he had enough.

Czar Reed has not yet given his consent for the House to pass the bill authorizing the enlistment of two additional regiments of artillery in the army, which the Senate has passed, and without which it will be impossible to properly man a number of heavy batteries which have been established in connection with our system of sea coast defences, but public opinion in favor of this legislation is making itself so distinctly felt in Washington that he will probably see the wisdom of doing so.

A Missouri Darling

The St. Louis papers are bragging about a lump of concentra, and feminine sweetness in that town, aged eight years, who weighs 280 pounds and measures 5 feet 2 inches in height, 5 feet 1 inch around the waist and 17 inches around the arm. She is pretty active and attractive and skips about as nimbly as any of the girls with whom she plays. She was a 5-pounder at birth, a 25-pounder at twenty months old and now weighs 40 pounds more than her father and mother together.—Exchange.

Origin of the Word "Trust"

The word "trust" as applied to recent industrial combination is a misnomer, and grows out of the fact that in the early efforts at combination the different interests were conveyed to a "trustee." This trustee issued certificates for the shares which each member of such a combination owned that combination, and these certificates were commonly called "trust certificates," hence the "trust" now in common use.—Alfred Dodge.

The Negro at the North.

A North Carolina negress was recently married to a young white man, the son of William Wells, a wealthy citizen of Vineland, N. J. The marriage has created a big sensation among the people who have so long professed to love the negro. The girl was a school mate of the young man, and it was at school the attachment was formed that ended in marriage.

It seems that social equality at the North is limited. They may go to school together, and sometimes stop at the same hotel and eat at the same table, but they must not marry, and along this line the Wilmington Messenger makes some pertinent remarks, as follows:

"In the north as the Messenger has often shown the negro fares worse really than in the south. Many instances have been given from time to time. The fact that the negroes have not the same opportunities for employment 'up there' as in the south is proof enough of our contention. The negro who writes himself T. Thomas Fortune, an editor in New York, has fallen into bad luck in spite of his name. He has got into trouble more than once because of his conduct. He lately however, went to a Brooklyn theatre and asked for two tickets in the centre of the house. This caused the agent to slam down two tickets with the statement—I have only standing room for you.' Fortune wished to argue the point when he was arrested and hustled out by a policeman. The unsold seats were to be counted by the hundreds. The cause of the treatment was that the buyer was a negro. Fortune is hot and now says that Sambo fares better in the south than in the north. And so the fight waxeth."

When bilious or costive, eat a Cascaret, candy cathartic, cure guaranteed. 10c, 25c.

Easter Hats are Rich, Gorgeous Creations.

To describe the coming Easter hats and bonnet must sorely try the pen of even so capable a writer on fashions as Isabel A. Mallon. In the March Ladies Home Journal she pictures the feminine headdress that will have its first airing on fashion's great show day—Easter. The united effort of pen and pencil bring the conviction that the vogue gives the wildest range as to shape of headdress, and that the plumage of almost every known bird will be brought into requisition, beside artistic duplicates of every flower of the hothouse, garden and field will be called upon to supply the ornamentation. The velvets and ribbons may be as the purse can buy, and the woman can select almost anything in the way of colors or combinations and yet be entirely within the bounds of vogue.

Just try a 10c. box of cascarets, the finest liver and bowel regulator ever made.

George William Curtis once said, "Progress begins with the minority. It is completed by persuading the majority, by showing the reason and the advantage of the step forward, and that is accomplished by appealing to the intelligence of the majority."

A GEORGIAN SNUFFBOX.

Though fallen from your high degree, Once tapped by princely fingers, You breathe of more than "burnt rappee."

When Walpole trimmed the ship of state To meet each Tory billow, When "poet Pug" lampooned the great, When "Pultney" played Spadillo, When "worthless Moll" amused the court With philosophic chatter, When Bolingbroke pledged deep in port "The king across the water."

When flashed the lightnings of the dean To blind the eyes of Stella, When scoffing Congreve vowed with spleen The wares of Gay prunella, When, sated with the board's delights (For Georgian bucks were gluttons), The town sparks sought the shades of "White's" Or tossed the dice at "Button's."

When tabinets were all the vogue For feminine adorning, When Irish Biddy raised her brogue And clacked her heels at morning, When long and loud the conflict raged Betwixt the Macaroni As each his diva's cause engaged—Faustina or Cuzzoni.

Old snuffbox, could you thrill to speech, In gossip none were greater, Whose chronicles exceed the reach Of Tatler or Spectator. But, ah, as dumb as dead Queen Anne, You lie in peace unbroken, A remnant of the Georgian span, A Hanoverian token! —Louis J. McQuillend in Saturday Review.

TOLD BY THE CIRCUS MAN.

The Big Giraffe Catches a Cold, Which Settles In Its Neck.

"Seems to me I told you once," said the old circus man, "about the giraffe having a sore throat? It is a serious matter for any giraffe to have a sore throat, bad for the giraffe and bad for the owner. When you come to take an 18 foot giraffe like ours, a sore throat meant large expense and a large amount of trouble, and the big fellow hadn't more'n got over this before something else happened to him that gave us even more trouble. He caught cold, and the cold settled in his throat. I suppose he was still sensitive there, and it gave him a stiff neck, so that he couldn't bend his neck at all.

"You can't have any idea what a stiff neck means until you see a giraffe afflicted in that way. We'd had all sorts of trouble with animals in one way and another, but for real bother this beat 'em all. We discovered it one day on the road. The giraffe always ducked his head under the branches that hung down, sort of like a swan or a goose does, but this day, carrying his head right up straight in the air, he brought up against a branch that was at least 15 feet above the ground. That was such an amazing thing that we knew something must be the matter, and when the giraffe's keeper come up and spoke to him, and all he did was to bend his nose down and look down, why, we saw he couldn't bend his neck, and then we knew what was the matter.

"Well, of course, the first thing we did was to set a man to march alongside of him with a tent pole, with a crutch in the end of it to lift the branches for him. Most of the time—almost all the time, in fact—we could steer him clear of overhanging branches, and of course lots of the way there wasn't any trees at all, and then we'd come to places where the man would have to lift a branch to let the big giraffe go under, and a great pity it was, too, to see him compelled to go about in that manner!

"He went that way for about ten days. Ordinarily we used to put his feed for him on top of an animal cage, so that he wouldn't have to bend down more than eight or ten feet, but he couldn't do that now. So we set a ring in the center pole 18 feet from the ground, and we used to reeve a rope through that and make one end fast to the bucket with his food or drink in it and hoist it up and let him eat there. On the road we used to throw that rope over the crotch of a tree at a suitable height. For his entry into the great tent at show time we had to cut a great slit in the canvas, but we didn't regret that because it was a mighty impressive thing to see him march in in that way. It made him look 36 feet tall instead of 18.

"Twice a day a man used to go up on a ladder and put a strap around his head, and we'd hook on a fall with a bossun's chair, and a man would ride down his neck and rub liniment. He used to like that very much, and it helped him greatly, too, and one morning when the men went out to give him the usual rub they were delighted to see the old chap with his head down pretty near to the roof of the grizzly bear cage, which stood next to him, which showed that his neck was coming around all right, and also indicated that he'd take his bre-

Is the Sunday-School Decaying?

Not for a long time has the Sunday-school as an institution been handled so absolutely without gloves as in Edward Bok's editorial on "The Decay of the Sunday-School" in the March Ladies' Home Journal. Mr. Bok has evidently studied his subject closely, and the results must have been far from satisfactory, judging by the way in which he handles the entire topic. In words which no one can misunderstand, with a sure aim, he pillories the average Sunday-school, and declares it to be "a rebuke to intelligence and a discredit to the church." Probably no religious article of recent publication will cause so much comment or evoke such bitter controversy as this remarkable editorial by the Philadelphia editor.

A Queer World

The wild animals are going more rapidly than is generally supposed. The buffalo is nearly extinct. The wild pigeon, once so abundant that the birds came in clouds that darkened the sky, is forgotten. The song sparrow, the thrush, the meadow lark, and a dozen other small creatures are known to the children simply as birds, and not well known at that. What a queer world it will be when the only wild animals are rats, mice and bugs and the birds are confined to poultry houses. But we are tending that way, and so fast it is almost the case now in some sections.—Pittsburg Times.

Cascarets stimulate liver, kidney and bowels. Never sicker, weaker or gripe. 10c.

The Money-Making Instinct.

Money can be made almost anywhere by a man who has the money-making instinct. An Astor or a Gould would make it on a comparative desert. While thousands of able men live in poverty and wretchedness, just managing to keep soul and body together in the midst of boundless opportunities in the large cities of America, others in out-of-the-way places, and apparently with very few opportunities, make their millions just because they have the money-making instinct.—Success, New York.

The Union (S. C.) Times asks some questions that are pertinent just now:

How many farmers have stopped any gullies on their places this winter?

How many farmers have constructed their compost pens?

How many farmers have reduced or are preparing to reduce their acreage in cotton.

How many farmers will increase the acreage in grain?

How many farmers have made up their minds to sell more fodder, hay, butter, eggs, potatoes, and such other products of the farm this year than they did last? The dry goods merchant takes as much pains in selling you a spool of thread as he does in selling you a suit of clothes. Big merchants frequently sell a paper of tacks or pins. Do you catch the idea?

How many farmers have cleared land and are preparing to burn the brush instead of stopping gullies with it, or letting it lie upon the ground for one year?

Falls in Church.

Friday night Ary Graham, colored, wife of Willis Graham, went to attend services at Sycamore Hill Baptist church. She left home in usual health, but was taken back a corpse. While the congregation was at prayer Ary was noticed to fall backward in the pew. Those near went to her assistance and took her from the church, but she died in a few minutes.

Among the Papers

The Kinston Free Press is now making its Saturday issue a six page paper, largely increasing its already excellent news service.

The Pittsboro Record has entered a new volume and celebrates the occasion by putting on a new dress of type.

The Graham Gleaner has enlarged from a seven to an eight column paper and is much improved.

Our bright Virginia exchange, the Orange Observer, has entered a new volume with more indications of vim and progress than ever.
