JUST FOR FUN.

A bad month to borrow, for every day will be Lent.

When the horsey girl is proposed to she usually answers "Neigh!"

At the suggestion of spring the summer girl begins to turn in her sleep.

When a girl has hooked a fellow it is natural for him to feel like a fish out of water.

The Irish historian, treating of the rebellion of '98, now has a chance to write his country's wrongs.

"The Cloak of Modesty," says the Manayunk Philosopher, "can never be made over into bloomers."

Nell—"He called me a bird." Belle—"Yes; but there are such things as crows and pelicans in the bird family, you know."

Madge—"Yes; it's a pretty good match. He's a self-made man." Jack—"And she's a tailor-made woman." "No; she's also self-made." "How's that?" "Makes her own clothes, and they make the woman, you know."

She—"Miss Woodby has applied for admission in the Order of Lady High Muck-Mucks; she claims she can trace her ancestry back to an English sovereign." He—"But it wasn't a sovereign; her grandfather was a waiter, and an English nobleman tipped him; but it was a shilling, not a sovereign."

When bilious or costive, eat a Cascairet, candy cathartic, cure guaranteed. 10c, 25c.

ON THE WAY.

It's a-comin'—sure as fate!
Little towheads at the gate,
Ready now fer diggin' bait.
It's a-comin'! East an' west,
Hills that in the snow wuz dressed,
Wearin' bouquets on their breast.
It's a-comin'! I kin see
In the blizzard-blighted tree,
Blossoms peepin' out at me.
In the rills that run a race,
Fish kin scarcely keep their place—
Playin' leapfrog 'fore my face!
An' the sweet birds—still so long,
Hear the springtime's silver gong,
An' air primpin' up fer song.
Comin'—comin'—shore as fate!
Tel' them towheads at the gate
Fill that oyster can with bait!

Time to Wake up and Stretch.

There is no imperative necessity for haste about calling conventions, but it is time for Democratic executive committees to begin to wake up and rub their eyes. The State convention meets on the 26th of May to ratify the nominations made by the judicial district conventions. These must, therefore, be held in advance of the State convention. The judicial district executive committees must meet in due time to call these conventions, and the county executive committees must meet to call county conventions to appoint delegates to the judicial, congressional and State conventions. It lacks only a week or two of being three months until the State convention and perhaps any action now would be a little early; yet it is to be remembered that the machinery is necessarily a trifle cumbersome and that a good deal of time is required to put it all in motion. Notice must be given to the executive committees; then notice—ample notice—given of the time for the primaries; then a given period must elapse between the holding of the primaries and the holding of the county conventions, and then there must be a reasonable interval between them and the higher conventions. Yes, while there is no need for precipitate action, it is time for executive committees to begin to wake up and look alive. The next to act, it seems to us—the State executive committee having already acted—should be the committees of the judicial districts in which judges are to be nominated. Then county chairmen would have a point to work to, and could begin to think about assembling their committees.—Charlotte Observer.

Some people say they saw a few flakes of snow this morning. It is cold enough for it.

NEWBERN FAIR.

Large Crowd and Splendid Exhibits

The Greenville crowd who went on the excursion to the Newbern fair got back on good time Thursday evening, every one well pleased with the day's trip and what they had seen.

The fair was a great success, the attendance large and the exhibits fine. The tobacco warehouse built on the grounds was used for the poultry, agricultural and farm implements exhibits. We never saw better displays of poultry and crops than this building contained, and even a whole state exhibit would not have been more creditable.

The fish, oyster and game exhibits were interesting as usual. An attractive feature in this department was the beautiful ducks swimming around in the lake. They caught every eye.

In the main building the art, fancy work, floral, antique and pantry exhibits were splendid.

In the stock exhibit were cattle, hogs and sheep well worth looking at, some of them being immense in size.

The racing was about the only feature not up to the usual standard, they being generally pronounced poor.

There were the usual number of side shows in the grounds, but the hordes of gamblers that often get in their work at fairs was conspicuous for their absence. Their absence goes to the credit of the fair.

Taking it all together Newbern continues to hold her reputation for giving the best fair in the State.

The North Carolina car "City of Charlotte" with its attractive display of products of the State, was near the fair grounds and had hundreds of admiring visitors.

A Woman Pipe Smoker in the Street.

About 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon a stylishly dressed young woman about 24 years of age, passed the Courier-Journal building, walking out Fourth avenue, actually smoking a pipe. It was a dainty briar-root, with silver mountings, and a curved amber stem. She smoked complacently, and seemed totally unconscious that she was attracting an unusual amount of attention, not because she wore a sealskin jacket and a jaunty hat, nor on account of a pretty figure and face, but solely because she smoked a pipe. As she turned out Fourth avenue many people saw her and wondered, and every man whom she passed turned to look at her, and those whom she left behind caught a whiff of rich aroma which demonstrated to the practiced smoker that the young woman selected a good quality of tobacco.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

FRIDAY, MARCH 4, 1898.

The annual report of the labor bureau says the coal production of North Carolina was 9,163 tons in 1890, and in 1896 rose to 22,232, while last year it was only 6,976.

The State of New Jersey has for several years been appropriating $100,000 a year for the building of stone roads. State money is expended only in counties where the property-owners and counties expend two dollars to one expended by the State.

The Saturday Review, of London, declares oracularly that in the event of war between the United States and Spain the Southern States would probably support the latter. The poor fool! If it knew anything whatever of Southern opinion it would know that in the South there is just no sympathy whatever with Spain.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer tells of a colored man who noticed a board displayed in front of a building in course of erection. It bore these words: "Keep away—Danger!" The colored man walked up close to the board and traced the letters with his finger.

Where all Kissed Their Escorts

The diversions of New Yorkers of the last century were very much milder than are those of the present day. "In winter a century ago," Mrs. Burton Harrison writes in the March Ladies' Home Journal, "when not assembled for skating upon the Collech, the favorite amusement of Hans and Katrina seems to have been a sleighing frolic in Jan Derickson's four-horse sledge to Harlem, where they had a dance and a supper at the hostelry of Mynheer Borsum.

Populist leaders are now declaring that the silver issue is not the "paramount" question to be considered in the approaching campaign; that there are other questions of equal, if not greater importance to which that party is committed, and to which the Democracy is violently opposed.

In an editorial paragraph on the Maine disaster the Saturday Review, of London, is inclined to attribute the explosion to an accident, asserting that "discipline in the American navy is notoriously lax."

Here's what they are all saying now who speak as they feel: A Western Republican in Washington said to the Post. "I am a Republican and believe thoroughly in the principles of that party, but I do not believe it can continue in power by advocacy of the single gold standard.

A PECULIAR FACT.

Thousands of People Have Dyspepsia in Its worst Form and Do Not Know It.

A weak stomach is the cause of about nine-tenths of all disease, yet in most cases the wrong thing is treated and the true cause overlooked.

This is because a weak digestion produces symptoms resembling nearly every disease because it weakens and disturbs the action of every nerve and organ in the body; poor digestion causes heart-trouble, kidney troubles, lung weakness and especially nervous break down or nervous prostration.

Keep the digestion good and no one need fear the approach of disease.

Mrs. H. M. Lee, of Rochester, N. Y., writes: For the sake of suffering humanity I want to say that from a child I had very weak stomach, threw up my food very often after eating and for more than twenty years I have suffered inexpressibly.

I tried my physicians and advertised remedies with only temporary relief for nervous dyspepsia and not until I commenced taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets last September, six months ago, have I been free from suffering caused by the condition of my nerves and stomach; in short, chronic nervous dyspepsia.

I have recommended Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to many of my friends and now I want in a public way to say they are the safest, pleasantest and I believe surest cure for stomach and nerve troubles. I write my honest opinion and I will gladly answer any letter of inquiry at any time and feel that I am in my small way, helping on a good cause.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is not a patent medicine, but they contain only the fruit salts, digestive acids and peptones necessary to help the weak stomach to promptly and thoroughly digest food.

All druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at 50 cents for full sized package and anyone suffering from nervous dyspepsia, sour stomach, headaches, acidity, gases, belching, etc., will find them not only a quick relief but a radical cure.

Send to Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. for little book describing cause and cure of stomach troubles giving symptoms and treatment of the various forms of indigestion.

What, in Case War Comes?

There is one thing which it is difficult not to admire about the "yellow journals," and that is the boldness with which they "fake" news. It doesn't seem to worry them the least bit if what they print isn't true. It would be interesting, if anybody had time, to get up a summary of the lies they have published since the Maine was destroyed.

Not Doing as Well as Expected.

It is a notorious truth that the administration has been a great disappointment to those who voted for McKinley. The gold Democrats are thoroughly disgusted; the laboring men are up in arms, tearing down McKinley banners; the advocates of Cuban independence say they have been deceived; the farmers are outraged; and there is general dissatisfaction expressed exactly by the little Missouri Republican girl who prayed: "Now God, take good care of yourself, for if lose you we would have McKinley left to take care of us, and he is not doing as well as papa expected he would. Amen."

A LAST FAREWELL.

Louis XVI's Leave Taking From His Wife the Day Before His Execution.

Miss Anna L. Bicknell contributes an article on "The Last Days of Louis XIV and Marie Antoinette" to The Century. Miss Bicknell says:

At 8 o'clock the king came out of the turret and desired that his family should be summoned; then, with Clery, he went into the dining room, where Clery pushed the table into a corner to give more room and placed chairs in readiness. The king, ever thoughtful and considerate in what concerned the queen, then desired Clery to bring a decanter of water and a glass in case of need. Clery brought iced water, but the king immediately said that it might make the queen ill and asked for water without ice.

The queen, holding the little daughter by the hand, came in first, followed by Mme. Elisabeth with Mme. Royale. All had learned the dreadful truth through the cries of the news venders under their windows. With floods of tears the queen threw herself into the king's arms and then attempted to draw him into his bedchamber, but he explained that he could receive them all only in the dining room, where the guards could watch them through the glass door. Clery closed it, and they could at least speak without being heard. The king sat down; the queen took her place at his left, with Mme. Elisabeth on the other side; the children were before him. All clung to him, and for some time only a burst of grief was manifest. At last the king spoke.

"He wept for us," says Mme. Royale in her narrative, "but not through fear of death. He related his trial to my mother, excusing the wretches who were about to put him to death. He then addressed religious exhortations to my brother. He especially commanded him to forgive those who were the cause of his death and gave him his blessing, as also to me."

The child was seen to raise his hand solemnly, the king having required him to take an oath that he would never seek to avenge his death, and the child did so.

During the last hours of his life Louis XVI seemed transfixed. His quiet and calm firmness, his truly Christian feelings of forgiveness toward his enemies, his faith, his resignation, are described with blended wonder and admiration by all who came near him.

The interview, so harrowing to all, had lasted nearly two hours, when, at a quarter past 10, the king rose decidedly, signifying to the weeping women and children that they must leave him to prepare for coming death. The queen entreated to be allowed to spend the night near him, but he firmly refused, saying that he must be alone and calm.

"I will see you tomorrow morning," he said.

"You promise this?" cried the queen.

"Yes, I promise; I will see you at 8 o'clock."

"Why not at 7?" cried the queen anxiously.

"Well, then, at 7. But now adieu!"

The word was uttered with such intense pathos that a fresh burst of grief followed, and Mme. Royale fainted at her father's feet. Clery flew to raise her, assisted by Mme. Elisabeth.

The king repeated, "Adieu! Adieu!" and broke away, taking refuge in his own bedchamber.

The Old Marine Band.

The big man in the band of former days in the Marine band in its infancy was the man who marched in the front and played a chime of bells which was rigged up on a long pole. He was an entire band in himself. Behind him marched two or three others who had similarly arranged chimes, though of smaller proportions. There may have been cornets, trombones and bass horns in existence then, but certainly none of them was ever carried by the Marine band until after 1835. I was married that year and remember very well seeing the band parade a day or so before my marriage, and I am certain there were no horns carried by the band except bugles or trumpets. I don't know that their music was not as sweet as it is today. It sounded to us folks of that day so anyhow. There seemed to be more music in the string and reed instruments than in the various horns of today, and the men who carried the chime bells could, for sound at least, double discount any of the performers in the band today.—Washington Star.

HONEY AS FOOD.

There Are Said to Be Health and Long Life in Its Use.

A pound of honey will go as far as a pound of butter, and if both articles be of the best quality the honey will cost the less of the two. Often a prime article of extracted honey, equal to comb honey in every respect except appearance, can be obtained for half the price of butter, or less. Butter is in its best only when it is "fresh," while honey, properly kept, remains indefinitely good—no need to hurry it out of the way for fear it may become rancid.

Sugar is much used in hot drinks, as in coffee and tea. The substitution of a mild flavored honey in such use may be a very profitable thing for the health. Indeed it would be better for the health if the only hot drinks were what is called in Germany honey tea—a cup of hot water with one or two tablespoonfuls of extracted honey. The attainment of great age has in some cases been attributed largely to the lifelong use of honey tea.

Many people think "honey is honey," all just alike, but this is a great mistake. Honey may be of good heavy body, what beekeepers call "well ripened" and weighing sometimes 12 pounds to the gallon, or it may be quite thin. It may also be granulated or candied, more solid than lard. It may be almost as colorless as water, and it may be as black as the darkest molasses. The flavor of honey varies according to the flower from which it is obtained. It would be impossible to describe in words the flavors of the different honeys. The different flavors in honey are as distinct as the odors in flowers. Among the lighter colored honeys are white clover, linden (or basswood), sage, sweet clover, alfalfa, willow herb, etc., and among the darker are found heartsease, magnolia (or poplar), horsemint, buckwheat, etc.

Tastes differ as to honey as in all other things. White clover is so generally preferred to buckwheat, with its very dark color and strongly marked flavor, that buckwheat honey always rules lower in price than white clover, yet there are some who prefer buckwheat to any other honey. Somewhat fortunately, one generally prefers the honey to which he is most accustomed. A Californian thinks nothing equals white sage, while a Pennsylvanian thinks white clover far ahead.

In these days of prevailing adulteration, when so often "things are not what they seem," it is a comfort to know that when one buys comb honey he may know without question he is getting the genuine article. The silly stories seen from time to time in the papers about artificial combs being filled with glucose and deftly sealed over with a hot iron have not the slightest foundation in fact. For years there has been a standing offer by one whose financial responsibility is unquestioned of $1,000 for a single pound of comb honey made without the intervention of bees. The offer remains untaken and will probably remain so, for the highest art of man can never compass such delicate workmanship as the skill of the bee accomplishes.

With extracted honey the case is different. When you see in the grocery a tumbler of liquid honey with a small piece of comb honey in the center, you may be pretty sure the liquid honey is not honey at all, but pure glucose. If not familiar enough with honey to detect it by taste, your only safe course is to buy of the producer direct or of some one who knows as to its source and upon whose honesty you can rely.

Aside from its use in an unchanged state as a direct accompaniment of bread or biscuit, honey is used by bakers in manufacturing their choicest wafers. An advantage of using honey for anything in the line of cake is in its keeping qualities. Even if the cake should become dry, close it up in a bread can for a time, and its freshness will return.—Bee Culture.

A Medieval Bill of Fare.

An old chronicle preserves a bill of fare for a council dinner in the year 1592. For the first course there were capons, steamed beef and old hens, black game prepared with vinegar; second course, steamed carp served with spiced sauce, sauerkraut with mutton and pastry; third course, roast veal, birds, fried fish, cheese, fruit, nuts, chestnuts and wafers. The wine and game were furnished by the court. The host received 15 farthings from each person.—"Stuttgart," by Elise J. Allen, in Harper's Magazine.

Prompt Answer.

The lecturer on health had finished his discourse and invited his auditors to ask any questions they chose concerning points that might seem to need clearing up, when a lean, skinny man rose up and asked:

"Professor, what do you do when you can't sleep at night?"

"I usually stay awake," replied the lecturer, "although, of course, every body should feel at liberty to do otherwise if he chooses. Are there any other questions?"

Farming With Brains.

The history of our agriculture is written plainly, and it is read alright by those who have the intelligence to grasp the meaning of the changes and revolutions. The earnest, intelligent, successful farmers of the country may see conditions confronting them that are not all they could wish, but clear thinking and due action in good times will still make them happy and satisfied men. They renew their youth by renewing their methods. They see the portentous breakers ahead, and they prepare to meet them. They educate and discipline their souls for the conflict, as their forefathers did in the wilderness of New England and later on the frontiers of the Great West. Their reward is greater in this life than was ever bestowed upon their ancestor, but it will be larger, sweeter and fuller for future generations if they but guide and educate the energies of their children in the way they should go. This will be an inheritance richer and more satisfying than broad acres of fertile fields and barns overflowing with grain and fruits.—Lippencott's.
