OMINOUS FOR SPAIN
They say there's goin' to be a war, the fiercest we've had yet; Maria says it's got to come, an' that jist settles it; An' when it comes, though I'm a patri't, pure in grit an' grain, I'm feared my human natur'll make me sympathize with Spain.
That may seem mighty quare to you, but jist you waster know
That my Maria's vowed a vow that she's jist bound ter go.
An' havin' spesual caus, to know her pattern of campaign,
I've got the right to say she'll mop the univarse with Spain.
An' though I've read about the way poor Cuby's had to stand
The cruel pusecutions of them folks from Weyler's land,
I must declar, I can't from tech of pity quite refrain
When thinkin' what'll happen when Maria tackles Spain.
For when she gets her war-paint on she's jist a compersite
Of averlat che, tornader, cyclonz, hum, an' dynermite,
An' efter this ere conflict she's enlisted in, it's plain
There'll be a nation misin, an' that nation'll be Spain.

Housewife—"Why don't you work at some trade?" Tramp (haughtily)— "Trade, madam? I'm a professional man." "What profession?" "Well, jist now I'm an 'after-dinner speaker."

A Vindication of Democracy.

Suppose that Spain had for three years outraged the humane instincts and sensibilities of any of the great peoples of Europe.
Suppose that a Spanish Minister to England, France, Germany, Australia or Russia had insulted the ruler of the country to which he was accredited and had derided its people.
Suppose that upon the very heel of this insult one of that country's battle-ships had been blown up through Spain's gross and criminal negligence at the least, and that two hundred and fifty sailors had died in agony.
Can any one doubt the effect upon even the calmest of those peoples? Is it not certain that self-restraint would have dissolved like the dew in the fervent heat of passionate fury?
Yet the American people, in presence of a situation of which the above is only a pale outline, remain calm, composed, listen with approval to counsel of waiting and fall almost silently into line behind a Government that is preparing for action with the utmost deliberation.
Why?
Not because the people of the United States are not aroused, but because, regulated by the experiences and traditions of a century of self-government, they are perfectly cool. The American people, long accustomed to order their own public affairs as they please, brought up under the domination of ideas of self-government, are quite equal to any situation that may arise. They know that they will get what they want when they want it. They wait patiently with a self-restraint that is as admirable as it is rare.
What a triumph for Democratic institutions! What a vindication of the gospel that the way to teach men to govern themselves is to let them govern themselves?—New York World.

Wives Should Remember.

That it is policy to let him believe he is "lord and master."
That your relationship is closer to him than to your mother.
That a prompt and pointed answer does not turn away wrath.
That he does not get sleepy the same moment you do.
That he expects you to look your best, when you go out with him.
That it does not improve his razor to use it for chirpical purpose.—Boston Globe.
"The Natinal Magazine" of Boston is one of the first of the 10 cent magazines to break away from cheap and photographic reproductions and substitute good drawings by the best artists. This is a most hopeful sign. Subscriptions taken at REFLECTOR office.

JUST FOR FUN

House-cleaning will begin soon.
The hen doesn't look at all poetical but she always sings her lay.
It is natural that a man's cheeks should burn when he is made light of.
"Hello!" cried the ink to the pen, "how's your nibs today?" "O!" replied the pen, "it's all write with me."
"If you're an amateur sportsman," says the Snake Editor, "it is well to know that the easiest game is "craps."
"Some men are like race horses," says the Manayunk Philosopher. "Their greatest ambition seems to be to lower their records."
Poet—"I wish I were Spring, and you were Winter." Miss Lovilipz—"Why, Mr. Spondee?" "Because Winter lingers in the lap of Spring, you know." Shortly thereafter she lingered.
Tommy—"Tell you what, ma; I'll be glad when I'm big enough to wash my own face." Ma—"That's a good boy; then you'll save your mamma the trouble." Tommy—"Yes; and I'll save myself the trouble, too."

About Human Life

There are 3,064 languages in the world, and its inhabitants profess more than 1,000 religions.
There are on the earth 1,000,000,000 inhabitants. Of these, 33,033,033 die every year, 91,824 every day, 3,630 every hour, 60 every minute, or one every second.
The number of men is about equal to the number of women. The average of life is about thirty-three years. Of 1,000 persons 100 years of life, of every 100 six reach the age of 65 and not more than one in 600 lives to 80 years.
The married are longer lived than the single and above all those who observe a sober and industrious conduct. Tall men live longer than short ones. Women have more chances of life in their favor, previous to 50 years of age than men have, but fewer afterward.
The number of marriages is in the proportion of 75 to 1,000 individuals. People born in the spring are generally of a more robust constitution than others. Deaths are more frequent by night than by day. The number of men capable of bearing arms is calculated at one fourth of the population.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent)
 Washington March 7, 1898.

The is no denying that the present policy of the administration is aggravating and galling to the average American, regardless of his political affiliation. It is difficult to understand, when Spain is moving heaven and earth to borrow money and to buy warships to fight us, why we should not be openly preparing for war by having Congress appropriate the money needed to buy additional warships and to put us on a war footing generally, instead of pretending that the preparations for war which the administration is making, not only to the extent of available appropriation but in anticipation of appropriations are merely routine proceedings. We are not fooling Spain, and it seems nonsensical trying to fool ourselves. Mr. McKinley knows just as everybody else knows, that there isn't one chance in ten that war will be avoided. He knows that the acceptance of blood money from Spain will not be countenanced and that a peace at any price policy would have no supporters outside of Wall street and its connections. Knowing these things it is his duty to ask Congress to make the necessary appropriations to put the country in a proper condition of defense and to enable it to give Spain the thrashing it has been itching for during the last year or two. It is no valid excuse to claim that doing so would be a reflection upon to Naval Court of Inquiry. If so, Spain has been casting reflections upon that Court quite numerous during the last few days. But, as a matter of fact, would it be any more reflection to openly ask for the money from Congress to make proper and needed preparation for war, than it is to be secretly making conditional contracts for the same thing, in anticipation of appropriations that Congress has not even yet been asked to make? There is probably not a man in Congress who would ask that a gun be fired in advance of the verdict of the Court of Inquiry, but in as much as everybody now thinks that that verdict will show that the destruction of the Maine was not an accident, there is little doubt that a majority of Congress would like to see the administration openly making ready to fight after that verdict is rendered.

Few men in Congress are willing to believe the rumors connecting Mr. McKinley's name with the scheme to buy Cuba from Spain. Some of his advisers may be in the scheme, but Mr. McKinley ought to know the people of this country well enough to know that they would bury every man out of sight, politically speaking, who dared to support the necessary legislation to make this country guarantee the payment of Cuban bonds which would go to the present holders of Spanish bonds. If this scheme is seriously pushed it will soon be discovered that the universal sentiment of our people is, millions for the preservation of our national honor, but not one cent for Spanish bond-holders.

It appears that the friends of Hawaiian annexation are afraid to try to secure annexation by a joint resolution, owing to threats of the opposition to keep Congress in session all summer, if they do. At a secret meeting of the Senate committee on foreign relations it was decided to make another attempt to ratify the treaty. If that fails, as it is expected to do, the whole matter may be dropped until the next session of Congress. Czar Reed's latest ruling, that democrats shall not when the House is sitting as a Committee of the whole criticize the administration, the republican party, or any individual republican, is another step towards the absolute throttling of free speech in the House, and is just as outrageous as any of those in the same direction which have preceded it. From the birth of Congress the custom has been to allow the very widest latitude to members who made speeches while the House was sitting as the committee of the whole, but this new autocratic mumbo jumbo says that no Democrats will be allowed to make a political speech, except when the bill under consideration is purely political. This muzzling rule would be outrageous even if it were made to apply impartially to all members of the House, but when applied, as it has been, solely to anti-republican members it is more than outrageous; it is depriving the representatives of the people of their constitutional right to be heard at all times.

The United States reward has been increased to $1,500 for the arrest of any person or persons who were connected with the killing of the negro postmaster at Lake City, S. C., and his child, and a number of Government detectives have been put on the case. The members of the South Carolina delegation in Congress all say that the State authorities are also trying hard to run down and punish the perpetrators of this barbarous crime.

When bilious or constive, eat a Cascaret, candy cathartic, cure guaranteed. 10c, 25c.

Reflections of a Bachelor

A pound of accomplishment weighs more in a woman than a ton of learning.

A girl's argument is a little like reason and a lot more like the characters you see on tea boxes.

After a girl has tried getting her family to act indignant with a man she begins to try to look piteously at him.

A cat can swim just as well as a dog, only it is so lazy that if you throw it into the water it would rather drown.

When a man has curious little dents in his shirt bosom they were generally made by the round ends of hairpins.

A woman never cries so hard when her little child is lost that she hasn't strength left to spunk it when it's found.—New York Press.

Deterioration of Teeth

The Superintendent of Public Instruction, Prof. C. H. Mebane, has been requested by a committee of the State Dental Association to endorse a circular letter to the public school teachers of the State, advising them to instruct the school children to give a careful and intelligent attention to their teeth.

The circular states that the observation and experience of dentists in the State shows that there is a marked deterioration of human teeth. The bad teeth prevent proper mastication of food, which results in all forms of indigestion.

Superintendent Mebane will likely give the circular his endorsement.

The importance of giving proper and intelligent attention to teeth in youth is urged. Through the teachers of the State the Dental Association hopes to correct the negligent care of the teeth of the children in the State.

Dr. V. E. Turner, of this city, is the chairman of the committee that drafted and submitted the letter to the Superintendent.—Raleigh Post.

After having secured from Congress the appropriation of a large sum of money for the relief of the Klondike miners, and after having spent probably all of it in making ready the expedition, the whole project has been abandoned by the government on the ground that there is really no necessity for such an expedition. What a pity this discovery wasn't made before the money was spent.

Advice

"The farmer gets more good advice than any class of people outside of a boarding school," says a newspaper, "and as a rule he takes as little of it as he pleases." The farmer does, indeed, get a good deal of good advice and he is wise when he listens to it. So are men of all other vocations. Good advice is not a thing to be despised. Newspaper men are supposed to get a good deal, and they are foolish when they resent it, if it is well intended and is not officious. Advice of friends has saved many a man from folly and error and worse. Of course it must be from the right source and there must be a proper motive behind it; but when it comes thus it is not to be disregarded, whether it relates to business affairs or personal conduct. There is in mind of this time a man who was once going pretty badly and to whom one of his friends spoke about his habits. "I don't need anybody to tell me about how badly I am doing," said he, rather querulously; "I know better than anybody." That was very true in that instance, but it is not always so, and even when it is, it is sometimes well for a man to know that others know, too, how badly he is doing and are concerned about him. But the proposition for which we are contending applies not alone to personal behavior, but as said above, to men's businesses. "Faithful are the wounds of a friend" was said in the case of a man who had told another an uncomfortable truth. To serve one's friends it is necessary sometimes to do this, and he is not wise who flares up about it. Advice has saved many a man from false steps and from business reverses. To speak of it is, generally, to make light of it. Poets and novelists have ridiculed it, and yet, if more of it were given, in proper spirit, and more heed were given it, the world would be wiser and better.—Charlotte Observer.

A Tramp's Speculation

A tramp went into Manspeaker's grocery store the other day, where he noticed a big box of soap labeled, "A cake for one cent." He approached Mr. Manspeaker and said: "I am broke, but if you will trust me for twenty-five cakes of that soap I will pay you in less than an hour." Manspeaker had a curiosity to get into the tramp's game and consented to the deal. The tramp took the soap over to where the plug tobacco is kept and carefully wrapped each cake in a bit of tin foil procured from the tobacco boxes. He then went upon a street corner and announced to passers by that he had for sale "the genuine Arabic frankincense ambrosial shaving soap, guaranteed to soften the hairs of the face until a dull knife could cut them and certain to last ten times as long as any other soap in the market." Inside of half an hour he had sold every cake at 25 cents each. He paid Mr. Manspeaker 25 cents and walked off with a clear profit of $6 in his pocket.—Lawrence (Kansas.) Journal.

THE SILENT SISTERS.

Never a Word Is Spoken In This Gloomy French Convent Near Biarritz.

Near Biarritz—happy, brilliant Biarritz—stands the lone, yew embordered convent of the silent women, the seours silencieuses.

Here, not far from the sounding waters of the bay of Biscay, 57 ladies of birth and breeding have seen fit to immure themselves in what is nothing less than a living tomb. Woman's tongue has, justly or unjustly, been a centuried byword, yet the seours silencieuses voluntarily resign their right to speak and sentence themselves for the rest of their natural lives to absolute, unbroken silence.

The convent, which is modeled on that for men at La Trappe, was founded many years ago by a lady of the French court who, in company with some friends, sought this solitude and gave her life to God. Who she was, her very identity, is in dispute. Indeed it was her own wish that the authorities of the Catholic church should preserve her name a secret, and all the women who have followed her into seclusion here have likewise endeavored to sink their identity.

A league from Biarritz, in the direction of the Pyrenees, one turns aside from the direct road and enters a narrow ravine stretching toward Mauleon. Through woods of beech and wild olive an ill kept, deeply rutted lane leads to a high walled inclosure. Over the walls there is a glimpse of yew trees, and if the visitor be a man that is all he can see of the silent sisters' home. Even women travelers are rarely admitted past the heavy wooden gates, with their lunettes for lay sisters to peer through.

The convent walk is laid out in long, straight walks, planted on each side by yew trees. Each nun has a walk to herself. It is allotted her when she enters, and she paces it until her death. Up and down the walk she goes, with silent tread, never raising her eyes, save in prayer, and never exchanging a syllable with mortal being.

A recent visitor to the convent thus describes what she saw:

"The lay sister who received us (lay sisters do all the household and garden work and are allowed to talk) would not allow us to approach near enough to the nuns to get even a glimpse of their downcast faces. We saw, however, that they wore long black cowls, with great white crosses between the shoulders and reaching to the hem of the gown. Save for the crosses, they were arrayed wholly in black, and black veils draped their faces.

"As we watched the chapel bell tolled out, and the seours silencieuses moved toward its open door. We were admitted to the gallery and saw them kneeling in the half light below us. A man's voice was reading prayers, but no man could we see. Afterward we learned that he spoke from behind a screen. He was admitted to the convent chapel by an underground passageway leading beyond the walls.

"At present the chaplain is a reverend abbe of nearly 80 years of age, who enjoys a reputation for ascetic sanctity throughout Navarre. The only time the nuns see him is when he celebrates mass.

"In chapel they bend almost to the floor, their hands crossed upon their breasts. They eat only vegetables and drink only water. In the entire history of the order, it is said, there was but one nun who failed to obey the rules of silence and submission. The poor women dig their own graves, and, when they are buried, no cross or monument of any kind marks their resting place.

"It is very wholesome for the gay belles of Biarritz and Pau to visit the seours silencieuses and their convent occasionally. Our party could not get the remembrance out of their heads for weeks after. It pursued us like a haunting horror.

"Last season some of the Catholic ladies at Pau asked leave to make what is called a 'retreat' at the convent. They received a brief note from the mother superior, which read, 'My children, when you join us, it must be for life.' The idea of the 'retreat' was quickly abandoned."—Boston Globe.

With the Masons

Greenville Lodge A. F. & A. M. had another unusually interesting communication, Monday night, marking one more important period in the history of the lodge. There were three candidates for the third degree mysteries, which kept the lodge at labor until nearly midnight. There were visitors present from nearly all the neighboring lodges, some of them taking prominent part in the impressive ceremonies.

At the close of the meeting the lodge and visitors repaired to Hotel Macon for refreshments, where Host Skinner had prepared an elegant supper for them. Fifty-five Masons gathered around the board, and every one did full justice to the elegant repast. It was an enjoyable evening from beginning to end.

Wild Rumors

There have been rumors and rumors about what is going on around Cuba, the latest being that the Spanish warship Vizcaya had fired a shot at the United States boat Dauntless, whereupon an American warship opened fire on the Vizcaya and sunk her. This is all a fake, and there is no need of anyone becoming alarmed over such rumors.

K. of P. Ordered to Get Ready

Saturdays New York Journal says: "The members of Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank Knights of Pythias, of Plainfield, N. J., are considerably agitated over the orders promulgated by General Reese, of Phillipsburg, commanding the order in New Jersey, for division officers to submit to him a detailed report of their condition, and warning the members to hold themselves in readiness for war, if it should be declared."

The members of Tar River Lodge need not get scared at this and stay away from the next meeting.

Arrested in Florida

A little more than a year ago Alonzo Walters, colored, killed Henderson West, colored, at Grifton, in this county. Walters fled and until recently was a fugitive from justice. A few months ago Sheriff W. H. Harrington learned that Walters was in Georgia and had officers to watch his movements. Walters went to Florida, and getting his whereabouts nearly accurately located Sheriff Harrington left here about the middle of February to capture him. He went direct to St. Augustine, from which point a deputy was sent out fifty miles to get Walters. He was captured and held in St. Augustine until a requisition from Gov. Russell on the Governor of Florida could be procured. Sheriff Harrington reached home Monday evening with his prisoner and placed him in jail to await the next criminal court for trial.
