HERE'S RUSSELLISM.

Result of Giving Negro Politicians Military Commissions

The negro soldiers at Fort Macon camp within the past week have given unmistakable evidence of a disposition to involve the white people of this city in a riot, and but for the calm discretion of the civil authorities of this community their insolence and disorderly conduct would have precipitated a conflict on more than one occasion. They have been allowed all the privileges of civilians—to roam at large all over this city in squads of five to twenty, unaccompanied by any commissioned officer, to drink liquor, quarrel and fight among themselves and with others; to remain away from the camp over nights reveling in places of disrepute outside of the city limits; to travel back and forth on railroad trains. Indeed they don't seem to have been under any military discipline during the past two weeks. They have been allowed to go where they pleased and to do as they might please, while the colonel in command, James H. Young, was off in Raleigh and elsewhere attending political meetings.

The people of this town have borne to make any complaint of the conduct of the soldiers, and have suffered some indignities at their hands, and even in the interest of peace, the civil authorities have allowed to pass apparently unnoticed conduct for which a citizen of the community would have been arrested and punished. Forbearance, however, ceased to be a virtue to restrain the civil authorities on Saturday last when one Green Carter, of Company A, came into town full of blockade corn liquor and attempted to "paint the town red." He was promptly arrested and carried to "the lock-up" and imprisoned. Soon thereafter another big blue coated burly member of the same company concluded to "clean out the town." He was seized by a policeman, but being a much stronger man physically, succeeded in wresting himself away from the young officer and made his escape to the Fort. During the excitement down town, some person went to the guard house, knocked off the door and lock and liberated Carter and he escaped to the Fort.

Upon being informed of the escape of the prisoner, Mayor Wallace sent the city marshal and a deputation of two or three assistants across the sound to the camp and requested Col. Young to surrender the soldier into their hands for trial. This request was complied with and Green Carter was brought back and tried. He was convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of $40 or go to jail for 60 days.

During the interview Charles Shepherd, of Morehead, accused of assisting the other soldier, (who bore the name of Abernethy), to escape, was arrested and tried. He was also convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of $20 or go to jail for 30 days. Not being able to pay the fine, the marshal was instructed to take Green over to jail, and on the way to stop at the camp and give the officials at the camp the option of paying his fine for him. On the arrival of the party at the camp, they were surrounded by several hundred negroes, and it was evident that they intended to rescue their negro comrade and mob the officers. The latter, therefore, on the advice of Col. Young—who said he would have them adequately punished—turned the condemned man over to the military authorities.

Such advice as that given by Young was evidence that he had no power available to control the angry, resentful, savage mob under his command. It was a confession of his weakness and an endorsement of their lawlessness. If he had any disposition to prevent trouble between the men under his command, he would not allow them to come over here by scores, by fifties, and until one or two hundred were marching up and down the principle streets of the city, insolently defying the authority of our city government, and insulting our citizens by their impudence and offensive language and conduct. Col. Young should allow no squad of men to leave the camp unaccompanied by a commissioned officer, and under no circumstances should they be allowed to loiter around the town and drink whiskey. They are becoming an intolerable nuisance, and if not restrained will cause much trouble in this locality.

TWO MORE OUTRAGES.

On Saturday night a white gentleman of this town on his way home was accosted by a negro man in regulation uniform and was forced at the muzzle of a pistol to pilot the negro towards the house of a certain colored woman. The gentleman misled the soldier and when in front of his uncle's residence said to the negro, "Here is the place," and rapped on the door. His uncle opened the door and the gentlemen seizing the opportunity to escape from the negro sprang inside and slammed the door in the soldier's face. The negro seated himself on the piazza and remained there for some time and then left. The night being exceedingly dark and stormy the old gentleman of the house, while he knew the negro was on the piazza, was discreet enough not to venture outside to attempt to arrest him.

Worse still. On Monday morning about 8 o'clock a lady, the wife of a highly respected gentleman, went down to the shore on Middle sound, about one hundred yards in rear of her home to gather some oysters. While there three negro soldiers came suddenly to her and extending their hands asked her to shake hand with them. This, of course, she declined to do and turned to run toward home, whereupon they offered the most insulting indignities, calling upon her to witness indecent exposures of their persons. The lady ran screaming home, and the negroes fled in another direction. Before any male assistance could be had the negroes had made good their escape—fortunately for them!

These may be considered outrages of minor importance when viewed by the infernal gang who now control the affairs of government, but there is a day coming when white men will take the law in their own hands and defend their homes and loved ones.—Morning City Pilot.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our War Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug. 19, '98.

Hurrah for Admiral Dewey! He's the top-notch of the whole outfit. He fought the first battle of the war, and the last battle, and won both without the injury of a ship or the loss of a man, and some of his ships may be fighting yet, as he started them, after the capture of Manila, and before he knew anything of the armistice for some of the other islands in the Philippines, with orders to take possession of everything in sight and to raise the American flag over everything captured.

No man's hand has been shaken oftener or more cordially this week than that of "Fighting Joe" Wheeler, who came to Washington in response to orders from the War Department. Gen. Wheeler has a better opinion of the Cuban insurgents than most of the officers who have been heard from on the subject. He said of them: "The Cubans were poorly clad and poorly fed. They did not make a very impressive appearance as soldiers. They probably misunderstood the conditions and circumstances about Santiago. Very few of them talked any English, and communication between Americans and Cubans was very difficult. I know of the charges that they would not work on the roads and other projects for the assistance of the American army. I think that was due to a large extent to their not understanding what the work was for. I found Cubans who were willing to work after interpreters had explained to them why the work was necessary."

Maj. Gen. M. C. Butler, who with Maj. Gen. J. F. Wade and Rear Admiral Sampson will represent the United States on the military commission to arrange for the evacuation of Cuba, said of their duties: "I think I realize the responsibility that rests upon the commissioners. It is very great, but I shall do my best to win the approval of the country." Gen. Butler said the Commission would go to Havana on a warship upon which they will for a time make their headquarters. The Porto Rican commission consists of Maj. Gen. J. R. Brooke, Rear Admiral Schley and Brig. Gen. Gordon.

Senator Allison, who is noted as one of the shrewdest dodgers in his party, has declined to serve as a Peace Commissioner, probably because he was afraid that he would be compelled to put himself on record for or against something. In an interview he talks on both sides of the Philippine question, in the following language: "The feeling in the west is universal that where the flag has been raised, it must not come down. Therefore, as respects a coaling station or a commercial base, there is little difference of opinion. On the larger question of holding the entire archipelago, the public mind is not made up. I find men talking for and against such a proposition. I do not believe that two-thirds of the Senate would vote for a treaty that retained the entire group, and yet I am certain that we could not get two-thirds to ratify a treaty that surrendered everything. Consequently, we will hold something—just how much no one can say." This leaves Mr. Allison entirely free to take whatever side of the question he may decide to be the most popular and is in that respect strictly Allisonian.

While in Washington this week Gen. Fitz Lee made formal announcement of his candidacy for the United States Senate, although the campaign will not actually be fought until next year. Senator Martin is a candidate for re-election. No Republican has publicly criticised the selection of Col. John Hay, American Ambassador to England, to succeed Secretary Day at the head of the Department of State, but not a few unprintable things have been said by many of them in private. Col. Hay is a Republican, but not a politician, hence the kicking.

The first plan of the administration, to keep all the volunteers in service until the treaty of peace with Spain was completed, has been changed, and it is now announced that 100,000 of the men will be mustered out as rapidly as possible.

No Man Indispensable

It's a mistake for a man to think he's indispensable," said Mr. Nozzleby, "for no man is. Men are invaluable, and they may easily make themselves very valuable, but when a man comes to think that the business can't get along without him, or can't get along so well as it does, which amounts to the same thing, why, he's wrong, that's all. More than one man has found that out when he has set his valuation too high. And it is very probable that when he began to dwell on his own value, his value in reality began to decline; it is certain that one of the things that contributed most to increase his value was his forgetfulness of himself."

"As a matter of fact, a man's interests, if he is really a superior man, up to a certain point, and that a high point, too, will take care of themselves, or rather other people will take care of them if he will supply the motive. There is a fixed low price for the run of people of average ability, but none for the man of really superior ability, that is, if he is a 100 per cent man, which is to say not only of high ability, but of perfect forgetfulness of self and absolute devotion to business. Any break or flaw or lack in these qualities anywhere knocks a man's value down wonderfully. Nothing less than the whole thing will do but that will command a price anywhere and everywhere."

"Still no man is indispensable: it isn't in the nature of things that he should be. No matter who dies, the world keeps on turning just the same, and it would be just the same with the business if you should go out of it."—New York Sun.

CONSTIPATION

"I have gone 14 days at a time without a movement of the bowels, not being able to move them except by using hot water injections. Chronic constipation for seven years placed me in this terrible condition; during that time I did everything I heard of but never found any relief; such was my case until I began using CASCARETS. I now have from one to three passages a day, and if I was rich I would give $100.00 for each movement; it is such a relief."

Golf Defined.

Just before the rising of the London law courts a case involving the playing of golf was heard, says the London Daily Telegraph, and a Queen's counsel engaged in it thus described for the instruction of the judge the ancient and royal game. "I believe, my lord," he said, "that the game of golf is played in irregular field or waste grounds with a small ball which the player tries to hit with a stick. If he succeeds in hitting the ball he spends the remainder of the day in looking for it. That, as I am informed, my lord, is the game of golf."

Chemical Prints in Darkness.

Here is a way to take a picture in the dark: Draw a picture on a piece of paper, using sulphate of quinine in making the outlines. Expose the paper to the sun for a few minutes; then place the paper face down on a piece of sensitive paper, like that used by photographers, and place the two sheets between the leaves of a book. If the sheets are removed from the book a few hours later you will find that an exact reproduction of the drawing will have been impressed on the sensitive paper. Designs of any sort can be copied in this way, or you may trace over a printed picture or design with sulphate of quinine and by the same process produce a faithful copy of the print. Try it.

Mr. McBride Holt Says:

Greenville, N. C. July 16, '97.

Oneida Cotton Mills:

About two and a half years ago my little boy about four years, and my little girl about two years, each had an enlargement of the glands about the ears. The trouble appearing on each about the same time, I was inclined to think it mumps, but soon observing to the contrary, I called in the doctor, who said the trouble came from colds, prescribing accordingly, yet swelling continued to grow, until each had to hold for the lance, the little boy having been lanced in three places, and at three times, his face at times, looking alarming. The nature of the trouble was termed one thing by one and another thing by another. This however, did not concern me, as I was looking for a cure, and Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy having been called to my attention so favorably, I dropped the treatment from the doctor and commenced to use Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy. To say that the results obtained have been satisfactory is putting it in mild terms, the children, and especially the little boy being entirely well, yet wearing the scars that will ever keep fresh in my memory the merits of Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy. Respt.
