SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1898.

The second annual debate between students of Wake Forest and Trinity Colleges took place in Raleigh Thanksgiving night. The subject for debate was: "Resolved that the United States should not adopt a policy of territorial extension. Trinity had the side against expansion and Wake Forest for expansion. The decision of the judges was in favor of Trinity, their side getting the better of the argument.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 25, '98

General Nelson A. Miles is probably the only prominent official in Washington who will be really glad to meet General Calixto Garcia who, with his fellow commissioners named by the recent Cuban Assembly to confer with Mr. McKinley on Cuban affairs, is coming to Washington. General Miles took a great fancy to Garcia when he was in Cuba, during the Santiago campaign, and will give a dinner in his honor, at his club. Members of the administration will be polite to Garcia, but they will not tire themselves throwing bouquets at him or his Cuban colleagues. It is generally understood that General Shafter queered Garcia with the administration. The matter has not been fully decided, but it is thought that Mr. McKinley will refuse to receive Garcia and his associates as a commission representing the Cuban Assembly, but may receive them as private citizens and hear what they have to say, or may direct Secretary Hay to receive them.

The $20,000,000 which we shall have to pay Spain, if our terms for peace and the purchase of the Philippines are accepted, is only about one-third—possibly one-fourth—of the total amount this government will be called upon to pay. One section of the terms provides that each country shall waive all claims that its citizens have against the other for money damages. That will make the government responsible for all damages done to property owned by American citizens in Cuba, during the two last revolutions. Claims against Spain aggregating more than $25,000,000 are already on file at the Department of State, for this class of damages, and if this government becomes responsible as many more are to be filed. Allowing that these claims would be scaled down one-fifth, there would still be left about $40,000,000 for this government to pay, besides half that amount which it must pay to Spain. There is nothing in those terms for Americans to do any hurraing over.

Wherever there is a government appropriation there will be schemers devising means for getting some of the money. The probability that the United States will build even more warships in the next fifteen years than it has built in the last fifteen years has resulted in the formation of a ship builders trust, embracing practically all of the establishments which are prepared to construct warships. Inasmuch as there has from the first been an agreement among the shipbuilders as to prices when bidding for government work, it is a little difficult to understand why they have made this new combine, but certain that it is not in the interests of the government, as was shown by the action of the combine in virtually compelling the Navy Department to agree to its plans concerning the new monitors, contracts for which were recently given out.

Thoughtful persons are asking if the announcement of the administration that its commercial policy in the Philippines would be that of the "open door"—equal freedom of trade to all nations—which prevails in all of free trade England's colonies, is not the first step towards the abandonment of a strictly protective tariff by the Republican party. Many think it is. Whatever may be Mr. McKinley's intention, he will find it a source of constant irritation to our own business men and those of other countries who do business with us to have one commercial policy for the United States and another for our colonies.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the multi-millionaire steel maker who finds the country in which he made his money not good enough to live in, and who is said to have taken out British citizenship papers several years ago, in Scotland, where he lives about three-fourths of his time, has been raging around Washington this week, on the Philippine question, to an extent that has caused many to believe that he has big money invested in Spanish bonds. That is the only logical explanation of his wild fool talk about hoping that Americans will be shot down when they try to take possession of the Philippines, etc.

As we have said again and again, and our further acquaintance confirms the belief, the newspapers of North Carolina, as a whole, are an honor to the State. The average editor in this State is honest and earnest and true. He is not a liar and a hypocrite, as it has become popular to say of him, but no citizen of the State works harder for its upbuilding, and none are more genuinely patriotic than he. Quite often the country editor is poorly equipped, and he is neither master of his own nor of any other tongue, but wholesale denunciation of the press that has grown so common of late, and the oft repeated assertion that the newspapers of the country are filled with "lies," is wholly false, and the charge comes mainly from those whose trickery these papers have exposed. We believe North Carolina owes more to the hard worked and ill-paid country editor than to any other class of her citizens.—Charity and Children.

A DIPLOMATIC TRICK.

AN INCIDENT THAT PROVED THE CUNNING OF BISMARCK.

The Roundabout Manner in Which He Secured the Safe Transmission of His Official Correspondence to the Foreign Office.

Stepping to the counter, Herr von Bismarck asked a grinning young shop-boy in shirt sleeves, a blue linen apron, not of maiden freshness, and blessed with a pair of large, red, greasy paws, engaged in weighing some Dutch cheese, to oblige him with a sheet of writing paper, some sealing wax and a pen to direct a letter.

On the boy producing the needful with the traditional "What else, sir?" Bismarck said: "My hands are rather cold. You had better do it for me." And he handed the boy a couple of letters wrapped in the sheet of bluish paper forming an envelope, for in those days made up envelopes were still unknown in Germany. Evidently flattered by the request of such an imposing looking client, for Herr von Bismarck's tall hat was almost touching the ceiling of the squalid little shop, the greasy handed youth took the parcel, and, having closed it skillfully with some brown sealing wax and indorsed it with the initials of the firm, he returned it to its owner to write the address.

"Sorry, my friend, to give you more trouble," said the future chancellor in his jovial way, "but I can't manage to write with my gloves on, so just address it for me." And he handed him a penciled slip with the name of Herr Fritz Piepenbrink or some such name, oil and colonial warehouseman, No. 000 Friedrichs strasse, Berlin.

"Thank you, young man; that'll do capitally," and paying for the paper, etc., with a small tip to the oily boy with the stereotyped grin, he pocketed his letter, and we left the place to continue our walk.

"I dare say you are wondering why I treat my correspondents to such greasy, evil smelling missives?" And he showed me the cheesy finger marks of the boy on both sides of the improvised envelope. "I'll tell you a secret, and teach you a useful lesson for future times. You may some day thank me for the hint," exclaimed Herr von Bismarck, laughing heartily.

"You know we are blessed here in Frankfurt, as throughout all south Germany, with the Thurn and Taxis postal administration, a mine of wealth to that fortunate family, but the most wretchedly managed concern under the sun. As you may imagine, it is under the thumb of Austria, hence slow and the triumph of red tape, with a pronounced weakness for diving into other people's business and skimming, of course, the correspondence of all German and foreign envoys, accredited to the diet, with a preference for mine, the ever suspected Prussian culprit and traitor.

"They have established a regular black cabinet in the princely postoffice, where specially trained imperial and royal wisecracks peruse our prose with critical eye, transmitting copies of extracts of all 'treasonable' matter, or particularly interesting reports, to the august Ballplatz, where Gentand and after him Klindworth have established a lynx eyed system of political espionage (politisches schnuffeln) extending all over Europe, and comprising also all German courts and chancelleries.

"Not being particularly anxious to gratify the morbid curiosity of our Austrian ally, I have thought it advisable to send important reports to the Berlin foreign office, as well as all my letters to the king, to Herr von Mantuffel, and to my sister and some particular friends, under cover to some mercantile firm in Berlin, changing frequently and usually asking a counter jumper in a cheesemonger's or oilman's shop to address them for me—and you can easily understand that the imperial and royal sniffers (schnuffler) don't manage to guess the correspondent of the Prussian representative under a greasy, ill smelling cover, such as you have seen.

"It stands to reason that the smell of cheese or herring and the scribbling of a shopboy must deceive sharper men than the Thurn and Taxis post officials and the specially delegated Austrian postoffice clerks. The only precaution I have to take is to go to different shops in quarters of the town where I am not known and to vary the Berlin address from time to time. Thus I'm perfectly safe.

"Le tour est joué, and I snap my fingers at the Ballplatz. It is simple enough, as you have seen, yet it wouldn't do to send everything through that channel, as they would otherwise get suspicious, so I treat my Austrian friends at least once a week to some of my diplomatic prose—unimportant stuff, and occasionally something I want them to know—or to believe," and he indulged in a boisterous laugh.—Baron de Malortie in Cornhill Magazine.

Poison Parts of Snakes.

All poisonous serpents have movable fangs, which are found in the upper jaw, and when not in use close up like the blade of a penknife.

At the base of every poison fang there are numerous germs of others, and the fang, if broken or lost, is replaced in a few weeks by the growth of another.

POINTS ABOUT ADVERTISING

If your business isn't large enough to justify extensive advertising, better confine your work to the columns of the best paper in town. It is a pretty sure thing that the best people in town—those whose trade is most desirable—are the ones who take the best paper.

Any one who looks through the advertising columns of the average newspaper can not help seeing that much of the money that is paid for advertising in them is wasted. The money is wasted, not because the space is not good, but because it is not utilized to good advantage.

One good advertisement is better than three or four poor ones. You might give a nail a thousand light taps and not get it into the wood one-sixteenth of an inch. You would be just about where you started when you get through. Two or three good strong blows with a hammer would drive it clear home.—Bates.

THE POOR MADE GLAD.

The ladies of the King's Daughters went out to the County Home Friday to take a feast to the inmates. The Bible teaches that giving to the poor is lending to the Lord, and these noble women who carried the feast, as well as those who helped provide it, were indeed laying up for themselves treasure in Heaven. It was a time of gladness for the poor inmates, and the gratitude they expressed for being thus remembered made those who went feel more than repaid for the trip to the Home.

MORE THAN PLEASED.

There is a firm, to know their name, Just on this paper o'er. Who once asked me, as they ask you, To step into their store. I bought a suit, I took it home, I found it cheap and nice. And I never fail to recommend That firm for Price, Price, Price.

I took a walk, I saw all eyes Observing my new clothes: I was a model and I admired By friends, also by foes. I set the fashions for the town, And travelled many a mile To tell the people where to go For Style, Style, Style.

The more I wore that suit of cloth: The better they did please I advertised Munford's store until The clerks were brisk as bees. 'This suit' so kept its stylish shape, (Well-made and firmly knit), 'Till still it takes the premium For Fit, Fit, Fit.

So if you'd be a happy man, Just follow my example And if you'd be a stylish man, Just take me for a sample. Go to Munford's store where the grade are new, and cheap and nice, And see if they do not excel For Style, and Fit and Prices.
