

SMALLPOX.

Its Symptoms and Mortality.

Dr. H. O. Hyatt, of Kinston, read the following paper before a meeting of the Board of Health of that town, which we copy from the Free Press:

There are two varieties. Smallpox proper, and varioloid. Both are produced by the same poison. Varioloid is the Latin name for smallpox.

A party coming in contact with the disease is liable to take it. It usually breaks out in about fourteen days after it is caught. No one is safe until four weeks have elapsed from the time of being exposed.

Symptoms. It begins with a chill and moderate fever. There is headache, pain in back and legs. These symptoms last three days. Then the eruption appears. On the eighth day after the eruption appears matter oozes from the sores. At the time the secondary fever occurs, the matter dries and forms scabs. When these fall off they leave little depressed spots on the skin.

The eruption appears first on the forehead and lips, and then goes over the whole body. The secondary fever occurs on the eighth day after the breaking out, or the eleventh day of the disease, and produces blood poisoning. In mild cases this secondary fever does not occur, and there is no blood poisoning.

Mortality. In mild cases about four in a hundred die. In confluent or severe cases one half die. In the malignant form all die. A malignant case can be caught just as easy from a mild case as a severe one. The violence of the disease depends on the condition of the patient.

One attack of this disease generally protects forever. Should a patient have a second attack it is generally fatal.

The means of preventing smallpox is isolation and vaccination. Vaccination was first practiced by Dr. Jenner, May 14th, 1796. Since then it has been adopted by the whole civilized world. It affords an almost entire immunity from smallpox. The very few people who take smallpox after a successful vaccination have it in a very light form.

Smallpox is now prevalent over the whole United States. In this State it is very mild and for this reason the danger of its spreading is very great and it will be very hard to stamp out. It is the rule in smallpox epidemics for the disease to start out mild, often so mild that parties having it don't call in a doctor, thinking it to be nothing worse than chicken pox, which needs little or no treatment. These mild cases go everywhere and mingle with everybody.

If the epidemic was malignant, as it likely will become if unchecked, everybody would be terribly frightened and render the doctors all possible aid in stamping it out.

There are many people in this community, as there are in all communities, who presume to know more about smallpox and vaccination than all the doctors in the world. There are many of such base and low instincts as to imagine the doctors want the disease to spread so as to get practice or to make money by vaccination. To such we would say that we think we are doing our full duty. The volunteer work done by the doctors of the town would already amount to thousands of dollars, and will amount to many thousand more before the epidemic is stopped. We are giving our time and talents to those too poor to pay, without any hope of reward. We have heard disparaging remarks about the profession individually and collectively, until we are tired of it. We expect the hearty cooperation of all the decent people to aid us in our efforts to stamp out this scourge.

Inform the superintendent of health of every suspected case. He will investigate it. Everybody should come forward and be vaccinated. It is the duty of every one to do this. All who are willing to accept vaccination as charity can be attended to at the mayor's office at any time from 8 a. m. until 7 p. m. Fear of sore arms ought not to deter any one. If the arm is kept clean and not scratched with the finger nails there will be very little trouble. A bad arm comes from poisoned finger nails.

A successful vaccination takes in eight days. If it does not take in that time the patient should be revaccinated.

There is a prevalent idea that as long as the scar of an old vaccination is plain that the subject is free from liability to take smallpox. Such is not the case. Most people are protected through life, some are not. The only way to be sure is to be vaccinated again. If it does not take the subject is protected; if it does take the subject is not protected. We are of the opinion that several vaccinations will render smallpox impossible. Having a bad arm one time does not signify that the arm will be bad next time. Dirty finger nails are responsible for bad arms and not the vaccine matter.

About The Philippines.

The following newspaper squib manages to convey quite a cargo of information about the Philippine islands:

- No Brooms.
- No hats worn.
- Girls marry at fifteen.
- No knives or forks.
- They sleep at midday.
- Horses are a curiosity.
- More women than men.
- Rice is the chief product.
- Cattle as small as goats.
- Manila enjoys electricity.
- Natives bathe thrice daily.
- The grasshopper is a delicacy.
- We buy half Manila's hemp.
- Laborers earn ten cents a day.
- Cocoon-oil is an illuminant.
- Manila was founded in 1571.

Notice.

On and after April 1st there will be no free telephone connection between Greenville and Washington. Parties wishing communication with Washington will have to pay 15 cents for five minutes. The same condition as heretofore continues for Grimesland. We hope our subscribers will appreciate our efforts in giving them free service for the past two years, but we find it is impossible to make arrangements for free service in the future.

NEW NATIONAL HYMN.

F. L. STANTON.

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of pensions free—
Of thee I sing!
Land where war told the tale;
Land where the beef was stale;
Land where war-generals rail
Like anything!

O hear me rise and shout;
"Thank heaven, I'm mustered out!"
(That's what I sing!)
Fighting on sea and shore
Ever for me is o'er;
Bullets and beef no more!
(That's what I sing!)

The Man Who Succeeds.

The man who makes a success of an important venture never waits for the crowd. He strikes out for himself. It takes nerve. It takes a great lot of grit. But the man who succeeds has both. Any one can fail. The public admires the man who has enough confidence in himself to take a chance. These chances are the main thing after all. The man who tries to succeed must expect to be criticised. Nothing important was ever done but the greater number consulted previously doubted the possibility. Success is the accomplishment of what most people think can't be done.—C. V. White.

Saturday Evening Post.

In a day or two quite a number of people here will receive a copy of The Saturday Evening Post with prospectus. These are sent by the publishers at the request of D. J. Whichard, who is the special agent for both the Post and the Ladies' Home Journal. We hope those receiving a copy of the Post will examine it carefully. The regular price of it is $2.50 a year, but for a short time we will take subscriptions to it at $1 a year. Those wanting to take advantage of this low price should not delay.

This is horrible if true. The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger writes that paper: "I have just learned from the Surgeon General's office that 21 per cent of our men (soldiers in the Philippines) are afflicted with a loathsome disease." Each day but adds to the deplorable results of this war. What may yet be in store for us, at home as well as "out there," the Lord only knows. This Republican administration does not know and, what is worse, seems not to care.—Raleigh Post.

In compulsory vaccination towns the command "inspect arms," does not have to come from a military officer. There are arms to inspect most anywhere now.

A TALK ON ASBESTUS.

SOME LIGHT UPON HOW LONG IT HAS BEEN IN USE.

A Man With a Mine of Information Astonishes Another Who Knew All About the Mineral, but Who Would Not Take a Tempting Bet.

An elderly man, with a gray mustache, looked up from a plate of spaghetti which he was eating in a restaurant and spoke to three others:

"Say," he said, "what do you people know about asbestos?"

Two of his companions preserved a modest silence, but the third, who was a little man, spoke up:

"I know all about asbestos," he said. "Do, eh?" queried the man with the spaghetti on his plate. "Then how long's it been in use?"

"Well," said the little man, hesitatingly, "p'raps 30 years."

"You're away off. Of course you didn't know that Charlemagne had an asbestos tablecloth?"

"Who's Charlemagne?"

"Well," said the elderly man, "Charlemagne was king of the Franks and emperor of the Romans about 1,100 years ago. He was a great fighter and owned an asbestos tablecloth."

"Don't believe it," said the little man. "I never heard of asbestos until the Centennial."

"Well, Charlemagne had the cloth all right," said the elderly man. "He used to astonish his friends from the interior by throwing the tablecloth into the fire after dinner, and of course it didn't burn. Asbestos became quite fashionable after that for towels and napkins. It saved laundry bills. All a man's wife had to do was to throw the week's wash into the stove and it came out as clean as chalk."

"Say," said the little man, incredulously, "do you think you can string me like that?"

"It's so," declared the elderly man. "But of course you never heard that Benjamin Franklin had an asbestos purse?"

"No. Had he?" asked the little man, with a sneer.

"Of course he had. He took it over to England with him and sold it to a man in Bloomsbury, London, for a big sum."

"I suppose," said the little man, with a wink, "that the Englishman was a friend of yours, and you know his name."

"No," replied the first man, "I never saw him, but he was called Sir Hans Sloane, and he had a museum."

"Dime museum?" grinned the little man.

"Not a bit of it," smiled the elderly man good naturedly. "It was a sure enough museum, and as a matter of fact it constituted the nucleus of the British museum. I dare say that Benjamin Franklin's asbestos purse is there yet."

The little man looked a little crestfallen, but the elderly man consoled him.

"Don't worry," he said, "there are lots of people besides yourself who are shy on knowledge regarding asbestos. It wasn't much used during recent centuries. In 1676 an asbestos handkerchief was shown to the Royal society as a great curiosity by Dr. Plot, who had bought it from a traveler on his return from China. They called it salamander's wool. Dr. Plot saturated the handkerchief with oil and threw it into a fierce charcoal fire. The oil burned off, but the handkerchief remained intact. The fellows of the society were much interested and were not greatly surprised when the price of asbestos in Chinese Tartary was quoted at $400 a Chinese ell, which isn't much more than an English yard. It's likely that the price had risen since the days of the ancients, for those old fellows had big sheets of asbestos, which they wound around corpses before cremating them."

"That's a long time ago," said the little man sententially.

"Well," continued the elderly man,

"if you want to, come down to later years, there was a book published in London, 40 years ago, giving accounts, among other things, of remarkable experiments previously made at Milan, in Italy, by the Chevalier Aldini, who had used asbestos in the construction of a suit of fireproof armor. The coverings for arms, legs and body were of heavy cloth which had been soaked in a strong solution of alum. The helmet, gauntlets and stockings were of asbestos. Then there was an overdress, covering the body, thighs and feet, of wire gauze, 20 meshes to the inch. With this armor on, men stood on a big gridiron over a blazing fire for ten minutes and buried their heads in piles of burning hay and shavings, but nevertheless they came out unharmed. They also handled bars of white hot iron and did other things which seemed quite miraculous. That was over 40 years ago."

"Well," said the little man, "it's hard to believe that for several hundreds of thousands of years the world was so full of chumps that there wasn't room for a man smart enough to utilize asbestos. On the whole, I guess I'll go on doubting."

"All right," returned the elderly man. "I've got $5,000 that says I'm right. Perhaps your doubts are strong enough to uphold a bet of $10 against it."

But the little man wouldn't bet.—New York Times.

On Landing Troops.

In landing a force on a hostile shore a great deal more has to be provided than the vessels to carry it. There are people who discuss an invasion, and who seem to have an idea that the matter is limited to crowding a number of soldiers on a ship and directing them to be landed at a certain place. There is no consideration of how they are to get on shore with their arms, guns and ammunition; that merchant ships have only a few boats, and that artillery cannot be transferred from ship to beach without any previous preparation. When we consider that, notwithstanding the support and resources of a large combined fleet and the presence of transports, more than a month of hard work was required before an army of 50,000 men could be landed in the Crimea, we are justified in doubting those who assert that the invasion of our shores with 150,000 or 200,000 men is not only within the bounds of possibility, but by no means so difficult an undertaking as is often stated.—"Wilmot's Life of Vice Admiral Lord Lyons."

Lakes That Change Color.

It is well known that the water of many lakes exhibits characteristic colors. The lake of Geneva, at the western end of Switzerland, is blue, while the lake of Constance, at the eastern end of Switzerland, is green. Blueness implies purity, since the natural color of water is blue. A green lake has its water slightly clouded with impurities, which may be exceedingly fine particles, separately invisible. Professor Spring of the University of Liege says that green lakes sometimes become absolutely colorless for a time, and he has found that this sudden change of color is due to the washing into the lakes of mud colored red by oxide of iron. Red is complementary to green, and the result of the mixture is that the green color of the water becomes for the time neutralized.

Children's Sense of Duty.

One of my granddaughters said the Duke of Westminster, who is about 5 or 6 years old, burst into tears on passing a blacksmith's shop, and on her mother inquiring the cause said, "Oh, mamma, they are making the dandy's boots on."
