Chapter Organized in Greenville

Friday afternoon several of the patriotic women of Greenville met with Mrs. T. J. Jarvis and organized a Chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy for this county. We have often wondered why there was not a chapter here, and are glad that these ladies have organized one. Surely there were men of Pitt county engaged in that great struggle between the North and South who displayed as valiant deeds and heroic bravery as by any who ever drew sword or charged bayonet, and their memory should be perpetuated. The chapter of our sister county, Beaufort, is named in honor of one of our brave sons, Gen. Bryan Grimes, and now the name of another of our gallant soldiers is honored in the Pitt county chapter being named for Col. George E. B. Singeltary. He was a lawyer in Greenville. In 1861 he got up a company of Pitt county citizens of which he was Captain. Later in 1861 he was elected Colonel of the 27th Regiment. In 1862 he resigned his commission of the 27th Regiment and was elected Colonel of the 44th Regiment. He was killed in 1862 at Grimes Mill while on a skirmish there. His death left the 44th Regiment without a Colonel. His brother, Tom Singeltary, was elected to fill his place.

Now that a chapter is organized here, every woman in the county who is eligible should become a member and help to keep ever fresh and green the memory of the gallant heroes of the "Lost Cause."

Have you seen it yet?

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

Washington, D. C., May 26, '99

That another very serious mistake was made by this administration when it instructed the American delegates to the Czar's disarmament conference, now sitting at The Hague, to join the British delegates in working to secure an agreement of the nations represented for international arbitration, is believed by many close students of international politics. Should such an agreement be entered into the United States would be likely to get the worst of every question submitted to arbitration that affects European interests, for the very simple reason that a majority of the arbitrators would necessarily be European, possessing the natural prejudice that every man feels against the inhabitants of another hemisphere. Senator Stewart, whose wide experience in public life and close study of history makes his opinion entitled to consideration, says that we will live to deeply regret it, if we enter any arbitration agreement with the European nations; that every decision under such an agreement would certainly be anti-American, and that we will be all the time fighting a hostile combination from which we can expect neither justice nor fairplay.

Ex-Gov. Evans, of South Carolina who has just returned from Cuba, where he was serving on the staff of Gen. Indlow, who is in command of the city of Havana, hasn't a high opinion of the Cubans. He says the talk about the patriotism of the Cuban soldiers is all bosh; that there is no such thing in existence; that, with few exceptions, they were actuated by desire for plunder and to hold office. He also says that Coxey's army was a band of aristocratic gentlemen by comparison with the followers of Gomez, and that it would be a far greater crime against civilization to allow these men to control the island than it would have been to have left the Spaniards in control, and that property-owners over there are unanimous for annexation.

Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, who has just returned from a southern trip, is inclined to grow enthusiastic over what he believes will be accomplished by the Southern people in the near future. He says, among other interesting things, that they will in the course of time grow all the tea consumed in this country and manufacture practically all the cotton they grow, and of the people: "The universal sentiment in the South, so far as I could observe, was that they welcome every northern man of education, enterprise or means."

Although two of the Speakership candidates—Hopkins of Ills., and Sherman, of N. Y.—are in Washington, as well as numerous other politicians, politics had to take a back seat this week to give the people a chance to enjoy the three day Peace Jubilee, which closed tonight with a mammoth concert in Convention Hall. Everybody, from President to the humblest individual, have tired themselves out with parades on three successive days, fireworks on a big scale for three successive nights, trotting around to see the sights, which included some of the handsomest decorations ever put up in Washington, and they are doubtless better off than if the time had been spent in discussing Speakership possibilities.

John Sherman has stirred up the administration once more. On his way to Ohio he gave out an interview, at Pittsburg, which caused a sensation in administration circles, when it was telegraphed to Washington. The old man jumped on the Philippine policy of the administration with both feet, so to speak, declaring it to be wrong from beginning to end, or at least, to where it has got. Mr. McKinley fears that this interview will do the republicans much harm in Ohio, and is trying to bring influence to bear upon Mr. Sherman to get him to repudiate it outright, or, if he cannot be made to go that far, to say that what he said was exaggerated by the reporter.

Notwithstanding official denials everything points to the correctness of the press reports from Manila, stating that there is a clash between the military and civilian members of the Philippine Commission as to how the Filipinos should be dealt with. In the first place, if these statements had not been absolutely correct they would not have been allowed to pass the strict censorship at Manila. It is stated upon good authority that this clash was of such a serious nature that Gen. Otis appealed to Mr. McKinley, and intimated as strongly as a military man may with propriety to the Commander-in-Chief of the army that unless he was sustained in the controversy he would ask to be relieved of duty in the Philippines. It is understood that Mr. McKinley decided to uphold Otis, and that was why the official denial of any clash of authority in the Commission was given out.

It is consistent (?) indeed, this latest card of the fusionists in their attempt to invoke federal aid to persecute some of the best citizens of Pitt county, charging them with having intimidated negroes at the polls last November. If the parties are guilty why was not this done earlier. The whole thing will end in a fizzle, but it is very inconsistent for men who declare in their platform against federal interference and preach state's rights yet would invoke its aid when it comes to carrying out their dirty, political schemes.—Wilson Times.

to a reporter. "The other day I was invited to the home of Major Willis to a reception, and while there met Captain William Hammond, of Florida. I had never seen him before. When Captain Hammond learned that I was from West Virginia he spoke up and said that he served there during the war. He was in one battalion, and I was in another. We got to telling stories, and Captain Hammond gave an account of how he escaped the Yankees by a clever ruse one day. He was at the house of Colonel McNeill, when it was announced that the enemy was approaching, and he ran out hurriedly to hide. The only place offering safety was a hen house, and the captain climbed up on a roost. He was not seen. "When the soldiers left," said Captain Hammond, a little girl came up and told me to come out. She carried me into the house. She was a pretty child, and while the Yankees were searching the place she stood guard over me."

Major Alderson says that after Captain Hammond had spoken of the incident he remarked, "Well, Captain, here is that little girl," and he introduced him to Mrs. W. R. Wilson, of Chattanooga. Mrs. Wilson is the daughter of Colonel McNeill, and she was the child who watched Captain Hammond while the soldiers were hunting him. She had not seen the Captain since that day.—Charleston News and Courier.

A Timely Suggestion.

If the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Raleigh will establish a chair on the building of public highways, it will do a great service to the State. The proper making of good public roads does not consist of throwing dirt in a mud hole, or laying a lot of pine brush over a bad place, but it means to properly grade with elevation in the center, and where necessary to use good, substantial material as a basis for a foundation. A man finds knowledge and experience in the building of a road just as valuable as he would in the construction of a house. We need good roads, but in order to get them we must have some one to build them that understands the work. The Journal believes that men who undertake public works of any character should be qualified to do it, and they should be required to furnish some proof of proficiency before they are fully entrusted with it. What we say is but just to the public, who furnish the money to pay for public works.

If, as we stated in the beginning of this article, there was some way to educate and qualify men to build public highways, the work would be very much easier and the money spent in public roads would be more effective.—Winston Journal.

"The Cry of The Children."

A very striking and forceful essay under this title was that of Miss Susie Baker Saunders, of Pitt county, read by her at the Greensboro Normal commencement. Judge Clark in his address noticed it, as well as some other essays, strongly endorsing her sentiments and added: "We are building up a great manufacturing interest in North Carolina. We welcome the busy hum of the factories upon a hundred hill-sides. They are giving employment to thousands of our people who would otherwise be out of employment and are furnishing markets for the produce of our farmers. But like many young lady friends, I have been pained in walking amid the long lines of whirring machinery to see the pale faces of children, 12, 10, 8 years of age (and even less), chained to their toil for 12 hours a day, with their wistful eyes looking out through the narrow casements towards the sunlight which shines not for them and stamped upon their poor, pitiful countenances I have seen the yearning, which God has placed there, for the fresh air, the green grass and the running brooks; and I have wondered if the mothers and sisters of this land possessed the right of suffrage, whether they also would cast their ballots without pity or would they not say to those who sought their support for seats in the Legislature: "Sirs, ye shall see to it that they let these little prisoners go free. Ye shall see to it that some brief breathing space shall be set between the cradle and their assumption of the weary work of life; that there may abide with them for a few fleeting years the rosy radiance of that lost Eden which lingers only in the hearts of little children."—Raleigh News and Observer.

Out if You Will, and the Other

A man was just out of church for a very long time, as a London exchange, being intended to the presence of his wife and decided to go. He got the family all together, and they started early. Arrived at the church there were very few people. It had no pew opened at that time, he man he his family went to the aisle and took possession of a seat.

Just as the service was about to begin a pompous old man came in, walked up to the front of the pew and stood there, his eyes fixed on the ground. He was looking at the seats. He moved over and sat down. He read the card and wrote it with a pencil: "I pay for this pew."

"He gave the card to the stranger, a man who had been in the most people would have been put up and left. But the intruder adjusted his glasses and with a smile read the card. Then he calmly wrote beneath it:

"How much do you pay a year?" To this inquiry the pompous old gentleman, still standing, wrote abruptly: "Ten pounds."

The stranger smiled as though he were pleased, looked around to compare the pew with others, admired its nice cushions and furnishings and wrote back:

"I don't blame you. It is well worth it." The pompous old gentleman at that stage collapsed into his seat.

No Deadheads There.

I heard a good story that comes from a little town in the northern part of the state: Among the members of the Methodist church at that place is an old railroad conductor who has been retired from the business for ten years or more. During the morning service at his church not many Sundays ago the old railroader was called upon by the minister to assist in taking up the collection—one of the stewards who usually helped in that work being absent.

The retired railroader started down the aisle with the contribution basket and passed it around like an old hand at the business. Everything passed off smoothly until he came to a good old brother who had nodded himself fast asleep, and just as he was about to pass by him he was suddenly overcome by the force of habit acquired in his railroad days. Giving the sleeping brother a dig on the shoulder with the basket, he blurted out:

"Ticket, please!"—Ohio State Journal.

The Manager of the paper is worthies. Helen Weston is a lady who believes that the husband who can be managed is not worth managing, and there is no better example she adds in The Ladies Home Journal. "For both husband and wife to be equal in the home, their views on the new relation than that of trying to control the other party. It is the new relation that we call the square thing. Many a woman understands 'managing a husband better than she does doing the square thing by him, and many a man understands and practices doing the square thing by other men who would be affronted if he were to be told that, judged by his own business standards, he habitually dealt unfairly with his own wife."

Informal Gathering at Mr. D. D. Haskett's

PART SECOND.

Married folks, and those hoping soon to be, were ordered to the dining room. Such a scramble! Ficklen landed at the head of the table, but Little, Ricks, Jones and Watson all seemed determined to be as near as possible, but I'll not give the order in which they stood. "There are others."

A delightful evening did we begin with? Yes, and it was delightful to the end.

ONE OF THEM.
