MONDAY, JULY 31, 1899.

At the last Legislature a libel law bill was presented that was of interest to every newspaper in North Carolina. This bill had been carefully prepared by Maj. H. A. London, of Pittsboro, a member of the North Carolina Press Association.

When presented to the Legislature the bill was referred to the House Judiciary Committee and never saw the light of day again. At the recent meeting of the Press Association that body expressed itself on the subject as follows:

"Resolved, That the North Carolina Press Association endorse the proposed libel law as prepared by Mr. H. A. London, and presented to the Legislature of 1899. That we are surprised and wounded at the treatment, seemingly unjust, negligent and discourteous toward the members of the press of North Carolina by the judiciary committee of the House of 1899, and especially the sub-committee of said judiciary committee in failing to consider and report said proposed law to the House after it had been properly referred to them. The members of the press feel that they have not been justly and courteously treated in this matter; that the president select a committee to continue the effort until we secure the passage of a just libel law in this State.

The President has appointed a negro as postmaster at Florence, S. C., and the people there are indignant over it. Senator McLaurin, it is said, will entreat President McKinley to change the appointment. Florence is not far from Lake City where so much trouble was caused a few months ago because of a negro postmaster. It looks like the President, instead of trying to pacify and end the race troubles, wants to keep it alive and shows his disregard for the white people of the South by appointing negroes to responsible positions among them.

And the spiritualists have gone to talking with Ingersol and find him "comfortable." There are many crazy people outside of the insane asylums.

KELLAR'S GREAT MEMORY.

It Aided the Magician in His Second Sight Tricks.

"The second sight trick as performed on the stage calls for a marvelous memory," said a former theatrical manager. "Some years ago I attended one of Henry Kellar's entertainments with Mrs. Scott Siddons. His lady assistant sat blindfolded on the stage and described different articles which he picked up at random through the audience. When he came near, I simply pointed to a curious little green charm which Mrs. Siddons had loaned to me and I was then wearing on my watch chain.

"It was a green intaglio," said the assistant in reply to Kellar's questions; "a very peculiar little medallion, which was presented to Mrs. Scott Siddons by the sailors of a vessel bound for San Francisco from Australia."

"We were so astonished that we almost fell out of our seats. After the show we went behind the scenes with Nellie McHenry and some other theatrical folk who happened to be present, and Mrs. Siddons proceeded to corner the magician, who was an old friend. 'Now, Harry,' she said, 'I want you to tell me honestly how you knew about that locket?'

"Kellar laughed. 'You recollect I came over from Australia on the same ship,' he replied, 'and I would certainly know that stone if I saw it in China.'

"He would say no more, and I presume, of course, that he conveyed his information to the stage through his system of cues. But the marvelous part about it was his prompt recognition of the charm on my watch chain. The presentation on shipboard had taken place all of seven or eight years before."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

LIKE THE PROVERBIAL CAT.

How the Professor's Desk Came Back at His Own Expense.

The young lawyer has good taste in antiques and has done much browsing about in search of them. He knows the places in Worcester and the neighboring towns where those who like old furniture and have the money to pay for it may find what will delight their souls. So it was no more than natural, when the professor sold his desk, which was of ancient design, but of doubtful age, and began looking for something better, that he should consult the young lawyer. The man of law was delightfully sympathetic. "I saw just what you want the other day," he said, "but I'm afraid it's gone now. I'll keep my eye out for the next few days."

"Well, if you see anything really good," said the professor, "buy it and hold it for me. It is not safe to let a bargain go too long. Only let me know as soon as you can, so that I won't be buying one too. It would be a great favor."

"Not at all," said the lawyer. "It's a pleasure to buy a good thing, even if you are not to keep it yourself."

In a day or two the professor received a joyful note. The young lawyer's mother had found just what the professor wanted—a beauty, one of those rare old bits that they cannot counterfeit, and such a bargain, only $10. The professor was charmed. He immediately sent his check to the young lawyer with an enthusiastic note of thanks and a request to send up the desk. He was in the hall when it arrived. He tore off the sacking and inspected his prize. It was his old desk that he had sold a few days before for $8.50.—Worcester Gazette.

Odd Tendencies of Slang.

A writer in the Journal des Debats complains of the process of degradation which is going on in the French language. The peasantry, for instance, frequently speak of the ass, a humble partner in their daily toil, as "the minister," and other words of dignified import are applied to equally humble, if not actually base, uses.

The same tendency, however, appears, to be showing itself in Germany, where the title "monarch" passes current in modern slang as a designation for tramps and footpads. The other day a noncommissioned officer in charge of barracks at Danzig addressed this term to a troublesome private just as a captain happened to be passing. The latter at once reported the incident, and the barrack master was brought before the magistrates on a charge of "leze majesty."

Evidence was adduced to prove that in east Prussia "rascal" and "monarch" were convertible terms, so that the court acquitted the prisoner, although he loses his rank and his pension.

A Valuable Truckload.

Perhaps as costly a commodity as any that is carried in considerable quantities in truckloads is Sumatra tobacco, such as is used for cigar wrappers. Sumatra wrappers cost from $1 to $2 a pound, and the import duty on them is $1.85 a pound. This tobacco is imported in small, compact bales weighing 170 or 180 pounds each. Duty paid Sumatra would be worth about $600 a bale, and there can be carried on a truck fifty bales or more; so that a 50 bale truckload of such tobacco would be worth about $30,000.—New York Sun

ABOUT VACCINATION.

Some Causes of the Failure of Operations.

Many people follow the safe custom of being vaccinated every five or ten years, since it is well known that the protection against smallpox afforded by this procedure may become exhausted after a time. Usually such vaccination does not take because the immunity conferred by the previous one is still present, but it is not safe to trust to this too implicitly, since a person may be susceptible to the disease and yet for some reason the vaccination may not take.

One should be suspicious if the arm is exceedingly sore, for this does not always mean that the operation has been a success, but often just the contrary. The inflammation may be due to the admixture of some impurity with the vaccine matter, or as is more likely, to contamination by an imperfectly-cleaned lancet, the fingers of the physician or of the patient, or the clothing. In such a case the strange microbes kill the vaccine.

Again, the vaccination does not succeed and the person is thought to be already protected, but a few days later a fever declares itself, such as typhoid fever, measles or scarlatina. This fever is often incorrectly attributed by the patient or his friends to infection by impure vaccine matter, while the truth is that the disease had already been caught but not yet developed when the vaccination was made, and this, like the severe inflammation, also kills the virus.

Another frequent cause of failure is that the vaccine lymph is not inserted deeply enough. It should be inserted beneath the epidermis into the true skin, as shown by the exudation of very minute drops of blood. If the scraping is made too deep, however, the blood will flow in greater quantity and may wash away the vaccine virus, and so lead to failure.

Finally, want of success may be due to the fact that the arm has been covered too soon, and consequently the lymph has been rubbed off before sufficient time has elapsed to permit of its absorption.

Because of the many, often unavoidable, accidents such as these, which interfere with the success of vaccination, the operation ought always to be repeated in two or three weeks, if the first attempt does not take.—Youth's Companion.

Wolf Children.

The adoption of human infants by wild and carnivorous quadrupeds has obtained more or less credence among the vulgar from the earliest ages, and, while such to-day are for the most part pooh-poohed as idle tales, the skeptics have little idea of the evidence that has been offered in substantiation thereof. Half a century ago the iconoclast who would have dared question that Romulus and Remus owed their nurturing to a she wolf would have been laughed to scorn by most lovers of the classics. Twenty-five years later the animal was substituted, on the part of tutors, by a woman named Lupa—a most inglorious conclusion, derived solely from imagination. To-day the tendency to ignore all sentiment causes such ideas to receive scant courtesy, and, when sentiment is introduced as evidence, is met by the undeniable statement that the same miracle is accredited with preserving the lives of many gods and heroes of antiquity. Consequently, if a single case of a child being fostered and reared by animals can be substantiated beyond question, the result will be to rehabilitate as history much literature that, solely on this account, has been relegated to the realm of fiction.—Lippincott's.

Solved the Mystery.

A man in Paris has been making a good deal of money exhibiting a curious animal in the cafes chantant and such places. It was a very queer little animal, and the alert Parisians were willing enough to drop the petit son for a sight of it. Still, look as they would, none could determine the creature's species. It was interesting, but it was baffling, and the exhibitor coined money. One day, however, a dog chanced to follow a curious beholder into the cafe chantant. Immediately the wondrous animal humped its back like a diminutive camel, and began to hiss and spit! The mystery was solved! It was a shaved cat!

Aerial Trolleys.

Chilkat's aerial trolley road, eight miles long, is not an experiment, as the system has been tested in other parts of the world. The cars, holding two passengers and a gripman, travel under two ropes suspended in the air, with another cable underneath to conduct the power, the capacity of the line will be 120 tons daily, equivalent to 200 miners and their outfits. The construction of the road is simple, and it will probably be running by April.

Bumble Bees and Clover.

Australia has furnished a fresh illustration of Darwin's theory as to the important part played by bumble bees in fertilizing clover by carrying pollen from one plant to another. Clover never flourished in that continent until recently, when bumblebees had been imported from Europe.

French Population.

It is only in France that the French population does not increase. In Canada, Algeria and Tunis it increases rapidly.

A DESPERATE RIDE.

He Braved the Storm of Bullets and Saved the Regiment.

"That is one of the bravest men I ever knew," said General Rosecrans, pointing out his inspector general, Arthur C. Ducat. "I saw him coolly face almost certain death to perform a duty. Three on the same duty had fallen before his eyes, and he had to run the gantlet of a thousand muskets, but he did it."

The words were spoken to James R. Gilmore while on a visit to "Old Rosey's" army at Murfreesboro, who records them in his "Personal Recollections."

General Rosecrans referred to Ducat's behavior at the battle of Inka. The inspector general had observed that a regiment of General Stanley's division was about to be overwhelmed by a much larger force of the enemy.

"Ride on and warn Stanley at once," said Rosecrans as Ducat reported the danger. An acre on fire and swept with bullets lay between him and the menaced regiment. Ducat glanced at it and said:

"General, I have a wife and children."

"You knew that when you came here," answered Rosecrans coolly.

"I'll go, sir," said Ducat, moving his horse forward.

"Stay a moment. We must make sure of this," said the general, beginning to write dispatches, the paper resting on the pommel of his saddle. He wrote three; gave one to each of three orderlies and sent them off at intervals of about 60 yards over the bullet swept field. Then he looked at Ducat, who had seen every one of the orderlies fall lifeless or desperately wounded. Without a word he plunged into the fire, ran the gantlet in safety, got to Stanley and saved the regiment, but his clothes were torn by minie balls, and his horse received a mortal wound.

POETRY WHICH BURNED.

The Successful Scheme of a Rhymester to Make Money.

A very wealthy, sedate and enterprising manufacturer in Pennsylvania has a brother who is trifling, dissipated and of course a spendthrift. But the fellow now and then displays remarkable ingenuity in "making a raise." All his life he has indulged, among other bad habits, that of writing execrable verse, much of which, however, he has managed to get printed.

Lately he conceived the monstrous idea of having all his stuff printed in a book and with the aid of an unscrupulous printer succeeded in bringing out the "work" in quite handsome shape. But in the most affectionate terms he "dedicated" the book to his wealthy brother, who regards his near and dissolute kinsman's "poetry" as really the most reprehensible thing that the incorrigible fellow does.

But the rhymester and his "black art" accomplish knew their business. They printed a large edition of the book and sent a copy to the wealthy man, who immediately purchased the entire edition and the plates and made "words that burn" of the "poems" by means of a bonfire. He also sent to his cruel brother and induced him to accept a salary to do nothing but throttle his verse fiend.

The wicked printer obtained capital enough to go to Chicago and carry on a reputable printing establishment, and the bad brother is earning more money by keeping his verse fiend silent than better poets do by keeping their muses constantly at work.—Woman's Home Companion.

Forests of the North.

The forest area of all the British possessions in America is estimated at about 800,000,000 acres. The settler has cut his way into the fringe of the vast woodland, but his depredations are nothing as compared with the terrific scourge of fire which has rampaged through it at different times.

1,000 Negroes Have Left Wilmington Via the A. C. L. Since November.

A gentleman intimate with the passenger traffic out from Wilmington over the Atlantic Coast Line roads told a member of the Star staff last night that he is confident that fully one thousand tickets for points in the North and West have been sold since the November race conflict to Wilmington negroes, who announced their intention never to return to this city. Much the greater portion of them have been sold within the last four months. Probably three hundred of the negroes purchased tickets to New York. Large numbers went to Washington, some to Boston, and others went to various Northern and Western points.—Wilmington Star.

The Horse's Wonderful Power of Smell.

The following from Horse and Stable shows how very keen indeed must be the horse's sense of smell: "The horse will leave musty hay untouched in his bin, however hungry, will not drink of water objectionable to his questioning sniff, or from a bucket which some odor makes offensive however thirsty. His intelligent nostril will widen, quiver and query over the daintiest bit offered by the fairest of hands, with coaxing that would make a mortal shut his eyes and swallow a nauseous mouthful at a gulp. A mare is never satisfied by either sight or whinny that her colt is really her own until she has a certified nasal certificate to the fact. A blind horse now living will not allow the approach of any stranger without showing signs of anger not safely to be disregarded. The distinction is evidently made by his sense of smell and at a considerable distance. Blind horses as a rule, will gallop wildly about a pasture without striking the surrounding fence. The sense of smell informs them of its proximity. Others will, when loosened from the stable, go direct to the gate or bars opened to their accustomed feeding ground, and when desiring to return, after hours of careless wandering, will distinguish one outlet and patiently await its opening. The odor of that particular part of the fence is their pilot to it. The horse in browsing or while gathering herbage with its lips is guided in its choice of proper food entirely by its nostrils. Blind horses do not make mistakes in their diet."

Mrs. Maggie E. Jennings, of Amherst County, Va., died after an operation to remove her false teeth, which she had swallowed.

Back Home.

The Osceola Band excursion reached home all safe and sound today about noon. They found rough water crossing the sound last night and many of the crowd got sea sick. Some of them showed loss of sleep. They report a jolly trip and pleasant time.

BLOOD TELLS.

YES, it is the index to health. If you have bad blood you are likely to learn that you have Rheumatism, one of the most horrible diseases to which man kind is heir. If this disease has just begun its work, or if you have been afflicted for years, you should at once take the wonderful new cure.

RHEUMACIDE

Thousands have been cured. The summer season is the best time to take a rhematic remedy. Nature will then aid the medicine in effecting a permanent, constitutional cure. People with bad blood are subject to catarrh, indigestion and many other diseases. To be healthy the blood must be pure. RHEUMACIDE is the Prince of blood purifiers.
