When is a Girl Sweetest?

"At what age is a girl the sweetest?" is a question being asked. The Observer will endeavor to answer the absorbing problem as follows: At sixteen, in white mull and silk ribbon, sounding, in her graduating essay, the essay, the depths of philosophies that have puzzled the sages of ancient and modern times, she is sweet, very sweet. In fact there is a suggestion of the caramel and cream in every lineament. At twenty, in shirt waist and pique skirt, with just the faintest suggestion of wild violets in the perfume she uses, the saccharine matter is much more pronounced. You look for an instant, and through your tangled dreams come floating visions—red roses, soft winds, the dusk hour, and many declarations you might easily make—if given the opportunity. This is a very dangerous age. At twenty-four you meet her under the white light of the ballroom with delicate organdy and a cluster of carnations making a dainty effort to hide a bare shoulder; they are playing some of those languid, exquisite waltzes of Strauss, and you fall in with the mood, go outside, light a cigar and declare that by the whole category of gods she is the sweetest thing in the solar system. You are very foolish, but you don't realize it until a year afterwards, when you find a faded carnation in your dress coat pocket. At thirty you pass by and hear her singing a lullaby or perhaps you, and not the other fellow, are looking wildly about for the Castoria bottle as she sings. There is a halo from heaven above her head then, and you would die there on the doorstep, punching the face of any man who dared declare you did not have the sweetest wife and baby in this or any other town. At forty she has a few wrinkles, but you can't see them. She is still the sweetest woman in the world—teaching you resignation—how to wear patches and build up a family. At fifty she is telling her grandchildren the very quaintest little stories about Mr. Nod and old man Blinkin. She is the essence of all the sweetest then. At sixty, with white hair and placid brow, she implants a melow kiss on your cheek when she thinks you asleep. Memory goes racing back over the summer hills; you are tired, footworn little boy again, lying there in the open doorway of an old home. The locust blossoms are dropping, the petals are falling from the yellow roses on the bush at the corner of the house; it is almost dusk and your languid eyes are watching the swallows gracefully circle over the white houses of the little town. Heart-aches, and all the bitterness of years are forgotten—and you awaken. And it is really her, the angel and comforter of your boyhood. When is a girl sweetest? When she is your mother, to be sure.—Orange (Va.) Observer.

What The Best Negroes Will Do

The following article appeared in this week's Laurinburg Exchange:

If the negro will practice morality, industry, enterprise, economy, self-help, self-respect, race pride and business cooperation, with the same persistency and earnestness for the next ten years as he has the practice of politics for the past thirty years, I warrant you, the race question would be a back number. The Amendment will regulate itself and this great South of ours will be an earthly sanctuary; yea more, it will be truly the home of the free the land of the brave, and the paradise of the negro. The colored men in Scotland country propose to try this new way.

"W. H. EVANS."

We are reliably informed that the author of the above article is one of the most intelligent men of his race in the county of Scotland. He is well educated, has been industrious, has accumulated a good estate, is educating his children, is a man of sobriety and the most prominent and influential man of his race in that section of North Carolina. His position is so prominent that he was endorsed by Senator Pritchard, Governor Russell, and Col. O. H. Dockery for the postoffice in Laurinburg. Thus it will be seen that the leaders of respectability among the negroes will not fight the Amendment.—Raleigh News and Observer.

The Clever Romans.

It seems quite surprising that the ancient Romans did not acquire the art of printing with movable types, inasmuch as they came so very near to it. They had wooden blocks carved with words in reverse, by means of which they stamped those words on pottery, while the latter was as yet unbaked and soft. Incidentally it may be mentioned that they knew the modern method of mending broken pots by means of rivets, and many pieces of pottery thus restored have been dug up.

In ancient Rome there was one daily newspaper, which was written entirely by hand. Furthermore the Roman senate had a publication which corresponds to The Congressional Record, being a report of the daily proceedings of that important legislative body. It likewise was written by hand. Speaking of baked clay, one might mention the fact that the little boys of Rome 2,000 years and more ago were accustomed to play knuckle down with marbles of that material just as children do now.

Goat's Milk.

Modern Medicine says that goat's milk, contrary to the general impressions, differs from cow's milk not in being more digestible, but in being less digestible and less nutritious, although it contains a larger amount of solid matter than cow's milk. It is indeed the most indigestible of all milk.

Goat's milk has a peculiar and unpleasant odor and flavor, due to lactic acid or bircine. It contains an excess of fat and is therefore altogether too rich for an infant's diet.

Derided.

An Austin colored waiter told a Boston man at a hotel that in eastern Texas a white man had married a negro woman.

"Was he not derided?" asked the Bostonian in the classic speech of the "Hub of Culture."

"He was, sah," beamed the negro. "Dey rided him out ob town on a rail."—Household Words.

No Reflection Intended.

This was overheard on a cable car the other morning. An overlander woman climbed in and took a place on an otherwise vacant seat. The still slumberous conductor took the quarter that she handed him, and before he rang up the fare, "One?" he asked absently.

"Yes, and don't try to be funny," she snapped.—New York Sun.

MEXICAN ASSASSINS.

THE MURDEROUS REVOLT IN THE TAOS VALLEY.

Out of the Seventeen Americans Who Were Trapped by the Mexicans Only One Escaped Death Either by Fire or Bullet.

John Albert, who ended his days at Walsenburg, Colo., had exciting adventures in every section west of the Mississippi. He saw two wars and took an active share in the Indian uprisings, yet when on his deathbed he was asked to dictate to a reporter the scene he considered most exciting in his life he chose a theme with which few if any of his countrymen are acquainted.

The revolt in the Taos valley, if ever it came to the ears of the authorities, was never universally disseminated. It appears on no page of common history, and, although for horror it compares favorably with the massacre at the Alamo, no novelist has seen fit to make it a central theme.

The section now known as New Mexico was formally taken possession of by the Americans in the spring of 1846. General Kearny was at that time in command of the invading forces. He made his headquarters at Santa Fe and remained in active superintendence for more than a year. At the expiration of that period the growing need of troops on the Pacific coast led to his withdrawal to Lower California. He left two regiments with a military governor in charge. Charles Bent, with a handful of men, was left to guard Santa Fe. The Mexican governor, General Armijo, had fled on the advance of the hated Yankees. His people, no matter what their secret thoughts might be, had been the most peaceable of subjects, yet the body of the army had not been gone two months before the Americans saw that trouble was imminent.

The only man who escaped has told the story more graphically than any pen can portray it. Arroyo Honda was a town of some 1,200 inhabitants, mostly Mexicans and Pueblo Indians. It lay in the Santa Fe district, but too far away for aid to come. The total of Americans in the place was 17, most of whom were rough trappers and mountaineers. The entire town turned out to an impromptu mass meeting on the plaza. It was decided to revolt and return to the Mexican authority. Well knowing that the band of Yankees, although comparatively insignificant in numbers, would resist such a step to the last, it was determined to shoot all on sight. For this purpose the mob spread through the town. But through some source or other Governor Bent had received a tip. He sent off to Santa Fe for help and then, gathering his little band about him, fled to the only refuge the place afforded.

"The next morning," said John Albert, "they commenced the attack by sending in to us a flag of truce, demanding our arms and ammunition and an unconditional surrender of ourselves. I told the boys they could do as they pleased, but I knew treachery would lead us to certain death in the end, and I was going to die with my gun in my hands and not be murdered like a common dog.

"This was the turning point in the matter, and they all concluded to fight it out as best they could. The men who came to make a treaty with us went back. Their forces were secreted behind the brow of a hill near by us, and one of them, after a manner of the wild Indians in opening a battle, came to the top of the ridge and danced a jig and sang a song of defiance. I knew the time had come, and the sooner the bloody work commenced the sooner we would know our fate.

"We of the mountaineers had collected in a building of considerable size and the only one in the place that was two stories in height. The dancing Indian was within gunshot, and I killed him. Billy Austin stood close behind me, and when another man came to drag the body back Austin shot him. By this time my gun was loaded, and I killed a third man. Then the hurrah commenced, and the air was filled with bullets from the guns in the hands of the men who lay behind the top of the hill. The bullets rattled against the house like hail. There was not a window left in it. Although we saw we were in a trap, we fought on.

"When the sun was setting, the Mexicans made a furious charge and set fire to the house we were in and got under the walls of other buildings. Soon everything was ablaze. The uproar of the yelling fiends on the outside and the excitement of the men on the inner side was deafening. We tried to escape by digging through the floor down into the granary. The house was filling with Mexicans, and everything was in confusion. Fortunately for me in the confusion I escaped from the house. I don't know how many shots were fired at me, but none took effect. I had a bullet in my cap, one cut off the brim of my hat, and another cut the band, and I lost it from my head. In the excitement I forgot my coat and was out in the world alone without coat, hat or friends and with 140 miles of mountain road between me and safety."

Albert wandered for three days over the mountains without food and exposed to the bitter cold. He reached the American lines at last, the first to bring news of the uprising. Of course, when a regiment arrived on the scene the Taos valley quickly quieted. It was not long after that that the Mexican war broke out. One-half of that nation was transferred to Uncle Sam, in consideration of which old scores were wiped out. No penalties were exacted for the Arroyo Honda massacre, yet it must go down as one of the most horrible in our western annals.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

OLD SOL'S RIDE IN 1849.

Flowery Weather Predictions of the Journalists of Long Ago.

In these days of practical newspaper writing, in which bald facts are expressed in the plainest and tersest form, the flowery language indulged in by some of the "journalists" half a century ago sounds peculiar. The following poetic convulsion was copied by one of the local papers from the New York Tribune in 1849 as worthy of a high place in the newspaper literature of the day:

"On Saturday evening at 17 minutes past 11 o'clock the sun rode calmly and mildly over the autumnal equinox and cast his golden anchor on the wintry coast of autumn. But as yet the vast ocean of air through which he sails is glowing and transparent with the memory of the long summer days that have passed over it, darting their rich beams to its very depths. Even as we write, however, the remembrance fades, like the sky's blanching souvenirs of sunset, and in the distance the cold ghosts of winter glare and wave their frozen wings, which creak on icy hinges, while in the silence of midnight a prophetic voice of wailing and desolation moans fitfully at the casement."

Few people can contemplate this specimen of literary architecture without experiencing a feeling of awe and sadness, with a few cold shivers on the side. It is proof positive that the profession has in some things gained by what it has lost.—Albany Argus.

The clock at the houses of parliament is the largest in the world. The dials are 32 feet in diameter. The pendulum is 15 feet long. The hour bell is 8 feet high and 9 feet in diameter and weighs nearly 10 tons. The hammer alone weighs more than 400 pounds.

The Italian Trouble Grows.

Washington, August 1.—The international side of the Italian lynching in Louisiana has assumed a rather more serious aspect, as a result of several official reports received here. These show that the Italian officials on the scene believe that four out of the five men lynched were Italian citizens in the fullest sense. While the reports are not final, the Italian authorities have no doubt that they will be borne out by the inquiries now in progress, and it is to remove all possible doubt that Marquis Romano, of the Italian embassy, has gone to Louisiana. He has been commissioned as consul to New Orleans, owing to the absence of the consul on leave, and in that capacity will go to Tallulah and make a careful investigation.

The Italian authorities have also taken note of the statement attributed to Dr. Hodges, whose assault led up to the lynching. This states that after the assault he walked away, indicating that the offense was not of a character to warrant the lynching of five persons.

Soldiers Condemn Otis.

The Herald has a special dispatch from San Francisco which says: "Officers of the Nebraska troops returning yesterday from the Philippines on the transport Hancock express themselves freely upon the situation there, and it was noticeable with what unanimity they condemned General Otis. Bitterly and vehemently they assailed the aged commander, asserting without mincing words that he was entirely incompetent."

"Why," said a captain of Company K. of the Nebraska Volunteers, at the rate affairs are progressing now it will take ten years to subdue the Filipinos. What is needed is an active, energetic, capable man; an officer who will not send out a regiment to win one battle and then withdraw it."

"The regiment's ranks look thin. It lost in the Philippines in killed and wounded, 204 men, the greatest loss suffered by any regiment in the islands."

"Twenty-five of the Nebraska men, including Lieutenant Colonel Collon, remained in Manila to go into business."

"Only one man re-enlisted."

"I don't think you will see any of us returning to Manila very soon," said Colonel Mulford in response to a question."

The Leading Market.

A prominent tobaccoist told THE REFLECTOR that Greenville had the opportunity of becoming, and will ere long be, the greatest tobacco market in North Carolina. He says this is becoming recognized among the trade, and that some other markets are already looking with jealous eyes on Greenville.

THE REFLECTOR agrees with the gentleman. Greenville can be made the leading market in the State, and we want to see our tobacco folks get on extra move on and make it so.

Its hard for a really upright man to look dignified with a boil on the end of his nose.

BLOOD TELLS.

YES, it is the index to health. If you have had blood you are likely to learn that you have Rheumatism, one of the most horrible diseases to which man kind is heir. If this disease has just begun its work, or if you have been afflicted for years, you should at once take the wonderful new cure.

RHEUMACIDE

Thousands have been cured. The summer season is the best time to take a rheumatic remedy. Nature will then aid the medicine in effecting a permanent, constitutional cure. People with bad blood are subject to catarrh, indigestion and many other diseases. To be healthy the blood must be pure. RHEUMACIDE is the Prince of blood purifiers. Sold at Wooten's Drug Store. $1.
