TALK ABOUT TAXES.

In North Carolina the State levies 43 cents on each $100 worth of property—all sold—for general expenses of the State government, pensions and schools, interest on the 4 per cent bonds, etc., etc. The counties rarely levy more than a like amount, many not more than half so much. In addition to this the larger towns and cities levy from $1.00 to $1.20 on the same valuation, thus making the entire tax on the $100 of value from $2.50 to $2.25.

The city of Jersey City, New Jersey, alone, levies this year $2.85 on the $100 of value, and the authorities thereof congratulate the tax-payers on the prospects of reducing this to $2.60 next year.

And when we remember that the property in this State generally is not assessed at two-thirds its cash value, the low rate of taxation in conservative old North Carolina becomes apparent. Let us stop our calamity howling and trying to oppress somebody.—Raleigh Post.

If the Post had said property in the State generally is not assessed at one-third its cash value it would have come nearer to the truth than in saying two-thirds. Whatever is left to be valued by the tax payer himself "ain't worth much" when giving in time comes. There is no other thing under the sun about which people violate their consciences so much as when giving in their property for taxation.

The tax rate in North Carolina is low when compared with some others, but we believe that if property was listed at its true value one-third the present rate would raise all the revenue needed by the State. In this way people would pay no more taxes, possibly less, than under the present method, and this odium of false swearing when listing would be largely removed.

Take Greenville for an example, as the question of taxation is now on the minds of the people here. The tax list returns for this year of all property, real and personal, everything that is taxable, does not quite foot up $700,000. In making a calculation as to the needed revenue of the town for the year the Board of Aldermen found it necessary to raise about $4,000 in taxes, therefore they made a levy of 60 cents on the $100. If the property of Greenville had been listed at its true value the levy need not have been more than one third the present rate.

Does anybody suppose for a moment that Greenville is worth only $700,000? If they do, and will just start around to see what the town can be bought for they will find that counting every foot of land and every dollar's worth of property it could not be moved for $2,000,000. See the difference? If the aggregate of the listed property of the town was $2,000,000 instead of only $700,000 a tax levy of 20 cents would be sufficient to raise the needed $4,000.

What is true of Greenville in this respect is true of every town in North Carolina. We only used this town as an illustration because of a knowledge of the home figures, but the condition applies to the entire State as well.

Pricing a Pair of Trousers.

Lord Brampton was on one occasion presiding over a case in which the plaintiff was giving evidence against a man who had stolen a pair of trousers from his shop.

"How much were the trousers?" queried Hawkins.

"Well," replied the plaintiff, "it depends who wants to buy them. I sell them to one man for 20 shillings, to another for 25, but you can have them for 23 and 6."

"Sir," cried Hawkins angrily, "I want you to tell me how much those trousers are worth!"

"Well," replied the plaintiff, "shall we say 22 shillings to you?"

"Look here," thundered Hawkins, "if you do not instantly tell me what those trousers are worth, I'll send you to jail for 14 days for contempt of court."

"Well, well!" replied the frightened plaintiff conciliatingly, "you may have them for a guinea. I'm giving them away; still you may have them at that price."

Even the stern aspect of Judge Hawkins could not stop the roar of laughter which broke out on hearing the reply, a roar in which Hawkins, after a few minutes, joined himself.

Snake Eat Snake.

A sight was witnessed one day at the Zoo that has been the talk of the people managing the animals of the garden ever since. Keeper Myers, who has charge of the snake cages, was about to feed the reptiles, when, to his horror, he saw one blacksnake measuring six feet devouring its mate, which was about the same length and size of itself. The reptile had swallowed its fellow head first, and only a foot and a half still remained outside its mouth. It was lying quietly, and about once every 30 seconds a swallowing motion would seize it, when as much as two inches of its meal would disappear. Myers opened the cage and, grabbing the powerless snake by the tail, began tugging away to release it. This proved to be no easy task, as the cannibalistically inclined monster had a firm hold on its breakfast. After several minutes of pulling that brought the perspiration out on the keeper the snake was set at liberty. For a time it seemed paralyzed, but gradually regained its strength.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

His Finish.

"Ah, Hortense," he cried, "I cannot give you up. You must reconsider the terrible sentence you have just imposed upon me. I refuse to believe that you know your own heart."

The proud girl looked at him for a moment as if she were half sorry, and then, becoming firm again, she said:

"No, Percy Hendershot, I have decided! It can never be!"

"But you will tell me," he pleaded, "what I have done to deserve this treatment, will you not?"

"Yes," she answered, "since you ask me to do so, I will. Nothing!"

Remembering, then, that he had never held a job for two consecutive weeks, he staggered out into the misty night.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Red Sea.

At certain seasons of the year the Red sea is almost unbearable. The water taken from 70 to 80 feet below the surface of the sea at 6 o'clock in the morning will often register a temperature as high as 90 degrees. If, in addition, a sandstorm thinks fit to blow, the whole air is full of a mist made of innumerable particles of fine hot sand, which blind and suffocate at the same time.—Favorite Magazine.

Senator Elkins' Great Scheme.

During the presidential campaign of 1892 Senator Quay and Senator Elkins, who were managing the Republican interests, and ex-Senator Brice and Henry Watterson, who were in charge of the Democratic headquarters, used to live at the same hotel and frequently dined together. One evening, as they were sitting at the same table, Mr. Brice looked over to Senator Quay and asked:

"How are you folks off for money?"

"We are very hard up," replied the Republican chairman. "How are you getting along?"

"Well," said Brice, "whenever we want money I go down into my own pocket for it. I have not been able to get much anywhere else."

"You are lucky to have a pocket to go into," said Senator Quay. "If I had money of my own, I would not grumble."

"But," said Brice, "I have to borrow it."

"Gentlemen," said Senator Elkins, "I have a suggestion to make. Suppose we four go down town tomorrow and borrow $1,000,000 upon our joint indorsement and divide it between the two parties and then let whichever one wins pay the notes?"—Chicago Record.

An Interesting Experiment.

That the earth revolves on its axis can be proved by a simple experiment. Fill a medium sized bowl nearly full of water and place it upon the floor of a room that is not exposed to jarring from the street. Upon the surface of the water sprinkle a coating of lycopodium powder. Then take powdered charcoal and draw a straight black line two inches long upon the coating—the line should be north and south.

After this is done lay upon the floor a stick so that it will be exactly parallel with the charcoal line. Any stationary object in the room will answer as well, provided it is parallel with the line. If the bowl is left undisturbed for several hours, it will be seen that the black mark has turned toward the parallel object and has moved from east to west, in a direction opposite to the movement of the earth on its axis.

This proves that the earth in revolving has carried the water with it, but the powder on the surface has been left a little behind.

Ventilating Bees.

In tropical countries there are what one can only describe as ventilating bees. During the hot season two or three bees post themselves on their heads at the entrance of the hive and fan the interior with the incessant motion of their wings. They are relieved at intervals by fresh bees who carry on the process. They are kept to their duty by a sort of patrol of bees. This is a well authenticated fact.

She, Too, Was of a Large Family.

At a little informal married women's luncheon out in Eekington the other afternoon, given by the hostess in honor of her "guest from the west," a dainty, languorous, black eyed woman under 30, the conversation switched to the subject of large families. It appeared that most of the lunchers came from prolific families. Each appeared anxious to give her family's large tribal record for a considerable distance back, and none noticed the alarmed countenance of the hostess as the talk progressed. The hostess made many ineffectual efforts to signal the conversation to a standstill; likewise, she unavailingly endeavored to side track the large family theme. But it was no go, and it was finally up to her "guest from the west" to set forth the numerical contributions of her ancestors to previous censuses. When the question was put to her directly, she exhibited nary a flinch, but, smiling languidly, remarked:

"I am the youngest of 12 daughters and 18 brothers."

"Impossible!" exclaimed all of the women except the hostess, who contemplated the figures on her fan with a drawn, dreary smile.

"Not at all," replied the guest. "You are perhaps unaware that I was born and reared in Salt Lake City."

"Oh!" blankly exclaimed the other women. "Quite so!"

Then the hostess experienced no difficulty in shifting the current of talk into the weather channel.—Washington Post.

To Extract a Splinter.

The easiest way to extract a splinter deep in the flesh of the hand or foot is by means of steam. A rather wide mouthed bottle is filled two-thirds full of boiling water, and the injured spot is held close over the opening. The suction draws the flesh down, and a little additional pressure is used to assist the exit of the intruder. In a few moments the steam extracts the splinter, and the inflammation rapidly subsides.

Glove Silver.

Glove silver was the strange name given to a custom which prevailed in England during the middle ages—namely, the granting of a certain sum of money to servants to buy gloves with on Lammas day, or, as it is called now, Bank holiday.

Gladstone's Peculiar Eyes.
There is an anecdote in Blackwood's of Gladstone and Professor Blackie which confirms the story of the statesman's eaglelike eyes. At a dinner the two men were opposite, and when Gladstone gave in a forcible way his idea that Homer was no longer recited but chanted, the professor cried out, "Mr. Gladstone, I don't believe a word of it!" Then he rose to argue the matter and said one sentence, but got no further. He had met Gladstone's gaze and seen his outer eyelids widened to their fullness in a steady glare, and his tongue stumbled and he sank back into his chair in confusion. The writer concludes:

"Go to the zoo for it. Take your umbrella. Make your way to the place where the eagles, vultures, falcons and such like creatures blink on their perches. Select a bird. Stare at him with insult, and you will see the outer lids expand as Mr. Gladstone's did. Poke at him with your umbrella. The filmy vertical lids through which he looks at the sun and opens to paralyze his prey will part, and then you will see what Blackie saw and understand his feelings."

Not the Advice Expected.
After spending more than a quarter of a century in active business life in the city a certain merchant purchased a ranch which he considers to be admirably adapted for dairy farming. Having had no practical training in agricultural pursuits, he is dependent for his knowledge of the art upon those books which purport to tell the urban bred how to do the trick. He desires to learn all he can concerning dairying and for advice he took himself to his friend and pastor, Rev. Dr. Stebbins, in whose omniscience and wide reading he has absolute confidence.

"Do you know anything good on milk, doctor?" he asked the venerable man of God.

The jovial pulpiteer, who knows more of the "sincere milk of the word" than of any other liquid, answered solemnly:

"Yes, my dear sir, I believe I am familiar with the best thing on milk that can be found anywhere."

"What is it, doctor?" eagerly and unsuspectingly asked the budding rancher.

"Cream," ejaculated the preacher as he hurried round the corner.—San Francisco News Letter.

Don't Tag People.

One of the reasons the large stores are patronized so much is that one has perfect liberty of ingress and egress. You can go in and go all over the place looking for what you want, and no one will tag you or burden you with attention. It is their perfect independence that brings their trade. In many places one can not leave without buying, as from the moment you enter the door you are persecuted with politeness or engulfed with sweetness. People learn to shun a store where they feel they can not leave without buying. Have your store as free as the outside air to customers. Let them go in and out at pleasure, but be sure they have attention when they want it.—Merchant's Review.

Cruelty to Animals.

A young man named Norris, who had more liquor aboard than one man can manage well, gave the horse he was driving a severe beating Friday afternoon. He first beat the horse unmercifully while hitched to the buggy. The rearing of the horse under the whip broke both shafts, when Norris led the animal to one side and continued the chastising. While this was going on the horse reared again and came down with one foot on Norris' head, making a slight scalp wound. Chief of Police James arrested Norris, who not being in a condition for trial gave bond for his appearance before the Mayor next Friday.

All But Letters.

Today a colored man went to the office of Register of Deeds Moore and asked him to register a letter. The officer told him that he must go to the postoffice to have that attended to, when the darkey replied: "Boss, I thought you registered everything in here."

STATE NEWS.

Happenings in North Carolina.

Leslie Allen, a young man of Greensboro, while beating his way on a train of the Southern Railway, was killed. His body was horribly mangled.

One day last week one negro man killed another in Gulf township. The circumstances of the homicide, as we hear, were that they were both escorting the same woman from preaching at Piney Grove and got into a quarrel, when one struck the other on the head with a rock, killing him and then made his escape.—Pittsboro Record.

Services at Mt. Pleasant.

The annual meeting of the Mt. Pleasant church is being held today and tomorrow. Services tonight, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock and tomorrow night. Evangelist J. F. Coss will do the preaching and probably continue revival meetings through next week. All members of the church are requested to attend Sunday's meetings. If meetings continue, further notice will appear in Monday's REFLECTOR.

The Narrow Chasm.

The narrow chasm between success and failure is bridged by effort. Many an advertised article has been on the verge of success only to be dropped at the moment when, by a little more hustling, it could have been made profitable to its exploiter.—The Advertising Man.

Value of Co-operation.

The Elizabeth City Economist tells in few words the secret of successful town building in citing Kinston as an illustration. It is in the co-operation of its business men. It says:

"Kinston is a growing town in Eastern Carolina. We saw a very intelligent gentleman from there last week and we enquired of him what gave the town its progress, when it had so few natural advantages. He said it was the co-operation of its business men. They were all ready to join in every movement that gave an impulse to Kinston."

Sugar and Advertising.

It takes two spoonfuls of sugar to sweeten a cup of coffee for the average person. Suppose you economize the next time you drink coffee, and put in a half spoonful or a spoonful. Have you saved any sugar? Guess not, for the coffee isn't sweet yet. But put that other spoonful in, and you make the first and second spoonfuls bring results. It completes the sweetening operation. Just the same with newspaper space, a too-little space is a partial or total failure, while a big one brings back the dollars it costs, and more, too.—Sioux City (Ia.) Tribune.

SAM T. WHITE,

THE LEADING FURNITURE DEALER.

She Kept Cool.

She was a young woman with a vivid imagination and a rapid fire vocabulary.

"Oh," she said to a young man recently. "I did come so near seeing a dreadful accident yesterday! It was just too shocking!"

"How did it happen?" queried the youth.

"Why, you see, it was like this: There was a horse coming along at the corner of Prospect and Case—a horse and a buggy—and they didn't see the motor was so close—that is, the people in the buggy didn't see it—there was a woman driving—a woman and two children, I think—and she tried to drive the horse across the track—the buggy had a top to it, and she didn't hear the bell—and the motor came right up and pushed against the buggy and pushed it along, and the horse jumped a little, and the woman screamed, and the children—well, I couldn't hear the children—but the man wasn't strong enough to stop the motor, and it pushed the buggy right off the track!"

"And where were you all this time?" inquired the interested youth.

"I stood by the curb."

"Yes."

"I was so nervous, you know."

"Yes."

"And I ate chocolate creams just as fast as I could and prayed."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Long Lived Elephant.

According to Aristotle, Buffon and Cuvier, the elephant may live for two centuries. After his victory over Porus, Alexander consecrated to the sun an elephant that had fought for the Indian monarch and gave it the name of Ajax. Then, having attached an inscription, he set it at liberty. The animal was found 350 years later, making its age easily somewhere between three and four centuries.
