AROUND THE WORLD.

Letters From Lyman A. Cotten On His Travels.

U. S. S. GLACIER,
 At Sea, June 3rd, 1899.

MY DEAR FATHER:—

Just ten days ago I saw the sand hills of the Virginia coast sink below the horizon and I must confess that my heart sank also at the thought of all I was leaving, but it is not for sailors to be sad and so we turned to the sea and to each other for amusement, and not without success. Since that day we have been steadily moving toward the east at the rate of about two hundred and sixty-five miles a day. We are now about two thousand six hundred miles away and three more days of good weather will bring us to Gibraltar. The weather, of great import to a sailor, has been fine and the trip so far has been almost devoid of incident. For the first few nights we had a full moon, and often when I had charge of the deck at night I would think of you all at Cottendale and wish I were with you. Occasionally we sight a whale and find amusement in watching him rise slowly to the surface and blow up a fountain of spray, or watch the porpoises leap and play around the ship when it is not calm, for the porpoise does not play during a calm. Even a sail like a speck on the horizon is watched with interest.

I will mail this as soon as I get to Gibraltar so that you may hear from me promptly. After we leave Gibraltar I will write my impressions of that place and mail the letter at Port Said. This plan I will follow throughout the trip, writing of each place after I have seen it, and mailing at the next stop. Our stops will be short, and all the time I can get off I will wish to spend in sight-seeing, and do my writing afterwards at my leisure.

MEDITERRANEAN SEA,
 June 11, 1899.

Well, everything went on in the usual way until the morning of June 6th when the cry of "Land ho!" brought us hurrying on deck and we saw far off the coast of Africa. Soon we were near enough to make out the rocks and trees on the shore. Soon we were heading through the Strait of Gibraltar. To the north was the rock of Gibraltar, to the south the rock of Centa, called by the ancients the Pillars of Hercules and supposed to be the western boundary of the earth. Between these two rocks the wind rushes with great force, but we forged ahead and soon came to anchor in the Bay of Gibraltar in the shadow of "the key to the Medirock was devoid of advertisements and bore no evidence of American enterprise. As soon as duty would permit I "hit the beach" as we call going ashore. The town of Gibraltar is clustered around the water at the foot of the rock and is a very pretty and interesting town. The streets are paved and clean, and the shade of leafy palms is cool and inviting. No one is allowed to inspect the fortifications, but I kept my eyes open and saw a all could from a distance, but my professional observations would not interest you. In strolling around I sometimes found myself in places where I was told I could not go, or in strolling through the public gardens I plucked flowers where I was told I could not pluck them. The flowers are bright, the palms are shady, and the many winding walks that lead to nowhere are lined with geraniums, morning glories, maiden hair ferns, century plants and others unknown, but all "quite English you know." I took a carriage and after following a winding road for about an hour found myself on a high crag at Europa Point, which is the southern point of the rock of Gibraltar. From far below came the roar of the sea dashing itself against the wall of stone, to the right, across the bay were seen the hills of Spain, to the left, across the Mediterranean was seen the coast of Morocco, while behind and around rose the lofty and jaggy points of rock-ribbed Gibraltar. Truly a grand sight, the mere looking at which makes a man grow.

Back again through the city, with its thousands of soldiers, on the market where I found a scene of life and movement. Boats loaded with fish, donkeys with pack-saddles as large as themselves load with fruit or vegetables, venders crying their wares in many tongues, while hundreds of Englishmen, Spaniards, Frenchmen and Moors were marketing. The Moors were by far the most interesting to me, because new to my sight. They are large men of dark complexions. On their heads they wear bright colored turbans, while on their bodies they wear a white or colored loose-flowing robe which covers one shoulder and the body to the knees. From their knees to their slippers their legs are bare.

Small Pox.

What is regarded as correct information states that there is a case of genuine small-pox between Scotland Neck and Palmyra at the farm known as "the Best place." It is a colored man who is said to have escaped from the pest house in Norfolk. Dr. Green went down from Weldon this morning to see the man. A 'phone message from Hobgood says the case is quarantined and under control.—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

irregularities and derangements. It has become the leading remedy for this class of troubles. It exerts a wonderfully healing, strengthening and soothing influence upon the menstrual organs. It cures "whites" and falling of the womb. It stops flooding and relieves suppressed and painful menstruation. For Change of Life it is the best medicine made. It is beneficial during pregnancy, and helps to bring children into homes barren for years. It invigorates, stimulates, strengthens the whole system. This great remedy is offered to all afflicted women. Why will any woman suffer another minute with certain relief within reach? Wine of Cardui only costs $1.00 per bottle at your drug store.

An Aged Minister Dead.

Rev. B. B. Albritton, an aged preacher in the Free Will Baptist church, died at 2:30 o'clock this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. C. Harris, about five miles from Greenville. Mr. Albritton was a native of Pitt county, and was in his 85th year. He had been in the ministry for more than half a century, and with the exception of one year had been pastor of the church at Parker's Chapel all of this time and it was one of his regular appointments for preaching. In all his ministerial labors with different churches he received and baptised 3,460 members.

About ten years ago Mr. Albritton moved to Pamlico county, where he married a second time, and that county had since been his home. He always came back to fill his appointments at Parker's Chapel. Two weeks ago he came to get ready for the yearly meeting, but was taken sick soon after reaching the home of his daughter and never got up again.

The Merchant Who Survives.

The fighting propensity in man kind is one of the elements which uphold the principle of the survival or the fittest. But in the present day of competition for success the prowess of intellect is, in the long run, more effective than physical strength. This fact is borne out by the experience of the enterprising merchant. By the aid of his own restless mind and his business ability and by the constant use of first class newspaper advertising he maintains an aggressive commercial campaign against his business rivals.—Philadelphia Record.

THE FURNITURE MEN

About the Coming of the Great Wallace Shows.

The Earl Sisters are as ravishingly beautiful, as bewitchingly fair as they are eminent in aerialistics. There are two of them—Maud and Hazel. We shall not attempt to describe their wonderful aerial acrobaticism for the simple reason that cold type can not portray its infinite charm—can not, in fact, even begin to do it justice.

Suffice to say that tremendous audiences in Europe, Mexico and Canada have testified to their surpassing excellence by such prolonged, tumultuous, wild and unbounded applause that report of their triumphs has spread literally unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

There is organizing in Australia at this writing a big syndicate which is formulated for the sole purpose of providing a guarantee or sufficient proportions to induce these petted favorites of fortune to visit that country.

The trip can not be made in less than twelve weeks, and the Misses Earl demand twenty-two thousand dollars and all expenses before they will undertake the journey.

Even at this enormous figure all Australia wants to see them—and are impatiently longing for their coming.

They are with the Great Wallace Shows at Greenville on Friday Sept. 29th.
